Three Burglars Attempt to Rob Home of E. C. Converse.

Appearance of Owner, Heavily Armed, Scares Marauders Away.

Greenwich, Conn., July 31.—Converse Manor, the 1,200-acre estate of E. C. Converse, a wealthy New Yorker and a director of the United States Steel corporation, was the scene of a pistol duel between three burglars and the night watchman on the estate, early today.

The men were driven off after a number of shots had been fired, and just as Mr. Converse himself, heavily armed, rushed from the house and went to the watchman's assistance. The watchman declares that one of the would-be robbers was struck by a bullet, but he probably was not dangerously hurt, as he picked himself up and made his escape with his companions.

It is believed that the three men had an automobile in waiting outside the grounds, as a moment after the shooting a car carrying three men was seen racing towards Bedford, N. Y.

Dog Aroused Watchman.

The presence of the burglars was made known by Mr. Converse's pet collie, who, barking loudly, ran to a hedge near the watchman's cottage. As the watchman approached, three men sprang upon him, pinioned his arms, and then one of the trio pointed a revolver at his head and directed him to make no outcry. In the meantime the collie's barking had aroused the household, and when lights began to flash in the windows, the robbers became frightened and, releasing their prisoner, ran toward the street. The moment he was released the watchman opened fire with two revolvers he carried, and the fleeing desperadoes, turning as they ran, sent back shot for shot.

All three succeeded in getting away just as Mr. Converse, with a revolver

KNIGHTS TO MAKE PROTEST

Against the Removal of Drake Fountain in Chicago.

Chicago, July 31.—The Knights of Columbus—members of thirty councils—will meet tonight to protest against the removal of the Drake fountain, the only statue of the discoverer of America now in the city, from the downtown business district to South Chicago.

While the drinking fountain that was given to the city just before the World's fair and stood in the shadow of the city hall, has already been placed at Ninety-second and Commercial avenues, members of the organization declare that it must be returned to the downtown district. Its removal is declared to have been a political move. It is planned to petition Mayor Busse and other members of the city administration, asking that the fountain be returned and placed on the lake front. The Municipal Art league is also to be asked to interest itself in the protest.

The Knights of Columbus, which has more than 50,000 members in Chicago, is said to be of the opinion that the removal of the Drake statue and fountain, the only "Columbus" left in town, should be considered as a personal affront to the society.

THE SITUATION GROWS SERIOUS

Decision to Arrest Labor Leaders at Vigneuz Causes Trouble.

Paris, July 31.—The rioting at Vigneux yesterday has precipitated rather a serious situation, owing to the decision of the government to arrest the leaders of the General Federation of Labor, and possibly suppress the entire organization, on the ground that it threatens public order. The reports in the press agree that at Vigneux the agitators deliberately incited their men to provoke bloodshed, and that the troops patiently submitted for hours to insults and stoning before they fired. The Conservative papers unite in demanding the suppression of the General Federation of Labor, as a revolutionary organization which is demoralizing the country and terrorizing the people. The organization is expected to fight bitterly for its existence. During the night the city was placarded with inflammatory accounts of what is called "the government's crime," calling for an extension and prolongation of the strike.

OFFICIALS INVOLVED

Startling Revelations on Border Smuggling Are Promised.

Many Chinese Coolies Brought Across the Line Illegally.

San Francisco, July 31.—Startling revelations, which, it is intimated, may involve immigration officials at Pacific coast ports and along the Mexican border, are expected as the outcome of an investigation now being carried on by the Federal government of the illegal entry of Chinese and Japanese coolies into this country. Prof. Fernando Sanford of Stanford university is also one of the men appointed by the president to investigate the immigration conditions. He has arrived here, after months of work along the Mexican border, and it is said that the report signed by Sanford and other investigators and forwarded to Washington makes interesting disclosures as to the number of coolies smuggled over the line.

The various investigation commissions are now gathered here and looking into the matter locally. Prof. Sanford said yesterday that so far no information of importance had been obtained, but it is reported that a ring of coolie smugglers has been discovered, which includes some big merchants of Chinatown, and that this organization has been carrying on a regular business of raising funds to aid in the smuggling operations.

SEE HAND OF THE REACTIONARIES

Constantinople, July 31.—The release of 950 ordinary criminals from the central prison on orders from the palace, is regarded as showing that the ministry is not yet free from palace interference, and indicates that the reactionaries are at work on the organization of "the Black Band," with a view to provoking disorders and casting the responsibility on the people, to the disparagement of the Constantinople regime. A deputation of Young Turks and journalists waited on the grand vizier and protested against the release of the prisoners. Said Pasha replied that he would consider the matter. It is reported that Kiamil Pasha resigned in consequence of the action of the ministry, and it is believed that he will ultimately succeed Said Pasha as grand vizier.

POSTMASTER IS UNDER ARREST

Crookston, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States Marshal Ryder came from Shelly yesterday, bringing Postmaster S. S. Moen of that place, who was arraigned before United States Commissioner Charles H. Mix, charged with the embezzlement of $250 of postoffice funds, on the 29th day of last November.

Moen waived examination and was held to the United States grand jury at Fergus Falls, under $500 bonds, which were furnished, D. M. Hanson and L. J. Hetland becoming sureties. Moen claims that he was not short at any time, and that the $200 was in the bank, as he did not wish to carry that amount of money on his person. When the postoffice inspector came around, Sept. 28, Moen withdrew the money from the bank, he claims, and turned it over to the inspector.

HOT AFTER HARRIMAN

Government Working for Evidence to Disrupt System.

Special Agent Interviewing the Big Shippers of Chicago.

Chicago, July 31.—The Record-Herald today says: Special agents of the government are in Chicago trying to collect evidence to substantiate proceedings for the disruption of the Harriman system of railroads upon the ground that the combination is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

For more than a week Ralph M. McKenzie, who did a great deal of preliminary work in the investigation which the interstate commerce commission made into the affairs of the Harriman railroads, has been industriously working among the big shippers with a view to ascertaining how the Harriman combination has been used, if used at all, to stifle competition and restrain trade. On special Agent McKenzie's new calling list are all of the traffic men of the big industries in the city. It is understood that the evidence is desired for use in connection with a suit to be begun by the government, which will be similar to the Northern Securities case, which resulted in the disruption

FAST TRAIN HURLS AUTO IN AIR KILLING OCCUPANTS

A Frightful Accident on Railroad Crossing in Philadelphia.

Two Prominent Men Meet With Instant Death.

Philadelphia, July 31.—Driving their big touring cars across the Reading railway tracks, at Hunting Park avenue, in the northern section of the city, in front of an in-bound express train, late last night, Charles Humphreys, chief clerk in the bureau of police, and Harry B. Bromley, a prominent dealer in upholsterers' materials, were run down by the train and instantly killed.

Portions of their mangled bodies were scattered along the tracks for 100 yards, and except for the contents of their pockets, identification would have been almost impossible. The machine, which was owned by Bromley, is a complete wreck.

Eye-witnesses of the accident say they heard the tooting of an automobile horn and the next moment saw the big car come rushing down the avenue. A train was about to pass and the safety gates were down, but whether the men in the automobile saw them or not will never be known. The car crashed through the gates just as the train reached the crossing. The automobile was struck squarely in the middle and tossed in the air. Humphreys was thrown from the track and Bromley was thrown ahead of the train, only to be run over again. The wheels crossed his neck, severing his head from the body and cutting off a leg. Humphreys, when picked up, was dead. There was a large hole in his head and one leg was cut off.

Humphreys was one of the most popular attaches of the department of public safety, in which he has held a place under many administrations.

WHO THREW THE BRICK

Troops Chase Colored Men All Over Rehoboth, Del.

Rehoboth, Del., July 31.—State militiamen encamped near here and a crowd of negroes of the vicinity engaged in a riot last night in which one man sustained a fractured skull and may not survive, and more than a score of others were injured.

The trouble began when some of the members of Company H, First Delaware regiment of Newcastle, were standing around a merry-go-round. There were some words between colored bystanders and the soldiers, and one of the colored men hurled a brick, which struck a private on the head, fracturing his skull.

Instantly the soldiers, taking their arms began pursuing every colored man they could find. The colored people sought safety under porches, on top of roofs,

FORGOT TO PAY FOLA

Senator La Follette's Daughter Brings Action Against Company.

Failed to Get Her $50 Per Week as a Star.

Chicago, July 31.—On behalf of Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of United States Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, a motion to set aside the bankruptcy of the Will J. Block Amusement company was filed in the United States district court yesterday. That she was engaged to play a role in a production that was never staged and as a result of which she failed to receive a weekly stipend of $50 is alleged by the daughter of the Wisconsin statesman.

Miss La Follette avers she was employed for a period of thirty weeks to star in the production. The amusement company not only failed to produce the play, but forgot to release Miss La Follette from her contract, and the season passed before the young actress was able to obtain other employment.

There were vague promises of good things in other plays, Miss La Follette alleges, but none were forthcoming and the amusement company even went into bankruptcy without the young woman's knowledge, she declares.

For all of this Miss La Follette claims damages.

DIRECTORS ARE LIABLE

Boston, July 31.—The liability of bank directors for losses incurred in loaning to firms insolvent at the time which the loan was made and for loans made by them beyond the statutory limit, and for other losses due to their carelessness are recognized by Judge Lowell, of the United States court of appeals in the opinion given yesterday in admitting to the court the bill of Receiver Frank D. Allen of the defunct Central National bank, against the directors.

The defendants, among whom is Otis H Luke of Brookline, the former president of the bank, must answer the various allegations contained in the bill before Aug. 27, and in addition to the general charges of mismanagement, Former President Luke is charged with receiving bonuses for loans made from the bank's money.

INVENTS AN AEROPLANE

Woman Perfects a Machine Which She Says Will Fly.

New York, July 31.—Miss E. L. Todd, once a stenographer in the patent office at Washington, and the first American woman airship inventor, announced last night that she had invented an aeroplane, the working model of which she hopes to exhibit at Brighton Beach tomorrow when Henry Farman shows what his much larger flier cand do. Miss Todd says her aeroplane is perfect so far as present knowledge of aeronautics in general is concerned. The woman inventor says her aeroplane is a collapsible one and can be reduced to about one-third its flying size when necessary, thus greatly simplifying the problem of transportation.

Miss Todd was busy yesterday creating her model and it was announced that she will be on hand with the machine when Mr. Farman is ready for his first flight.

THE HEAT PROVES FATAL TO EIGHT

Sixteen Persons Are Also Prostrated in the City of Chicago.

Chicago, July 31.—Eight lives were snuffed out by the heat in Chicago yesterday, and sixteen men, women and children were among the prostrated reported to the police.

Although the highest temperature recorded was 86.6 degrees, much lower than the hottest day of the month, July 11, when the mercury soared to 96 degrees, the atmosphere was laden with moisture and particularly dangerous to men and women exposed to the hot sun.

A welcome breeze from the lake swept over the sun-baked city today. But the breathing spell is not for long. Hot winds, accumulating in the Northwest, are scheduled to swoop down upon this section Saturday night or Sunday.

AWFUL DEED OF HUSBAND

Seattle Gripman Kills Two and Seriously Wounds Two Others.

Seattle, Wash., July 31.—Jesse Fifer, a gripman, killed his 8-year-old daughter, Hazel, and Mrs. Dennis Nihoul, a confinement patient; fatally wounded his wife, Mrs. L. Fifer, and seriously wounded Mrs. Ethel Warren, his sister-in-law, in a private maternity hospital here last night. He then turned his revolver upon himself and committed suicide.

Fifer and his wife had been separated and she lived at the hospital. Although forbidden to go near the house, he made his way into the place through the basement. After finding his wife seated in a front room at the place, he started shooting. The lights went out after the first shot, and he had to light matches to see the victims to shoot at. His daughter and Mrs. Nihoul he drove into the street, where he shot them.

MRS. LLOYD OSBORNE ASKS FOR MORE MONEY.

San Francisco, July 31.—Mrs. Lloyd Osbourne, wife of the novelist, Lloyd Osbourne, has filed suit for separate maintenance.

According to the petition, Osbourne has been allowing his wife $75 a month during their separation, and the claim is made that the amount is insufficient to support Mrs. Osbourne and the two children. Mrs. Lloyd Osbourne said that her husband's income is about $500 a month, and of this she asks $300 a month. In her petition, Mrs. Osbourne declared she had no property and that she had been forced to borrow $175 in order to meet the expenses of her household.

PREY ON MOURNERS.

Effort to be Made to Put "Crepe Pullers" Behind Bars.

New York, July 31.—An organized band of men and women, who prey on mourners, have been operating in Brooklyn, swindling grieving households on fraudulent orders for floral funeral pieces. The "crepe pullers" as these swindlers are called, have entered hundreds of houses of mourning. Nearly all the florists of Brooklyn have organized in an effort to get some of these gentry behind prison bars. The swindlers visit houses where deaths have taken place claim acquaintance with the dead person and finally arrange to have sent to the house flowers from the florist in whose employ they pretend to be, obtaining a deposit of $5 or $10 on the order in every case, and in some cases securing large amounts.

The death roll in Bukowina is said to be fifty, while in the Ziller valley upwards of twenty persons have lost their lives. The village of Mehrn, near Brixlegg, has been overwhelmed by a landslide and sixteen persons are reported to have been killed.

COMMITTED TO FERGUS

Woman Who Whispered Sweet Nothings to Judge, Insane.

Kleptomania and Lavish Use of Pet Names Her Affliction.

Mrs. Catherine C. Larson, the lady who called Judge Windom by endearing terms, has been pronounced officially crazy. The decision does not reflect on the judge's personal attractions, however.

She called t he doctors who examined her "dearest" and "ducky," and lavished her pet names with truly philanthropic generosity. She was exceedingly affable all through the test, reading the newspaper most of the time.

Mrs. Larson was arraigned before Judge Windom about a week ago on a larceny charge. She hired a livery rig, drove down to a neighbor's house, entered through a conveniently open door, found no one at home, calmly took some pictures and rugs with her, dropped them into the rig and drove home. Then she sent the rig back to the stable by a convenient urchin, and charged the hire to a nearby blacksmith.

She was taken into court and put under $100 bail to appear before Judge Windom yesterday. She did not appear, as her husband, Olaf Larson, had made application to have her examined for her sanity.

Her chief affliction seems to be her indiscriminate use of endearing epithets. After a prolonged examination, she was ordered committed to Fergus Falls by Judge Middlecoff.

FIGHT FOR A FORTUNE

Geo. L. Chesebrough Denies That He Kept $10,000 "Rake Off."

The hearing on the application of Bennett and Longyear for the registration under the Torrens act of the title to mineral land worth close to $1,000,000, located near the Syracuse property at Embarrass lake, took up all of yesterday afternoon, and is still in progress before Judge Dibell.

George L. Chesebrough, one of the defendants who are objecting to the title, was kept on the stand all of yesterday afternoon. He admitted when cross-questioned that he had retained $1,000 of the money involved in the deal for the purchase of the Atwell two-thirds interest by Longyear and Bennett, but said that this was not commission, and that he was simply keeping the money for Mr. Cook, who was to receive it as commission from Mr. Atwell. He did not get the $10,000 "rake off" on the deed, which Longyear and Bennett claimed that he did, he said.

Mr. Harrison was on the stand this morning. He is the other principal defendant in the case. He told of his dealings with Chesebrough and with Longyear and Bennett. He said that they had told him that they suspected Mr. Chesebrough of double dealing, and that they thought that he had made $10,000 on the deal for the Atwell property which they had entrusted to him to put through. They asked him to get them positive evidence of this. He telephoned them that Mr Cook told him that Mr. Chesebrough got $1,000, but he knew of no more commission.

Later Longyear and Bennett both refused to give Mr. Chesebrough his share in the property, claiming that by this double dealing he had forfeited it. Harrison said that all of his interest in the property was derived through Mr. Chesebrough.

He said that in a conversation with one of the firm of Longyear and Bennett he had been informed that they had undisclosed partners, who would not permit the assignment of Mr. Chesebrough's share in the land. He was offered half of a good fat commission instead, he said. This he refused. He had been told, he said, that the land had become unexpectedly very valuable.

Mr. Chesebrough was put on the stand again this morning, but there was no important testimony on his part.

The case was resumed at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Vanderlip of Vanderlip & Lum of Minneapolis is conducting the case for Longyear and Bennett.

KEEPING UP APPEARANCES.

Frederick Van Feden, the Dutch poet and economist, at a dinner in New York, attacked the extravagance and ostentation of the rich.

"When I think of these multi-millionaires' doings," he said, "I am reminded of the young nobleman they still talk about in Amsterdam.

"This young nobleman, on a visit to the country, was seen by a friend smoking two cigars at once.

"'Why are you doing that?' the friend inquired.

"'Well, you see,' said the other, taking the right hand cigar from his mouth and putting in the left-hand one, 'I can't get in this beastly hole the florin weeds I am in the habit of smoking, and so I have to make shift with two half-florin ones.'"

TALK WITH HITCHCOCK

New York Politicians Tell Chairman of Conditions in State.

General Opinion is That Hughes Will be Renominated.

New York, July 31.—Frank H. Hitchcock, chairman of the Republican national committee, today met the New York State leaders and discussed with them the situation here as it relates to the national campaign. During the early part of the day he met Herbert Parsons, chairman of the New York county committee; W. L. Ward, member of the national committee from New York State, and Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the state committee. These leaders sought the conferences in order to present to Mr. Hitchcock their personal views of the co-operation they expect between the national officials and the state managers.

Sentiment For Hughes.

While Mr. Hitchcock declined to define his wishes concerning the question of renominating Governor Hughes, his visitors gained the impression that he expects the state convention to name the present governor as candidate for another term. When Mr. Hitchcock was in the West he found distinct sentiment for Governor Hughes and a belief that his renomination would strengthen the Republican ticket in other sections of the country.

Meets With Kellogg.

Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, who has been retained to assist in the prosecution of the Standard Oil case, was at the Manhattan hotel to meet Mr. Hitchcock upon his arrival today from Washington. Mr. Kellogg is en route to St. Paul, after a conference with Attorney General Bonaparte at Lenox, Mass.

The tenth floor of the tower of the Metropolitan Life building, which will be occupied as New York headquarters of the national committee, is receiving its finishing touches today. A part of the rooms will be opened tomorrow, and Mr. Hitchcock will have his office there until he goes to Chicago, about Aug. 14. He was accompanied to New York by his assistant, James T. Williams, Jr.; Ormsby McHarg, who was counsel for the Taft forces in the conduct of contests before the national committee at Chicago, and a force of clerks. Mr. McHarg will travel through the West, aiding the state committees in the work of organizing for campaign work, and particularly in giving instructions for polling voters.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Mrs. Ben Teal and Harry Mousley Arraigned in Court.

New York, July 31.—Mrs. Ben Teal, wife of a stage manager, and Harry Mousley, a private detective, were each held in $5,000 bail today to await the action of the grand jury on charges against them of attempted subornation of perjury in trying to prepare testimony to be used in the divorce proceedings brought by Mrs. Frank J. Gould. Miss Julia Fleming, a seamstress, who also is accused of having conspired to obtain false evidence against Mr. Gould, already has waived examination before a magistrate and is held under bail.

The chief evidence against Mrs. Teal and Mousley was given by Mabel MacCauslan, who testified that she was asked by them to make a false affidavit charging Mr. Gould with improper conduct.

A SURE CASE.

Dr. Von EEsmarch, the famous German surgeon, who first introduced antiseptic dressings, was noted as being fond of entwining his lectures with an occasional story or anecdote. Once in a lecture Dr. von Esmarch commented upon diagnosing the outcome of a certain surgical case. "The way that case was to turn out," he said, "could be predicted with certainty."

Dr. von Esmarch smiled.

"It could be expected to come with the same certainty," he said, "as the answer was in the case of the widower. This man, after his wife's death, had vowed that he would not marry again unless his departed spouse herself would consent to it. He remained a widower for some time, but finally fell in love and wished to marry the object of his admiration. Remembering, however, his vow, he went to his first wife's resting-place and sat down at the side of the grave.

"'Bertha,' he said, in a low voice, 'I have fallen in love with a woman and wish to marry her. Now, if you have any objection to my marrying her, let me know, and I shall abandon the project. If you, however, have nothing to say, I shall understand that my plan of marrying again pleases you. Now, what shall it be?

"He married again."

FIGURES OF ASSESSOR

Real Estate Valuation Highest It Has Ever Been.

Figures Are Subject to Change by Board of of Review.

The assessed valuation of real estate in the city of Duluth this year is heavier than ever before in the history of the municipality. The total, as fixed by the city assessor's office, which is still subject to change by the board of review, is $37,861,577. This is an increase of $11,883,380 over last year's assessed valuation. The assessed valuation of both real and personal property this year is $46,935,485.

The nearest approach to this real estate valuation was in 1895 when the assessed valuation was $36,157,713, and the total tax rate per $1,000 was $27.90. This year the tax rate is about $36.80. Last year's real estate total was $25,978,197. The board of review is still in session, and there is a chance that the total for this year will be changed, although members of the board are having a hard time agreeing on any change.

The following table shows a comparative statement of assessed valuations, real and personal, since 1894:

1896	26,037,311	4,438,944
1897	26,112,885	4,178,754
1898	22,779,274	4,086,629
1899	22,710,295	3,442,777

DULUTH GOLFERS OUT OF RUNNING

Northland Representatives Lose in Play in Chamionship Flight.

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—When the golf play was ended Thursday night on the Emerald links of the Minikahda club, on the Lake Calhoun Hights, the Town and Country club had two men left in the championship, or first flight, and these two were Harold P. Bend and A. D. S. Johnston.

When the thirty-two men played off, there were sixteen left. The sixteen losers were scheduled to make up a "consolation" flight, which has nothing to do with the other three flights. The sixteen winners in the championship flight paired off and when they had finished playing there were only eight men left. These eight men arrived at their victories in this way:

J. R. Marefield won over A. B. Cutts, 3 up and 2 to play; Harry Legg over Gerald M. Livingston, 3 and 2; W. Hertig over Finkenstaedt, 3 and 2; A. D. S. Johnston over J. F. Bernhagen, by 7 and 5; H. P. Bend over D. R. McLennon, by 7 and 5; W. F. Brooks over B. F. Yeates, by 7 and 5; T. P. Thurston over Peter Berkey, Jr., by 1 up; Lynn A. Johnston (state champion) over Hopkins of Duluth, by 2 and 1. This morning the matches in the championship were as follows:

J. R. Marefield and Harry G. Legg.
W. Hertig and Fred Johnston.
H. P. Bend and W. F. Brooks.
T. P. Thurston and Lynn P. Johnston.

Each one of these matches was almost sure to be a fine-spirited struggle.

CROOKSTON DRAYMAN HURT.

Thrown in Sensational Runaway and Rendered Unconscious.

Crookston, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Solberg, a drayman of Crookston, was badly injured yesterday afternoon in a runaway. His team became frightened at a threshing engine at the Northern Pacific depot and, starting suddenly, broke the pole of the wagon, hurling the driver to the ground, where he remained unconscious for some time. The team dashed over the Northern Pacific platform and down the tracks toward the bridge across the Red Lake river, stopping just as they reached the bridge, and rushed down the bank and into a yard, where they were stopped, with the dray wrecked and both horses badly cut up. Solberg, while badly hurt, may recover.

LEG BROKEN BY AUTOMOBILE

Another broken leg resulted in Duluth yesterday from an automobile accident.

A car owned by G. A. Tomlinson, and driven by John Gilham, ran into T. E. Galvin of Eau Claire, Wis., on Superior street, between First and Second avenues east, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Galvin was thrown violently to the ground. Besides a fractured leg, he sustained several bruises. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital.

Yesterday morning in police court, Judge Windom sentenced Louis Richards, a chauffeur, to jail for reckless driving, and intimated that the next man arrested for the same offense might expect similar treatment. Bystanders say the Tomlinson machine was exceeding the speed limit, but Gilham says he was going slowly. According to his story, there was a wagon next the curb in front of Kugler's drug store, and he turned out to pass it. He claims Galvin stepped in front of the machine from behind the wagon. It is said the man was thrown several feet.

of the Hill roads so far as a holding company is concerned.

The special agent's work is directed toward getting information from the shippers with respect to conditions before the combination of the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, and a comparison between those conditions and the conditions which exist today. To the men upon whom he has called, McKenzie has not disclosed his purpose further than to say that he is trying to collect evidence for use in a suit to disrupt the Harriman combination. It is fully understood by the department of justice officials here that President Roosevelt has not dropped his fight against the Harriman combination of railroads.

Not the First Shooting.

Today's shooting was not the first in which members of the Converse family have figured. Several years ago, Mr. Converse's daughter, Mrs. Antonette Morrell, was set upon in the village by a masked man, who had entered her house in the night, shot and so severely wounded that her life was in danger for many days. At the time of the occurrence, an investigation was made, on the ground that an attempt might have been made to kidnap Mrs. Morrell's 3-year-old child, who was living with the mother at the summer home in this village. Later, however, a man, who gave his name as John Brown, was arrested on a charge of burglary and murderous assault. He was convicted and now is serving a term in the state prison at Wethersfield. Mrs. Morrell had been separated from her husband at the time of the assault.

The Converse estate is one of the finest of many beautiful summer places maintained by wealthy New Yorkers in this vicinity. It is situated about eight miles from the center of the village proper.

and even in trees, while the enraged soldiers sought high and low for them, intent on vengeance for their injured comrade.

Governor Lea, who is in camp, upon learning of the disturbance, took active means to quell it. He sent a detachment of fifty soldiers to arrest the man who threw the brick and then dispatched officers to pacify the enraged soldiers. Finally quiet was restored but not until more than a score of persons had been injured.

The man who threw the brick has not yet been captured. Some of the soldiers may be arrested.

MILLER VISITS FAIR.

Former Governor Still Interested in North Dakota.

Grand Forks, N. D., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hon. John Miller, first governor of North Dakota, was a visitor at the fair yesterday. Mr. Miller was governor of North Dakota immediately after the admission of the state to the Union, and he retired at the end of his first term because of important business interests outside the state. While it is now many years since he was a resident here, he still retains the respect and regard of a large number of North Dakota's people, who remember him as a man of high character, a clean and fearless executive, and a man who believed in giving his very best to the state of which he was a citizen.

Governor Miller has for the past twelve years been the head of the John Miller company, of Duluth and Minneapolis, a firm which handles all kinds of grain on commission. This business keeps him in touch with the people of this state, and his firm handles a large share of the North Dakota business each year. The growth of the business, and the uniform satisfaction given it in its business dealings show that its standards are high, and it merits and receives the confidence of the shippers of the Northwest.

DROWNS IN RICE LAKE.

Eau Claire, Wis., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Clara I. McNown, for seven years a member of the Eau Claire high school faculty and for two years of the Eau Claire county training school, was drowned at Rice Lake Wednesday night, while out alone in a rowboat to seek relief from the intense heat. The boat in which she went out for a row was found late Wednesday night floating about on the lake, empty, with the exception of a few of her belongings.

Miss McNown had gone down to the boathouse about 8 o'clock in the evening and hiring a boat started out alone. About 9 o'clock, a heavy storm came up and it is thought that this caught her in midlake, overturning the boat, as a result of which she was thrown into the water and as no help was near, perished.

When the storm ended there were no signs of her returning and a searching party went in quest of her and about 10 o'clock the empty boat was found floating right side up, but empty outside of a parasol and handbag belonging to the missing woman. There was some water in the boat also.

The race committee was waiting at the office of the Matin to receive the car. Congratulations were showered upon the intrepid crew, the members of which proceeded to a hotel after their health had been drunk.

CONVENTION ENDS.

West Virginia Democrats Complete Their Ticket and Adjourn.

Charleston, W. Va., July 31.—After completing its ticket by naming E. H. Morton of Webster county for attorney general, and choosing Howard Llewellyn Swisher of Monoghan, and Bruce McDonald of Logan, for presidential electors, the Democratic state convention adjourned sine die at 5 o'clock this morning. Just before adjournment a resolution was adopted providing in future the number of the national committee to be chosen by the convention that elects delegates-at-large, and not by the delegates, as in the past. The present national committeeman, John T. McGraw, seconded the resolution, which was then adopted unanimously.

CARDINAL GIBBONS ARRIVES AT ROME.

Rome, July 31.—Cardinal Gibbons, who, with a number of other prelates, arrived here yesterday from New York, is resting today from the fatigue of his journey. He has notified the Vatican of his presence in Rome, and the pope has expressed his desire to see him immediately. The audience will probably occur tomorrow.

Many visitors, including a number of Americans, already have called upon the cardinal to pay their respects. The cardinal was last in Rome five years ago, when he attended the conclave that elected the present pope.

ALLEGED MURDERERS ARRESTED AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, July 31.—John Summers, alias Frank Engle, and Theresa Ziler, alias Mrs. Engle, were arrested here last night, charged with the murder of Mrs. Ziler's husband in Milwaukee, two years ago. The couple, who have been in Europe since the alleged crime, returned to Pittsburg a few days ago, and Summers was almost immediately recognized by the police. It is said that Andrew Ziler was killed at his home, Christmas night, 1906.

BLOW ON HEAD

Caused the Death of Hazel Drew, Says the Coroner's Verdict.

Troy, N. Y., July 31.—Coroner M. H. Strope today made public his findings as the result of the inquest into the death of Hazel I. Drew, whose body was found in Teal pond on July 11. The finding is that death was caused by "extravasation of blood in the duramater, caused by a blow on the head from some blunt instrument, in some manner unknown."

The chief of the detective bureau says there are yet clues that have not been fully followed out, and he is still hopeful of results.

What is now regarded as the most promising clue is the runabout, containing two strange men, who were seen on the Taborton road at Teal pond on the night of July 7, when Hazel Drew was supposed to have gone to a violent death.

CROKER'S FAVORITE WILL RACE NO MORE.

New York, July 31.—Orby II, Richard Croker's derby winner, which gained his owner the highest ambition of his life, will race no more. This news reached here in a letter from a New York man, who, being in Ireland very recently, visited Mr. Croker on his estate, in County Dublin.

From another source it has been learned that the carelessness of an exercise boy ended Orby's career on the turf. The boy, in giving the horse his first exercise on Mr. Croker's track, pulled him up too short, and so permanently strained his tendons.

BEMIDJI'S REORGANIZED BAND.

STUDENT HURT IN AUTO WRECK

Car Comes in Collision With a Cab in Chicago Streets.

Chicago, July 31.—Carl Burton of Aurora, Ill., a student at the University of Chicago, was probably fatally injured in a collision between an automobile and a cab at Madison street, early today. The automobile skidded as it struck the cab and the impact threw Burton out of the car. He suffered a severe wound on the forehead. The other occupants of the car were only slightly injured. They were detained at the Central police station.

T. P. Henderson, who was driving the automobile has gained local notoriety as the central figure in an automobile "speed war" at Glenco, a north shore suburb. He was cited to appear in court in Glenco today on a charge of speeding. Three weeks ago a young woman riding in Henderson's car, was shot by a Glenco constable, who was endeavoring to arrest Henderson for speeding.

WILL COST 25 CENTS

To Hear Prohibition Orators Under Committee's New Rule.

Chicago, July 31.—A unique campaign, in which voters, sympathizers and all others who wish to listen to orators will have to pay 25 cents apiece for the privilege, was announced yesterday by the Prohibition national committee as the basis of the party's activities from now until November. The innovation was devised by Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for the presidency.

The members of the national committee are jubilant over the device, seeing in it prospects of a campaign "barrel" which will never be empty unless the public does not go to the meetings. This contingency, in the opinion of the committee, has been provided for ably.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST RACING ASSOCIATION.

New York, July 31.—The Brighton Beach Racing association, which concluded a racing meet at the Brighton Beach race track on Wednesday, was indicted by the Kings county grand jury today on a charge of aiding gamblers to violate the new anti-gambling laws.

Indictments were also returned, jointly with the association, against Christopher Fitzgerald, its president; William Engeman, a large stockholder in the association, and John G. Cavanaugh, formerly superintendent of the betting rink. These men have previously been indicted on similar charges.

FREEZE OUT LAKE BOATS

All Rail Rates on Grain From West Are Cut Down.

Thousands of Tons of Freight Will be Turned From Lakes.

Buffalo, July 31.—Whether the big Eastern trunk lines are planning to wipe out the independent grain carriers on the Great Lakes for this season at least, that they may recoup their losses of a bad year with the millions of tonnage which the ships bring to Buffalo every summer on the way to New York and the Atlantic seaboard, is a question which threatens to be presented to the interstate commerce commission for investigation.

The adjustment now in effect on grain going to the Atlantic seaboard carries all-rail shipments at a greater reduction than the lake-and-rail route. Wheat going to New York for domestic use is carried by all-rail at a rate which is proportionately 4.85 cents per 100 pounds cheaper than the rate on grain which comes to Buffalo by lake boats and goes on to New York by rail. If the wheat is intended for export it is carried 2.89 cents per 100 pounds cheaper.

This differential, it is expected, will turn thousands of tons of freight to the empty cars between Buffalo and Chicago. The grain men say the differential in favor of export wheat makes it impossible for the American exporter to compete with the Canadian dealer, and much of the wheat that should go through Buffalo and New York gateways is now being diverted to Canada.

The Western inroad on lake commerce is bringing out a loud protest from the lake men. The great wheat crops of the West and Northwest will be coming toward Buffalo in a few weeks. The big crop is always said to be owned by James J. Hill and the presidents of the other granger lines. Last year the railroads at Buffalo devoted all their facilities to moving the wheat at the expense of local traffic.

NAOMI RESCUERS WIN.

Judge Knappen Makes Awards to Brave Sailors.

Grand Rapids ,Mich., July 31.—Judge Knappen of the United States district court has announced his decision in the suit for salvage brought by the vessel which went to the assistance of the steamer Naomi when she burned on Lake Michgian a year ago. Five lives were lost as a result of the disaster and the entire crew of the vessel might not have escaped alive had not the men from the steamers Kerr and Saxonia made desperate efforts to rescue them.

The awards of Judge Knappen are as follows: The owners of the Saxonia and Kerr receive each $500 and the crews of the vessels have $400 to divide among them. Capt. Valentine of the Kerr, is awarded $50 for special bravery for going up under the very nose of the vessel in a small boat in an attempt to rescue the men of the Naomi while Second Mate Geel of the Kerr gets $50 for going into the hold of the blazing vessel in an effort to save the four men who were burned to death there.

The Naomi was a Crosby line steamer operating between Grand Haven and Milwaukee. She caught fire a little way out from Grand Haven. The salvage claims of the Kerr and Saxonia were contested as exorbitant by the owners of the Naomi.

Lafayette Sold.

The hulk of the steamer Lafayette, which went on the rocks during the big storm of November, 1905, has been stripped of its machinery and sold for junk to the Duluth Iron & Metal company. Employes of the company are at work cutting her up at the Superior shipyards, where she has been since the storm.

Chicago Yacht on Cruise.

The yacht Vanadis, owned by George S. Steers of Chicago, who is on a lake cruise with a party, visited the Duluth harbor yesterday. The Vanadis is a big sailing yacht and in 1905 won the Chicago to Mackinac race. She left this morning for Isle Royale. Besides Mr. Steers, those aboard were Lloyd R. Steers of Chicago, W. C. Steers of Ionia, Mich., Humphrey Chadbourne of Houghton, Mich., and J. Trinewell of Chicago.

Quietness Continues..

The quietness in the lake trade shows no signs of letting up. A few coal cargoes coming in, a few ore cargoes going out, an occasional lumber and an occasional grain cargo form the bulk of trade, which should be rushing at this time of the year. The ore shipments for July will probably come up to expectations, but the coal receipts will not. Very little lumber is moving and there wil be nothing doing in the grain trade until the new crop begins to move.

Wants Big Freighters.

D. H. E. Jones of New York, a member of the firm of James W. Elwell & Co., and Eastern representative of A. B. Wolvin, is in Duluth to secure several lake carriers able to go through the Welland canal to engage in the merchandise trade on the Atlantic coast for about three years. It is probable he will secure some of the Wolvin boats for the purpose.

Meacham in No Danger.

Fort William, July 31.—Reports from the stranded steamer Daniel Meacham state that the boat is in no danger of breaking up, and that wreckers are busy trying to release her. The steamer W. A. Rogers left Sopenar yesterday for Passage Island, where she will pull on the Meacham as soon as the wreckers are ready.

Ore Chartering.

Cleveland, July 31.—Some more seasoning chartering has been done in the ore trade, and vessel capacity to move the million tons, was tied up this week. Wild cargoes are scarce. Offerings of tonnage are liberal all around, and the situation is nearly the same.

Dullness in Coal Trade.

Buffalo, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The end of July sees extreme dullness in the coal trade with prospects for no improvement until the middle of August. Vesselmen are gratified at the showing made in the coal trade during the month, it being far ahead of the movement of other commodities, compared with last year. Two charters were reported today, the Midland King to Fort William and the Brazil to Chicago at 40 cents.

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—Mack-Leone Players, in "Captain Swift."

Three More Times.

The Mack-Leone Players will give three more performances of the late Maurice Barrymore's success of years ago, "Captain Swift." They have been greeted with large houses at the Lyceum this week, and all of them have been impressed with the fascinating, if somewhat tragic story of the exhighwayman. There will be a matinee tomorrow.

Rehearsals are going merrily on for the big production of the American play, "Strongheart," which William C. De Mille wrote for Robert Edeson, and which proved the biggest hit of that actor's career.

Henry Booth Here.

Henry Booth of Columbus, Ohio, accompanied by Mrs. Booth, is a visitor in the city today on his way to Isle Royale, in Lake Superior. Mr. Booth is a member of the law firm of Booth, Keating & Peters, general counsel for the Columbus Street Railway & Light company. He is well known throughout corporation circles of the country through his book on street railways, which is considered one of the most comprehensive publications in the country devoted to those interests.

While in the city, Mr. Booth has been entertained by Thomas Wood, counsel for the Duluth Street Railway company.

This is the first time that Mr. Booth has ever visited this part of the country, and he is greatly interested in the city and its possibilities.

CAB SERVICE IN MEXICO.

Baltimore American: "In the City of Mexico there is the most complete inspection of the cab service I've ever seen anywhere," said Col. J. M. Strange of St. Louis.

"The police in the capital of the sister republic keeps such close tab on the hackmen that it is the rarest thing for any argument to ever rise between a cabby and his fare. The stranger easily finds out that there is an easy way of telling the difference of tariffs in the public conveyances. The cabs are differentiated by the flags they carry and stripes on the side of the vehicle. It is a color line cabs are $1 an hour and red cabs only 75 cents. The blue flag rigs are of course, a trifle smarter and have horses a shade better than the cheaper ones denoted by the red flag and the red stripes. Also the pilgrim from the United States must take notice that if the top of the carriage is thrown back he must pay an additional 25 cents per hour.

"Hack inspectors are kept at regular stations through the city. When a cab is seen to leave the railway station it is stopped by one of these officials, who takes its number, the number of passengers, their destination and the time. This information goes to the central office and is recorded. All this trouble is taken in the interest of the public, and that is why one gets good service and is rarely imposed on by the public jehus of the Mexican capital."

LION HUNTER GETS A MAULING.

London Globe: G. Fowell Buxton of Norwich has received news that his son, Maj. G. C. Buxton, has had an exciting encounter with a lion while shooting near Nairobi in East Africa.

The lion was wounded, but charged Maj Buxton and mauled him badly, especially his right arm. The Somali gun bearer, who gallantly rushed in to the rescue of his master, was also severely wounded by the enraged beast. Luckily a doctor was within twenty miles of the place and attended to Maj. Buxton's injuries. The gallant officer is progressing favorably and his right arm will probably be saved.

A couple of months ago Maj. Buxton bagged three lions before breakfast one morning.

THIS BANK IS CLOSED

Imposing Looking Safe Chief Asset of the Bank.

For sale, an imposing looking safe! The bank has left for parts unknown, but the chief asset of the bank, the magnet that drew in steady streams of hard-earned currency to its coffers—the safe—remains. It is for sale cheap, though it is an imposing looking affair and fills the mind of the timid depositor with a sense of security.

Down at 411½ West Michigan street there is an official notice nailed to the door of a saloon-that-was, informing whoever it may concern that the owner, Maks Sever, owes L. S. Loeb & Co., wholesale liquor dealers, the sum of $257 for bills unpaid and that, in consequence of this failure, to come to the surface with the amounts tabbed on the ledgers of L. S. Loeb & Co.'s books, Maks Sever's earthly possessions, as represented by the saloon fixtures, etc., have been seized to satisfy the claim.

That is only part of the story. The safe is the largest feature of the story. Like the Indian conjurers of Calcutta, Maks Sever played upon the imagination, and credulity of his friends and friends of his friends through the medium of that safe. He didn't make a rose bush grow before the eyes of his friends, but he wove an ingenious story of financial security and then pointed with pride to the big safe. The confidence of his friends was won.

Be it known, then, that Maks Severs is, or rather was, a banker. Outside of the big and imposing looking safe, he was the whole works—the tangible and ethical force of the institution that flourished in the saloon at 411½ West Michigan street. He has left for parts unknown, so you see the tangible and mental force of the bank is no more. Only the safe remains.

Maks Sever did a flourishing business among his countrymen, the Austrians. When the more skeptical of the depositors asked for some tangible evidence of his sound rating, Maks pointed to the safe—a safe higher than your head. What more proof was necessary?

He had little follos. When you made your deposit the cash amount was credited to you. Then you were at liberty to draw out small amounts at a time. These straggling amounts were debited opposite the credit. When the debits began to encroach upon the credit total Maks warned his friends to be more frugal and come through with more deposits. Maks didn't believe that the debits should play tag with the credits.

Many Austrians came and looked at the safe and deposited their money. An institution with a safe like that must be all right. Then the panic came, last October. Here was the opportunity of Maks. He pointed to the safe, strong and confidence inspiring, and informed the Austrians who came to him for advice that he was the one Rock of Gibraltar in the financial breakers. He got his Austrian acquaintances both coming and going. He received their deposits and he cashed their checks, obligingly for 10 per cent interest.

The case of Petre Mineff may be cited as an example of the folio system. Only a little faded, blue fell book tells the pathetic story of Petre. Petre is credited with $125 in cash. Opposite, the debits show that Petre, as the stringency of the financial panic clutched at his frugal purse, drew $70 from the private bank of Maks Sever. Later Petre, frugal and saving, deposited a check for $25, so you see he is out just an even $70 by the "busting" of the bank. His case is typical.

Today an Austrian came to the saloon that was at 411½ West Michigan street, and looked in surprised wonder at the deserted appearance of the place. Then he wandered next door and inquired of Charles Rebek, who conducts a steamship ticket agency in the front of the saloon at 415 West Michigan street, of the whereabouts of that good citizen, Maks Sever.

Charles Rebek told the Austrian the story of the "twenty-three" movement on the part of the bank. Have you ever seen a man cry—a big, stalwart, full-grown man weep bitter tears? Well, that's what this poor, ignorant, duped Austrian did. That money, probably, meant more than months of hard labor to him. It meant that he would be deprived of a trip to the old country; would be deprived of seeing faces dear to him—a mother, perhaps some one dearer still.

And, of course, there are are others. There are Austrians on the range, who have gazed with admiring eyes and a sense of security upon the big and imposing-looking safe, who are not aware as yet that the bank has left for parts unknown.

PROFITS OF SYNDICATE.

Northern Pacific Comptroller Tells What Was Made in Reorganization.

St. Paul, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Pacific rate case hearing was adjourned yesterday afternoon until Aug. 17. The Minneapolis & St. Louis case will be taken up next Monday. Comptroller H. A. Gray of the Northern Pacific testified yesterday that in the issue of new stocks and bonds for the reorganization of 1896, no actual valuation of the property or its equipment was made.

In opening the books of the company it was necessary to assume a valuation, testified Mr. Gray. Since the company had issued to the old bondholders new bonds of greater face value at a rate of interest much lower than those which they surrendered and also given them along with these bonds preferred stock, the total amount of which greatly exceeded the amount of old bonds, it was necessary that these accounts balance. The net result was that the valuation taken by the company was $160,000,000 greater than before the reorganization. On this assumption the property of the company, without equipment, was placed at $293,000,000, and the equipment after depreciation, $12,000,000. No appraisal or examination was made to arrive at this valuation.

A statement of the cost of maintaining the old securities up to the date of their maturity and the new securities until a corresponding date was taken up, was made. In this statement two errors in accounting were made by the state, which in the aggregate amounted to $20,000,000. The attorneys for the state allowed for both errors and the paragraphs were stricken from the statement.

The allowance for these two errors has no bearing on the amount of profit received by the syndicate under the terms of the reorganization. The attorneys for the company admit that the syndicate received the common stock shares of the company, which the state claims at par value were worth $19,873,830. They maintain, however, that the syndicate paid $15 per share for the stock and sold it at $16 per share, after holding it for some time, making a profit of only $1 per share, or about $2,500,000, and that the syndicate also received 20,000 shares of preferred stock, which was then worth but $50, making the total profits of the syndicate about $3,500,000.

Waterways Important.

To the Editor of The Evening Herald:

Dear Sir—I beg of you space for a word or two on the great importance to the future of Duluth of the meeting tomorrow evening at the rooms of the Commercial club. Every man receiving an invitation to be present should accept the invitation and be there if possible. Because I am unable, owing to the call of duty elsewhere, to be present, I ask permission for the following word: Only selfish interests, obsessed with their own personal or corporate gains can refuse consent to the movement gathering momentum with the process of time that this nation must turn its attention to the development and connection of its inland waterways. All other means of transportation will never be able with reasonable rates—owing to the cost of construction and operation—to meet the needs of the nation's commerce. The inland and international commerce will soon so tax all present means of transportation that immensurable loss and arrest of development will be the result. In a word, the nation's industrial life depends on having ample and economic means of transportation. The inland waterways, the finest in the world, and related as the circulating system of the human body—connected with the two great gateways to the world—Panama canal and Duluth by way of the lakes and the St. Lawrence—will give not only the transportation needed, but will do this at a cost that will reduce prices of living, while increasing the profits of commerce to such an extent that the nation will enter on her great future of international competition that will place us in the lead without fear of being outdistanced by any or all nations. The railways are blind to their own interests if they continue to oppose this movement—that will overcome all opposition as surely as gravitation—for the development of business, a hundred-fold, by means of the waterways will increase their business proportionately. There are many things Duluthians should bestir themselves about, for this is the "nick of time," but this waterway movement, and its demands on the national legislation for support, lifting it for ever out of the hands of local politicians who seek, too often, to make capital out of securing appropriations for local needs, and placing it in the hands of the statesmen who seek the welfare of the nation which is above, though including the interests of local benefits. Duluth and Panama are the two ventricles of the nation's commercial heart beats, or life blood; and to say that is sufficient reason for every Duluthian taking a personal interest in the meeting called by the Commercial club for tomorrow evening. H. W. KNOWLES.

EBERHARD INDICTED FOR MURDER OF AUNT.

Hackensack, N. J., July 31.—James Eberhard, the New York grocery store clerk, who recently shot and killed his aunt, Mrs. Otille Eberhard, on a lonely country road here and then robber her body of her life savings, was indicted yesterday for murder in the first degree. The trial was set for Sept. 14. Miss Otille Eberhard, who was also shot and wounded by her cousin, and Chief of Police Dunn were the only witnesses before the Bergen county grand jury, which found the indictment. Miss Eberhard and her mother reached this country from Vienna only two days before the tragedy. Chief Dunn testified that Eberhard confessed to him.

SEARCHERS FOR CASHIER WHEN SURETIES QUIT.

Butte, Mont., July 30.—A. B. Clements, former cashier of the defunct Aetna bank, a Heinze institution, is being sought by the sheriff. Mr. Clements is now out on a bond aggregating $12,500, and his sureties, Dr. R. C. Monahan, J. M. Kennedy and Charles Holden, today withdrew and instructed Sheriff Henderson to arrest Clements as soon as possible.

Although search has been made for the former cashier, the sheriff has been unable to find him. Besides, the two felony charges on which he is out on bonds, a new suit was filed against him late yesterday afternoon by Receiver Robert Lyons, in which it is sought to hold him responsible for about $400,000, the amount the depositors are said to have been defrauded of by the wrecking of the bank.

BUTTERFLIES CAUSE WRECK.

Crushed Bodies Make Rails Slippery and Cars Collide.

Rome, July 31.—The presence of an unusual number of white butterflies caused a collision between two trolley cars at Florence the other night. The rails were made slippery by hundreds of thousands of the butterflies falling on the metals and being crushed by the cars. The cars that collided had the windows broken, many of the passengers were bruised and the drivers were injured. The work of clearing the line was rendered difficult owing to the appearance of fresh clouds of butterflies.

Taxation in Norway.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The Norwegian government has worked out a new plan for the taxation of real estate. This plan provides for the separate assessment of lots and buildings, and for the suspension of the tax on buildings under certain conditions. The value of the lots must be ascertained at least every five years, and a special tax is put on the unearned increment.

In country districts also the unearned increment of land is separately taxed wherever such increment appears.

SAMUEL NIXON.

Duluth, July 30.

It Can't Be Beat.

The best of all teachers is experience. C. M. Harden of Silver City, North Carolina, says: "I find Electric Bitters does all that's claimed for it. For Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles it can't be beat. I have tried it and find it a most excellent medicine." Mr. Harden is right; it's the best of all medicines also for weakness, lame back and all run down conditions. Best too for chills and malaria. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores. 50c.

TROUBLE SOON ADJUSTED.

Disgruntled Trammers at Tamarack Shaft Given Their Time.

Calumet, Mich., July 31.—Trouble with some of the trammers at No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack Mining company was disposed of in short order this week by the discharge of a number of the men and the filling of their positions with other men. The cause of the trouble, according to the mine officials, is that the trammers objected to one of the trammer bosses, claiming that he was driving them too hard. Matters reached a crisis Monday evening when most of the trammers, comprising the night shift men at No. 5 branch refused to go underground if the trammer boss was allowed to go down. The mine officials promptly stood by the trammer boss, and informed the men that they could call at the pay office and receive their pay. Some of them did to the number of eight. Others appeared at the shaft again Tuesday evening and refused to go underground. They were informed that their services were dispensed with. Other men were waiting to go underground in their places last evening and work at the mine is not being interfered with.

PRAISES FISHERMEN.

Game Warden Says Those of Isle Royale Are Law-Abiding.

Houghton, Mich., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Game Warden Charles S. Pierce and his several deputies, who have been making a tour of inspection of Lake Superior ports on the steamer Chase S. Osborne, have arrived here from Isle Royale, where he has spent the past few days. As a result of the trip, he collected upwards of $725 in license money from fishermen, who heretofore had paid no license. The license fees for fishing are $50 for gasoline launches, $100 for steam launches and $2 for sail boats.

Game Warden Pierce states that he found no violations of the fishing laws there, and added that the fishermen operating around Isle Royale are the finest lot he has ever encountered. No arrests were made for violations.

DEATH NOT VIOLENT.

Mystery Surrounding Lake Sylvia Affair Probably Cleared Up.

Annandale, Minn., July 31.—After an examination of the body of Mrs. George A. Raisbeck of New York, Doctors Dunn and Thomas of Minneapolis declared that the woman did not meet death by violent means, but was the victim of some form of heart trouble. It is thought that Mrs. Raisbeck, while out boating on Lake Sylvia with her husband, fell dead of heart disease in the lake, and that the husband, in trying to recover the woman's body, was drowned. The examination was made at the instance of Percival Raisbeck, a son, who desired to remove any doubt as to the accidental nature of the deaths of his parents. The Raisbecks will be buried in Minneapolis today.

LIGHTNING FIRES BARN.

Two horses were killed and the barn and ten tons of hay burned. The loss is $1,000, with no insurance. Two houses in this city were struck at the same time, but no one was hurt and the damage was small.

A COMPREHENSIVE ADVANCE SHOWING OF LADIES' NOBBY NEW SUITS FOR AUTUMN!

Practically all of our Spring and Summer Suits have been cleared out. Our suit department has undergone a thorough house cleaning—and our large advance showing of the ultra new—the very cream of early autumn suit styles is here. Already an excellent idea of style tendencies may be gathered both from our window and suit department displays, and a good, clear idea of any radical changes in the styles may be seen.

THE NEW SUITS are both in the fitted and semi-fitted styles—coats are much longer than those of this spring—and the "dip" effect more pronounced—the trimmings are of velvets, braids, buttons and tailor strappings rather more elaborate than those of the past season. Coats are lined with Skinner satin or taffeta silks. Skirts are in the new pleated or gored models—very full in cut—with folds of self cloth—materials used are Herringbone Suitings, Cheviots, Serges and fancy Worsteds, and the prevailing colors are different shades of blue, gray, brown, green and red.

Our showing of these new garments is a comprehensive one. We solicit your inspection, for with it, we know, will go your approval. Prices range from

MEETING IS SMALL ONE

Less Than a Score Attend First Prohibition Gathering.

B. N. Wheeler and Watson S. Moore Make Short Addresses.

The first political gathering of the St. Louis county Prohibitionists, for the purpose of outlining their plans for the legislative campaign this fall, was held last evening in Our Savior's Evangelical Lutheran church. The attendance was limited to less than a score.

Bert N. Wheeler and Alderman Watson S. Moore made speeches. Mr. Wheeler told of the careful political work of the brewery machine. He showed how a man who was a brewery tool got on the Republican state committee on resolutions and amended the platform so that the Republican party does not stand for additional temperance legislation. He outlined the wonderful progress of prohibition in this country and pointed out that half of the people of the country are now living under prohibition laws.

Alderman Moore talked along the same lines. He told them that they need not be discouraged by lack of numbers. The Civic league meetings, he said, were conducted with only three or four men present. Yet they accomplished a great deal. He said that every candidate must be made to state clearly how he stood on the prohibition and county option questions.

KELLOGG WILL SPEAK.

"Trust Buster" Will Talk to West Duluth Republicans.

The West Duluth Republican club has added another speaker of prominence to its list for the banquet on Thursday evening, Aug. 6. Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul, who has been mentioned as a likely candidate for attorney general in case of Taft's election, will be present.

Mr. Kellogg assisted the special United States attorney in the recent trust litigation and has often been called into consultation by President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft since the convention. He was the first of the four delegates-at-large from Minnesota to be named for the national Republican convention.

DIES AT HOSPITAL.

Isaac Kruska Succumbs to Alcoholism and Blood Poisoning.

After three days of delirium, due partially to alcoholism and partially to blood poisoning that set in after the extraction of a tooth, Ignac Kruska, better known as "John" Kruska, died last night at the Duluth hospital.

Tuesday night he was missed from his room over a saloon on Raleigh street and Fifty-seventh avenue west, where he had been ill for several days. Fearing that the man was not rational, his friends notified the police to watch out for him. At about 4 o'clock Wednesday morning he was taken in charge by Sergeant Walsh at Thirty-sixth avenue west and Third street, and taken to the hospital. At the hospital his condition was such that a constant watch had to be kept over him. Even with a careful watch over him, Kruska yesterday morning managed to slip from his bed and with only a blanket about him, creep down stairs and out on to Central avenue before he was detected and taken back.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from M. J. Fillatrault's undertaking rooms. The interment will be at Oneota cemetery.

FISHERMEN SUCCESSFUL.

Hugo Jacoby and W. Carr Return From Trip to North Shore.

Hugo Jacoby and W. Carr returned this morning on the steamer America of the Booth line, from Split Rock river, on the north shore, where they have been camping and fishing since Monday.

They brought home with them over 250 trout, none under eight inches in length, and one speckled beauty, a victim of Jacoby's fly, that weighed four and a half pounds. Mr. Jacoby said, this morning, that they had exceptionally fine weather and luck, though he thought they would have caught even more fish if the river had not been so high. They camped at the mouth of the river in an old deserted log cabin.

"From the moment we left the Easton, the boat which took us to Split Rock, until we started home last night, we were not once troubled with mosquitoes, and we didn't see a single blackfly while we were there. It was a delightful outing from start to finish, clear skies with the exception of some short showers, and fine fishing."

Killed by Train.

Axel Holma of West Duluth, Wednesday night, while trying to board a freight train for Duluth, was accidentally run over and killed by a switch engine. His brother, August, was with him at the time. Holma was formerly employed by the Zenith Furnace company. The body will be shipped to West Duluth for burial.

Back to Asylum.

Due to a petition filed yesterday with the judge of the probate court, Edward Meyer of 420 North Fifty-eighth avenue west, who is on parole from the state hospital at Fergus Falls, will be sent back to that institution. Last May Meyer was paroled from the asylum, after he had spent almost a year there. According to the petition, during the past two months he has been gradually growing worse, until it is now necessary to send him back again. A representative of the institution will call for him today.

TIPPERARY WELCOME FOR CHAMPION HAYES.

Dublin, July 31.—John J. Hayes, the New Yorker who won the Marathon race, was given a popular welcome when he arrived, last night, at Nenagh, Tipperary, the home of his grandfather. The platform of the railroad station was crowded with several thousand people, and when the train drew in the athlete was greeted by the town officials.

GOLD SENT TO CANADA TO HANDLE THE CROPS.

New York, July 31.—The New York agency of the Bank of Montreal sent an additional $750,000 in gold to Canada yesterday, bringing the total sent over the border during the last two weeks up to $3,550,000. A prominent Canadian banker in New York said yesterday that those shipments of gold to Canada at this time were the result of the sharp demand for money over the border, where bumper crops are promised and little business reaction has been felt.

BOARD GETS HOT ROAST

Camille Poirier Says Streets of City Are Being Ruined.

Say Fault is With the Water and Light Board.

Camille Poirier of 2128 East Second street appeared before the board of public works this morning and registered a kick against the methods of the water and light board in putting in water and gas mains. He said in the most emphatic terms at his command that the work of the department in this direction was most unsatisfactory, and that many streets torn up were left in a horrible condition, owing to the negligence of the water and light commissioners.

He spoke particularly of Second street between Thirteenth and Twenty-sixth avenues east, and asserted that after tearing up the street to put in water and gas mains the board refilled the trenches very carelessly, with the result that the street is ruined. Some of the work was done as long as five years ago, he stated, and no attention has since been paid to the improperly filled trenches, leaving the thoroughfare in a condition that is as bad or worse than before the paving was laid.

He declared the street was a disgrace to the city, and it was all the fault of the water and light board. He thought the board of public works should take steps to bring them to time, and compel them to do their work properly, thus saving streets of the city from further destruction.

The water board's reply to previous roasts of this nature has been that it is the duty of the board of public works to inspect such work, and that the final payment to the contractor is withheld until the board of public works certifies that he has restored the street to its original condition.

GASPIPE THUGS ARE EXECUTED

John Siemsen and Louis Dabner Hanged in California.

San Quentin Prison, Cal., July 31.—John Siemsen and Louis Dabner, known as the "gas pipe thugs," who committed a series of daring crimes in San Francisco following the earthquake and fire in 1906, were executed here in the penitentiary at 10:04 o'clock this morning.

John Siemsen and Louis Dabner, who were executed at San Quentin today committed a series of crimes in San Francisco soon after the earthquake and fire of April, 1906, and from the weapon they frequently used, became known as the "gas pipe thugs." They were executed for the murder of M. Murakata, a Japanese banker, but according to their own confession, they were guilty of two other murders and several assaults and robberies. Siemsen, who was a native of Hawaii, had a long criminal record and once served a term in San Quentin for grand larceny. Dabner was a mere boy from the interior of the state, and a fruitless effort was made to secure the commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment on account of his previous good character.

At noon on Oct. 3, Siemsen and Dabner entered the Kinnon Ginko, a Japanese bank of which M. Murakata was manager and A. Saski assistant manager. The former was beaten to death and Sasaki so seriously injured that his reason was not restored for several months. The men secured $2,700 on this occasion. Just a month later Siemsen and Dabner walked into the jewelry store of Henry Behrend and hit him on the head with a fish plate. The blow failed to render him unconscious and he grappled with Dabner, at the same time calling for help. Dabner was taken into cuhtody and Behrend was later given the reward of $1,000 offered for the capture of either of the criminals whose deeds had terrozied the community. Dabner broke down and confessed, implicating Siemsen, who was arrested in his room. He also confessed, corroborating the story of his associate in crime.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

ARE THROWN FROM AUTO

Crookston Men Have Close Call When Hurled From Machine.

One is Knocked Unconscious and Another One Breaks Two Ribs.

Crookston, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—While enroute to the fair at Grand Forks yesterday afternoon, an automobile driven and owned by H. L. Folk ran off one end of a culvert and hurled the four occupants headlong into the ditch. Falk and State Attorney James H. Maybury, sitting in the front seats, escaped with a few scratches, but Roisch and Carl Reidesel were badly injured. Reidesel was hurled head foremost and slid along the ground on his face, knocking out four teeth, cracking two ribs and severely spraining his wrist, in addition to being bruised all over his body. He was unconscious for several minutes, but was revived with stimulants.

Rolsch, who weighs 300 pounds, lit on his knees and one hip was seriously injured, and in addition it is feard that he sustained internal injuries. The team of a nearby farmer was secured and the injured men driven to Davidson and brought home on the Northern Pacific. Roisch is in a critical condition, and in addition to his injuries, Reidesel received a severe nervous shock and has been semi-hysterical ever since. The machine was not badly wrecked as Mr. Falk was driving it at a low speed.

WANTS BIG SUM FROM M. & I. ROAD

Bemidji, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Lars Bjorge, an old resident of Crookston, who received injuries at the Blackduck depot as the result of which he lost part of one of his legs, has instituted a suit here for $15,750 damages against the Minnesota & International Railway company.

In his complaint Mr. Bjorge alleges that while he was taking the train at Blackduck Nov. 18, 1907, his leg was severed on account of the negligence of the company in constructing the platform at the station in Blackduck.

He claims the platform was improperly constructed, in that a great and unnecessary space was left open from the train steps to the platform; that the night of Nov. 18 was very dark; that while he was trying to board the train, he slipped and fell off the platform to the ground and got between the train and the platform; that the train began to move after he had fallen, and he was dragged along between the train and the platform and was greatly injured.

Bjorge states that his leg was subsequently amputated, and that by reason thereof he suffered other injuries and also experienced great bodily and mental agony; that he was confined to his house all the time from Nov. 18, 1907, until July 15 last, and that he spent $600 for medical treatment.

DULUTH BOYS IN BEAR ENCOUNTER

Close Pressed by Bruin They Finally Dispatch Furious Animal.

Iron Mountain, Mich., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—A big black bear which they had wounded and which attacked them gave Fred Cole and Wilbur McLean, Duluth young men a thrilling experience in the woods at Sylvania lodge. The boys, who are the sons respectively, of Thomas F. Cole, copper magnate and head of the United States Steel corporation's Lake Superior interests, and John R. McLean, assistant general manager of the properties of the Oliver Iron Mining company, are enjoying an outing at the Watersmeet, Mich., summer resort. The bear had been seen lurking about the place, and it was with the hope of encountering the animal that the boys, armed with rifles, rowed across Loon lake and entered Big Bass lake. They had not walked far into the woods when unexpectedly they fairly stumbled over bruin, who was feasting on berries. A shot was fired, but the marksman was nervous and the wound inflicted merely enraged the animal. Infuriated with pain, and with ugly teeth showing through open jaws, the bear charged the boys. The hunters retreated to their boat. They reached it in safety. In the excitement young McLean dropped his rifle into the lake. The bear was making one more desperate plunge at the boys, when young Cole fortunately sent a bullet crashing through its head and bruin fell lifeless. The brute was one of the largest killed on the range in recent years.

Cass Lake, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Burglars entered the camp of M. N. Koll at Farris, Wednesday, and carried away all the provisions, together with revolvers, guns and other things. When the employes of Mr. Koll's mill arose yesterday morning, they were surprised to see that their provision room was emptied. They then recalled the fact that about 11 p. m., Wednesday evening, they heard some one pounding on the door, but thinking it was one of the other men working around it, they paid no heed. No clue has yet been secured.

For several years it has been owned and operated by Senator Valentine Batz. It had a capacity of 200 barrels of flour a day and has flourished.

There are a number of enthusiastic fanciers, most of them Belgians, and they take great pride in their flocks. The birds are of the best breeds. Weekly flights are held. The pigeons are shipped in baskets to various distant points and at a given hour are released for the journey home. There is much rivalry among the owners. Recently a flock was sent to Oconto, Wis. The first of the pigeons to return to Norway covered the distance in two hours and thirty minutes. Subsequently a flight from Appleton, Wis., was made in two hours and forty minutes. DRUG STORES TO QUIT.

Those of Jamestown Will Hand Out No More Liquor.

Jamestown, N. D., July 31.—It is reported that all the local druggists of Jamestown will not renew the annual liquor permits required under the state law. The reason for this is that the state enforcement league is making a state wide campaign for the purpose of enforcing with literal strictness the present code, bearing on that question, and, according to the interpretation of the intent of the law as held by the officials of the league. This, in the view of the druggists, will make it impossible to legally comply with the law, and hence anyone who is in need of stimulants for any purpose will have to look elsewhere than Jamestown for the same, after the next few days. It is understood that all the drug stores in Cass, Barnes and a number of other counties in the southern part of the state have already distintinued the handling of liquor or alcohol, and it is expected that all the druggists in the state will sooner or later fall in line and adopt the same course.

Dilworth, Minn., July 31.—Some of the cottages which the Northern Pacific railroad has been constructing here during the summer have been completed and the others are rapidly nearing the finishing touches and will soon be ready for occupancy by the employes of the road, whose work keeps them here. In all there are sixteen cottages which have been built or are under construction, some of which are being built for the employes under contract while others are to be rented to those at work for the company by that corporation.

These cottages are being disposed of to the employes very rapidly and it is likely that they will all be taken in a short time. Those houses that are being erected for employes on contract will be paid for by them on the instalment plan, the company keeping a certain stated amount out of the monthly salary of the employe until the place is paid for. This gives those wishing a home of their own in the new town an easy way of securing one at a minimum cost.

ITCHING ECZEMA FIFTY-FIVE YEARS

Suffered Torments from Birth — Boils Formed as Big as Walnuts —In Frightful Condition and Could Hardly Work — Tried All Kinds of Remedies to No Avail — At Last

WHOLLY CURED IN 8 MONTHS BY CUTICURA

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man fifty-five years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last my blood was so bad that I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery. I thought they would take the skin off my whole body, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. Mr. Nelson R. Burnett recommended the use of Cuticura Remedies, telling me he was confident they would benefit and, in time, cure me. I used the Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. I cordially recommend Cuticura Remedies to all who are afflicted the same as I was, believing that, if they will use them according to directions, they will find them all they are represented to be. Any one doubting the truth of the above can write to Mr. Burnett, who will cheerfully vouch for my statements.

"Hale Bordwell, R. F. D. 3, Cedar Corners, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. He never tires of praising the Cuticura Remedies.

"Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

GOLDSTEIN IS FINED

Ten Dollars and Costs and Will Appeal Case.

Eveleth, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case against I. Goldstein, charged with assault and battery, was concluded yesterday after a long session. Mr. Goldstein was fined $10 and costs, which altogether will amount to quite a sum. Mr. Goldstein alleges that he was not the first one to strike the blow, and that Louis Finn, his assaulter, had been threatening him for some time. A number of witnesses were called who said they could not tell who struck the first blow. Mr. Goldstein, through his attorney, Mr. McGillvery, will appeal the case to the district court at Duluth.

Judge Prince fined A. M. Peterson for taking his cow away from J. Maxwell, poundmaster, and then resisting the officer, who objected to the bovine being led from under the sheltering arm of the law. The fine and costs amounted to $11.50. Peterson says that he will appeal.

VIRGINIA AGAINST HIBBING.

Hostilities on Diamond Resumed at Hibbing Friday.

Hibbing, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Baseball fans are on the qui vive today as hostilities on the diamond between Hibbing and Virginia are to be resumed here this afternoon and the usual interest in such events between the two towns is displayed.

The games so far are pretty even, Virginia having won four and Hibbing three. Graham will in all probability oppose Sage on the hill.

William Head will be missed from the Hibbing lineup, as he is away on a ten-day trip. Joe Lynch, formerly with Eveleth, has been signed to play here during the absence of Head.

COLERAINE AT EVELETH.

First of Series of Games to be Played Friday.

Eveleth, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first game of the series with Coleraine on the home grounds will be played this afternoon. Games will also be played Saturday and Sunday. On account of the high standing of the local team with the other range towns a number of out of town people are expected to see the games. In the series at Coleraine Eveleth took two out of three games. Next Wednesday Hibbing will come over here for one game, while Eveleth will go over to Hibbing Tuesday and Thursday. The local fans are in good spirits over the team's victories over Hibbing.

TO REBUILD NO. 2 DOCK.

Iron Range Railroad to Start Work Next Winter.

Two Harbors, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is announced that the Iron Range has decided to rebuild ore dock No. 2 the coming winter, which is welcome news, as it will mean employment for 300 men and a good winter's business. The dock is to be constructed of wood. No more steel docks are to be constructed until No. 6 ore dock has had a trial to see how satisfactory it is.

PRIEST LEAVES CITY.

Ely, Minn., July 31.—Father Buh, vicar general of the diocese of Duluth, and pastor at Ely, left Wednesday for Austria, where he will visit his former home. He has been in the priesthood for fifty years, and the golden anniversary was recently celebrated at Duluth and Ely.

VERDICT AGAINST COMPANY.

Large Damages Awarded Mother of Injured Boy.

Grand Rapids, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The damage suit against the Oliver Mining company, prosecuted in the district court here by Mrs. Rosana Glines as guardian of her minor son, Archie Glines, against the Oliver Mining company to recover $27,000 damages for injuries sustained while the latter was employed as brakeman on a stripping train of the Oliver Mining company at Coleraine, resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. The jury awarded the woman $1,850 for the loss of her son's services and gave the son $10,000 for his injury. The boy lost one foot and the other was seriously hurt. Expert testimony showed that the wound on the foot would never heal so thoroughly that ulcers would not break out intermittently.

The Leinonen case, brought to recover for the death of a miner at Bovey, was taken up yesterday and will probably occupy two or three days in trial. This case is also against the Oliver Iron Mining company, and the parties will be represented by the same attorneys. The amount sued for is $5,000.

STROM FUNERAL SATURDAY.

Two Harbors Pioneer to be Buried by Maccabees.

Two Harbors, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral of John Strom, the well known contractor and pioneer of this city, who died suddenly Wednesday, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Swedish Lutheran church under the auspices of the Maccabees, of which order he had been a member for eighteen years.

Mr. Strom was 58 years of age and is survived by his wife and five sons: Emil, 19; Charles, 17; Oscar, 15; John, 13, and Axel, 10. Mr. Strom was stricken with hemorrhage of the lungs while placing letters in a sidewalk he was building on Third avenue. He was stooping over when he fell to the ground dying. Dr. Christianson of the Rudd hospital was called, but Mr. Strom was dying and medical aid was unavailing.

LAKE TRIPS ARE POPULAR

Herald Excursions Afford Fine Opportunity for Entertainment.

Many Duluth people who are entertaining friends find no better way of affording pleasure than by taking them on one of The Herald's excursions on Lake Superior. It is a delightful trip for thirty miles down the lake on the steamer Easton of the Booth line, and any person on pleasure bent cannot find a more satisfactory way to spend five hours.

The Easton will leave Booth's dock, on Lake avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock sharp. A stop of one hour will be made at Two Harbors for supper. Many people prefer to take their lunch baskets along and have family picnics on the boat.

One of the best features about these lake excursions is the return by moonlight. The boat reaches the dock on the return trip at 9 o'clock. This is not too late for the children—they always enjoy a trip on the lake.

The Herald affords the only opportunity of low-priced excursions on Lake Superior during the week days. They are so popular now that the demand for tickets is heavy, but the sale is limited to the number that can be carried with absolute comfort. Overcrowding of the boat will not be permitted under any circumstances, for it is the aim of The Herald to keep the excursions popular. People who go once want to go again. It's a delightful habit to fall into, and it costs but 30 cents—a cent a mile—five hours of joy for 6 cents an hour. Remember the time and place—Booth's dock at 4 p. m. Saturday.

A WORD TO BILL.

Chicago News: "Bill," said the elderly man with the chin fringe of gray whiskers, "I should think that a young feller like you would be gettin' married."

The round-faced young man in his Sunday clothes grinned sheepishly. "What would I want o' gettin' married?" he asked.

"Want?" echoed the elderly man. "Why, you'd want to steady down an' quit your foolishness, o' course. Make a man of yourself. Save up your money for your old age an' raise a fam'ly in the way they'd ought to be raised. That's what a man wants o' gettin' married."

"I guess I'll think it over," said the young man in his Sunday clothes. "Maybe there's somethin' in that. I haven't never thought of it afore."

"Of course you haven't," said the old fellow with the chin whisker. "That's why I thought I'd speak to you about it. You wouldn't have no trouble in gettin' a girl, a good-lookin' young chap like you."

"Think I wouldn't?"

"Certainly not. Look at you, now, with all them good clothes on. A girl'd jump at you. You're old enough, too. You must be 26 or more. I wasn't but 23 when I got married. You take my advice, Bill, an' study on it. You get the right kind of a woman and you won't never regret it. It beats runnin' around single all holler."

"I don't know but it might," said the round-faced young man, thoughtfully.

"Of course," said his elder. "It stands to reason. The more you study on it the more you'll see I'm right about it. It isn't as if you didn't have a good, steady job and good wages. You're making good money an' you could support a wife just as well as not. I says to myself, 'There's Bill.' I says, 'A good lookin', husky boy with good habits an' makin' good wages right along. What's Bill doin' hoarrin' at rest'rants an' bummin' around here an' there evenin's with no place in partickler to go to when he might as well have a little home of his own if he could find the right kind of a girl? I'll have to speak to him.' Feel diff'runt about it now I've begun to talk to you?"

"I guess I will study on it," said the round-faced young man.

"If you study on it you'll see I was right," said the old fellow. "Why, there's no two ways about it. Tell you what you do: You just think over all the girls you know, or if you don't know any I'll recommend you one or two. Do you know any?"

"I know a few," replied the young man.

"Well, if you know a few already there ain't no need o' me lookin' around for you. You think 'em over an' make up your mind which one o' them will do. Then you put on your good clothes an'—why, you've got on your good clothes now, ain't you? An' you've got a clean shave, too. I didn't know but you'd do just the way you are now."

"I often put on my good clothes of an evenin," said the npff—anHY mh an evenin'," explained the young man.

"Tooby shore, tooby shore!" said the elderly man. "Come to think of it, I've noticed you wearin' them most every evenin' lately. You've generally been goin' down Winton street an' turnin' in to Tim McCaffrey's cottage, ain't you?"

The round-faced young man looked discomposed. "What if I have?" he asked.

"Oh, nothin'," said the elderly man with the chin fringe. 'It's natural you should. Tim's good company when he's in a good temper, and so is the old lady. It's natural that a young man like you should like to dress up an' go around to pay his respects to 'em. An' then there's always the girl to fall back on. Fine girl, Maggie."

"She is that,' said the young man with the round face. But I don't see as it's any of your darned business."

BARNARD MASCOTS.

Roosters and China Dogs and Real Dogs as Emblems.

Barnard girls have always had the greatest faith in mascots, and one of the first important tasks of each class as it enters college is the selection of some good luck emblem, says the New York Sun.

The custom was started by the class that entered in 1901. In some out of the way corner of Europe one of the girls discovered a hideous little china dog that had a wide and foolish grin on his face and huge tears rolling down his cheeks. One of his ears was folded back on his head, and the shape of his body was like nothing ever seen on any living animal.

When this concoction was exhibited in the class study 1905 fell in love with him on sight. Straightway they hailed him as the presiding genius, and from that time on "1905's dog," as he was called for want of another name, was present at every class meeting, every class party and every athletic struggle that came along.

When the time came for 1906 to choose a mascot they naturally wanted to outdo the originality of their predecessors, and their final choice was a gargoyle from Lincoln Cathedral which one of the girls had brought from England the year before. There was no doubt that 1905 had been outdone, but the older girls accused the younger ones of copying, and the gargoyle never made the hit that was expected of him.

It remained for 1907 to strike out in an entirely new direction. This class came to college with great enthusiasm, and to symbolize their attitude toward life they choose a gamecock as their mascot. He was as red as the class flower, the jack rose, and to help matters along the rooster was named Rosey as soon as the girls had seen him. He lived with one of the squatters just across the street from the college buildings, and between classes the members of 1907 would run over to see how their pet was getting on.

The moment when 1907 could be proudest of its mascot was in the triumphal parades after some hard won athletic victory. Two of the tallest girls would put a pole through the ring on Rosey's cage and carry him proudly through the college halls as the advance guard. And Rosey never failed his stanch admirers. Excited by the shouts and singing all about him he would let off one lusty crow after another.

But even in adversity Rosey was a solace to his class, for when things went the wrong way with 1907 they could often be heard in the class study singing a song which began:

His name is Rosey,
His name is Rosey,
The bravest cock that Barnard ever knew;
It is no wonder
When blamed for blunder
We love to hear his cock-a-doodle-doo.

Rosey's end was very sad indeed, for one fall when college opened again the girls discovered that the squatter who boarded their beloved mascot had disappeared and Rosey with him.

The class of 1908 chose a scarab to bring them good luck in their college career, and 1909, the present junior class, in spite of the cruel ending of 1907's mascot, also chose an animal, a big white bulldog by the name of Bob.

The class of 1910, sophomores now, are a very dignified class in spite of their youth, and nobody was surprised when they chose a wise old owl as their class emblem and mascot.

DENTISTRY IN CHINA.

North China Daily News: Right in front of us on the street doctor's table is a small heap of human teeth. A patient came up to the doctor. On being asked what he wanted he replied simply by opening his mouth to the very widest extent. It was seen that his four upper front teeth were wanting.

Measuring the cavity in the jaw, the tooth peddler carefully selected from the heap the four teeth that would exactly fill it. He then drilled a hole in them longitudinally and inserted a bit of wire to bind them to each other.

The ends of the wire were next inserted in holes that were drilled into the teeth on each side of the cavity and at once the chasm disappeared.

AMERICA BLAMED FOR IDLENESS OF SPINNERS.

Manchester, Eng., Ju. 31.—J. R. MacColl, president of the recent international cotton congress, interviewed here on his return to America, said: "Since attending the cotton congress in Paris I have visited some of the important industrial centers in France, Germany and Great Britain. Everywhere the same story prevails—machinery stopped, short time, unprofitable prices, absence of demand for goods. For the abrupt termination of prosperity and the present condition America is blamed, and the question is generally put: 'Is business improving in your country, and how soon do you expect to see good trade again?' My reply has been that, notwithstanding favorable harvests and recent currency legislation, we must get the presidential election and tariff revision out of the way before confidence can be fully restored, and any marked activity prevail again, although undoubtedly in the coming months we shall see a continual increase in the volume of business.

"The Paris congress took an important step in indorsing the buying of cotton on net weight. The purpose is to further the movement for a decent American bale, similar to the Egyptian bale. It is, in my opinion, unfortunate that an experimental plantation scheme was abandoned by the English spinners. It was a mistake to attempt to form a foreign corporation. The company should be incorporated under American laws, and include prominent American spinners and planter, although the majority of the stock might be owned in Europe. I do not believe that the leaders of the growing associations would have any objection to such a company. I find widespread exchanges. Some of the best and most influential spinners in every country affirm that industry would be much better without it. The conservative and responsible members of the exchanges should in my opinion, cooperate with the growers and spinners in removing as far as possible the objectionable features of future trading, and thus prevent the increasing protest against the injurious influence upon the industry of so-called gambling and speculation."

A HARD CASE

Imagine a man so low with kidney disease that he had to sit up night and day. He even had to sleep sitting up, being unable to lay in his bed or stand on his feet. Yet such was the final condition of W. R. Marquis, the well known business man of Bartow, Fla.

He went to a sanitarium in Memphis, where he was attended by three physicians. They gave up the case and advised that he go home.

On his return he heard of and sent for the new emollient treatment.

The fourth week the heart and dropsy began to mend, and the fourth month he was walking all over the town without cane or crutches, and he permits this reference.

No matter what kidney disease is called—whether kidney trouble, Nephritis or Bright's Disease—it is inflammation of the kidneys, and as the old-time futile kidney medicines are kidney excitants, you can see why they failed in his case as they have in yours.

Fulton's Renal Compound is the first successful Renal emollient thus reducing Renal inflammation, and kidney disease is now curable for the first time. Even serious supposed incurable forms yield as above.

AGITATION IN BENGAL

Object Lesson Seen in Boer War and Japan's Victory.

No Peace in Bengal Since Sir Bamfylde Fuller Resigned.

Calcutta, July 31.—Various causes have been assigned for the present agitation in Bengal and other ports of India. The Boer war, no doubt, taught the Indians that Great Britain was not so invincible as they had imagined, and the defeat of a great European power like Russia by a smaller Asiatic one like Japan furnished perhaps a still more striking object lesson in the same direction. But, though these may have left their impressions on the warlike races of the great dependency, and have been turned to account by the brains which supply the disaffected with arguments, the effeminate Bengali and the astute Poona Brahman would have never dared to flout the governing race as they have done were it no for the impunity which for many years past has waited on and encouraged covert and even open sedition.

There has been no peace in Bengal since Sir Bamfylde Fuller felt obliged to resign his lieutenant governorship for want of support from higher authority. English sympathizers with the latter, in and out of parliament, attribute all that has occurred to Lord Curzon's tyrannical partition of Bengal, while others venture to think that had Lord Curzon remained to give effect to this measure for a year or two with the support of the Unionist government, the difficulties which his successor and Mr. Morley tried to avert by too much conciliation would never have arisen. The sacrifice of a lieutenant governor, with the advent to power of a government pledged to reward agitation in the Transvaal and Ireland, naturally stimulated the extremists of the Indian congress party, encouraged as they were by men like Sir Henry Cotton and Keir Hardie. Fortunately, Mr. Morley soon stiffened his back against these gentlemen, but the mischief had begun.

Disaffection Everywhere.

The whole country, with the exception of Rajputana and one of the two other parts, is now more or less honeycombed with disaffection toward British rule, and the government knows it. There have been riots in Tinnevelly and some other places, but too much importance need not be assigned to a local riot or two. If secret agitation is rife everywhere, that is a more serious matter. When Lord Ripon repealed Lord Lytton's vernacular press act and encouraged Indian deputations to imitate English ones by agitating for the attainment of their aspirations, he laid the foundation of the Indian congress and opened a door to any editor who chose to spout sedition for the purpose of blackmail or in order to have his mouth stopped by government employment. The alumni of the schools and colleges, who wield, for the most part, the power of the press in India, are under no illusions as to the fustian they reel off to order. They asperse the character of the rule to which they owe their education, either because they are paid, or find it pays them to do so. They would much rather have a regular salary in government employ, which they have not been slow to note sometimes comes to those who make themselves disagreeable to the ruling powers. The example of the West, where a candid friend or able opponent has often a better chance of office than one of the trusty rank and file is ever before them.

MAY BANISH GUILLOTINE

Abolition of Capital Punishment an Issue in France.

Paris, July 31.—Now that the question of the maintenance or the abolition of capital punishment is so much to the fore in this country, particulars of the guillotines, which have been used for the dispatch of murderers, are exciting interest. It is said that there are no more than two in France, one being for service in Paris and the other in the provinces. In the French colonies there are, in all, nine more.

According to instructive account just published by a contemporary, the two guillotines provided for murderers in France are kept in a shabby shed in the Rue de la Folie Regnault in Paris. They were constructed in 1871 to replace those which had been taken out and burned on the Place Vendome during the commune. By an odd coincidence, the first carpenter who was engaged to construct the two new guillotines bore the name of Samson, of grim notoriety. So well was this gruesome work done that these machines have worked ever since without a hitch, nor have they needed the slightest repair. An old carpenter, known as the Pere Julien, had a hand in the construction of nine out of the total eleven guillotines. He relates that one day, in 1891, an order was quite unexpectedly received for half a dozen, destined for the colonies.

"How long does it take to make a guillotine?" he was asked.

A month, explained this authority; but other people besides carpenters are naturally busy on the job, such as mechanics, metallurgists, locksmiths, blacksmiths, painters and workers in copper and zinc, not to speak of the providers of the baskets into which the heads fall after they have been cut off. The work is done piece by piece in secret. When everything is ready, employers, workmen and the engineers are convoked by Monsieur de Executioner in the Folie Regnault shed. Then a bundle of straw is "executed." All the trades which have taken part in the fabrication of the guillotine are represented on this occasion.

"Did he feel at all queer when he was planing the boards which were to form the structure?" Pere Julien was asked.

"Not a bit of it," he answered. "No more than if I had been planing the boards of a table. As I know well that it would not be for me, how could I feel uneasy?"

"What is the cost of the construction of a guillotine?" was the last query put to the alert old man.

"About $1,200," he replied, "but you will excuse me, as I am rather pressed for time. I am at work on a coffin. That sort of a job is better, as there is always something to do on it. The good, like the bad, are obliged to go through that ordeal."

BIG CHANGE IN ULSTER

Irish Nationalism Growing in the Strongholds of Orangeism.

Old Religious Differences Dying—For Imperial Home Rule.

Dublin, July 31.—I have just returned from a trip through the north of Ireland during which I visited the counties of Antrim, Down, Tyrone and Derry, formerly the strongholds of Orangeism and antinationalism, and I coness that I have been atonished by the change which has come over the people of the north. We in Dublin, are accustomed to hear from time to time of the growth of nationalist sentiment in "Loyal Ulster," and while we have recognized that things were improving in the North in this respect, I doubt if any of us realized the revolution which has come over the position of the Scotch-Irish of the North.

I must apologize, however, for calling them Scotch-Irish. It is only done for the sake of identification. Today the descendants of the Scotch planters of Ulster are as Irish as the descendants of the O'Neils whom they displaced. A generation ago, or even ten years ago, they prided themselves on the fact that they had nothing in common with the Irish. Today they are disposed to resent any title which would indicate that their Irish nationality is qualified in any way.

Change Noticeable in Belfast.

This change o sentiment was particularly noticeable in Belast. Formerly the Roman atholics who were above the laboring class were ardent Unionists. Today, I find that the lead in the national movement is being taken by young men and women whose names have been household words for generations among the Unionists and Orangemen of the north of Ireland. Gaelic signs can be seen on some of the shops, and I have even heard the ancient Irish tongue spoken, and spoken fluently, on the Belfast streets, and even in the Belfast drawing rooms.

Even the Orangemen—that body of sincere fanatics whose hatred of Irish nationality has only been equaled in the past by their hatred of the religion of the majority of their fellow countrymen have felt the change. The Orange body is now split into two parts and the larger part is frankly in favor of a large measure of home rule for Ireland. The democracy of the north of Ireland as represented the Independant Orange organization has abandoned all hope of any reform from the British parliment and is looking forward to the re-establishment of the Irish legislature.

To all this intense wave of nationality which has sprung up over the north there is a practical side. The Northern Nationalist is not a separatist. He feels that Ireland could not stand alone from a military point of view, and he recognizes the importance of federation with the British empire. But he insists that the federation shall be so loose that Ireland shall have a free hand in managing all her internal affairs and that only truly imperial matters, like national defense, foreign relations and international trade, shall be left to the imperial parliament.

It is likely, too, that the Northern Nationalist will add great strength to the national movement by going for the practical rather than by scraping after the unattainable ideal. Already some of the leaders of the Northern movement have established friendly relations with leading men in Scotland and Wales and a demand is growing in these countries for home rule all around. It is not at all impossible, then, that the Unionist party itself might be induced by the friends to bring in a measure which would grant the various countries local self-government without weakening the empire.

Union of Celtic Nations.

Another extremely practical step which has had its origin in the North is the foundation of a movement for the union of the Celtic nations. It must not be forgotten that the people of Wales and Scotland are of the same stock the Irish are and that their ideals and mental attitude are practically alike and equally antagonistic to those of the people of England. Perhaps this in some measure explains the awakening of the Scottish Celts of the North of Ireland, who are at last realizing their relationship to their fellows of the rest of Ireland. The reawakening is pervading all classes. I found the traders of Belfast enthusiastically Irish, and I found the farmers of Down and Tyrone just as Irish in their sentiment. Moreover, I found among the Protestant farmers, who used to be the backbone of the irreconcilable Orange party, a profound disgust and weariness with English methods of government.

It is a historical fact that the North has led every great Irish national movement from the days of the Shane O'Neil downward. It seems to be preparing to take its rightful place again.

AN INFAMOUS LIE SAYS GOMPERS

Labor Leader Denies Stories Concerning Delivery of Labor Vote.

Washington, July 31.—"The report that I have ever said that I would or would not deliver the labor vote to any political party is an infamous lie," said Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor yesterday. "Organized labor is not only honest, but intelligent enough to choose the party for its support which will best represent its interests.

"It is possible that by lies and misrepresentations, the enemies of organized labor may injure me personally and even be successful in accomplishing my removal as president of the American Federation of Labor," said Mr. Gompers, "but that will never change my course in battling for the principles for which I stand.

"It is not a question of politics with me. I have no politics, or if I have they are politics of the people.

"I fully explained when I took the stand which I have," said Mr. Gompers, "that some would disagree with me. I don't expect the labor world to accept my conclusions in every instance. I expected to be criticised, too, in some quarters, but I did not think that the criticism would be so unjust as to be contemptible. I stand for the right of individual opinion.

"I regard my position as president of the American Federation of Labor as the most exalted and honorable in this world to which I could ever wish to aspire. It is a sacred trust with which my fellows have honored me because of my convictions and the principles which I advocate. They may take that honor away from me if they like and I will bow to their will. But it will not prevent me from fighting for the cause which is my life work, just as I have in the past and as I propose to do in the future.

"I want no political office or honor. I have nothing for sale and don't propose to begin at this late day by selling my honor.

"What I think and what I say is from conscientious convictions that it is the truth. No one can make me sacrifice my honest conviction.

"My editorial in the American Federationist plainly and forcefully sets forth my position. He who runs may read and understand. Those who have taken issue with the position therein set forth, not understand, with the position I am alleged to have assumed, are political renegades and discredited outcasts of labor. I do not mean that those who differ with my opinion are such, but those who have denounced me and claim that I have not set forth the facts as they are."

Frank H. Hitchcock, Republican national chairman, when asked as to the truth of the report that a personal campaign was to be waged against Gompers, replied:

"Nothing of the kind has been arranged."

Fat Folks Buy Relief From Heat

It is gasping and strangling time for the fat folks. This most of them must put up with, or if they rebel they may take a few pennies over to their druggist's, and buy some hot weather comfort—with a more becoming figure thrown in as a premium, so to speak.

For a small sum your druggist will give you ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 8½ ounces Syrup Simplex. Take this, a teaspoonful at a time after meals and at bedtime, and you will get quick relief from heat miseries.

Simple as this mixture is, it makes wonderful inroads on the fat. Entirely without help of any kind from exercising or dieting it will take off, in many cases, over a pound of fat a day. Yet those who take it never feel any ill effect; no wrinkles form and there is no disturbance of the stomach. The remedy affects the fat only. One does not get thin and pay for it with weakness or dyspepsia by using this mixture. On the contrary, one's appetite and general wellbeing are improved by it. Try some if you want to get quickly and satisfactorily rid of your hot weather tribulations—with a trim, slim figure thrown in as a premium, as it were.

PREMIERS IN SESSION.

Important Australian Question Discussed at Melbourne Conference.

Melbourne, July 31.—One of the most notable events of the past month has been the meeting of the premiers of the several states in conference at Melbourne. The premiers of each of the six states, accompanied by their states treasurers or other ministers, have held meetings in Melbourne covering nearly three weeks. The objects of the conference were mainly to discuss the relations of the states to the commonwealth with regard to the transferences of the transference of states' debts to the commonwealth, the policy of immigrations and a commonwealth old-age pension scheme. Nothing practical was done; the conference was almost fruitless. But although nothing was done, quite sufficient was said to show pretty definitely that the Federation of the Australian States is at present more of a thing of name than of reality. So long as the states are jealous of the commonwealth, there can be no real federation.

In the beginning, Australians were to be "one flag, one people, one destiny." That good time, which was predicted to be coming, has not yet arrived. The "mother state," as New South Wales is termed, is the most unfederal of the group. She growls at every indication of any exercise of control by the commonwealth, has more than once contested her right in the high court and has been beaten and fined. But the spirit of the late premier, Mr. Carruthers, has taken possession of the present premier, Mr. Wade, and the latter is now stumping New South Wales and calling upon the electors throughout the country to prepare for the "coming struggle"—the coming struggle being the fight for power between the federal government and the states. And all through the sittings of the premiers' conference the same spirit of opposition was displayed, and not by New South Wales only.

The transference of states' debts to the commonwealth has been a matter of serious concern ever since the inception of federation, more than seven years ago. The commonwealth treasurer, Sir William Lyne, brought forward a scheme; the conference rejected it, but had nothing whatever to suggest in its place. It may be a question whether this transference of debts, something like $1,250,000,000, is not altogether too big a thing for the ability of the financiers of Australia. There was something of agreement with regard to old-age pension, though no details were discussed, and on the all-important matter of immigration, the selfishness of the states was made very conspicuous. The states have graciously agreed to allow the commonwealth to pay the expense of advertising Australia, but the states alone must select their own immigrants.

SUIT IN COURT 340 YEARS.

Mexican Villages Will Celebrate Settlement of Long Litigation.

City of Mexico, July 31.—A final settlement has been made in a lawsuit which was pending in the courts of the state of Oaxaca for 340 years. The dispute arose between the local authorities of the towns of Yodocome and Nunu over the question of the legal boundary line between the two villages. Both towns held titles to the same land, the conflicting grants being made by the colonial government. The titles held dby private parties were also involved and each town brought suit against the other for the land which was claimed to be justly due it. The suit dragged along for the first 100 years, one legal step after the other being taken by the contending towns. Another hundred years passed and then another century and the suit was still undecided. During all this time the people of their respective towns were arrayed against each other in bitter enmity and many have been the armed conflicts that have taken place between the opposing factions.

The father of President Porfiro Diaz was a native of Yodocomo. He stood high in the little country community because of his mental ability. He took an active interest in the long-pending suit, and during his lifetime he made every effort to get a final decision of the case. President Diaz gave the matter his personal attention not long ago and the ancient records relating to the land grants and the conflicting boundary were carefully examined. The matter was then laid before the people of the two towns, who held many conferences.

THE PLATFORMS AND THE TARIFF.

Upon the vital subject of the tariff, the two platforms are as far apart as the poles. Both speak of tariff revision, or rather one speaks of tariff "revision" and the other of tariff "reform;" but one speaks equivocally and dubiously, and the other speaks firmly and plainly.

The Republican platform says:

> The Republican party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of congress immediately following the inauguration of the next president. In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, TOGETHER WITH A REASONABLE PROFIT TO AMERICAN INDUSTRIES.

The Democratic platform says:

> We favor immediate revision of the tariff by the reduction of import duties. Articles entering into competition with trust-controlled products should be placed upon the free list; and material reductions should be made in the tariff upon the necessaries of life, especially upon articles competing with such American manufactures as are sold abroad more cheaply than at home, and graduated reductions should be made in such other schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis.

The party of high protection, the guardian of special privilege, is forced by overwhelming public sentiment into acknowledgment of the need of tariff revision, yet it couches its declaration in terms that might as easily be construed to mean revision upward as revision downward. Worse than that, to the old phrasecology in which the doctrine of protection had been expressed since the birth of the party is added the ominous words "together with a reasonable profit to American industries." This is new. No platform ever written before 1908 contained such words. Yet they embody the real principle upon which Republican tariff legislation has been based, and the interested industries have been permitted, directly or through their representatives in congress, to make their own estimates of what constitutes a "reasonable profit." This has led to infamously high tariff schedules, which have absolutely barred out foreign competition and thus permitted American manufacturers to form trusts which throttled domestic competition by the methods of the thug and the conspirator. And now, when the people are in revolt against such methods, the Republican party accompanies a declaration for tariff revision with a formal embodiment in its platform of the principle underlying those methods.

The Democratic platform, on the other hand, declares for immediate reductions; declares for the placing of trust-controlled articles on the free list; declares for material reductions upon articles sold abroad cheaper than at home; and declares for gradual reductions all along the line until the tariff is finally placed upon a revenue basis. The revenue needs are large, and a tariff for revenue only will always provide all the protection needed by any American industry; which is just protection enough to guard American labor against the competition of cheap foreign labor, without enabling the trusts to rob American labor by their infamous exactions which have made high wages less remunerative than low wages because a 50 per cent increase in wages has been accompanied by a 50 per cent reduction in the purchasing power of those wages.

NEXT WINTER'S COAL SHORTAGE.

Those are no empty warnings which the railroads of the Northwest are issuing to their patrons in Minnesota and the Dakotas about the probability of a coal famine next winter unless the people of the Northwest have forethought enough to lay in their winter's supplies of fuel early.

It will be remembered that winter before last there was a very serious coal famine. Business was so active during the fall and winter that the railroads did not get a chance to handle coal enough to keep the Northwest warm. This could have been avoided if the people had bought their coal in the quiet summer months, and the danger of another shortage next winter can be averted if the people will buy their coal now.

Last winter there was no shortage, because the railroads did not have enough to do, even counting the transportation of coal. It is going to be different next winter. A large crop is now assured, and the railroads are going to have all they want to do to take it to market and bring back the goods the farmers will buy with their profits. Unless the Northwest's supply of coal is placed before this business gets in full swing, the chances are that next winter will bring a repetition of the disastrous experiences of winter before last.

The man who lays in his winter's supply of coal now will not only be assuring himself against suffering, but he will be getting his coal cheaper and will be doing his share to avert a shortage next winter.

LAKE AND RAIL RATES.

Recent proposals from the railroads that because business has been smaller than it was a while ago they ought to be permitted to increase their rates so as to maintain dividends would be laughable if they were not so irritatingly selfish.

The speedy return of business activity bids fair to eliminate the necessity of this sort of talk, but the railroads would sooner regain the standing they desire in the public eye if they refrained from making such absurdly selfish and thoughtless proposals.

The Detroit Free Press calls attention to the difference in this respect between conditions on water channels of transportation and on railroads: "A period of lessened traffic and reduced dividends overtakes the railroads of the country. Piteous outcry is at once raised that the transportation tax which the roads levy on the people must be increased. A like period of lessened traffic and reduced revenue overtakes the steamship lines of the Great Lakes. The return which millions in capital will receive this year will scarcely be adequate to pay the taxes and cost of insurance on the floating property in which the capital is invested.

"Is there outcry from these transportation interests for an increase in rates? On the contrary, following the operation of the natural laws in such cases, competition for such business as is obtainable is keener. Rates are actually decreased. For instance, the rate on iron ore from Lake Superior to Lake Erie ports is a basic rate. Last year this rate was 75 cents a ton. This year it was reduced first to 70 cents and later to 65 cents."

In other words, the law of supply and demand still holds upon the lakes, but it has apparently been repealed by the power of consolidation upon the railroads. If there were competition upon the railroads, as there is upon the lakes, the effect of reduced business would naturally be lower rates. But competition is dead on the railroads, and no doubt the time is coming when it will be dead upon the lakes as well.

In view of this vivid proof of the death of competition in the railroad business, the railroads are singularly shortsighted in continuing, as most of them do, their opposition to public regulation.

With competition, no regulation is needed; conditions take care of themselves. But competition is warlike and wasteful, and after a spell of it the railroads turned to and put it out of business. Then, without regulation, the interests of the people and of the country were in the hands of the railroad managers, who were human and therefore selfish. To the use made of this power may be ascribed the outbreak of anti-railroad sentiment in the public mind.

Competition being dead, two alternatives present themselves: to seek to resurrect it, which can't be done; or to put in its place public regulation in the interests of the public. The elimination of competition in the railroad business having been accepted as a settled fact, the railroads are foolish to oppose regulation, especially when by their talk of higher rates in dull times they show the need of it so clearly.

COME TO DULUTH AND BE COOL.

We note with deep concern that it was so hot in St. Paul yesterday that the paint on the interior decorations of the state capitol began to run. This is not only unpleasant because of the possible harm to the splendor of the statehouse that is involved, but because of the suffering of those condemned to live in such a hot place as St. Paul when only 150 miles away, on the shores of Lake Superior, there is a place of such delightful coolness and comfort that every summer moment is a perfect delight.

It is to be observed, also, that in other cities—in Minneapolis, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Kansas City, pretty nearly every place, in fact, except Duluth—similarly burdensome and oppressive conditions prevail, and have prevailed for some little time. It is with no selfish intention of gloating over the misfortunes of others that we call attention to the fact that it is different, here.

Sunday the highest temperature reached in Duluth was 74 degs.; Monday's highest was 84 degs., which was uncommonly hot for Duluth, though the nights at both sides of this hot day were delightfully cool and refreshing; Tuesday's maximum was 74 degs., Wednesday's was 72 degs., and yesterday's was 77 degs.: an average, for the five days, of 76 degs. This morning the temperature was not far from 70, tending upward but with small prospect that it would get much above 75 during the day; a cool, delicious breeze wafted soothing and grateful zephyrs over the city; and a genial sun beamed benevolently down from a cloudless sky.

Why don't these people who are sweltering—dying, some of them, poor unfortunates—with the heat in other cities come to Duluth and learn what it is really to live in summer time?

PRESIDENTIAL STATES.

Thus far, all the presidents of the United States have come from ten states, but if Bryan is elected in November, Nebraska will be admitted to this select gathering for the first time, making it eleven.

Virginia, once called the "Mother of Presidents," gave the nation five chief executives: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Tyler. New York has also supplied five presidents: Van Buren, Fillmore, Arthur, Cleveland and Roosevelt. Ohio has given four presidents, and if Taft should be elected her share will be increased to five, placing her in the same rank as Virginia and New York. The Ohio presidents have been William Henry Harrison, Hayes, Garfield and McKinley.

Tennessee, which has ceased providing presidents, like Virginia, because of her affiliation with the "solid South," contributed three presidents: Jackson, Polk and Johnson.

Massachusetts has supplied two presidents, the two Adamses. Illinois provided two presidents, Lincoln and Grant; New Hampshire has furnished one, Franklin Pierce; Pennsylvania scored once with Buchanan; Louisiana furnished Zachary Taylor; and Indiana produced Benjamin Harrison.

Of the ten states that have furnished presidents, five were of the original thirteen states: Virginia, Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania. Three only are southern states: Virginia, Tennessee and Louisiana. Ohio, Illinois and Indiana are Central states, and the Western states have not yet scored. Unless Mr. Bryan's third campaign is successful, the West will have to go back upon the waiting list again.

Since the war, except for the calamity that gave Johnson of Tennessee the presidency, the South has not scored. Of the eight presidents since Johnson, Ohio has furnished three, New York three, Illinois one and Indiana one.

Providing party alignments do not change materially, the West may hope for better things in the future. If Bryan wins, it will score for the first time, but it will not be the last. If Governor Johnson had won the Democratic nomination for the presidency, Minnesota would have had a chance to get into the list of presidential states, and as Johnson is a young man, and 1912 is only four years away, this state will yet have an opportunity to join the select sisterhood of states which provide presidents.

The West, because of its independence in politics and its keen perception of real issues which has replaced the old-fashioned hidebound party loyalty, must become more and more the political battleground, and this will cause the parties to turn their attention to this section in choosing candidates. New England and the South are not likely to get back into the field right away; Pennsylvania is not debatable ground and can therefore scarcely hope to nominate a favorite son unless he be a man of commanding abilities and national strength; Ohio has pretty nearly had its share for the present. The time of the West is coming, and some Western state may yet win from her older sisters the title of "mother of presidents."

HOTEL GOSSIP.

James A. Bowen, at the Spalding hotel yesterday, stated that the arid lands west of the Mississippi river are being rapidly reclaimed by the government. Millions of acres of swamp lands are also being reclaimed under a system that involves practically no expense to the people, he says. A fund derived from the sale of public lands constitutes the fund that carries on the work of reclaiming the swamp lands, while the sale of irrigated lands to actual settlers increases the fund.

"About four-fifths of the swamp lands lie east of the Mississippi river," said Mr. Bowen. "It is estimated that the reclamation of these lands would add about $4,000,000,000 to the land value of this country. The occupation and development of these lands would add another similar sum to our national wealth. So you can readily see the vast magnitude and importance of the work that is being carried on by the government.

"It is estimated that 10,000,000 people might live in health and comfort in districts that are at the present time only worthless swamps. These districts are not only worthless, but they are actually a menace to the health of the people who live in their vicinity.

"According to government statistics, no less than $8,000,000,000 of permanent national capital might be added to the resources of the country. This added resource at the present time lies dormant, an actual menace to different sections of our country, for lack of a few million dollars worth of work and implements under which the Federal government could accomplish the needed work. The government is going ahead very fast in the work of reclaiming lands west of the Mississippi river, but very little work is being done on the swamp lands that lie east of the Father of Waters, which compose by far the greater part of the swamp lands of the country.

"Most of the work of the reclamation service in the West is the reclaiming of land that is owned by the government. By far the larger part of the swamp land of the nation is of state or individual ownership and the Federal government has no authority to take up the work of reclaiming this land. It is for that reason that far the greater part of the swamp lands of the United States are at the present time being left untouched and of no value to the country.

"The work of reclaiming swamp lands should be undertaken as a whole. The work should also be done by the Federal government. In some cases states have reclaimed state lands, but this system has not proven very successful. In the older states much of this land is under private ownership and it has been found that private owners either lack the enterprise of the funds to carry on the work, that, after all, is primarily a function of the Federal government.

"There is no doubt that interest in the reclamation of swamp lands is increasing. Conventions have been called in different parts of the country for the sake of arousing interest in the subject, while at the past session of congress over thirty bills favoring appropriations for the work of reclamation were presented. Surveys and estimates have already been made in many states by the agricultural department, so that the work that I believe that government will have to take up some day, is in a measure prepared.

"In 1850 some 64,000,000 acres were ceded to the states by the Federal government with the understanding that the various states would reclaim the ceded areas. Practically nothing has been done in the direction of carrying out this agreement. The states may be called upon to surrender the lands they have received, for it is apparent to statesmen and men familiar with the situation that the only way in which the reclamation can be accomplished is by the government carrying on the work. Unless this plan is worked out, or unless the government adopts a plan to reimburse the states for the money that is expended upon the reclaiming of the swamp lands, it is improbable that any progress will be made in this vitally important matter, for years.

"It is up to the Federal government to devise some solution of the problem. A system has been devised and successfully carried out for the conversion of our deserts into land that is capable of producing profit. If this has been accomplished there is no reason why the swamp lands of the country cannot be reclaimed."

THE WEATHER.

Weather like that which prevailed yesterday, last night and today is worth millions a minute; and the suffering cities elsewhere in the United States would any of them gladly chip in to buy a minute of it if they could. It was clear, fine cool—good for picnics, good for fishing, good for working, good for anything and everything. Furthermore, the weather man looks for a continuance of fine weather tonight and tomorrow. Yesterday's highest was 76 degs. and last night's lowest was 52 degs.

The sun rose this morning at 4:46 and sets tonight at 7:43, making 14 hours and 57 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Somewhat cooler weather prevails this morning in the Upper Mississippi valley states and the Western Lake region due to a high pressure area overlying the Dakotas, Nebraska and Minnesota. Light to copious rains fell during Thursday or last night in Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, the Gulf states and Virginia as a result of low pressures central off the Atlantic coast and over the Gulf of California. Falling pressures in the Far Northwest are attended by rising temperatures. Pleasant weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Saturday.

Bryan Now and Then.

Mexican Herald: Bryan in 1896 was a "bogey man." With his free silver "heresy" he frightened all the respectable and ringletted dowagers of the Eastern states: the bankers, intimidated by Mark Hanna—who also whipped the ministers into line—brought the whole pressure of the money power against Bryan. Church, banks, vested interests and the unearned increment were hot and cold by turns; it was an ague fit while it lasted. Bryan and free silver, a "heresy" which needed a modern Torquemada to extirpate it, went down in two historic defeats, and "sound money" won—that yellow money which has been depreciating in value ever since Bryan's defeat in 1896. This is one of the ironies of politics. The world accepts, fatalistically, the vagaries of gold, and pardons it for what silver was condemned. Bimetallism is in its obscure grave with not a wreath of flowers to attest a lingering grief for a "sacred cause." Silver is the pale drudge of the minor commerce of the world, and the Rand miners talk of pouring out a flood of a "million millions' worth of gold." The free silver "madness" looks, in comparison, like a mild case of hysteria. Nature has out-Bryaned Bryan.

The Singer.

If song be born within your heart—
Then, like the lark on soaring wing,
Untouched by rules and schools of art,
In sooth you cannot help but sing!
Behold the bird, untrained, untaught,
What music from his throat is flung!
E'en so, the song, by you unsought,
Will fall in sweetness from your tongue.

—D. A. McCARTHY in New York Sun.

Boom Your Town.

If you want your town to prosper,
And the people there to flock;
If you want to see it growing,
Making a progressive showing—
Boost—don't knock!

—Los Angeles Express.

A Different Man.

Springfield Union: There is food for mental digestion in this generalization by the Indianapolis News: "Papers throughout the country recognize that while it is the same candidate as in 1896 and 1900, it is not going to be the same easy sort of campaign. Mr. Bryan is a vastly different man; political conditions are vastly different, and he has a united party behind him."

They Needed Other Things.

Delineator: Like most minister's families, they were not extensively blessed with this world's goods. She, however, was the youngest of ten children until her father explained to her of the baby sister who had come in the night.

"Well," she said, after due thought, "I pose it's all right, papa, but there's many a thing we needed worse."

The Wise Man.

Arne Garborg: The wise man says to the child, "You are a big boy!" And to his wife, "You are an angel!" And to his friend, "Do you need money?" And to the people, "Hurrah!" But if he needs to relieve his heart with a word of truth he shuts himself in and whispers with the hand upon his mouth, so that none may hear him. Only the one being he knows will understand.

The Glory of Work.

There the workman saw his labor taking form and bearing fruit,
Like a tree with splendid branches rising from a humble root.

Looking at the distant city, temples,
houses, domes and towers,
Felix cried in exultation: "All the mighty work is ours.

"Every mason in the quarry, every builder on the shore,
Every chopper in the palm-grove, every raftsman at the oar.

"Hewing wood and drawing water, splitting stones and cleaving sod,
All the busy ranks of labor, in the regiment of God.

"March together toward His triumph, do the task His hands prepare, Honest toil is holy service; faithful work is praise and prayer."

—HENRY VAN DYKE.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1888.

The city council last night devoted half an hour to a vigorous kick at the gas and water company. A resolution was introduced calling for new lamp posts on East Fourth street. President Kendall stated that he would vote against any extension of the city's consumption of gas and water until the charges for the future were known, as the present contract expires this fall. The expression of all the council was that the company was one of the greatest frauds on the face of the earth and its franchises could be revoked at any time by an effort. It was also thought that this revocation would be a good move. The council decided to order no more gas lamps at present.

The matter of bars forming in the St. Louis river as a result of sawdust dumped by the Cloquet mills, and the danger to navigation, both in the harbor and along the river, occupied the attention of the chamber of commerce this morning. Resolutions were passed demanding that the injurious practice be immediately abandoned and that the war department be asked to use its authority in the matter.

Rev. William Barker of Baltimore, who is well known in Duluth, is here visiting his brother, E. W. Barker.

George Weaver and family of St. Paul are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Dacey.

Health Officers Sherwin and Rossiter today ordered all public wells on Minnesota Point to be closed at once. The water from these wells has been pumped into carts and sold in all parts of the city where there is no connection with city water mains. Analysis has shown this well water to contain large amounts of filth. The water carts will now be obliged to get their bacteria from standpipes, which will be erected for them by the gas and water company.

Walter Marshall has just returned from the Vermilion country, where the Garden Lake Mining company, in which he is interested, has a diamond drill at work.

Miss Rainey's song recital last evening, at the residence of Mr. Rainey on East Third street, was enjoyed by a large number of Duluth people, who are enthusiastic in praise of Miss Rainey's voice. She was assisted by Mrs. Clague, accompanist; Miss Vinette Hages, pianist; F. E. Hoare, violinist, and M. M. Hoare, flutist.

The rage in Duluth for new secret society organizations is still rampant. A castle of the Knights of the Golden Eagle is now being formed. Supreme Chief Barnes of Philadelphia is in correspondence with Francis Long of Duluth on the subject. The order has 41,000 members, in twenty-three states, but there is at present no castle in Minnesota, so that Duluth will be No. 1.

Frank Davis of Minneapolis is talked of as a possible candidate for governor.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Luverne Herald: A suggestion from the opposition is generally regarded as insincere. Nevertheless, the Herald would like to suggest with all sincerity that the Democratic party of Minnesota, in its search for a candidate for governor, will find no one better qualified for the office than S. B. Nelson of Luverne. He is a man of high character and ability; few men in the state are better posted as to the state's resources or take keener interest in its affairs. He is a successful business man and an ardent, life-long Democrat, and his party would honor itself in placing him at the head of its ticket.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: A great number of bolting Republicans are scrambling to get back onto the band wagon, and Bob Dunn is amusing himself by rapping them over the knuckles. It is a great sport for Bob, but he should have a care that he does not carry his hilarity too far.

Long Prairie Argus: Both Democrats and Republicans announce that no contributions to campaign funds will be accepted from corporations. The investigations of the past four years have accomplished something in this line.

Little Falls Herald: Praise of Jacobson, if Jake is still where he used to be, and praise of Judge Mills at the same time, is inconsistent, to say the least, if not downright silly. Mills is a creature of the railroads, a statement made by scores of Republican papers and never denied. His nomination was of more importance to the corporations than the governorship. They've got their man and the Republicans did the job for them. The action can neither be excused nor defended.

Anoka Free Press: Heretofore it has been Johnson or Bryan; hereafter it will be Johnson and Bryan—Johnson for governor and Bryan for president.

St. Peter Herald: James Martin, with his unerring faculty of picking the loser, is to direct the Republican state campaign.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The weekly press of the state is still of the opinion that Mills was nominated by the railroads backed by the other special interests that were more than conspicuous in the convention.

Redwood Reveille: Paste this in your hat. The women of Minnesota will be allowed to vote on all questions inside of ten years.

Le Sueur Sentinel: Uncle Joe Cannon says he is tired and wants a rest. That is the first time for to, these many years that Uncle Joe and the public have been of the same mind.

Fairmont Sentinel: You can put it right down in black and white that the Democrats will nominate a man for governor for whom they will not offer apologies.

Verdict From Oyster Bay.

Brooklyn Eagle: By what the Constitution of the United States calls due process of law, an Indiana corporation was haled into court, found guilty and fined. By the same process, the judgment of the court was reversed upon appeal.

The effect of reversal has never been questioned. It nullifies all the proceedings of the trial court. It restores to the defendant the status he—or it—had at the beginning. It leaves still to be determined the question of guilt or innocence.

Now comes the president of the United States, in the Indiana corporation case, asserting his intention of doing everything in his power "to avert or to prevent such miscarriage of justice." Now comes the president of the United States rendering a verdict.

He says: "There is absolutely no question of the guilt of the defendants or of the exceptionally grave character of the offenses." Judgment upon the corporation comes from Oyster Bay, where no court is in session, where there is no process of law.

There is no known precedent for this. There is in the country no judge worthy of the place he has upon the bench who will not hold that proof of the guilt of the indicted corporation, having been stricken from the records, its innocence must be presumed.

This is its present standing. According to all the young of the land it is guiltless. According to all law, guiltless it will remain unless and until another verdict to the contrary shall be forthcoming. That and nothing less than that is the result of the reversal.

More than a sentence of guilt comes from Oyster Bay. A threat accompanies it. There will be another trial and the president will do everything in his power to bring about conviction. Due process will not satisfy him. Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he has grown so great?

Intimidation Again.

Springfield Republican (Ind.): An order for $100,000 worth of automobile gas engines has been received by a Western motor manufacturing company, subject to the condition that it may be canceled in case of Bryan's election. This has a familiar sound: it also rings viciously if listened to attentively. There is no occasion for business concerns to resort to these tactics, so generally employed in 1896 to elect one presidential ticket and defeat another. They would have the effect of suspending business activities throughout the greater part of the rest of the year, and would be so resented by all reasonable-minded people as to help rather than hurt the Bryan ticket. That prosperity association can do no better work than to suppress any such tendency as this among business houses. The logic of it is to destroy all effective political opposition and keep the party in power there forever. If there is anything more genuinely un-American than this practice, pray what is it?

Hard on Hobson.

New York Evening Post: The papers report a "newly discovered chestnut blight." Alas, poor Hobson!

LAUGHING LINES.

Baltimore American: "Did you refuse Miss Julia when she proposed to you this leap year?"

"Not in so many words. I told her to see mamma."

New Orleans World: Grimsey—What is the psychological moment?

Chollyset—It is when you get a tip on a dead sure thing and do not happen to have the money to back it up.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Going to have your vacation soon?"

"Not very. You see, the boss never lets me go until I'm too tired to enjoy it."

Nashville American: "He is truly a good man."

"Yes: there is just one thing that I can't forgive him for."

"What's that?"

"He can't forget it."

Philadelphia Press: "Some grocers," remarked the customer, "have an offhand way of weighing sugar, but I notice you're not one of them."

"Offhand way? How do you mean?"

"I noticed you kept your hand on the scales just now while you measured out five pounds for me."

Philadelphia Press: "So," jeered the friend as he watched the wreck before him, "you boasted nothing could happen to unseat you."

"Yes," faintly returned the fallen rider, floundering under the kicking steed, "this is, indeed, a horse on me."

Washington Star: "So there is a coolness between Count Fucash and his wife's relations?"

"Yes. They say his conduct was atrocious."

"Surely he didn't beat his wife!"

"No. But he beat his father-in-law out of several hundred thousand."

Political Change in the South.

Cincinnati Enquirer, (Dem.): From information gathered in a number of the cities and towns of the South Atlantic states it can be assumed as a certainty that the Republican vote in Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia will be increased to such an extent that at least one of the states named will be debatable. The news from Tennessee points conclusively to an increased Republican vote in that state.

Careful analysis of the cause of this increase plainly shows it is the result of two diametrically opposite sentiments.

The Democrats are losing by two currents of thought in the South, each current different in origin, but both running to the benefit of the Republican party.

One comes from admiration of President Roosevelt and thorough approval of his attitude toward corporations in general and railway corporations in particular.

The president, by his policies, his speeches and his messages, has attracted many former Democrats, won their confidence and broken down their dislike to Republicanism. The president is regarded by such persons as representing democracy in its incessant struggle against privilege and corporate wrong.

His mastery of his own party and his success in bringing it submissively to the fullest indorsement of his views seems to them a marvelous performance, and the Republican party in its new garb, with its revised creed and its profession of Roosevelt, seems to them an old friend rather than an implacable foe. The transformation attracts them. On the other hand, there are men who were Democrats who dislike the president's policies as cordially as do the leaders in Wall street, men who are bitterly opposed to such policies, be they labeled Republican or Democratic. These men can be found in the banking, financial and commercial centers, some of them in every city and town, large and small, in the South. They can be found in connection with the railway companies and with other forms of business, which have suffered from depression recently, and they attribute this suffering to the president's policies and to state legislation by Democratic legislatures in harmony with those policies.

Opposed by their party in control of the state, they turn to the Republican ticket, as they are assured by those who hold similar views in the great cities that after the 4th of March, 1909, the policies of President Roosevelt will no longer be the policies of the Republican party. There are men who would not support either Roosevelt or Bryan, regarding them as both opposed to what these men term "conservatism." They will vote for Taft, hoping he will reverse the policies of his predecessor.

Thus through the two opposites, admiration for and antagonism to the policies of President Roosevelt, the Democrats are losing votes throughout the South.

These losses are apparent. Their extent cannot be measured until the count of votes in November.

The Real Makers.

Philadelphia Gossip: "Mr. Bachrach, what make is your automobile?"

"It's a Berkman-Jandorf-Lichtenstein-Smith - Armquist - Berkenhead - Wittenmeyer-Brown-Sampson-Billhoover."

"See! That's one I never heard of before."

"Probably not. Those are the names of the different repair men who have worked on it since I got it."

FESTIVALS IN GERMANY

Where Peasants Play the Roles of Kings and Queens.

Natives Dressed in Gala Attire Peculiar to Communities.

Berlin, July 31.—Royalty in Europe is not confined to a few crowned heads. It is also to be seen in the humblest subjects. In the coarse clad, coarse fed, ignorant, downtrodden peasant there smolders a spark of the imperial fire, which at times bursts forth into flame. Yet these upheavals of his nature are not revolutionary. He does not then take up arms against the government. His insurrection is entirely peaceful. He simply dons a suit of fine clothes and struts about like some peacock just let out of a coop. And so throughout Europe there have been peasant festivals from time immemorial when for one day in the year the laborer believes himself a king.

An illustration of this regal side of the European peasant, and one that has recently become especially magnificent, is the Trachtenfest of the Plattdeutsch, or low Germans. Each year it is held at Schoessel, Prussia, and there the natives of the country round congregate as if it were the court of some potentate. They come dressed in the gala apparel which is peculiar to their own communities, and some of them are attired in even greater splendor than may be seen at the palaces of certain all-the-year monarchs. Nearly all of the costumes are family heirlooms, which have been handed down from parent to child, and for the reason that they are enriched each year by a little more velvet or gold lace, they represent the wealth of long generations. Some are worth more than the houses in which their owners live. Just as their hats and coats have descended from ancestral sources, so the songs and dances and all the other features of this pleasant pageant hail from times remote.

Like Medieval Times.

Schoessel is half way between Hamburg and Bremen, and the American traveler who lands at either port can thus pass from modern to medieval times by only an hour's railroad ride. Should he arrive early on the morning of the fete day he would first see the triumphal procession. At the sound of a trumpet these one-day "kings," with their "queens" and "princesses," parade the main street in a long procession, each community characterized by a different costume, and each believing that its own is the most beautiful. There is little attempt to adorn the "carriages of state," for their occupants feel that nothing else should detract from their own personal glory. They believe that their costumes are the chief attraction, and so it matters not that they are incumbered in farm wagons, used on other days for hay or cabbages, and touched up for the occasion with a little paint or some hoops of bunting. The dignity of the paraders, however, suffers not a little from the simplicity of their equipages, for, as the wagons have no springs, the "kings," "queens" and "princesses" frequently receive such jolts that they have to clutch one another to save themselves from falling.

Almost every wagon brings to view a different variety of dress. The women of Schoessel, for instance, are attired in great white aprons, the servile aspect of which contrasts rather ludicrously with their headdress of artificial flowers and fruits, built up in the shape of a tiara.

Girls Gaily Decked Out.

Around their waists are tied gorgeous ribbons of variegated colors. In another wagon girls from Vierland wear hats which look much like those their American sisters don when they are graduated at college. They are not quite so flat, however, as mortar boards, and are more nearly like inverted soup plates. Their outlandish appearance is still further increased by two huge bows which protrude on either side from their back hair, and which appear at a little distance like two fans of a windmill. In other wagons ride "maedchen" from Elsdorf and Seffingen, Leer, Gottrum and Apensee, and, most gorgeous of all, the Bueckerburger lasses. Some of the young women of Bueckerburg deck themselves out in dresses estimated to cost $250 apiece. So fantastic is the medley of colors to be seen in a single costume, so extravagant is the use of laces, braids, fluffs, fringes, flowers and jewels, that it looks more like the sacred robe of some Oriental priest than the bridal dress of a simple peasant girl, for it happens that a great many Plattdeutsche maidens postpone their weddings until just after the Trachtenfest, so that they may appear then in the costumes they are to be married in. Next year the dress will be worn by some other bride, and so on down the years.

A costume peculiarly grosteque is worn by the Stadthagen women, their headgear much resembling that worn by the "Great Tormentor" at the initiation of a certain American secret society. On their breasts they wear a shield the size of a saucer, and the edges of their aprons are elaborate with needlework, over which hundreds of hands have toiled. Yet not all of the paraders are gay. Some of the Schessel women wear the simple garb of communicants, with white yokes and white caps, and from Sitten comes a delegation which walks behind a wagon with heads bowed and in weeds of mourning.

Men Appear Very Plain.

In connection with the women the men appear extremely plain. Their ostentation is limited chiefly to buttons, with which some of them fairly cover themselves, and which vary in size from a pea to a butter dish. All the "kings" appear peculiarly stiff and awkward in their fine clothes, and even those who are wont to wear their costumes now and then on a Sunday, instead of stowing them away in the rest of the year, seem to feel uncomfortable restraint. The music heard when the procession has ended and the various couples are "treading the mazes of the dance" would make one think that these people are akin to the Scotch Highlanders. One dance is especially like the Highland fling; and, as a matter of fact, it is called the "Klapper Scottish." The celebration generally ends with tableaus showing the peasants in the dairy, the harvest field or among the bee hives.

Of recent years the Trachtenfest has grown in importance, drawing peasants to Schessel each year from a much greater area, and a far greater number of visitors also. The emperor, too, has taken special interest in the festival, and the empress offers each year a prize to the community which revives most faithfully the customs, songs and dances of its ancestors.

DANGER TO THE GAELIC LEAGUE

Cardinal Logue Denounces the Crusade Against the Priesthood.

Dublin, July 31.—Cardinal Logue visited Kilkenny last week and received the freedom of the city. In acknowledging an address of welcome from the corporation he alluded to a reference which it made to the Irish language movement, and said that he had given any little help that he could to the Gaelic league from the beginning of the movement up to the present. He thought, however, that it was but honest on his part to state that with regard to education generally—primary education—and with regard to the success of the Gaelic league, he saw breakers ahead.

He found that there was a spirit setting up among a small clique in Ireland which was hostile to the success of the schools and to the success of the Gaelic league. This small clique seemed to have been deeply touched with the mania that had nearly ruined education in France, and in consequence, like their Nonconformist friends in England, they wished to get the priests outside the schools, and were endeavoring to get up jealousy between the people and the priests.

He was satisfied that any defect in the primary education of the country was not due to the management of those who had control of the schools up to the present, and he believed that if the control were put into different hands, according to the views and desires of the small class on which he had referred, it would be a bad day for Ireland. Deeply as he was interested in the Gaelic league, he believed that the day when they succeeded in making it an instrument to turn any section of the people of Ireland against the priesthood of Ireland would see the end of the Gaelic league.

One of the special subjects for consideration at the Fourth All-Ireland Industrial Conference and Exhibition, to be held in Galway in September, is "the opening up of new markets for Irish goods outside of Ireland." Invitations were, therefore, issued to representatives of other countries to attend the conference, and acceptances have already been received from the United States, whence, among others coming, the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of New York are sending ten delegates; from France, Germany, Australia, Denmark, Mexico, Cuba and the Haytien republic. Port Pirrie has given $500 toward a special decoration order of Irish bronze, inlaid with St. Patrick's blue and gold, to be presented to all the foreign delegates, and possibly to the home delegates as well. Among others hoping to be present are the duke of Abecorn, the archbishop of Melbourne, Lord Castletown, Lord Pirrie, Dr. Douglas Hyde, Mr. T. W. Russell, M. P.; Sir Horace Plunkett, Sir Alexander Shaw, the mayor of Kilkenny; Capt. the Hon. Otway Cuffe, Mr. John Boland, M. P., and Mr. Gwynn, M. P. A Galway industrial exhibition will be held at the same time, so that all attending the conference may have the opportunity of seeing the best manufactures and industries of Ireland. Exhibitors reaching a certain standard of excellence will be awarded an Irish bronze medallion.

STORK VISITS LADY SUFFOLK.

Romance of American Girl Recalled in This Connection.

London, July 31.—The birth of a son to the earl and countess of Suffolk reminds a writer in the English press that Lady Suffolk is a Leiter, the youngest sister of the late Lady Curzon of Kedleston, to whom she bears a marked resemblance. Lord Suffolk met his future wife as extra A. D. C. to Lord Curzon when he was viceroy of India. The following anecdote was related at the time in the India press:

Lord Suffolk, when at government house, Calcutta, came into one of the offices, and not seeing Lord Curzon, who happened to be there, asked one of his colleagues if he knew where the imperial bounder—Lord Curzon's well-known soubriquet in Anglo-Indian circles—was. Lord Curzon, in a towering rage, told him that the imperial bounder was there and that he might take his passage by the next mail to Europe. Lord Suffolk took his dismissal with equanimity, and became within a very few months the brother-in-law of the viceroy.

GAMBLERS IN LONDON

They Try to Dodge New Law Against Street Betting.

Rivalry Between Trans-Atlantic Steamship Lines Becoming Acute.

London, July 31.—Soon after the street ilbetting act came into operation in England bookmakers began to use Continental offices for the receipt of deposits to cover betting transacations actually carried out in London. It seemed absurd to suppose that the law against ready money betting could be evaded by this device. A test case was brought at the Central criminal court last week when a bookmaker who had resorted to this practice was convicted of keeping a betting house and fined $500, the recorder at the same time intimating that in any future case he would impose a sentence of imprisonment. The defendant's customers forwarded money in advance to Flushing for bets executed in London. No doubt the judgment of a higher court will be taken on the legal points involved, but in view of the decisions given some years ago in analogous cases, it is improbable that theer will be any reversal of the result of the trial. If, however, this evasion of the law were after all, held to be permissable, it is practically certain that parliament would pass an amending act which, besides effectively suppressing this practice, would very likely deal in a drastic manner with betting businesses on the credit system.

In another case last week Mr. Mead, the Marborough street magistrate, sentenced a bookmaker to two months' imprisonment for a contravention of the betting act. His business was done on the credit system, which is not in itself illegal. It was shown, however, that large numbers of persons went to the defendant's office and put slips relating to their bets in his letter box, and on this evidence he was convicted of keeping premises to which persons resorted for the purpose of betting. This case is an illustration of the ridiculous state of the law in reference to betting, for if, instead of delivering their "slips" by hand, the backers had employed a government department to transmit their commissions to the defendant by post or telegraph, no offense would have been committed. While the law comes down on these two bookmakers for offenses of a more or less technical character, it takes no cognizance of downright swindling in connection with betting businesses. There are quite a number of selfstyled turf accountants here who are habitual "welshers," pocketing all the money their dupes lose to them, but never settling winning accounts.

The rivalry between the trans-Atlantic steamship lines is becoming more acute every day. In the absence of official figures it would be unwise to be definite but after examining the passenger lists of several liners it is quite clear that tthe bulk of the saloon passengers on the better class German liners are from and to Northern European ports. In a recent instance a German vessel which left New York a day later than the Lusitania carried more first class and second class passengers. What proportion of the German's passengers were for Cherbourg is not easy to say, but it is almost bound to have been inconsiderable in view of the decision of the German companies to discard all purely channel ports of call in favor of Zeebrugge. If the traffic which passes through Paris can be diverted to Bruges, the Cunarders will be just as well off at Liverpool as at Southampton. The White Star people must of necessity be hardest hit by this German movement, and Bruce Ismay and his friends do not usually take adversity lying down.

Both British concerns must tap the continent further north if they are to continue to own big boats; but in the absence of a convenient British base this will be extremely difficult. London has a chance in this respect that less notable places would have seized long ago. It would not cost a great deal to make Tilbury dock entrance wide enough for the very largest craft.

Slowly, but steadily, the adornment and the beautifying of London is proceeding. The feeling that beauty and harmony in the construction of buildings is a necessary element of civilization has at last found a place in the minds not only of individuals, but of public and private authorities and even of boards of directors. For fifty years Victoria station has been a scandal and an eyesore, but at last it has been reconstructed and modernized. During all that time two of the best known of the British railway companies had been content to deposit their passengers at a London terminus scarcely worthy to serve as a temporary station for an agricultural show. What made matters worse was that those stations have been one of the chief points of arrival for foreign visitors. At last the worst evils have been removed, and the Brighton line has a spacious and fairly convenient London station, with a seemly front, and the Southeastern & Chatham line is following its example.

But here, as elsewhere, London is still far behind her Continental neighbors, who, sometimes aided and controlled by their governments, have made it a point of honor that their chief stations shall be buildings as fine and ample as it is possible to make them. Above all, the authorities of France and Germany insist that there shall be a good approach. Let anyone compare the approach to Victoria station with those to the Nord and Est stations in Paris, or with those to the stations at Frankfurt and Cologne, and he will see that London is still badly beaten in the competition. Victoria will never be what it should be, considering the enormous traffic which centers there at certain hours of the day, until the houses that block the approach are removed.

The boom in meat in England is likely to be of short duration. A great slump in prices all round is recorded in connection with the opening of the season for home-grazed cattle in the great feeding district of the Midlands. At Leicester, which is one of the chief grazing centers in England, there were exceptionally large supplies of bullocks in grand condition, but the trade was most disappointing, and the prices of prime cattle went down from $7.50 to $10 per head on last week's prices. Even at this heavy reduction large numbers of splendid bullocks were left unsold. The demand that British markest shall be opened to importations of Canadian store cattle is daily growing in strength. The meeting at the Memorial hall on Thursday last was the starting point of what promises to be a vigorous agitation. Members of parliament of all schools are uniting on the matter. The conviction has come to them that there is real danger in the fact that about a dozen American and Argentine wholesale firms control the greater part of the meat sold in this country.

IN ARMS AGAINST REMOVAL OF GODDESS OF PLENTY.

City of Mexico, July 31.—The devout worshipers of the little parish church of Tlalnepantla are up in arms over the attempt on the part of the federal government to remove the Toltec goddess of plenty, which has quietly reposed in the ancient church for more than three centuries. The government issued an order for the removal of this idol to the National museum in this city. When the men who were sent to the town to take the idol out of the church made known to the parishioners the object of their visit, the populace made violent protest. The order has not yet been obeyed, and it is considered probable that the idol will be permitted to remain where it is.

SOLUTION OF A DELICATE POINT

Woman Loses Appointment as a City Mail Carrier.

Washington, July 31.—Dr. Charles P. Grandfield, with the courage and chivalry of the true Missourian that he is, has met a most delicate problem, involving the fair sex, and solved it—at least to his own satisfaction and peace of conscience. Dr. Grandfield is acting postmaster general, and the decision that he was forced to make was that a woman could not be a mail carrier without the possible loss of her womanly modesty and incidentally her skirts. The way he relieved both the situation and himself, as well as the woman, reflects credit on his training at Troy and Carrollton, where his youth and early manhood were spent.

Several weeks ago an order was issued establishing free city delivery in the flourishing town of Idaho Falls, Idaho, and an examination was accordingly held to obtain the lone carrier to place the service in operation. The examination was held, and it developed that there was but one applicant, a young woman, whose name the department delicately withholds.

The civil service commission certified her name to the department and the question arose as to whether a woman was eligible for appointment. Investigation showed that while no woman had ever been appointed a city carrier, there did not appear to be any legal reason why they should not, and the young woman in question was on the point of receiving the appointment when it was discovered that there was a law in existence requiring the postmaster general to designate the character of the uniform to be worn by carriers, and describing it generally.

In large, bold type it stated that carriers were to wear pants, the description of which were fixed in detail by a former postmaster general following the enactment of the law. When this discovery was made it was decided to ask the civil service commission to hold another examination, Dr. Grandfield's native modesty compelling him to abstain from asking the young lady who was eligible whether, if appointed, she would comply with the law and regulations regarding dress.

ROCKEFELLER'S NEW HOME.

One Thousand Men at Work on Oil King's Tarrytown Estate.

New York, July 31.—John D. Rockefeller's new home, near North Tarrytown, is practically finished. It stands on the summit of Kykuit Hill, on the site of the old Manor house, which he was burned out of in 1903. Preparations were being made at the new summer home yesterday for the reception of Mr. Rockefeller on Monday. Three or four van loads of furniture were brought in and their installation was supervised by John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The house is a large three-storied building, of brick and stone, with a slate roof of the colonial style of architecture. Only a portion of the interior work has been completed, however, while as for the grounds, there is enough work laid out and still undone to occupy a large force of workmen for several years to come. Mr. Rockefeller is planning an elaborate miniature waterfall, cascades and pools facing the entrance to his place, which are now no more than started.

Mr. Rockefeller now has nearly 1,000 men working for him. About half of these are in his direct employ, looking after the estate, and the other half are engaged by the contractors who have the building operations in cherge.

BIG FLIES BRING DISEASE.

Man and Beasts Die Following Invasion by Great Swarms.

Lisbon, July 31.—The advent of great swarms of large black venomous flies, of a species quite unknown and believed to have come from Africa, has been followed by disastrous results at Barcelona and other districts near Lisbon. Large numbers of cattle and sheep bitten by the flies have died, and at Barcelona, twenty farm laborers who partook of the flesh of the sheep which died in this way immediately showed symptoms of malignant poisoning. Two of the laborers died shortly afterwards, and five others are in a dying condition.

BIG DEAL IN LEAD AND ZINC MINES IS PROPOSED.

Joplin, Mo., July 31.—Parties interested in the proposed deals say that the biggest consolidation of zinc and lead mines made in years in this district is to be perfected soon, when a number of the big producers will be acquired by the American Quebec Mining & Quarrying company of Boston, Mass. This company, which is one of the largest producers of various metals in the United States, has made application for enlistment on the local stock exchange, and a representative of the company, who was in the city recently, is to return in a few days with prominent members of the firm. Deals contemplated include some of the richest mines in the district, and despite the present low figures of zinc it is understood that operations will be conducted extensively. It is argued by members of the firm who already have made an inspection of this district that more scientific methods can be employed here, and zinc industry can be conducted on a much larger scale, thus reducing eventually the cost of operation.

SOX TAKE A WILD GAME

Fargo Battery Work is Poor and Home Team Wins Again.

Thorsen is Hit Hard and is Wild, But Gets a Victory.

The Fargo Browns dropped to their proper level yesterday, took the safety valves off their think-tanks, heaved and booted the ball around in approved tail-end style and the Sox took the third straight game of the series by a score of 11 to 7.

The game may not have been good baseball, but it was interesting enough. Comedy and tragedy were worked into a strange mixture with legitimate baseball and the crowd was sent in quick succession from hilarious laughter over the antics of the confused tail-enders to applause for some particularly good play and back again to the comedy. The battery work of the Fargo team was fierce. Cody Clark was as wild as a Rocky Mountain goat and had to be derricked after the fourth. Young Meehan, who was sent in behind the bat to start the game, was as nervous as the house cat on a hot stove, and he too was scratched. Waldorf, who succeeded Clark, showed how not to be a pitcher by mixing poor pitching, dumb play and errors and the Sox had no trouble gathering enough runs to win early during his session in the box. Lynch wasn't much better behind the bat than Meehan for a time, but he settled later in the game. On the whole, the Fargo team had a troublous time in supplying the firing line.

Our old schoolmate and pal of the corner lots, Dick Thorsen, was Dave Williams' helmsman and he steered a zig-zag course. Under ordinary circumstances, he would probably have been roundly trounced, Fargo's wild and woozy work in the field lightened his task and he got away with a victory. The men behind him were all to the Worcester. But one boot was recorded and that was doubtful. Monroe let Siner's single to left field get away for an extra sack in the seventh inning and only in that one instance did they fall down on Richard.

Clark got away badly in the first inning, when he passed Wescott, after Koepping had fanned. Wescott stole second and Whitmore in left field dropped Monroe's easy fly. A passed ball scored Wescott.

Fargo had one brief glance at the victory. Thorsen struck the rapids in the third inning and had trouble keeping to the middle of the channel. After two had gone down, he walked Thompson and hit Al Williams. Siner cracked one into right field, scoring both men, and Siner scored on Brookins' poke in the same spot, which only went for a single.

The Sox started the clean-up in the next wierd inning. Wescott walked and stole second. Monroe walked. Wescott started to steal third and Meehan's throw went out into left field, Wescott scoring. Ness singled and O'Brien did the same, Monroe scoring. Another came in the next inning on Hopkins' single, Thorsen's scarifice and another heave out into left field, this time by Lynch.

After that Clark was scratched and Waldorf took up the burden, with poor success. In the fifth, Monroe singled and went to second when Burke threw the ball away in returning it to the pitcher, Ness sacrificed him along. O'Brien hit for two sacks and Dave Williams and Pratt both singled, scoring three runs. Four errors, a base on balls and a single were responsible for the other four runs in the next inning.

The Fargoites started a little something in the sixth and seventh. Brookins walked in the sixth and Godfrey dropped one out of the lot, chasing Brookins in ahead of him. In the seventh, Thompson and Al. Williams singled, moving along on a wild pitch. Siner hit into left field, scoring both runners, and Monroe let the ball get away for an extra base. There was nothing more doing in that or the two succeeding innings, and Thorsen was safe.

ANGELS WIN LONG GAME

Brandon Evens Up in Ninth and Wins in Seventeenth.

Herr Refuses to Play Second Game and It is Forfeited.

Brandon, Man., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Brandon and Winnipeg played a remarkable game yesterday, Brandon evening things up in the ninth by scoring two runs and winning in the seventeenth inning by a score of 4 to 3. Two games were scheduled, but Manager Herr refused to play the second and it was declared forfeited to Brandon by a score of 9 to 0.

The long game was full of fine baseball. Smith retired in the second inning and Dahlgren went in, he and Glencke having a fine battle for the remainder of the game. Both were hit hard and often, but tightened up with men on bases, Brandon having nineteen left on the sacks and Winnipeg twelve.

There were sensational plays innumerable. The Angels didn't make an error in the whole long battle and several times, where hard chances missed would have meant a Winnipeg victory, they pulled themselves out of the hole. The Maroons did their share to add spectacular features. Sensenback's unassisted double play in the sixteenth being especially thrilling.

Winnipeg took the lead in the fourth inning by scoring three runs and Brandon couldn't even up until the ninth, when two runs were scored by good hitting. With one out in the seventeenth, the winning run was sent across the plate.

FAVORITES ARE BEATEN

Detroit, July 31.—More sensational racing marked the fourth day of the Grand Circuit harness meeting and the average time for fourteen heats—2:07, has seldom been equalled. The 2:04 pace turned out to be the biggest surprise of the year, Baron Grattan winning it in four heats. Blacklock was a hot favorite in the big field of eight, but was unsteady at first and refused to try later on. Citation raced in front in the first heat, clear to the stretch, where John A. challenged and beat her handily. Baron Grattan came strong at the end but broke.

Next time the old Canadian champion, Gallagher, set the pace and held on to the end, with enough left to beat Baron Grattan half a length. Gallagher led into the stretch in the third mile, but he could not stall off Baron Grattan that one coming with a great burst of speed and winnig by a neck. The fourth was a repetition, Baron Grattan agal nbeating Gallagher in the last twenty yards and winning first money.

The 2:11 trotting stake proved a hard fought race and lasted until dusk. Amy Brooks was sick and could not start. Parvorium was a big favorite, May Earl, which had made 2:05 in a trial at Lexington. However, May Earl was unsteady and had no speed, never being a contender. Nahma took the lead in the three-quarters in the first heat and won handily. Genteel H. moving up fast at the end. Octoo Bu Octoo raced out in front in the second heat and stayed there, outlasting Carlokin. Octoo again showed the way in the third heat, but broke in the stretch and Dewitt won by a neck from Locust Jack in a fine drive. Dewitt led all the way in the fourth heat and beat Genteel H. a head in the final drive. The others outtrotted Dewitt in the fifth heat, Carlokin winning by inches from Genteel H. This gave Dewitt first money and Driver Andrews was fined $250 for not trying in the first two heats.

In the 2:12 pace Fred D. won two heats comfortably and then was beaten by Leone.

Fifteen are members of the cavalry and twelve of the infantry. Sergeant Kunz' nearest rival for the high score was Sergeant W. C. Cox of the Twenty-seventh infantry, with 767.

NAMES BEGIN WITH O.

Michigan Man and Wife Have Six Alliterative Twins.

Holland, Mich., July 31.—Holland has at least one family which does not believe in race suicide. The Dutch are noted for large families, but in this instance a Frenchman by the name of Frank Ressegue claims the distinction. Mr. and Mrs. Ressegue have been the parents of a dozen children, ten of whom are living, among them being three sets of twins.

A unique coincidence in the case of the twins is that all their given names begin with the letter "O," being Otis, Otto, Oliver, Olive, Orin and Orlin. Mr. Ressegue is a laboring man and came here with his family about two years ago.

HUGGED AND KISSED

Almost to Death by Crazed Heavy-Weight Laundress.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 31.—Kissed and hugged almost to death was the harrowing experience of Mrs. Clarence Stanley, a wealthy young woman of 1147 North Meridian street, when Lillian Low, her colored laundress, weighing about 200 pounds, suddenly became insane.

With a whoop of joy she made straight for Mrs. Stanley. Grabbing her she proceeded to hug and kiss her in spite of her frantic efforts to get away. She was fairly crushing her employer to death when help arrived and tore her away.

The police were summoned, but Lillian became rational before they arrived. She was "fired," however, and a short time after she returned to her home hurryup calls were sent to the police from that neighborhood. Lillian was on another rampage and she had to be locked up.

It is said that her mind turned on the question of religion. She will be examined as to her sanity.

S.S.S. A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, which is carried through the circulation to all portions of the system. Every muscle, nerve, bone and joint absorbs the acrid, pain-producing poison, causing aches, inflammation, stiffness and other well known symptoms of the disease. Permanent relief from the pains and discomfort of Rheumatism cannot be expected from the use of liniments, plasters, and other external treatment which does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Such measures give temporary relief, but in order to cure Rheumatism the uric acid and inflammatory poison must be expelled from the blood. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism because it is a perfect blood purifier. It goes down into the circulation, neutralizes the uric acid and drives it from the blood. S. S. S. expels the irritating, inflammatory matter which is causing the pain, swelling and other discomfort, enriches the weak, sour blood, and permanently cures Rheumatism. In all forms of Rheumatism S. S. S. will be found a safe, vegetable remedy, possessing the properties needed to cure, and at the same time a medicine that builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effects. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

WOULD MOVE TENDERLOIN

Park Pointers Petition Council to Clear St. Croix Avenue.

Menace to Students and Others Using Lake Avenue.

The Park Pointers do not want their wives and children to be forced to use a thoroughfare within one block of the red light district whenever it becomes necessary for them to come up town. As a result, they want St. Croix avenue cleaned up and the tenderloin moved to some more remote section of the city. This subject was the chief topic of discussion at the meeting of the Park Point Civic club last evening, and a resolution was adopted, to be submitted to the city council, asking that immediate steps be taken to effect such a removal.

The resolution, as introduced by Rev. A. H. Wurtele, reads as follows:

"It is the unanimous opinion of the members of the Park Point Civic club that in order to protect the women and innocent children and the general morals of the people who reside on Park Point and are compelled to use Lake avenue daily, that immediate steps should be taken to remove the red light district on St. Croix avenue from the neighborhood of one of the main thoroughfares of Duluth. It is felt that the so-called red light district is too near the central business section of the city, and is so situated as to be a direct menace to the boys and girls attending the Duluth high school and the Webster grade school."

The chief difficulty which it is foreseen is the finding of a place to put the red light district. No other section of the city is anxious to have it located in its midst, and there would be a warm fight against it wherever it might be decided to put it.

Its removal is more directly a matter of police than of council supervision, as there is no official recognition of the existence of the district. Proprietors of houses on St. Croix avenue are arrested and fined regularly every month, and are prevented from locating outside the limits of the district prescribed by the police, but there is no other official recognition of its existence.

Besides discussing the tenderloin question, the club agreed to again petition the city council for a fire hall to lodge the fire car, for two firemen and for a fire alarm system.

A motion was adopted requesting the Interstate Traction company to run a trailer on its regular rush hours.

FAKE SLEUTH

Victimizes Indiana Tobacco Dealer to Extent of $10.

Rose Hill, Ind., July 31.—A well-dressed stranger entered the general store of Henry Kramer and, representing himself to be a revenue officer, inspected the stock of tobacco and cigars, and especially the empty boxes. He found several stamps on empty cigar boxes that had not been canceled to his taste, and at once informed Kramer that he would have to take him into custody. Kramer begged manfully, and told the man that he had not intentionally violated the law. After a long parley the stranger agreed that if Kramer would give him $10 he would suppress all the evidence. Kramer quickly handed over the $10 and the stranger departed. Not until the man was well out of reach did Kramer realize that he had been victimized.

SHERMAN WILL BE NOTIFIED AUG. 18.

Utica, N. Y., July 31.—Representative James S. Sherman has received word from Senator J. C. Burrows, chairman of the committee to notify him of his nomination by the Republican party for vice president, that it was agreeable to the committee to come to Utica, Aug. 18, the date suggested by Mr. Sherman. Senator Burrows will make the address on the part of the committee and Mr. Sherman will respond, formally accepting the nomination. The committee will be entertained by the city and Mayor Wheeler is making plans for a big demonstration.

GERONIMO USES LARIAT.

Old Warrior Aids in Branding of Steers by Apaches.

Lawton, Okla., July 31.—Although old Geronimo is fast failing in years, caused by the awful hardships he experienced during the days that he held the West and Southwest in terror prior to 1886, he can still lariat a steer with great accuracy. He is now busily engaged, with many of the Apache bucks, roping the young calves of the Apache cattle, and assisted in the branding of several thousand yearlings. This work is being done while the Apache Indians are making their annual round-up of cattle on the range of the Fort Sill military reservation. All cattle are being collected at the Rock Island tanks, near Elgin, where the calves will be branded.

A complete invoice of everything belonging to the Indians is to be made. It is estimated that the Apache herd of cattle contains 10,000 head, probably the largest single herd in Oklahoma. One of the interesting things in connection with the herd is the fact that there are very few dry cows. This year there was the largest "crop of calves" ever raised on the reservation.

According to the usual custom of handling the Apache cattle, the cows are numbered, and in branding all the calves are branded with the same number as their mother. The heifer calves are retained—no cows being sold until too old for active life on the range, and the greater number of steers are shipped and sold.

Each Indian owns cows bearing his numbers, and the young cows bearing the same number become his property. It is estimated that there are approximately 500 steer calves this year, which will bring the tribe about $25,000.

AN ITALIAN LOVE TALE

A Romance of Sunny Italy is Enacted in Duluth.

The Hero Has Not Triumphed as Yet, However.

To escape becoming the wife of a suitor whom her parents had picked out as a fit mate for her, Mary Breole, 14 years old of 1118 West Michigan street, eloped with the man who had won her heart, Fernando Cassimiro of Coleraine, 22 years of age, Wednesday night.

Their dream of happiness was shattered in Superior, however, the cold, unrelenting hand of the law intervening between them and a life of wedded bliss, and the young people were arrested and brought back to Duluth a few hours after their marriage, before they had a chance to board a train that would take them to the little nest Fernando had prepared for his bride on the range. The man is now in the city jail, and probably will have to answer to a charge of abduction.

The romance smacks strongly of the old Italian love tales. Joseph Breole, an honest laboring man, appears in the role of the stern and unrelenting parent. Mary, pretty and sentimental, looking four or five years older than she really is, is cast as the heroine, and Fernando Cassimiro, with dark skin, flashing eyes and the passion of sunny Italy throbbing in his manly breast, makes an admirable hero. Francisco Trinesco is the villain, but it must be confessed he doesn't look the part. Despite his Italian cast of countenance, it would be too hard to imagine a more inoffensive appearing man.

"Do you think it right to marry the girl against her wishes?" a Herald reporter asked him yesterday.

"You're dammarights," he responded, in a fierce manner which belied his looks, and led one to believe that he might be able to fill the part of the villan to the satisfaction of the galleries.

While the dark-skinned son of Italy, whose passionate adoration led him to flee with the object of his affections is in jail, his bride of a day is crying her eyes out at home, and threatening dire vengeance on any one who shall do her husband harm. She cannot become reconciled to the fact of his being behind stone walls, and bars of iron and steel, but says she will stick to him through thick and thin, and that whatever happens, she will never, never marry another man.

The Breole home is the last place in the world a person would look for romance. The house is a dilapidated, unpainted, most unattractive looking affair, standing on the very edge of the Northern Pacific railroad yards, back of the old street car barn. A picket fence with most of the pickets broken, surrounds it. Chickens run about at will in a yard which looks as if it were suffering from a bad case of indigestion, and when they get tired of the yard they run up a long flight of rickety steps leading from the ground to the kitchen door of the dwelling.

The interior of the home is comfortable enough, and clean enough, however, although to an outsider the quarters might seem somewhat crowded, and the furnishings rather poor. Evidently the Breoles are religious, for colored religious pictures adorn the walls and a sort of a rude altar is arranged in one end of the main living room. Mary has two sisters and two brothers, all younger than herself. Her mother is a typical Italian woman, wearing large earrings. Her father is a small man, with a wrinkled face.

Mary was born in the United States, but both her lovers first saw the light of day in sunny Italy. Francisco is a common laborer in Duluth, while Fernando, the successful suitor, is a foreman in the mines at Coleraine. Mary has attended school in Duluth, and is a graduate of the eighth grade. Her teachers believe her to be thoroughly Americanized. This belief seems to have been sustained by circumstances, for when, several weeks ago, her parents told her she would have to marry Francisco, she rebelled. She soon saw, however, that resisting her parents was useless, and so appeared to accede to their wishes. Last summer she met Fernando; and since then has kept up a correspondence with him. It was a case of love from the start, and when the man learned of the situation in Duluth, the elopement was planned. He appeared in Duluth Monday, and Wednesday night the two crossed the bay to Superior. The girl's absence was not noted until yesterday morning. Then the police were notified, and told to be on the lookout for Fernando. The parents well knew who it was induced Mary to leave home.

The Wisconsin law which requires five days' notice before marriage licenses can be issued was evaded by a special dispensation granted on the ground that the youn gpeople were from Coleraine, and that urgent business required the man's return.

WEST ENDER IS "STUNG."

Woman Pays a Big Price to Peddler for Linen.

West end housewives have been listening to the glib arguments of peddlers and have discovered that they have been paying $6 for linen they could have secured at any Superior street dry goods store for $2.50.

Mrs. Emma Carlson, a resident of the West end, complained to the police yesterday afternoon that she had been "stung" by a peddler, but Chief Troyer told her that the only thing that could be done to the peddler was to arrest him for peddling without a license.

Mrs. Carlson seemed to think that a prison sentence was not being too hard on him. The chief said the best way for the women of the city to do to avoid being cheated by peddlers was to patronize their local stores.

After Mrs. Carlson had paid $6 for her linen, another peddler appeared and offered her apparently the same goods for $4. She investigated farther and discovered the stores were selling it for $2.50.

FAREWELL IS SAID.

Norwegian-Danish Methodists Leave Their Old Church.

Many who were members of the church when the old church was dedicated were present and took part in the exercises. P. G. Hanson, who was organist of the church twenty-five years ago, played, and Mrs. Hanson gave a history of the Ladies' Aid society. J. J. Moe spoke on the Sunday schools, and Nels Berg on the Epworth league. Rev. P. Jenson, presiding elder of the this district twenty-five years ago, also spoke. Mrs. Tallakson gave her impressions of the old church.

BIG STORY OF BIG SNAKE.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 31.—A giant snake, said to measure at least 25 feet in length, 8 inches in diameter and 24 inches in circumference, is terrorizing the people of Loudon and that section, and a reward of $100 has been offered for its capture, dead or alive.

Several posses of young Loudon braves have been formed for the purpose of capturing the reptile, but as yet without result. It has been seen off and on for the past twenty-eight years, but not until this year has it caused any serious alarm. Recently it left its track in the field of W. E. Huff, resembling in size that made by a log dragged by lumber wheels. A woman saw the snake, which actually ran over a fence, tearing it down, being unable to get through the cracks. She thought it was the devil, but for the fact that it ran from her instead of toward her. A few days later a lamb belonging to Ed Huff was caught and killed by the reptile.

Ed McQueen, a prominent farmer, has stopped his children from going after the cows in this section where the snake is said to reside. John McDonnell, a farmer, is the only man who has got a shot at the snake. He saw it going toward the river and then drinking at the edge of the water, and from his boat he fired a charge of small shot into the snake from his Winchester.

The reptile, in a frenzy from the pain, tore up saplings in getting away. No one will now make the trip to Loudon, over the road leading to Pond Creek, Sweetwater and Kingston.

Men from Loudon on horseback and with their guns are doing picket duty. Arthur Rodgers and Ned Cassady are armed with guns which shoot steel bullets. Women and children have barricaded themselves in their houses and the least noise causes them fear and they cry, "The snake!"

Dick Ferguson is now organizing a posse to go after the monster, which is believed to reside in a cave on the bluff overlooking the river on the McQueen farm. There is no known specie of snake growing to such a size in this section.

JUSTICE TO AN INDIAN

Adopted Member of the Comanche Tribe Selects Allotment.

His Life Like Chapter of One of Cooper's Novels.

Lawton, Okla., July 31.—Herman Lehman, adopted member of the Comanche tribe of Indians, has selected his allotment, as provided in the act of May 30, this year, introduced by Senator T. P. Gore of this city, awarding Lehman an allotment by special act. He selected as his claim a quarter section several miles east of Davidson, and one of the best pieces of farming land in the big pasture.

With the selection of allotment by Lehman comes the announcement that all members of the Comanche tribe born after the last allotment shortly prior to the sale of pasture lands, will shortly receive allotments, and when this is done the remainder of the lands remaining unsold will be opened to white settlement and sold to the highest bidder. Indian Agent Lieut. Earnest Steckner was notified of the selection made by Lehman, and it is understood that immediate steps will be taken for the allotment of the latest born Comanches.

Attempt was made by Chief Quanah Parker during his recent visit to induce the government to retain all unsold lands of the Comanches to be allotted to unborn members of the tribe as their numbers increase, but it was thought best by the department to place the lands on sale, open them for white settlement, and hold the money for the tribesmen.

The special act of congress granting to Herman Lehman an allotment was passed upon urgent request from the Indians, in view of the fact that he is an adopted member of the tribe. His farm was turned over to him in fee simple.

Like a story of fiction is that told by Herman Lehman, who for eight years in his youth, was held captive by the Indians of the Southwest. Of his capture and some incidents of his captivity and restoration, he tells:

Story of His Capture.

"It was on the 16th of May, 1870," he says, "that while playing in the field near the house, with my little brother Willie, 8 years of age, my sister Caroline, still younger, and my baby sister, that we found ourselves surrounded by hideously painted savages, Apache Indians, led by the noted warrior, Chiwa-ta-te-toe. They captured Willie, fired several shots at close range at Caroline as she ran toward the house, and chased me some distance before capturing me. I fought desperately, but was soon tied tight and fast on a vicious pony, while Willie was put on another pony in front of a big Indian, and we were off in an instant, for by this time the men at the house were ready to open fire on the Indians. Several times my pony left the others, but as my hands and feet were tied, I could not guide him, and each time he circled and caught up with the crowd. But on we went for six days and nights, almost entirely without food or water, and most of the time in a sweeping gallop.

"I was securely tied with my face down, each hand and each foot being tied to separate stakes, while one end of a rope was placed around my neck and the other end fastened to a stake or bush. If I groaned or complained, an Indian would beat me and pull my hair. I was so bruised by the old piece of a saddle on which I was forced to ride, and so torn by mesquite, chaparal and cactus thorns, that I was almost a running sore. As my clothing had been torn off when I was captured, I was sunburned into a blister nearly all over. In the running fight Willie was forcibly thrown from his horse by an Indian who jumped up behind him. He hid in the tall grass among some rocks till all was quiet. Already about half starved and famished, he wandered about for three days and nights, often in great danger of wild beasts. Finally, while lying prostrated from exhaustion, he was picked up near Kickapoo Springs by an old freighter, and in about two weeks returned to his home."

His Remembrance of His Father.

Lehman's mother sought out Gen. McKinzie and found that her son was among the captured. The boy, after considerable correspondence, was returned to his parents under military escort of three soldiers.

"This was in 1875, when I was 19 years of age," he said. "At this time I could only speak the Apache and Comanche languages; didn't know my own name or the name of my parents. I knew my father was dead, for I remembered seeing him buried. I could remember the form and features of my mother and some of my brothers and sisters, but did not know the name of either.

"Besides being greatly injured physically by exposures, tortures and wounds while with the Indians, I realized more fully every day that my chances for making a living were greatly impaired by my long association with the Indians. I realized, as few others do, the habits and inclinations formed in youth by such long association are very difficult to get rid of. I realize more and more as I grow older that I am tied and fettered and in many ways rendered helpless by these unfortunate associations."

OLD SPANISH COIN

In Indiana May Have Been Lost by Ponce de Leon.

Princeton, Ind., July 31.—While visiting on the farm of a relative near Creal Springs, Ill., last week, Thomas J. Cooper of this city witnessed the finding of an aged coin, which is believed to have been lost by Ponce de Leon in his search for the "fountain of youth."

The coin is of silver, seemingly, and is somewhat larger than a United States silver dollar. It is believed to be an old Spanish coin, and the theory is advanced that it was lost by Ponce de Leon, who, it is thought, believed that Creal Springs was the perpetual youth fountain.

MUSIC INSPIRES SANITY.

Remarkable Cures Reported From English Insane Asylum.

London, July 31.—An illustration of the efficacy of music in the treatment of the feeble-minded has occurred at the home for feeble-minded youths belonging to the Metropolitan asylums board, at Witham, Essex, where a great change has been effected since the introduction of a brass band. The master of the home, C. Gibbs, states that ever since the interest of the boys has been aroused in the instruments they were given to play they have advanced by leaps and bounds toward complete sanity, some of the most obstinate cases having recovered. It has become recognized in the institution that the band boys are distinctly superior to the older patients.

CASE IS UNIQUE.

Barber Charged With Having Scared Fellow Worker to Death.

New York, July 30.—Charged with homicide in having frightened a man to death by pointing a gun at him, Gurgos Marsho, 29 years old, a barber, is locked up at police headquarters.

The address given by Marsho is a barber shop. The police allege that Marsho went to the barber shop on May 14 last to collect a bill from Impade Nazarian, another barber employed there. Nazarian appeared to be reluctant about paying the money, and the two men exchanged words. In the heat of the argument, it is said that Marsho drew a revolver and pointed it at Nazarian. At sight of the revolver Nazarian dropped to the floor in a fainting fright, and Marsho, who was also badly frightened, took to his heels, although he did not discharge the weapon. Nazarian was taken to Bellevue hospital. After he had been there a few hours internal hemorrhages set in and he died a few days later.

The doctors said that fright was responsible for his death. The police have been searching for Marsho for two months.

IS SUMMER TRYING UPON YOUR HEALTH?

You Need a Tonic to Keep Up Your Strength, Not a Laxative to Further Weaken the Body.

Not all tonics are suitable for use during the hot months. Many tonic preparations are also purgatives and tend to aggravate a condition prevalent in summer.

If you are weak and run down, pale and without energy and ambition, take a suggestion from the hot countries of South and Central America, where the tonic remedy almost exclusively used is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The reason for the popularity of these pills in regions where it is always summer is that they have no laxative action, they build up the blood without purging and weakening. They give strength and do not take it away. An excellent example of the tonic action of this remedy is the case of Mrs. Gilbert R. Searles of Hanover street, Marshall, Mich.

"I was taken sick a few years ago," she says, "my whole system being run down and debilitated. I had no strength nor ambition, lost fearfully in flesh and my complexion was sallow and lips pale. My stomach was weak and digestion poor. I had a constant craving for food, although my stomach pained me all of the time. There was also a great deal of pain in my back, loins and sides and I had hard headaches. My blood was thin and impoverished and I was rapidly going into a decline. I could not work and life didn't seem worth living.

"I tried doctors and several medicines for over a year with but little benefit. My sister, who was visiting me, urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I bought some at once and after taking a few boxes was restored to health, gained about 30 pounds in weight and have been the picture of health ever since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

NEVER HAD ADVENTURE

No Excitement Whatever Unless a Liner Strikes Your Boat.

Gloucester, Mass., July 31.—Charles W. Osier, captain of many a fisherman, able pilot of the coast from Hatteras to Labrador, sat on a dory on the wharf this morning, watching the tide come in, and complained that in all the sixty years of following the sea he had never had an adventure.

"Of course," the cap'n admitted under close cross-questioning, "I've been in plenty of gales of wind. Naturally would, fishing so many seasons off the Grand banks and Georges. Twenty-four seasons to Georges. But I've never seen nothing of no account.

"Georges? Yes; I should say the name was 'bout the same as the state. Mighty near, anyway. I'm not much on inland matters, though I've been as far inland as Bangor. You'll find Georges shoals marked on the chart 'bout 140 miles east so'east Eastern point. They lie twenty-two miles nor' nor'west and so' so'east. Just a long line of breakers as far as you can see. They're an awful sight in a gale of wind. Believue awful sight. Yes, sir. But I never had no trouble there. Most generally fishermen don't have no excitement.

The cap'n reflected in silence for a time. Then prodded by more questions he went on:

"It's mostly a matter of being careful. I always used to take pains to get out on deck 'bout every half hour all night to see whether the lookout was tending to business. Many a time I've found him off his post. A careless lookout can get a whole crew in trouble. I'd fire a man off the vessel for carelessness, soon as I got a chance.

"You see, the most danger to fishing vessels is being run down at night or in a fog by a liner. A fisherman don't mind a storm. But a liner headed at him, that's different. So it all depends on the lookout. And sometimes he can't help his vessel's being run down."

Whereupon Cap'n Osier, being without adventures of his own, related this experience of two other men:

"The fishing schooner Fame was 'bout ninety miles off this coast the latter part of May. She was lying to in a light fog in the evening. Had a crew of twenty-two men. I knew the skipper pretty well. The men had been out in dories setting the nets most of the afternoon.

"'Bout 10 o'clock at night the last dory came in and reported. They hadn't finished up yet and the skipper told 'em to come aboard and do the rest of the work in the morning. But they said, no, they guessed they'd get it all done that night. So they rowed off in the fog, always knowing where the vessel was by hearing her sound her horn. They were busy at work when they heard the swish of water and a liner drove by in the dark.

"Made 'em kind of shivery, like, you know, came so close to 'em. And one of 'em says to the other, 'I hope she keeps clear of the vessel.' So they went on with their work, hearing the schooner's horn at reglar intervals. Pretty soon they heard a sound. It was like a crash, only being so far away they couldn't rightly tell just what the thing was. But one of 'em says to the other, 'Don't s'pose the liner hit our vessel, do you?'

"They didn't really think much of it at the time and went on with their work. But they was kind of listening for the horn all the time. After awhile one of 'em says to his mate, 'Haven't heard that horn for quite a spell, have you?'

"Then they quit work and listened. Couldn't hear nothing at all. You know how dead still it is on a foggy night in the middle of the Western ocean. It's that still the water lapping at your dory sounds like a living noise. Well, they listened awhile and there wa'n't no horn.

"By and by one of 'em says, 'I guess she got the Fame all right.' But there wa'n't nothing they could do. Didn't know where they were. Couldn't hear a sound. So they just rowed 'round in the dory all night and when it got light a three-masted schooner picked 'em up and carried 'em to the nearest light. They rowed ashore when the papers came that night sure enough it was the Fame and only two of the crew of twenty-two saved and two more astray in a dory.

"O, yes," said Capt. Osier, "seafaring folk once in a while have a pretty rough time of it. There's lots of widows in Gloster. But mostly, if a man's careful he's just as safe in a fishing vessel as he is here on the wharf. Of course, if a man's careless he's likely to get into a sight of trouble. But that's the way everywhere.

"Naturally Georges shoals don't look good to you in a gale of wind. Them breakers, far as the eye can see, seem to wash up to heaven, and the ablest vessel that was ever built wouldn't stand no show if she once got into shoal water there with the wind driving her towards the breakers. But as for me, I've sailed these seas sixty years and never had no excitement."

CHEST OF GOLD THE ISSUE.

Litigation Began in 1900 and Heirs Still Pressing Claim.

Alexandria, Ind., July 31.—The fight between the heirs of the late David Bowers of this city over an alleged chest of money and gold, said to be worth $40,000, is to be fought out in the Madison county courts, after having gone through the courts of Hancock county, and later through the appellate court.

During Bowers' lifetime it was often reported that he had secreted in a chest in his house a large sum of money and gold bars. At the time of his death his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Beatson, and her husband, with whom he lived much of the time, were closest associated with him, so that when no trace of the supposed chest was discovered, the other heirs charged that Beatson and his wife had appropriated the money and gold to their own use.

Suit against them for $40,000 was instituted by these heirs in 1900, but before it came to trial a change of venue was taken to Hancock county. The jury found for Beatson, and an appeal was taken. The appellate court reversed the decision. Now it has been brought back to this county, where nearly all of the interested persons live. Beatson and his wife own a fine farm southeast of the city and are well-to-do.

STARVES FOR FORTY DAYS.

Unusual Means of Committing Suicide by Unhappy Lover.

Paris, July 31.—A young man named Leon Gentault has for the last six weeks been trying to starve himself to death. The reason for this method of committing suicide is said to be a love affair. Gentault had been last seen to leave his room in the Rue des Rigoles on May 31. In the course of June the concierge and a neighbor ventrued to tap at the door to ask him whether anything was the matter, but they received such curt answers that they decided to leave the eccentric lodger alone. He was heard moving about from time to time, but this was the only sign of his existence.

When July came, however, and he was not only invisible but silent, the concierge reported the affair to the police, who decided to burst open the door. Gentault was lying on the floor, undressed and unconscious. His body was reduced to a skeleton, and when taken to the hospital he was found to weigh only fifty-nine pounds. There is no reason to doubt he has been without food for forty days. His exhaustion is such that he cannot recover.

Commission to Consider Matter Has First Meeting in Russia.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—The anti-cholera commission had its first meeting in this city today. The commission has been convoked to discuss measures to prevent the spread of the disease, which, it is feared, may reach the capital in spite of the optimism prevailing in governmental quarters. As first measures the commission decided upon a general cleaning of St. Petersburg, the free distribution of boiled drinking water to the poorer classes, experiments along the line of anti-cholera vaccination, and the opening of a hospital with 250 beds to accommodate the expected sufferers. New cases of cholera are reported daily from Astrakhan, Tsaritsyn and Kanyishin, and the disease has appeared in the provinces of Simbirsk, Ufa and Nizhui-Novgorod.

NOTIFICATION OF W. J. BRYAN

Of His Nomination Will be Strictly Non-Partisan.

Lincoln, Neb., July 31.—The ceremonies attending the notification of William J. Bryan of his nomination for the presidency will be strictly nonpartisan. This decision was arrived at after a conference of Maj. Brown, National Committeeman Hall, Governor Sheldon and a committee of citizens of Lincoln. It has been concluded that there will be no parade of marching clubs. The program as completed is as follows:

Sunrise salute of forty-six guns by Col. Matonie's battery.

10 a. m.—Band concerts in capital grounds and government square.

12:30 p. m.—Committee accompanied by Bryan and Kern and headed by a platoon of police and the Nebraska state band escorted in carriages to the capitol grounds.

2 p. m.—Formal notification, capitol grounds.

6:30 p. m.—Dinner by Mr. Bryan to the notification committee at Fairview.

Mr. Bryan was up early this morning, continuing the preparation of his speech of acceptance and it is his intention to have it completed early next week. A visitor asked him today what he thought of the proposition to adopt the tiger as a Democratic emblem instead of the donkey.

"I want first to see the mule that is coming to me from Minnesota," said Mr. Bryan laughingly, "before I discuss any trade."

THE SEVEN PROPHETS.

"The late duke of Devonshire," said a diplomat at a Washington dinner, "kept a stud and took a calm and dual interest in the races.

"There was a certain sporting paper that kept a large staff of prophets and always prophesied the outcome of important races. The duke, for some reason, put great reliance in these prophets and their prophesies. He always read the paper, and he continually recommended it to his friends.

"But once at Goodwood, at the day's end, a man came up to the duke and said:

"'What of your paper now? Did you see it this morning? Six prophets prophesied that six different horses would win, and here only seven ran, and the winner was the seventh, which no prophet had selected. Well, what have you to say now?"

"'All I have to say,' the duke answered calmly, 'is that there's room for another prophet on that paper.'"

GREEN CORN ON MARKET

Popular American Dish Will be Plentiful Next Week.

Prices Show Few Changes From the Previous Week.

Corn on the ear is being offered in the local produce market.

Receipts are still light but the next week will see the green corn season in a flourishing conditions. The early consignments have been greedily purchased by Duluthians and the market for them is firm on Michigan street at 20 cents a dozen.

To many people, green corn is one of the chief delights of the summer.

Green corn has given Americans considerable notoriety at different times, but its popularity is undiminished, nevertheless. Foreign visitors have at different times criticised the American method of eating corn.

Some years ago Alice Neilson, the well known American prima donna, who was then a comic opera star, was a guest at a dinner in New York at which a Russian nobleman was also present. The dinner was quite informal and distinctly American.

Among other dishes served was green corn on the cob. This led the Russian nobleman to remark that only pigs would pick up a cob and eat it the way most Americans did.

Miss Neilson, who sat next to the Russian, passed the dish of corn to him, saying sweetly, "Have some, count."

The local market will be well supplied with corn now until the season for it is over.

Blueberries are an important feature of the market now and are somewhat cheaper than they were a week ago. They were selling at $2 a crate, whereas the price today is $1.75 a crate.

Red raspberries are more expensive. The demand has been very firm during the past week and prices have bulged from $2.50 to $3 a crate. The preserve season is at its height now, and there are buyers for every berry that comes to town.

New apples are a little easier, selling at $4.50 to $5 a barrel, last week, they were selling as high as $6.

California peaches are up ten cents over last week. The demand for them has been very good and the quality uniformerly excellent.

"Duluth is getting some of the finest peaches I have ever seen, this season," said a local commission man, this morning.

Arkansas peaches are unchanged from a week ago.

Cantaloupes have gone up. The market for them is very firm at the present time and give evidence of maintaining a stiffness for some time, unless rec. ceipts show a great improvement. Today they are quoted at $2.50 to $3, against $1.75 to $2, a week ago.

Bartlett pears are coming in more freely and the price is off twenty-five cents from last week.

Vegetables are unchanged in price from last week. Radishes, young onions, cucumbers, tomatoes and all the rest have been coming in good quantities. Duluth has everything the market affords in the green vegetable line.

Staple vegetables are steady and unchanged. Potato receipts are showing steady increase, but prices are the same as a week ago.

Cabbage is steady at $2.50 per crate.

Watermelons are to be had in all sizes, and at reasonable prices. They are quoted at 25 to 35 cents, according to their size.

The egg market continues very firm. It was thought that prices might ease off a bit this season, after the bulge, but they have not. The coop products are selling a 21 to 22 cents a dozen.

Butter remains unchanged. Creamery prints are selling at 22 to 26 cents a pound and the other grades are on the same basis they have been for the past month. The same may be said of cheese.

Poultry remain the same as a week ago and fish and meat prices have shown no fluctuation during the past few days.

OLD MIS' MOON COME TOO.

Youth's Companion: Mme Fairfax was wont to stand on the porch of her old Virginia home and rejoice on moonlight nights in the beauty. "There's my moon," she would say, as it rose from behind the Eastern hills. "Look, Dahlia, see how beautiful it is," and her tiny colored maid, who was ever at hand with shawl or fan for her beloved mistress, would answer enthusiastically. "Your moon certainly do look pow'ful handsome to-night."

When Mme. Fairfax journeyed to the city to visit her son, Dahlia, looking out of the window with wondering eyes on the first evening of her life away from home, exclaimed in a voice of mingled astonishment and relief. "Well, I declar' to goodness if ole Mis' Moon ain't done come along to Washington wif me and ole mis'! We can't be homesick nohow, wif ole Mis' Moon shining on us."

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The visiting summer girl swayed back and forth in the hammock in the obscure dusk of the corner of the porch. The stay-at-home summer man sat at her feet on some scarlet pillows.

"Speaking of the laws of molecular attraction—" began the summer man.

"The what?" asked the visiting girl.

"The laws," said the summer man, with nice masculine precision, "of molecular attraction."

"Oh," said the summer girl, dreamily.

"I said," said the summer man, "that in speaking of the laws of—"

"Do you think we ought to discuss it?" asked the summer girl, leaning earnestly out of the hammock.

"Why not?" inquired her entetainer.

"Well, nothing! Only it doesn't sound chaste, do you think?"

"Why, it's a law of the universe," said the summer man, who is recently out of his sophomore year at college, and there are so many things that he will not forget.

"Oh! Excuse me," said the summer girl. "I see now. Something like the coefficient of expansion, isn't it?"

"No, not anything like it," said the summer man. "I was going to say that in speaking of the laws of—"

"If it's anything about machinery, please don't expect me to comprehend. You are taking the mechanical engineering course, aren't you?" she inquired with pretty interest.

"No," he said, "I'm not. I'm taking the academic course, as I've told you at least fifteen times during the last two weeks."

"Oh, I'm sure I beg your pardon, but I meet so many college gentlemen, it's rather hard to keep their courses straight. But I remember perfectly now," said the visiting summer girl. "You're making a specialty of English history and football, aren't you?"

"No," said the summer man, "I'm not."

"How perfectly stupid of me," said the summer girl. "But what was it you were going to say about attraction?"

"Why, what was I going to say," said the summer man, "was that by the laws of molecular attraction—"

"I told you I couldn't understand machinery, didn't I?" asked the summer girl. "It's terribly interesting, but so involved. Automobiles are all I understand and, of course, I can't fix them. But I love to ride. And I like it best on a hot day when all my friends are walking in the broiling sun, hot and grimy. Then is when I best love to go whizzing by in a motor car."

"What a nice disposition you have," said the summer man.

"Yes, haven't I?" inquired the summer girl. "But what was it you were going to say about attraction?"

"Why, what I wasc going to say," said the summer man, "was that by the laws of molecular attraction—"

"Do you know the way you keep interrupting yourself," said the visiting summer girl, "reminds me of a man I met in Maine last summer. His name was Bob Evans, and—"

"Bob Evans!" ejaculated the summer man.

"Yes. Do you know him," asked the summer girl.

"Well,rather," said the summer man. "Do you know he's married?"

"Married," said the summer girl, with a reminiscent look in her eye. "Well, I declare. To whom?"

"Oh, I don't know. A bunch of blond hair and ruffles," said the summer man sidling along nearer the hammock.

"Bob Evans married," ruminated the summer girl.

"Yup," said the summer man, taking hold of her hand that was hanging out of the hammock, with nothing in particular to occupy it.

"Well, well, well!" said the summer girl. "Would you mind letting go of my hand?" she inquired politely.

"Yes I would," he said, "very much. Do you know," he continued, "that I've known you two weeks?"

"Yes," said the summer girl, "only two weeks."

"The whole of two weeks," corrected the summer man, "and what, I'd like to know, are two weeks in the eons of eternity, or two years, or two centuries? One doesn't need time in a case of this kind."

"Apparently not," said the summer girl.

"And why," asked the summer man, "should we waste time when we know perfectly that, in the dim ages of chaos, we were simply preordained for each other?"

"Well, that's so," said the summer girl. "You know, I never even thought of that."

"Well, you should think about those things," said the summer man, possessing himself of her other hand.

And then the summer girl's hostess round the other end of the porch. "I don't like to be a spoil sport, or intrude, or anything like that," she said, "but the last car that goes by this vicinity for the next six hours leaves in four minutes."

"Maybe I better take it," said the summer man in some little confusion.

"Maybe you better," said the summer girl's hostess. And the summer man jammed his stiff straw hat onto his head and bolted into the darkness.

The hostess gathered up the scarlet cushions. The summer girl slid her lithe length out of the hammock and hung one end of it forlornly over on the other hook.

"I just love Duluth," she said, as she trailed across the porch. "It's too nice for anything," she said, as she held the screen door open for her hostess. "I'm engaged," she said dreamily, "to three of the nicest Duluth men."

Then the screen door slammed and the hall light was switched off.

Sweet Omelette.

Peel and core four apples, cut them into small bits, and fry until tender in a little butter, advises Vogue for the making of a sweet omelette. Beat six eggs without separating, add to them six tablespoonfuls of cool water. Put a lump of butter half the size of an egg in the omelette pan, and when it begins to color whisk the eggs two or three times and pour into the pan. When they begin to set spread the apples over the surface and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Fold the omelette and turn out on a hot platter. Sprinkle with a little more sugar, pour four tablespoonfuls of rum over the whole, and set fire to it at once. Serve immediately after the alcohol has burnt out.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Black currants, 10c a pint box.
Green apples, 60c a peck.
Home-grown peas, 8c a quart.
Green corn, 25c a dozen.
Beet greens, 20c a peck.
Lamb roasts and spring ducks.

One has definitely settled the whys and wherefores of existence. Life extends on all sides in one interesting vista of green fields, punctuated at the proper intervals with lovely greens and springs gurgling up where they will do the most good, and skies of lovely shades visible every place on the horizon. Peace and good will and joy and happiness, content and satisfaction, happy resignation and willingness to be pleased, ecstatic delight in the pleasure at hand, rapture for those that may come—all this may be upon one's horizon, and then, in an unguarded moment, one may eat a green apple. Why this should be so cannot be figured out in the process of reason. It is one of the things that only faith can make bearable. In spite of the experience of Jack Jones and his sister Susan, and a little personal experience in the far distances of last year, the tempting fruit, with its delicious and perfectly harmless taste, deep, dark despair, settles down. This sorry scheme of things assumes a lugubrious outlook that not even faith can lighten, and woe impenetrable wraps us round.

Why this should be so is an interesting theme for a summer night's discussion.

HOME REST CURE.

The Foe of Nervousness and Wrinkles Is Sleep.

Some one has whispered in Margot's ear that rest is a wonderful beautifier, and being devoted to her roseleaf complexion and the preservation of her supple figure, she takes forty winks every afternoon, and the family knows that though the heavens show symptoms of falling her rest is not to be disturbed.

Why not follow her example? inquires the New York Sun. Decide that, finding it impossible to do everything in this life, you will gracefully relinquish your hold on a few accomplishments. You cannot acquire all the languages, attend all the receptions, theaters or lectures, sell tickets for all the benefits, or acquiesce in all the mandates of arrogant fashionable society. Resolve, therefore, to take the afternoon nap; then do what you can with the rest of the day; otherwise you will wonder why you are so languid, why everything goes wrong and why the lines begin to creep into your face.

The home rest may be taken in a semireclining pose in an easy chair. Relax every muscle, close the eyes and invite the soul to repose. Sleep may or may not follow; it is no easy matter for a woman unaccustomed to the daily nap to fall into a doze at will. The coy god of slumber that ten or fifteen minutes of his lightest blessing is far more refreshing than an hour's heavy slumber.

If you have time to slip off tight garments, get into your kimono, let down your hair and discard shoes and stockings, the benefit will be two-fold. Take a recumbent position, with not a sign of a pillow. This is the twentieth century, and the one-time producer of round-shoulders belongs under the feet, not the head. A message from France tells us the best results from sleep may be obtained when the head is on a level or even lower than the feet.

The physician who is responsible for this theory declares that if one sleeps thus insomnia and nightmare will be unknown, repose will be more "intellectual," because more profound, and the entire nerveus system renewed. His patients are well-known beauties, and if any women in the world know how to preserve their charms and conserve nerve force, they are the daughters of France.

Lying on the back with the arms thrown over the head invites disease of the throat, eyes and nose. The pressure of the palate against the back of the throat prevents free breathing weakens respiration; the mouth opens and collects foreign and injurious matter floating in the air. Nor should the arms be folded on the chest, which needs freedom from weight. To lie with one hand on the cheek invites wrinkles and slightly numbs the skin.

TWO FROM FIVE LEAVES FIVE.

Retail business, as affected by the Ohio-Indiana interurbans, presents at first sight a commercial paradox, says a writer in System. Take two from five in any other part of the world and you have three left.

The trolleys have taken two shares of trade from the country merchant and delivered them brazenly to the big city stores. Yet the small town man, casting up his accounts, finds his portion is not the expected three parts, but the full five he had before—and often two or three extra shares besides.

Here's a dealer in Lebanon, twenty-eight miles out of Indianapolis and with less than a thousand population, who showed the record of five sales within a year to residents of Indianapolis itself. Two of the buyers were visiting back home, while three, waiting for cars, fancied tables or chairs displayed in the windows and bought them before the impulse cooled.

This furniture store is a type of countless aggregate retail business built around the freight and passenger service of the electric roads. Since the trolleys entered three years ago it has completely changed its ways of doing business, has doubled its floor space and more than doubled sales.

What rapid fire action its proprietor secures is evidenced by the fact that he sold and delivered the Sunday before last Christmas five rockers of a certain style, though he had only one of the kind on his floor in the morning. He simply held the first as a sample, and ordered the successive chairs by telephone as fast as the farmers' wives made up their minds they wanted them.

The splendid organization of the wholesale house, trained to handle hundreds of such holiday emergencies, and the rapid service of the traction express allowed the Lebanon dealer to sell the chairs with the same certainty of delivery as though he had them in his own stock room.

The chief dry goods store in Lebanon employed three clerks before the trolley era. I counted eighteen while the owner told about his enlarge establishment and explained how the interurbans brought him customers from points fifteen miles distant and allowed him to run to the city twice a week to keep in touch with the latest in merchandise and methods.

The leading grocer, too, has worked out a special function for the interurban, besides depending on its freight service for shipment of his staples. He sizes up the weather every Saturday morning—Saturday is the Hoosier's day for going to town—then telephones to Indianapolis for his supply of perishable foodstuffs, table delicacies, early vegetables and berries, fruits, celery, cranberries and the like.

If the day promises to be fine he knows he can expect a certain number of country customers to buy the stuff; if rain or a blizzard threatens, half as many will come in on the cars; thus he guages his order by the barometer. While a visitor waited to talk with a Lebanon hardware man he watched him sell a carving set from his jobber's catalogue to a woman who coveted nothing he had in stock and heard him promise to deliver it at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

RAILROADS

READY FOR GRAIN TRADE

Cars Being Called in and Started for Congested Points.

Rule Prohibiting Cars Leaving Lines Will be Enforced.

Preparations to meet the grain rush are being made by the railroads of the West. An order will soon be issued by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, as well as other Western roads, that cars will not be allowed to leave the lines of the companies. At the present time there is a rule in effect that cars shall not be allowed to go further off the line than 200 miles from a junction point.

At the present time there are very few cars of any of the roads that tap the wheat states in the service of foreign lines. Western traffic officials have been calling their cars in for the past two months, until at the present time nearly all of the Western roads have most of their carriers available for the wheat movement.

The movement to the points where the grain trade will be the heaviest will begin gradually. In fact, the movement is under way at the present time. The movement of empties toward North Dakota will be increased from now on. Reports received by the roads indicate that the crop movement will be tremendous this fall. With this information at hand the railroads are preparing to handle the wheat without delay.

While the indications point to a much heavier wheat movement than took place last fall, the roads are in a much better position to handle it. At the present time the surplus of cars is not so great as it was a month ago, but reports received locally and from St. Paul state that there is no doubt but that the roads will be able to handle the crop movement effectively and without serious delay.

MANUFACTURERS' RATES.

Roads Make Reductions for Members of National Association.

Beginning Aug. 2, local roads will offer a reduced rate for manufacturers and buyers, in parties of 200, to Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph and Des Moines. The rate will be on the basis of a fare and a half, the full fare being charged for the first part of the trip, the reduction being made from the return fare.

Last year no such rate was in effect. Before the enforcement of the 2-cent fare law, manufacturers were given special party rates. This was in consideration of the fact that large numbers of manufacturers and buyers went to the large cities each fall to do the winter ordering. When the 2-cent fare went into effect the manufacturers and buyers were forced to pay the regular fares. Instructions reached here this morning placing the old arrangement in effect.

The reduced fare will be in effect from the second of August to the ninth. It is given under an agreement with the National Manufacturers' association, which must guarantee that there will be 200 members in any party securing the rate. If there is not the required number the full rate will be collected on the return trip.

These rates will be available from this city. This action on the part of the railroads is in line with the other reductions that have been made for conventions, educational meetings and other events where large crowds are attracted to any city.

SPECIAL RATES.

Minnesota Roads Will Meet State Fair Rates of Great Western.

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Members of the Western Passenger association met yesterday afternoon and decided to meet the state fair rate recently announced by the Chicago Great Western of a fare and one-half for the round trip to the Twin Cities from points in Minnesota. While no formal action was taken by the association it was generally agreed that this was the proper course to pursue in view of the action of the Chicago Great Western and the rates consequently will soon be announced by the various roads that come into the Twin Cities from the south.

This ends the threatened rate war that some thought would follow the Chicago Great Western's announcement of a fare and a half for the round trip.

It was also agreed at the meeting to make a similar rate of a fare and one-half for the round trip for the benefit of the residents of Wisconsin and Iowa who wish to attend the fairs in their respective states. In these cases also the rates to Milwaukee and Des Moines will apply only to points within the states.

While the action of the Western Passenger association takes care of the people in the southern part of the state no rate has been made by the northern lines as yet.

Securities Issued.

New York, July 31.—Arrangements for the meeting the $8,000,000 of Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad notes, which fall due tomorrow, were completed today by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Blair & Co. bankers, according to an announcement made by the bankers. It was stated that no issue of additional securities would be required under the plan, but the consideration by which the Gould road was enabled to meet the notes was not made public. Neither would any of the parties concerned in the transaction say whether or not the destiny of any of the Gould railroads was affected by the terms of the new agreement.

Tax Corporations.

St. Paul, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The public examiner is on the track of more income for the state. There are about 200 foreign corporations owning freight cars operating on the railway lines of this state on which some should be taxed. Anton Schaefer, public examiner, has written to the home office of these corporations, asking them where they pay their taxes and on the replies investigations will be commenced to collect what money may be due the state.

A vast crowd of people could be seen at any time today at Kugler's Drug store, all anxious to take advantage of the low prices on Wittman's Compound, and to have it explained by the clerks. Large bottles are selling, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5, and many who have tried this great remedy, and like it, are taking advantage of this rush. The Volopus is attracting many curiosity-seekers, and the large parasites removed from well known people with these remedies, are coming in for their share.

GOT CHECK BY MISTAKE

Mrs. Ida Leonard of Lynn, Arrested for Larceny.

Made Use of Money Intended for Another Woman.

Boston, Mass., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Ida M. Leonard of Lynn, Mass., is under arrest charged with the larceny of a check for $2,000 sent by Davis & Hollister of Duluth, attorneys for the executors of the M. J. Forbes estate to Ida M. Leonard of Brockton, Mass., a beneficiary of the Forbes will.

It is alleged that the Lynn woman received the check by mistake, owing to the similarity of names. It is charged that she made an affidavit to the effect that she was the woman referred to in the will and it is said that she cashed the check and has already used a part of it.

Mrs. Ida M. Leonard, named in the will, was Mr. Forbes' niece. She is a resident of Brockton, and the $2,000 sent her represents the whole of the amount left to her by Mr. Forbes.

DRIVERS ANGRY.

Statement That They Were Not Railroad Men Causes Indignation.

They are all riled up because some one operating in an express train said they were not railroad express drivers. Other persons operating on trains said that there was no such a thing as a railroad expressman. This is in the face of an advertised dance for railroad expressmen, to be held at Lester park, Aug. 14.

The express drivers of the city are up in arms. They say they deliver express to the railroads, and were it not for the fact that they did deliver express to the railroads, the railroads would have no express to deliver. But just the same, some of the messengers working on the trains say that the drivers of express wagons have no right to call themselves railroad expressmen.

On the other hand, the wagon drivers claim they are the only original railroad expressmen, large as life and twice as natural, and that in advertising their dance as a railroad expressmen's dance they are taking no privileges. They say that it will be a matter of courtesy to permit the express messengers to attend.

Express drivers gathered in groups last night and discussed the accusation that they were not railroad expressmen. Some wanted to go out and "get" the man who started the rumor that they were not. There may be something doing before the couples line up for the grand march at the "railroad expressmen's" ball. The express drivers are looking for trouble.

MASS MEETING AT THE CLUB

Prominent Speakers Will Talk on the Inland Waterways.

A movement to promote local sentiment for the improving and maintaining of the inland waterways will be launched tonight at the Commercial club, when Congressman James A. Tawney, chairman of the congressional committee on appropriations; J. Adam Bede, congressman from the Eighth district; John A. Fox, director of the national rivers and harbors congress, and Maj. Graham D. Fitch, United States engineer for the port of Duluth, will address a meeting of citizens.

The movement, that is under the direction of the rivers and harbors congress, has to do with the improvement of harbors and navigable streams. The congress is composed of boards of trade of the country. It is working for a systematic appropriation from congress, to that the work can be carried on in a busines-like manner. Meetings have been held in various parts of the country, and the meeting at the Commercial club tonight is for the purpose of spreading information of the work of the congress as well as to arouse local interest and support for the movement.

Notices have been sent out to most of the business men of the city as well as out-of-town members of the club. It is expected that a representative gathering of busines men will be on hand.

THE BELGIANS GO DOWN TO DEFEAT BEFORE LEANDERS.

Henley, July 31.—The international Olympic regatta came to an end today with a sweeping victory for the United Kingdom oarsmen, who have defeated all the continental rowers who participated in the races.

The great event of the meeting was the championship eight, in which, after winning several heats, the Belgian crew went down to defeat in the final before the Leander crew. The Leanders won by two lengths and a half over a course one mile and a half long, in 7 minutes and 52 seconds, with comparative ease. The outcome of the contest was a great surprise, as this morning many of the experts had practically conceded the race to the club, Nautique de Gand. It was a battle of styles, the orthodox long stroke, well driven home, of the British oarsmen, against the short, light and fast stroke, without any swing, which twice has carried the Belgians to victory in the grand challenge at Henley.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Prices Off in America From a Lack of Support.

Flax Has Easier Tone at the Close in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, July 31.—Seemingly through sheer lack of support, wheat went off in the American markets today, closing weak. Talk of black rust in South Dakota was off-set by the news that for the most part, the crop there was so far advanced that it is beyond harm from the blight. Cutting will be general in South Dakota by tomorrow or Monday.

In Duluth, the July option, of which this was the last day, bulged two cents but the distant month was soft, showing a loss of more than a point. Several of the markets dropped more than a point.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 2,096,000 bus., against 1,584,000 bus., last week and 552,000 bus., a year ago.

The Modern Miller says:

"The crop outlook is rather bullish. The marketing of soft winter wheat is moderating but liberal, and the Nebraska crop is coming out freely. Many farmers are holding wheat in the stack or granaries, and will regulate their sales on prices bid. Soft winter wheat shows the unfavorable effect of recent rains on grain on the shock."

Liverpool closed ⅛d higher, Budapest 1¼c higher and Berlin ⅛c higher.

The July option closed 2c higher in Duluth, 1½c lower in Chicago, ⅝c lower in Minneapolis, 1¾c lower in New York, ⅛c lower in St. Louis, 3¾c lower in Kansas City and unchanged in Winnipeg. The September option closed 1⅜c lower in Duluth, 1-⅛c lower in Chicago, 1½c lower in Minneapolis, ¾c lower in New York, ⅝-¾c lower in St. Louis and ¾-⅞c lower in Kansas City. October wheat closed ⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

September corn closed ⅜c lower in Chicago and ⅝d lower in Liverpool. September oats closed ¾-⅞c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"There was a steady undertone in the speculative wheat markea at the start and values were ⅛@¼d higher. The strength in America yesterday was counteracted by fears that bull interests were manipulating and soon offerings became larger and the market developed easiness. The large shipments from Argentina, particularly to the United Kingdom, and the fact that the continent was offering to resell cargoes caused the pressure. At midday the market was dull, but easy and ⅛d higher than yesterday.

"Corn was steady and unchanged at the opening and later declined ⅝d in sympta lthwhy Feivaluo-States cet cwvo pathy with the large shipments from Argentina and the weakness in both cargoes and parcels."

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,046,000 bus, last year 986,000 bus. Shipments 788,000 bus, last year 537,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 134,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 860,000 bus, last year 353,000 bus. Shipments 314,000 bus, last year 642,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 1,000 bus.

Wheat was rather quiet in Duluth. July wheat opened 1c higher at $1.18 bid, advanced to $1.19 and closed there, a gain of 2c over yesterday. September wheat opened unchanged at 98¼c, went as low as 97¼c and closed there, a loss of 1⅜c from yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ½c lower.

Flax was fairly active and closed easier. July flax opened unchanged at $1.25¼ bid, went to $1.26¼, declined to $1.25 and closed there, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. September flax opened ¼c lower at $1.24¾ bid, advanced to $1.25⅝, declined to $1.24½ and closed there, a loss of ½c from yesterday. October flax opened late at $1.24, declined to $1.23¾ and closed at $1.23⅝, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. Other options were inactive.

Rye was 2c higher and other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Active With Tone Nervous and Inclined to be Bearish.

Chicago, July 31.—The wheat market opened active with the tone nervous and inclined to be bearish on assertions that the crop was too far advanced to be materially damaged by black rust. September opened ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c lower at 90⅞@91c, advanced to 91½c and then declined to 90¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 495 cars against 438 cars last week and 332 cars a year ago.

The market later grew weaker, September touching 90@⅛c and closing weak, ⅞@1c lower, at 90⅛c.

The corn market was dull but the tone firm on hot weather. September opened ¼@½c higher at 74¾@75c and sold to 74⅝c. Local receipts were 213 cars with 30 of contract grade.

Corn ruled irregular all day, September being weak on sales by cash houses, while deferred futures maintained their strength. September declined to 74c and closed weak, ⅜c lower, at 74⅛c.

The oats market turned weak on profit-taking. September opened ⅛c higher at 45c, sold at 45¼@⅛c and then dropped to 44⅝@¾c Local receipts were 172 cars.

The provision market was active and strong on a sharp upturn in hogs. September pork opened 12½c higher at $15.90 and advanced to $16.00. Lard was 5@7½c higher at $9.55@9.57½ and ribs 10c higher at $9.10.

Close: Wheat—July, 89¾c; September, 90⅛c; December, 92c. Corn—July, 77c; September, 74⅛c; December, 61¾c; May, 61¼c. Oats—July, old, 51c; July, 53c; September, 44c to 44⅛c; May, 45⅞c. THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 31.—Cables were disappointing in view of the strength in the American market yesterday, Liverpool opening only a small fraction higher and closed only ⅛d higher. The most reliable people in the trade have confirmed the black rust reports and there is no doubt of its presence over a large area. On the other hand most of the wheat is too close to maturity to be seriously injured and the market today was favorable for the crop. Local elevator stocks will decrease about 60,00 bushels for the week. Receipts here were 175 cars against 99, and in Duluth 24 against 116. There was selling out of long wheat after the noon hour. The close was weak and near the low point. July opened $1.15; high, $1.15; low, $1.14; close, $1.14⅝; old July, high, $1.15; close, $1.14⅝. September opened 98¼c; high, 98⅝c; low, 96⅞@97c; close, 97c. Old September, high, 99⅛c; close, 97½@⅝c.

Two cents under July was a nominal trading basis for No. 1 northern, but the futures were so dull that buyers disregarded them largely. Early bids for No. 1 were about $1.13 and for No. 2, $1.10 @1.11. There was a better demand than yesterday. Winter wheat was very dull, some of it unsalable. Close: No. 1 northern, $1.13 cpot, $1.10 to arrive; No. 2 norehern, $1.10@1.100 spot, $1.07 to arrive; No. 3 wheat, $1.06@1.08; No. 3 yellow corn, 74¾c; No. 3 white oats, 55⅝@56⅜c; No. 2 rye, 70¾@72¼c. New barley from south of Aberdeen, S. D., light in color and 47-pounds test, sold for 55c. Old barley was steady, most of it selling at 53c to 54c. Close, 50@58c.

Flax—Receipts 16 cars. One cent under Duluth September was the basis, but the demand was only moderate. Close, $1.23¼.

Millstuffs steady but quiet and in less active demand. Millers quote bran in bulk at $18.50@19.

Demand for flour is moderate, domestic buyers not disposed to stock up and the foreign inquiry very light. Shipments, 35,320 barrels. First patents, $5.75@5.90; second patents, $5.65@5.80; first clears, $4.35@4.45; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

Duluth Car Inspection.

Wheat—No. 1 northern, 2; No. 2 northern, 5; No. 3 spring, 1; rejected, 1; No. 1 durum, 4; No. 2 durum, 11; total of durum, 15; total of wheat, 24; last year, 116.

Grain Gossip.

Canadian newspapers, most of which have been quite consistently bearish regarding the Canadian crop, have added a considerable bullish tone to their reports. The Manitoba Free Press remarks that "the Canadian wheat situation does not look as rosy as it did." The news from throughout the belt today was not as bullish as yesterday, some of the reports having a fairly bearish aspect.

Concerning the black rust in South Dakota, LeCount wired from Winnipeg that he had looked at a great many fields in South Dakota this week and was of the opinion that the wheat was too far advanced to be damaged by the rust. Others were not so hopeful.

A prominent banker from Day county, S. D., wired a Chicago house as follows: People not in personal contact with wheat fields do not appreciate the serious condition resulting from this black rust. It is working havoc in the fields here, and no one whose point of observation is as far away as Minneapolis, Duluth or Chicago is justified in saying that our wheat is too far advanced for injury, nor that the disease is not making progress.

Snow wired from Rugby, N. D.: Wheat from Harvey to Minot on the Soo line is better than in other sections, but won't make more than ten bushels to the acre, although the early promise was for a record yield. From Minot to the Montana line the crop is a practical failure.

SWITCHMEN SEEM LIKELY TO STRIKE.

USE FOR OLD HATS.

Kansas City Times: What do you do with your old winter hats when warm weather comes?

"Just 'phone to me and I'll come after old hats," said Philip Welch, jailer at police headquarters. "I don't want them myself, but I would like them for the men we turn loose every morning after they're locked up the night before. When a man's intoxicated he always loses his hat and he feels further degraded the next morning when he leaves the station bareheaded. I would be willing to get on a car and come after old hats."

THE STOCKS CLOSE FIRM

Response Not General Though Others Advanced Slightly.

New York, July 31.—Opening prices of stocks today showed insignificant changes from last night with the gains outnumbering the losses. Missouri Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Amalgamated Copper and Sloss-Sheffield Steel advanced large fractions. The trading was dull.

The price movement was sluggish, but advances in a few stocks kept the general tone in sympathy. Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred rose 1½, Missouri Pacific and Amaglamated Copper rose 2⅛, American Sugar 2, the preferred 2½, American Smelting 1½, National Lead 1¼ and Anaconda, Tennessee Copper, Southern Railway preferred and Wabash preferred about 1. Western Union declined 1. Prices fell back at noon. Bonds were steady.

The demand improved again, lifting Union Uacific, St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Reading, Erie first preferred and Utah Copper about a point, Consolidated Gas 1¼, Anacanda 1½ and American Smelting 2¾.

Prices were held in spite of the dullness and went higher in some instances. The principal movements were amongst specialties.

The market closed firm and active. A rise of 4⅜ in Reading was the feature of the last hour. Response elsewhere was slight. American Locomotive advanced 2¼; Union Pacific, 2, and Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio and Erie, 1 each.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The coppers are still boiling under the lead of Amalgamated, and we expect much higher prices. Buy Range, Calumet & Arizona. Coalition, Shannon and Mohawk. Shannon will have the biggest advance as the stock is very scarce. The Calumet & Hecla stocks are being boomed and will do better especially Allouez and Centennial. Would advise selling La Salle and Superior on any further advance. Keep long of the coppers for a ten-point advance.

THE GOVERNOR IS EMPHATIC

Positively Will Not be a Candidate for Re-Election.

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson returned home today from a three weeks' trip, and without delay he proceeded to put a quietus to the talk going the rounds during his absence that he would be forced to take a third nomination for governor.

"Surely my delcaration on this point, given some weeks ago, was positive enough, but, if necessary, I will repeat it," said Governor Johnson. "I stand how as I did then. I am not a candidate, nor will I permit the use of my name again.

"I had hoped that there were a few people in this state who believed that when I made a statement I meant it. I do not think I have done anything that would lead them to believe different. When I made that statement, I meant every word of it, and it goes."

Concerning politics, Governor Johnson said his observations were that if the election took place tomorrow Bryan would be the winner. What the future would bring he could not say.

The market never looked better even in its balmiest days. Stocks are cheap and will sell away up. North Butte for $100 or maybe $150! Ballaklava is the safest stock on the board and the one that has had no big advance. It is safe as gold, and one of these days it will begin to climb. It is part of that which makes the North Butte what it is.

Copper Queen is steadily being picked up by people who should know what they are doing. If they were not going after the stock so strong I would think nothing of it, but when they begin putting in bids for 1,000 shares at a crack there must be something back of it. Tonight we could have used 2,000 shares at $1.62½, but find no stock offered at all.

Butte & Superior again showed signs of great strength late this afternoon. The East began to take anything offered. Look out for this Butte & Superior. It is going to get away from many of us at this low level. Buy it to a standstill around $1 a share, for it is worth much more money.

The next dividend on North Butte will be $1.50. It is still the star performer; watch it go through $90. The thing to do now is to stand back and let the Easterners take all the stock, as they have been doing the past 90 days, while you repeat the old saw, "What might have been."

Locally Copper Queen was the main show. A big demand for this popular issue from all quarters, 3,000 shares being handled through this office alone, with orders on file for as much more. We called attention to this stock last week. Did you act?

Butte-Ballaklava was wanted in big chunks at $7.62½. Wait a few days before buying—then don't buy at all. It will be as high then. All you will have to do is to envy the fellow who owns a few hundred shares and don't have to work any more.

The party who last winter bet us a box of cigars North Butte would sell at $15 came in today and paid his bet, but he didn't seem pleased that we won. The cigars are on tap. You can sample them and decide whether his judgment of cigars is any better than on the market.

If you have any stock to sell, call us up, as the demand today far exceeded the supply. Our facilities for handling your orders to your satisfaction will be proven by a trial order.

ACCEPT LIFE SENTENCE

Wilson's Attorneys Will, However, Make Fight Against Hanging.

Will Use Every Means to Avert or Postpone Death.

No matter what Judge Dibell's sentence is, it will probably be nearly a year at least before Henry Wilson, convicted of first degree murder for the brutal killing of his wife in West Duluth last spring, dies by hanging.

His attorneys will make a desperate fight to save him from death at a rope's end, according to their statements and it is doubtless in their power to delay matters for a considerable length of time.

According to A. T. Park, one of Wilson's attorneys, the first step following a death sentence, if such is pronounced, will be a motion for a new trial. If this is denied, a commission to examine into his sanity will be called for. Should this commission find him sane at the time of the murder and worthy of the sentence of the court, an appeal will be taken to the supreme court. Should the supreme court grant a new trial, this of course will take place. If it refuses, Wilson's attorneys say they will, as a last resort take the case before the state pardon board.

If a life sentence is given there will be no fight made. Wilson's sentence is expected from day to day now, Judge Dibell having arranged to notify the state and defendant attorneys when he is ready to deliver it.

BUILDING SHOWS A DECREASE

Up to noon today the building inspector's office had issued building permits during the month of July to the amount of $200,975. The total in July, 1907, was $236,835. A total of 129 permits have been issued during the month, and fees collected on them are $393.50, aside from the house moving and sign permits, elevator licenses, etc.

Everything considered, there is a very large amount of building going on in Duluth at the present time. The fact that this month does not show an increase over a corresponding period a year ago is explained by the fact that in July, 1907, permits for two or three large business blocks were issued, where the figures this month represent almost entirely the cost of dwelling houses now in the course of construction.

ASK FOR AN INCREASE

More Inspectors Could be Used to Good Advantage.

Health Commissioner Patton has asked the conference committee to allow him $14,260 for operating expenses for his department during 1909. The city allowed the health department $13,000 for the present year. Most of this amount is for salaries of employes of the department. Aside from the salaries, running expenses are light.

The health force next year will be about the same as it has been this year. More inspectors could be used to good advantage during the summer months, but the department is able to get along very well with the present force. During spring cleaning time, eight or nine additional inspectors usually are employed. Their services are dispensed with about the first of July.

It is confidently expected that the city will provide for a contagious disease hospital next year. This will not be included in the operating expenses appropriation, however. The need of a contagious disease hospital, together with a city hospital for the care of other diseases, is very urgent, and the health department and others interested have been harping on the subject for years. It has looked for some time past as if Duluth were on the verge of getting the desired institution, but at the last moment something has kept turning up to interfere with plans in this connection. Several sites for the building are now under consideration, and one or the other of them doubtless will be decided upon in the near future.

RESCUED IN THEIR NIGHT CLOTHES

Milwaukee, Wis., July 31.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Racine, Wis., says: Mrs. J. M. Denney and her two children were rescued from the burning home, three miles north of that city, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning by Conductor John Lindhard and Motorman John Billings of the Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light company, assisted by thirty passengers, under the most exciting circumstances.

The house was discovered to be on fire by the crew of the incoming train. Mrs. Denney, with the children, were asleep in an upper room and it was with great difficulty that they were awakened. When awakened they became dazed. The crew carried them through the smoke and flames in their night clothes.

During the conflagration Conductor Lindhard and Motorman Billings were burned on the hands and face and their clothing was scorched. Mr. Denney was in Milwaukee on business.

SUPERIOR NEWS

Saved Boy's Life.

A small boy who had foolishly crawled under a train of cars standing still on the Terminal road at Hammond avenue yesterday morning was probably saved from being crushed to death under their wheels by the quick action and coolness of Mrs. Ethel C. Willis, a nurse living at 1612 Sixteenth street.

She saw the boy go under the train and a switch engine back down on it. Running to the side of the train, she saw the boy thrown from the bumpers by the jar of the switch engine connecting with the train. In her firmest tones she commanded the lad not to move from his position between the tracks, while the cars were moving above him. While she talked to the boy encouraging him, to remain absolutely still, she waved her arms in an attempt to attract the attention of the engineer. When she succeeded and the train stopped, the small boy crawled from beneath the train and ran as fast as he could down the avenue, without stopping to thank Mrs. Willis for helping him out of his dangerous position.

Paying of Old Bonds.

Mayor Crumpton, City Attorney Lyons and members of the council finance committee have arranged to take up $7,000 worth of outstanding school bonds, the bonds with interest amount to $9,878.75, for which a cash payment of $8,000 will be accepted by the bondholders. Mayor Crumpton and Attorney Lyons are making an effort to clean up as many of the outstanding bonds as possible.

Pugilist is Jailed.

Thomas Ryan, who was arrested yesterday for drunkenness and begging on the street, when about to be locked in his cell, showed that he was not as drunk as he appeared to be, by making a bolt for liberty. He was stopped, however, at the door by Detective Mead. Before Judge Parker, Ryan pleaded guilty, and was given fifteen days in the county jail. In court he told a hard luck story of being a pugilist out of a job. He had "bummed" his way to Superior from New orw in search of work.

Bryan is Coming.

Though it has not been officially announced, it is understood among Superior Democrats that William Jennings Bryan will speak in Superior during his campaigning.

Several dates have been set aside for Bryan to make addresses in Wisconsin cities, and it has been given out that one of these dates has been alloted to Superior. As yet not even the month in which the Democratic nominee for president will tour Wisconsin has been made public, though it is known that Wisconsin is one of the states scheduled for his campaign trip.

MOTOR CYCLES FOR RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, July 31.—Rural Carrier Hadley, on one of the routes running out of this city, is demonstrating that the motor cycle in the rural service may be a new factor in the delivery of mail. He has just put into service a motor cycle and the saving of time is remarkable. His route is twenty-five miles long and he serves seventy-five patrons. He can cover the route and stop at each of the boxes on his route in two hours, and claims he can even reduce this record a half hour.

With the old modes of conveyance, Hadley required from six to eight hours to perform the same service.

Every day all of the people who are looking for things turn to The Herald want ads. Have you anything to say to them—to the "people who are looking for things?"

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CROP CONDITIONS OF THE NORTHWEST ABOVE THE AVERAGE

HARMONY VARNISH, SPREAD OVER THE REPUBLICANS OF MINNESOTA, IS CRACKING

Jacobson Seems to Want to Dictate the Whole Campaign.

Other Candidates Are About Ready to Go It Alone.

The Story About Democratic Friction Set at Rest.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the Republican papers are exhibiting a most gleeful spirit over the report that Governor Johnson and Mr. Bryan were in Chicago on the same day without exchanging greetings, and are holding up this picture as an example of how the Democratic party is not united in supporting Bryan, the rumbles which are heard from the Republican headquarters in this state indicate that harmony is very much a minus quantity there. And it is at the door of the great warrior Jacobson that the blame for the trouble is laid.

It might be well right here to show just how much ground there is in the Johnson-Bryan story, which has been the source of such great delight to the Republican editors. The governor did spend a few hours in Chicago on the day that Mr. Bryan was registered at the Auditorium Annex. The governor, however, was at the Auditorium and did not know until after he had left that the Nebraskan was in the city, and, as he had but about two hours there, it is doubtful if he could have found time to call upon him had he known of his presence.

And to further expose the flimsy fabric of the Republican talk about the animosity between the governor and the presidential candidate, it might be mentioned that when Governor Johnson arrived in St. Paul, Friday, he found a letter from Mr. Bryan, in which the latter expressed his appreciation of the governor's offer to take the stump this fall, and asked him when he might be expected to make some speeches. The governor, it is

LEADERS GET BUSY

North Dakota Politicians Laying Plans for the Campaign.

Greatest Fight Will Center About Candidates for Governor.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the primary election scarcely over, Republican and Democratic leaders are busily engaged in laying plans for their fall campaign. Having decided on their ticket at the polls last month, the two leading parties of the state are marshaling their forces with the hopes of electing their respective candidates. Though there will be considerable interest in various offices, the greatest fight will center about the governor. The Democrats have named John Burke, present governor of the state, as their candidate for re-election, while the Republicans have named Hon. C. A. Johnson of Minot as their candidate for the position of chief executive.

Both Prominent.

John Burke and C. A. Johnson have long been prominent in North Dakota politics, both being leaders in their own party. John Burke, as governor during the past two years, has made a good record, and on this record will stand for re-election. Mr. Johnson has served in the state legislature a number of years, and is regarded as a very strong man. In the primary election he received the largest number of votes given a single candidate.

Though North Dakota is overwhelmingly Republican, there may be danger of Democratic victory in the gubernatorial contest. John Burke is known throughout the state, and in

COMPANY HAS LOST $100,000

Clever System of Trunk Robberies Exposed in New York.

New York, Aug. 1.—The arrest of three men in Brooklyn early today disclosed the fact that the Adams Express company has lost $100,000, according to the police estimate, through a series of trunk robberies in that borough.

It is not known whether the plot to steal from the express company also extended to Manhattan and elsewhere. The prisoners who are in the toils of the Brooklyn headquarters detectives described themselves as Alfred Wilfert, 20 years old, a lather; J. Cook, 17 years old, a plumber's helper, and Alfred Mouls, 18 years, a driver.

These three men, according to the Brooklyn headquarters, are suspected of knowledge of trunk robberies which total $20,000. Three more drivers are being searched for by the police.

According to the detectives, the Adams Express company has been robbed by a clever system of counterfeit checks and tags made by a job printer, who was in league with the gang of trunk thieves. When a trunk which was to be stolen was given to a driver at some one of the express depots in Brooklyn, the driver would put on the trunk the bogus check and tag. He would then deliver the trunk in question to the house of an accomplice.

INTEREST INTENSE

Among Army Officers Over the Trial of Baldwin's Airship.

Future of Aeronautics Depends Largely Upon Its Success.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The officers of the signal corps are awaiting the official trials of Capt. Baldwin's dirigible balloon on tip-toe of expectation. The first preliminary flight is scheduled for Monday. The success or failure of the airship will greatly affect the plans of Gen. James Allen, chief signal officer, and the younger officers under him. In fact, the signal officers are displaying more anxiety than Capt. Baldwin himself, who, when questioned as to the probable result of the trials, said:

"That machine has got to be a success, else I don't eat."

Gen. Allen, the chief signal officer of the army, who is one of the most enthusiastic advocates of aeronautics for the army, has already expressed his belief that Capt. Baldwin's machine will fulfill all the requirements. Last winter, Gen. Allen endeavored to get an appropriation of $200,000 from congress for airships and other aeronautical purposes. He was unsuccessful, and he realizes that the Fort Myer trials will have to be successful, at least as far as the dirigible balloon is concerned, or there will be a very small chance of getting anything from congress at the next session.

Receiving Every Assistance.

For this reason, Capt. Baldwin is receiving every assistance from the officers of the signal corps. Lieut. Frank P. Lahm and Lieut. Benjamin D. Foulois have not missed a day at the Fort Myer balloon house since Capt. Baldwin began the work of assembling his machine, and the entire balloon squad at the fort has been placed at his disposal.

Contrary to the general belief, Capt. Baldwin's military dirigible, which is as yet unnamed, is vastly different from any airship of its kind ever built in this country. If a success, it will

Anderson later committed suicide with a shotgun, blowing the top of his head off.

No cause is known for the attack on Morrell and the housekeeper, as Anderson is known to have been warmly attached to both of them. He had

INVESTIGATING THE COMPLAINTS

Canadian Official Looking Into Charges of Illegal Immigration.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 1.—An investigation into the complaints regarding the management of the Canadian-Mexican line by Capt. T. H. Worsnop is being conducted by P. O'Hara, deputy minister of trade and commerce, who came from Ottawa for this purpose and to make inquiries concerning the immigration of Chinese into Canada. Mr. O'Hara interviewed a number of those who have made complaint regarding the manner in which the steamship line has been conducted, and will be given a copy of the memorial prepared by the British Columbia shippers who found cause for complaint.

New York, Aug. 1.—Plans for the direction of the approaching national campaign were unfolded today by Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, on his arrival here to organize the Eastern headquarters of the committee in this city. Mr. Mack will spend practically his entire time in the West during the campaign, and the fight in the East will be conducted by a sub-committee of the national committee, which will

STRANGE QUARREL ENDS IN COURT

Two Women Lose Pocketbooks and One Accuses the Other.

Sioux City, Iowa, Aug. 1.—Miss Sylvia Francisco of Hubbard, Neb., and Mrs. Minnie Christianson had pocketbooks just alike. Strangely enough, they each had three silver dollars in them, and stranger still, both of the women lost their pocketbooks on the same day. A clerk in a local store found one of the receptacles for small change and dress goods samples, containing the three cartwheels, and in addition a $50 bill. He returned it to its supposed owner, Miss Francisco.

Mrs. Minnie Christianson now declares the pocketbook belonged to her, and has caused the arrest of Miss Francisco, charging her with keeping money that does not belong to her. The latter denies that the $50 was in the pocketbook. Both women are prominent, and the case is attracting close attention from the friends of both, as well as from the public.

MILWAUKEE CELEBRATES

Will be One of Best Convention Halls in World.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 1.—The laying of the cornerstone of Milwaukee's auditorium today was made the occasion of one of the greatest civic celebrations in the history of the city. The ceremonies were preceded by a magnificent parade of four divisions, made up of military and civic bodies, and accompanied by bands of music, under the supervision of Gen. Louis Auer.

The Rt. Rev. Archbishop S. G. Messmer pronounced the invocation attending the ceremony, and addresses were made by Mayor David S. Rose for the city, and by John H. Moss, president of the Merchants' & Manufacturers' association for the Auditorium board. Alvin P. Kletzsch, president of the Auditorium association, assisted by Mayor Rose officiated at the laying of the cornerstone.

According to the plans, the Auditorium will be one of the best convention halls in the world. All the requirements necessary for a large and commodious convention hall, such as large seating capacity, perfect appointments, accessibility, adaptability, absolute safety, ample stage facilities, with every convenience, complete and lavish mens, accessibility, adaptability, absotoilets, telegraph, telephone and storage service, ample provisions for exhibition space, banquet and assembly halls,

HEADQUARTERS ARE OPENED

Hitchcock Establishes Republican Eastern Offices in New York.

New York, Aug. 1.—Eastern headquarters of the Republican national committee, in the Metropolitan Life building tower, were formally opened today by Frank H. Hitchcock, the manager for Taft and Sherman. Mr. Hitchcock continued to hold his political conferences at the Manhattan hotel, however, as the office rooms will not be equipped fully before next week. Gen. Frank S. Streeter, former member of the national committee from New Hampshire; E. C. Buncan, the member from North Carolina, and Sidney Bieber, the member from the District of Columbia, conferred with the national chairman. Mr. Buncan, who is the Southern member of the executive committee, discussed with Mr. Hitchcock plans for waging vigorous campaigns in several states in the South. At some early day, Mr. Hitchcock will call a conference of Southern Republican leaders. The next gathering of this character is expected to embrace the New England states also.

OUTLOOK IS EXCELLENT

The Herald Correspondents Wire Reports From All Sections.

Recent Rains Have Offset Effects of Scorching Weather.

The Herald presents to its readers today a summary of the crop conditions of the Northwest, compiled expressly for it by its own correspondents. Each one was telegraphed yesterday and their replies by wire show the situation up to the last minute. These reports are unbiased and represent the candid opinions of the correspondents based on the conditions as reported by the crop growers of their respective territories. There is no attempt at coloring. Conditions are given as they are and the reader is enabled to form an opinion of the present conditions just as they exist.

The conditions in Northwestern Minnesota are most excellent and the prospects are for a better yield than for years. A bumper crop is predicted for Clay county and in many of the others the outlook is better than for a long time. Recent rains have made a remarkable change for the better, and unless some untoward condition arises the outcome will be highly satisfactory to the farmers.

The present conditions in North Dakota are excellent, and in most of the localities the crop promises to be above the average of the past four years. As in the Gopher state recent rains have wonderfully improved conditions and the damage by the hot winds has been largely offset.

In Stark county the correspondents report an increase of 20 per cent over the average, and in the Red river

ALDRICH DECIDES

That Country Does Not Need Entire New Currency Law.

Leading Bankers Are Disappointed Over the Outlook.

New York, Aug. 1.—The Times this morning says: For several days, members of the national monetary commission, appointed at the last session of congress to devise plans for currency legislation, and composed of nine senators and nine congressmen, have been in this city, making preparations for their trip to Europe to study foreign banking conditions and to confer with bankers there. As a result, it has beome known in Wall street that Senator Aldrich, who is at the head of the commission, has come to hold the opinion that the upshot of the commission's studies will be not to promulgate a new currency measure entirely, but simply to make additions and improvements to the present so-called Aldrich-Vreeland law.

In banking circles the news of this opinion of Senator Aldrich has been received with great interest, for it is recognized that, as head of the commission and sponsor for the currency bill adopted in the closing hours of congress, his words will have great weight. There is, of course, disappointment of an extreme kind among many leading bankers over the outlook, as limited by this situation, but hope is still entertained that, as a result of Senator Aldrich's investigation of European banking methods and its currency system, he may experience a change of heart.

Senator Aldrich, with Senators Hale, Knox and Daniels, and Representatives Vreeland, Overstreet, Burton and Padgett, will sail from this city on Tuesday next on the Kron Prinzessin Cecelia, for the purpose of making an exhaustive examination of the currency and banking systems of Great Britain, France and Germany. The Scotch, Canadian, Swedish and Swiss methods will also be studied, and every facility has already been placed at the disposal of this committee.

SAYS HUSBAND ASSAULTED HER

William Blanchard was arrested this morning, charged with assault in the third degree, on a complaint sworn to by his wife, Mrs. Lena Blanchard. The couple, who live on Fourth street, near Lake avenue, have not been getting along together very well lately, and the climax came last night when Blanchard struck the woman, according to her story to the police.

By the woman's version, William has been out of town the last few days. He arrived in Duluth last evening, and found nobody at home. There is a medicine show holding forth on Upper Lake avenue, and Blanchard suspected that his wife might be there. He prevailed upon the "doctor" to announce from the platform that Mrs. William Blanchard was wanted at home immediately, and then waited for her by the side of the avenue, where she would be most likely to pass.

She says he stopped her and called her harsh names, finally striking her and taking away her watch and making off with it. The man says her relatives are responsible for the family difficulties.

SUGGESTS A FLAG FOR CITY

A Local Man Picks Up a New Idea in Cleveland.

A local man has just returned from Cleveland with the suggestion that Duluth should have a city flag. The idea grew from the fact that the Ohio city has a flag, which is of an attractive design, and which is used to good advantage on many occasions. Several other leading cities have flags.

The idea of the man in question is to have the city call for designs for an appropriate emblem of the sort, and to offer a liberal prize to the man or woman whose design is accepted. He believes that in this manner a suitable flag could be secured. Several of the European cities have flags of their own.

Will Wed in Calumet.

F. E. Fleischman, one of the department managers in I. Freimuth's store, left today for Calumet, Mich., where he will be married, next Wednesday, Aug. 5, to Miss Agnes Fleming Currie. From Calumet the couple will go down the lakes on the steamship Tionesta, as far as Buffalo. From there they will go to New York, where Mr. Fleischman will attend to the buying of stock for the daylight basement of Freimuth's. Mr. and Mrs. Fleischman will be at home, Oct. 1, at 4705 London road.

Also Needs About $35,000 Worth of Building Improvements.

At the regular monthly meeting of the board of fire commissioners yesterday, it was decided to ask the conference committee for $120,617.96 for running expenses for the department during the year 1909. The allowance this year was $116,500. The increase asked for amounts to about $14,000.

Of the amount asked for, $100,337.96 will be paid out in salaries. A new engine needed will cost $5,500.

In addition to the amount needed for operating expenses, the board will ask the city for sufficient funds to build an engine house at West Duluth, a new fire hall at Lakeside and an addition to No. 3 fire hall, besides a barn and general repairs to No. 2 hall in the West end. The estimated cost of the West Duluth improvement is not given.

It is estimated that the needed improvements at No. 2 hall will cost $7,000; the new hall at Lakeside will cost $10,000, and the addition to No. 3, corner of Third street and First avenue east, $10,000. This money would come out of the permanent improvement fund, and would have nothing to do with the amount set aside for operating expenses of the department. The improvements named are said to be very badly needed, and it is understood they will be provided for if by any means possible.

RAILROADS

RATE PROTEST.

National Wholesale Drygoods Association Will Fight Increase.

Resolutions, adopted by the National Wholesale Dry Goods association, at a meeting of the executive committee, held recently in New York city, protest against the proposed increase of rates by the railroads. The F. A. Patrick company of Duluth is a member of the association. The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, A general advance in freight rates is being advocated by the managers of many railroads, as a panacea for business depression, and to enable them to maintain the present wage schedule and pay satisfactory returns on their stock and other liabilities, we, the executive committee of the National Wholesale Dry Goods association, enter our most emphatic protest to any such procedure, and urge the interstate commerce commission and all others having authority to use every means in their power to prevent such increase, believing it illogical, unjustifiable and in no sense warranted. The following are some of the reasons for our protest:

"First—Since the absorption, amalgamation and development of the community of interest idea among the railroads, their chief ownership and control has passed into a few hands, and competition, except of the most friendly sort, has been eliminated; this, together with legislation against the rebate system, has practically amounted to a substantial advance in rates on the bulk of their business, varying according to commodity.

"Second—By means of reclassification a very general advance has been made in rates during the last few years, and as competition is eliminated this increases. Occasionally an item is reduced in classification, but this is the exception, and, as a rule, an item of small tonnage. Investigation and comparison will show to what a large extent railroad earnings have been increased by this method. In our line of business, notwithstanding the improvements in transportation and increase in volume of business, rates are in vogue today that were established fifty years ago. For instance, the oldest tariff rate on dry goods from New York to Chicago, established in the '60s, is 75 cents per hundred pounds; today the rate is the same. Furthermore, we believe that dry goods and kindred lines have been for years paying an excessive and undue share of freights, and are beyond question the most remunerative traffic carried by railroads, and we feel that an advance in these lines would be utterly unjust from every point of view.

"Third—All mercantile and manufacturing establishments have suffered fully as great a reduction in their net earnings a have the railroad companies. There is no reason that the railroads should be allowed to charge their deficiencies upon the shipping communities at a time like the present. It is impossible for the wholesale or retail merchant in dry goods and kindred lines to add the increase in freight rates to the price of his merchandise. On the contrary, such an increase would be a direct addition to his own total expense account, and no part of it can be transferred or passed onto the consumer. We do not believe such an advance as is at present proposed can be expected to improve business conditions, and believe it is as economically unsound as would be the proposition for a merchant to advance the price of his goods because trade is dull.

"Fourth—On a fair representation of the actual investment, we feel sure rates now in vogue are ample to realize fair returns under normal conditions, and demand that no advance be made, to pay returns on securities issued by modern methods, as typified in the case of the Chicago & Alton railway."

New Service.

Beginning today the Northwestern line will place observation cafe cars to trains Nos. 95 and 96, between this city and Eau Claire. The cafe car is the result of the request of patrons of the road that they be afforded the privilege of avoiding the wait for meals at Eau Claire and this city.

Rates Announced.

The passenger department of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad announced today that an all-rail rate of $24.25 would be placed between Duluth and Toledo, good for return until Oct. 7. The rate will go into effect Aug. 26-28. The rate via St. Ignace and the D. & C. boats will be $16.25, with the same stop-over privileges.

Bacon of Hibbing, Josephine Le Blanc of Chisholm, and Verner Johnson of Biwabik were sent to the asylum. The day before three more persons were committed. This breaks the record for the local court for business in this line. Two a week is usually a fair average.

All of them had hard luck stories to tell, and almost without exception they said they had jobs in sight, which they would take immediately if released. All were either dismissed or allowed to go under suspended sentence, with the understanding that they would be given a stiff jail sentence if arrested a second time.

Merrill Will Filed.

The will of William F. Merrill, who died in New York in 1905, was filed in the probate court here yesterday through the Franklin Trust Co., executors of the estate. WORK AND WEIGHT.

Results of Worry and Study—Experiments With Prisoners.

There is something almost pathetic in certain popular fallacies concerning bodily weight. A man gets on a weighing machine and if he turns the beam at a pound or two less than when he was previously scaled he is immediately filled with the most gloomy apprehensions respecting his health.

Or, should he have a horror of stoutness, and should he appear to have gained in weight to the same extent, he is correspondingly depressed at the idea that he may become a modern Lambert.

As a fact, however, every person's weight, says the London Daily Mail, varies not merely from day to day but from hour to hour and indeed from minute to minute, and dinner or any other meal increases it.

Except when we are eating or drinking we are always losing weight more or less rapidly, provided we are in health.

If a man is sure he is below his standard he may perhaps be justifiably alarmed, because loss of weight beyond that which takes place in normal circumstances is a sure indication of disease.

Any ailment, even what is called "a common cold," tells speedily and markedly on bodily weight.

The variations which take place under normal conditions are regular, depending as they do in the one direction on the intake of food and drink, and in the other on exertion and on natural loss through perspiration, etc.

As the result of experiments, made with scientific precision it is now possible to say how far such variations go in the case of the average healthy man engaged in ordinary work.

At 9 a. m., before breakfast, he weighs, say, 155 pounds 3 ounces; an hour later after breakfast, he has gained 1 pound 12 ounces, but by noon he loses 14 ounces of this, only immediately to make is up and to add 2 ounces by lunch, which brings his weight to 157 pounds 6 ounces.

Then, again, the fall begins and slowly continues till dinner time, though the chief meal of the day puts on two pounds two ounces, fetching him up to his maximum weight.

There is a big drop during the night. It amounts on the average to three pounds six ounces, but the loss varies from two to four pounds, according to idiosyncrasy and the season of the year. In making deductions from the results of the experiments touching variations in weight, allowance must, of course, be made for special exertion, whether bodily or mental.

That mental strain quickly tells on the frame has been established in connection with examinations. Comparative tests show that students in the high classes, where the effort is necessarily greatest, lose several pounds more than those in the lower classes.

The loss of weight due to physical exertion is sometimes a little surprising even to those who have devoted attention to the matter. Eustace Miles once told an audience that he liked to lose six pounds in playing a tennis match—a statement which was received with amazement. But as a fact he once lost as much as eight pounds, and several times seven pounds, though the exertion has more frequently taken from him from four to six pounds.

Mr. Burgess could give some still more striking figures concerning the amount of tissue he has lost in attempting to swim the Channel. Notwithstanding the large amount of food he took while in the water he lost nearly one pound an hour.

One of his plucky efforts, which lasted a little more than fourteen hours, pulled thirteen pounds off him, while another, extending over twelve hours, reduced his weight by twelve pounds.

Put badly this fact is a little staggering, but the loss is relatively small considering that even in his twelve-hour swim he took more than 20,000 strokes, each of which brought into play the muscles of arms, legs, back, chest and neck.

On the path weight has been lost with much greater rapidity. Some years back a famous runner was carefully trained for an attack on Deerfoot's one hour record, and as a better result he had never been in better condition than when he started to lower that record.

He succeeded, but splendidly fit as he was he lost six or seven pounds in his hour's run. Nor is this an absolutely isolated case in points, since another runner once lost two pounds in little more than half an hour, despite the care with which he had been trained.

Even a degree of exertion within the capacity of well nigh anybody is an important factor in reducing weight. It is easy to lose about two pounds by taking a turn at a home exerciser, while a brisk walk may involve a loss of three or four pounds.

Jockeys can rapidly waste by walking in heavy sweaters to induce profuse perspiration. Arthur Nightingall tells us that he used to walk six miles out and six miles back and so get off four pounds in the first spin. To keep it off more exercise was necessary, coupled with extreme abstemiousness.

One of his stable companions had his diet cut down so low that he fell on his knees before his trainer and begged for a good dinner. Instead he received a good hiding, which deprived him of his appetite for several days, and so brought about all the wasting which was required.

A singular fact connected with the process and one known to all jockeys is that when weight is lost rapidly a single small glass of liquid will put on one pound or two pounds again.

Considerable variation in bodily weight may therefore take place in exceptional circumstances and yet portend nothing that need cause the slightest alarm. It is only when certain limits—limits which in any given case can be discovered by a few experiments are passed that the abnormal is indicated.

A proof of the importance of a real loss of weight is that in convict prisons such loss is accepted as conclusive evidence that a man is ill.

Till recent years there was no infallible means of discovering whether he was so or not, as malingers in their determination to "fetch the farm" (get into the infirmary) were able to defeat all the known tests.

Watching them, giving them nauseous mixtures, applying the battery—these and all the other medical arts failed in some cases, the doctors discovering too late that they had been "done." But now a convict who complains is put on the scales, and the result decides whether he returns to work or goes into the infirmary.

The weight of every man is known, since it is taken when he is admitted to the prison, and again subsequently, so that a comparison is soon made. If there is no falling off in his bulk it is useless for him to protest that he is ill. "Back to work" is the verdict—a verdict from which there is no appeal.

THE NASTY GOURMAND.

"The gourmet is a connissour of foods and wines. The gourmand is a low glutton. It was, for instance, a gourmaud—never a gourmet—who reached his home at 3 o'clock one morning to find himself locked out. He rang and rang, and at last his wife protruded her head from an upstairs window.

"'You can just go away,' she said. I'm tired of this. You shan't get in tonight.'

"'But, my dear,' hiccoughed the husband, 'I have brought home a broiled lobster and two bottles of champange.'

"'Oh,' said the lady, in a mollified tone. And she came down and opened the door.

"'I'll make a light, dear,' she said, leading the way through the dark hall toward the dining-room.

"'And then she turned on the electric current, and, looking at her husband, frowned.

"'But where,' she demanded, 'is the lobster and champange?'

HUNTING EAGLES' NESTS.

Greeley correspondence Denver Republican: James Carpenter of Alantic City, Wyo., a fearless young ranchmen, will undertake the hazardous task of capturing a nest of young eagles from a cliff several hundred feet high for the State Normal school. This cliff has long been the hom of many bald eagles, and when Carpenter's brother, a student in the Statel normal, told him what was wanted the Wyoming man decided to get the nest.

Last week he was let down by a rope 100 feet over the cliff and with stick in hand beat off the eagles to find the eggs stih in the nest. Next week he will again go over the cliff and attempt to bring up the nest of young eagles.

Prof. Adams, curator of the school, has discovered an immense nest on the top of a sixty foot cottonwood on Crow Creek. It is a closed nest and has been used for probably fifty years, Prof. Adams says. It is four feet wide, four feet deep and will weigh several hundred pounds. With men and ropes it is proposed to remove the nest intact and place it in the school here.

THE PATERSON ANARCHIST.

H. K. Adair, the noted Western detective, was praising in Detroit the president's onslaught on the anarchists of Paterson.

"I once had an experience with those chaps," he said, smiling. "In plain clothes I attended one of their meetings.

"The speaker said incendiary and terrible things. Finally he attacked the police.

"'Show me a policeman,' he shouted, 'and I'll show you a coward!'

"Somehow I couldn't stand that. I strode up on to the platform—it was time to stop the meeting, anyway—and I shook my finger under the man's nose and said:

"'I am a policeman.'

"'Well, I,' he whispered nervously, 'am a coward. Now, please, please, go back to your seat again.'"

THE GIFT OF HEALTH

Health Is the Most Priceless of All Human Possessions. Health Is Absolutely Necescary to Happiness. Health—Herfect Health—Is Now Possible to All.

A great many people believe that a chronic disease is a disease that cannot be cured. They are mistaken. A chronic disease is a disease that has not been cured, but has suffered to go on if not unchecked, at least so inefficiently treated that the treatment has had no appreciable effect on the disease.

There is a long and terrible list of diseases that have earned the reputation of being incurable, which in reality await only thorough and capable treatment—take for instance Cancer, Consumption, Syphilis or Paralysis—these diseases are being cured daily at the Progressive Medical Institute at No. 1 West Superior street, not by miracles, but by straight knowledge, scientifically applied.

Again take Rheumatism, it is manifestly impossible to cure this disease with a few doses of some patent medicine, the same in every different case and yet because sufferers from this disease have repeatedly failed to get a cure from the use of some such "quack" remedy, they decide that their complaint is "chronic"—which to them means the same thing as incurable. They do not stop to think that no two human systems are exactly alike and that the medicine that might cure one patient will have either a bad effect or none at all on the next case. Every separate case requires a separate treatment, and till it receives it there will be no possibility of a permanent cure. More and more people who have tired of the constant non-result of self-drugging are consulting the Progressive Medical Specialists, and in a few days finding themselves well on the way to a cure as permanent as it is thorough, without the use of the knife in any case. What's the use of wasting your time and money on patent medicines that may cure you when the Progressive Specialists WILL cure you, and guarantee the cure?

Set your foot on the first step to health by coming TODAY to No. 1 West Superior street. This means YOU!

REPORTS EXAGGERATED.

Rhodes Scholarship Man Says Britons Are True Sports.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry S. Mitchell, who has held a Rhodes scholarship at Oxford university, England, for the last three years, believes the reports that the Americans were treated unfairly in the Olympic games were exaggerated. Mr. Mitchell arrived in Minneapolis Thursday. He is the second Rhodes scholar from Minnesota to graduate at the institution.

"What I saw of English sportsmen leads me to doubt the report that Americans were treated unfairly, and I am sure that the reports published in America were greatly exaggerated," he said. "It is possible, of course, that the officials were unfair, but if this is true the officials did not represent the real English athletes who competed in the games. Time will probably show that the first reports were more sensational than true. It seems to me that the Americans should at least reserve judgment until they get reports at first hand from the men who entered the competitions. Of course, I do not speak from personal knowledge, as I left England before the games began."

Mr. Mitchell graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1905. He was president of his class in senior year.

DRIVES AUTO INTO LAKE.

Minneapolis Family Has Close Call From Extinction.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 1.—Believing there was a bridge ahead of him on the practically abandoned road leading from Solberg's Point to Excelsior at Lake Minnetonka, Harry Snow, a lumberman residing at 216 Sixteenth street east, Minneapolis, driving an automobile containing his wife and 4-year-old son, drove directly over an eight-foot embankment Thursday night, precipitating the entire family into the lake.

The child was thrown forty feet from the bank and was nearly dead when the father, who had alighted in water about four feet deep and had trouble to free himself from the weeds, could hurry to his aid. It took several hours to resuscitate the lad. Mrs. Snow fared better, being thrown into a pile of brush in shallow water. She was badly bruised, as was Mr. Snow.

POSTMASTER THREATENED.

MARINE NEWS

ALL ORDERS ARE FILLED

Men for All Marine Jobs and Jobs for All Men.

Masters and Engineers Said to Like the "Open Shop."

Supply and demand maintain an even balance at the Head of the Lakes as far as the marine labor situation is concerned. There are few idle men on the docks or loafing around the lake carriers' shipping office at the foot of Fifth avenue west. Capt. James Currie, the shipping master, has found thus far that he is able to fill every order and still find no great surplus of idle men.

What few idle men there on the Duluth docks are idle from choice, according to the shipping master. As is the case with every labor bureau or employment office, there are a few, who hang around, stalling that they want a job, and flee when there is one in sight. There are men, who sit around in the shipping office day after day, have been offered from ten to fifty jobs each and always find some excuse for refusing to take them. The shipping office is a good hangout, they want to keep up the appearance of wanting a job and still they want to steer clear of anything like work.

The reports from lower lake ports that the unions may start trouble on account of dissatisfaction with conditions under the "open shop" are not taken seriously by local agents of vessel lines. They say the engineers and masters with whom the vessel owners must deal directly, are better satisfied now than they have ever been, and would not take kindly to a return of the old conditions. They say the masters and engineers have control of their men, whereas they did not under the union contract plan. No more work is done, they say, but it is done with better grace, as the heads may discharge or hire anyone they please without consulting the union officials.

MOTOR BOAT BLANKETS.

Rules Say Small Craft Must Carry Huge Copies of Pilot Rules.

A few more tangles have been thrown in the way of small power boat owners present and prospective on the bay and river, who are seeking vainly to find the law which governs the small pleasure traffic. A brand new translation of the steamboat inspection laws as they apply to the small craft has been placed in the hands of the local marine clerk and a few changes from the previous understanding of the rules are embodied in it.

The law which requires all power boats to carry red and white and green lights, whistle and bell is the same with the exception that the recent ruling which made a siren in place of a whistle unlawful, is rescinded. A tooter with a wailing note now passes inspection.

Just to show the local amateur sailors that this change means no let up in the stringency of the law's demand, however, the rule which requires each boat to carry two copies of the official pilot rules and which it had been tacitly understood was not to be enforced is emphasized this time in a special paragraph as follows:

"Such boats (all motor boats without regard to size or use) are also required to have on board two printed copies of the rules which must be observed by them, which rules will be furnished by local steamboat inspectors on request."

As the "rules" furnished by the local inspectors are huge placards, 30x36 inches, designed for posting on the walls of pilot house and engine room on larger vessels, the two copies required are almost sufficient to furnish a blanket for the smaller motor crafts and local owners are wondering.

Off Again, On Again.

The small Wolvin, which went aground at Portage Entry near Houghton Thursday and was pulled off yesterday, grounded immediately again. The tug Valerie, which pulled the boat off, attempted to pass her and the wash from the tug sent the big boat on again. She was pulled off for the second time and taken to her dock, where she will discharge her coal cargo. She will then come to Duluth and go into drydock.

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE

When Mr. R. Johnson, 2110 West Fourth street, said he was undergoing an operation for kidney thouble, many of his friends advised him to see Wittman first, and now he is glad he did, as these scientists have placed him beyond the ban of a critical operation, the same as many others who suffered from appendicitis and gall stones. It is a well known fact, by the new methods of bloodless surgery employed by these able experts, that a great many cases can be cured without the horrible knife. At least one person is saved each day, and many cures for rheumatism and stomach troubles are performed, the same way, in many cases, without drugs or medicine.

The offices, at Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street, from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4, is an interesting place, as people from miles around call upon these scientists. At Kugler's Drug store, another crowd is always congregated to buy the Wittman remedies, which are on sale, and explained by all accommodating salesmen. The Volopus on display in the window has proven to be a great curiosity.

PROHIBITION ACTIVITY FEATURE OF THE WEEK

Supporters of County Option Enter the Political Field.

Clarence Miller Apparently Leads in Congressional Race.

One of the developments of the week politically was the active entrance of the prohibition workers into the campaign.

They innaugurated their campaign with a meeting at the Norwegian church, Thursday night, and last night another meeting was held at the Swedish Methodist church. Active workers in the cause of prohibition spoke at the two meetings, prominent among the speakers being Watson Moore and Bert Wheeler. The object of the campaign begun Thursday evening is to pledge the legislative candidates to county option, which will be fought for strenuously by the advocates of prohibition at the coming session of the legislature.

The entrance of the prohibition workers will, in any event, tend to complicate the legislative ticket. Just what result the entrance of the prohibition movement may have on the selection of candidates at the primaries, or just what strength the movement will show, remains to be seen. But the workers have promised to sound each county candidate for the legislature on his opinion regarding county opinion, and, furthermore, threaten to get out candidates and a ticket of their own, should they find that the present and future candidates are opposed to county option.

In this way, the prohibition movement is liable to complicate the county legislative ticket. It is liable to bring out more candidates and make the race the merrier. As yet prohibition movement has not developed sufficient strength to become a very serious factor in politics. But that it is growing, there can be no doubt.

Both Congressman J. Adam Bede and Clarence B. Miller, candidate for congress from this district, may be said to have entered upon the second leg of their race for the primary nomination. The preliminary steps of organizing have been taken and both of the candidates have during the last week been out meeting the voters of the district. Interest in the race is becoming keener every day.

In the opinion of impartial judges, Mr. Miller has a lead over Congressman Bede at the present time. If the primaries were to be held tomorrow it is probable that Mr. Miller would be returned a winner. That is the way the situation looks, from a St. Louis county standpoint, at least. What the situation will be after Congressman Bede has been out among the voters for a month, is a matter that politicians can only speculate upon.

Some say that Miller will win. Others say that Bede will be returned to congress. The opinion of the majority of the politicians in Duluth is that Mr. Miller will defeat his opponent.

Congressman Bede spoke at Aitkin Tuesday night, while during the past week Mr. Miller has met some of the voters of the district.

Both of the candidates will open headquarters the coming week. Mr. Miller will probably open headquarters in the Torrey building, adjoining his office. Congressman Bede will open headquarters in the St. Louis hotel or in the Manhattan building.

E. J. Ehlers, a student of the University of Minnesota, whose home it at Cambridge, is assisting Mr. Miller in the work of the campaign. He has already made many friends among the voters of the district with whom he has come into contact.

It is certain that the fight for county offices will be a lively one this year. In county and municipal politics in late years, it is getting to more the man than the party that he represents. This sentiment that has had the effect of bringing about, unlooked for results in various parts of the country, has not missed St. Louis county. It's influence cannot but result in bringing out a bigger list of candidates and giving the voters a larger field to chose from. Members of the county democratic committee say that this sentiment will assist them both in getting out a full county ticket and in electing some of their candidates to office.

John H. Norton, candidate for re-election to the office of county attorney, is standing on his record. As the incumbent of one of the most important county offices, Mr. Norton has shown an ability that has commended him to the voters of the county. Friends of Mr. Norton say that his first term record is his strongest political asset in asking the voters of the county for a second term.

M. C. Palmer, register of deeds, a candidate for re-election, has served the interests of his office at all times with ability and faithfulness to the interests of the voters. The interests of the people have been well guarded under the administration of Mr. Palmer, who has brought the office of register of deeds up to a high plane of efficiency.

W. J. Bates, candidate for re-election to the office of sheriff, has an able list of candidates to defeat. Up to the present time the office of sheriff has brought out the most candidates of any of the county offices. All of the candidates have been out among the voters the past week, and the race for the office is going to be a pretty one.

J. P. Johnson, who holds a four-year office as clerk of the district court, but who nevertheless has run every two years, because he was elected two years before the regular expiration of the term of office, is to have opposition for re-election. J. M. Martin of Virginia, filed the past week as a candidate for the office. Mr. Johnson says that the term of the expiration of his office does not come this year, but that is a matter that it is expected will be settled definitely this year.

P. H. Nelson, a prominent business man of Hibbing, is being talked of as Democratic candidate for congress from this district. Mr. Nelson is a clean, able man, whose record as a successful business man stamps him as a candidate who, if elected, would fulfill the duties of the office with ability. He has long been a party supporter, is well and favorably known on the ranges, and is a man in every way fitted for the office.

The race for the head of the state ticket has made little progress. The most persistent cry that is heard, is the cry of the Democrats for a third term for Johnson. It seems a question now whether the demand will prove so overwhelming that the governor cannot very well refuse to become a candidate for a third term. No new candidate has been mentioned during the week. It is a settled fact that John Lind will not be a candidate, while the talk of the other candidates has subsided.

Although nothing of a startling nature has developed the past week, it has been marked by a lot of earnest work by candidates for county offices, and with the approach of the county Democratic convention the interest in the county situation is taking on added interest.

CHILD BURNED SAVING DOLL

In her efforts to save an old doll, once a favorite in her affections, from a charred fate in a bonfire which was smoldering in front of her home, at Twenty-fourth avenue west and Superior street, little Lizzie Greenwood's clothing became ignited and she just missed being burned to death.

When her skirts caught fire, the child ran screaming down the street. John Kureski, a letter carrier, ran to her assistance. Jerking his coat from his back, he wrapped the garment around the terrified tot and succeeded, after a time, in smothering the flames.

The Greenwood girl was painfully burned around the legs and back, but she will recover. Kureski's hands were somewhat burned while he was smothering the fire.

KEEP MUM ABOUT MEETING.

Union Temperance Society Members Refuse to Divulge Report.

The "political investigation" committee of the Duluth Union Temperance society made its report at the meeting of the organization held last evening in the First Swedish M. E. church, Twentieth avenue west and Third street, but the members refuse to divulge what the report contained.

It was a closed meeting, to which none but the members of the society were bidden.

The committee was appointed two or three weeks ago, for the purpose of interviewing and investigating candidates for different public offices, particularly those seeking seats in the legislature, to ascertain how they stand on the "county option" proposition.

The temperance society is working for county option and is going to lend a helping hand to the candidates who favor it.

SUMMER ILLS

The exhausting heat of the summer weather causes untold suffering and misery to thousands of men, women and children. Deaths occur on all sides from diarrhoea, dysentery, chills, cholera morbus, typhoid and other fevers, due in a great number of cases to impure water and the consumption of unripe fruits by those whose systems and stomachs are not in a healthy condition.

The many ills that come during the hot, sultry weather can be avoided by keeping the body strong and healthy with Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great body-builder.

If all were more careful to keep the system in a vigorous, healthy condition the germs of these diseases could not obtain a foothold. Leading doctors agree that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has no equal as a destroyer of poisonous germs in the body. It is indorsed by Clergymen of every faith, nurses and doctors of all schools, as a positive cure for dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous prostration, all diseases of the throat and lungs, every form of a stomach trouble; malaria, chills, fever and all rundown weakened, diseased conditions of the body, brain and muscle. It is a heart tonic, blood purifier and promotor of health and long life; makes the old hale and hearty; the young vigorous and strong.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

If weak and run down, take a teaspoonful four times a day in half a glass of milk or water.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold throughout the world by druggists, grocers and dealers, or shipped direct for $1.00 per bottle.

If in need of advice, write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, New York, stating your case fully. M. C. PALMER,

Register of Deeds, St. Louis County,

Republican Candidate for Renomination

To the Voters of St. Louis County:

Is there any necessity or reason for a change in the administration of this office? Under its present supervision the people of St. Louis county have spoken in the highest terms of the efficiency of its management and say there is not a better conducted register's office in the state.

The business of the office is at all times in the hands of thoroughly competent persons. The people are satisfied that their interests here, are well guarded and their instruments recorded without errors, whereby the title to their property is made secure.

I respectfuly ask the friends and patrons of this office, by their votes, at the primary election, to sustain its present management and also register their protest against the taking from the iron ranges the only county office they have been able to secure in many years. Very respectfully.

M. C. PALMER,
Register of Deeds.

WILL HELP MOVEMENT

Business Men Approve Plans for Improvement of Waterways.

City Will Contribute $1,000 Toward the Publicity Fund.

Duluth is going to do its part in contributing to the fund that is being raised in various parts of the country for the support of the agitation to secure a systematic annual appropriation from congress for the improvement of harbors and inland waterways.

At a meeting at the Commercial club last night a resolution appointing a committee to take charge of subscriptions to be collected from among the business interests of the city, was referred to the rivers and harbors committee of the public affairs committee of the club, which will immediately take the matter of raising funds under consideration.

This city has been asked to contribute $1,000 to the publicity fund of the rivers and harbors congress. A. B. Wolvin has already promised to give $300, so that there remains $700 to collect from among the business men. As Duluth would be most vitally interested in any appropriations that were secured, it is not believed that any difficulty will be encountered in raising the fund.

The meeting last night was most enthusiastic and clearly showed that the business men of this city are fully alive to the need for the development of inland waterways and that they stand ready to pledge the support of this locality toward the great national movement.

Mr. Fox Speaks.

John A. Fox, director of the national rivers and harbors congress, was the first speaker on the somewhat informal program. Mr. Fox began his remarks by stating that in asking for appropriations to carry on the work of improving the rivers and harbors of the country, facts would prove that the request was based on sound foundations.

Engineers have estimated the cost of canalizing the streams of the United States at $396,000,000. Since 1853 more than one and a half times that amount has been expended in a desultory way, without direction or systematic plan. As a result of this rather haphazard method of expending government appropriations, Mr. Fox stated that only a fraction of the good that could have been accomplished was accomplished.

"Seventy million dollars have been expended to make the Great Lakes navigable," said Mr. Fox. As a result of this expenditure the commerce of the lakes last year amounted to 99,166,409 tons, a tonnage equal to the combined commerce of the world's greatest ports of London, Hongkong and Antwerp. Nearly two-thirds of this great volume of tonnage came from Lake Superior and passed through St. Mary's canal.

"The improvement of the Great Lakes, the channels and harbors, which have been increased from an average depth of twelve to an average depth of twenty-one feet, has resulted in the saving of millions of dollars—$89,000,000 last year—to the shipper. Not alone to the shipper, but the American people, for it is they who pay the increased cost of transportation. The lake commerce has reduced the rates from 7.5 mills per ton per mile, which is the rate on lines not paraleling the Great Lakes, to 5.7 mills on the lines paralelling the Great Lakes.

"The great problem before the country today is the movement of commerce. Since 1885, taking the twenty years to 1905, the movement of raw products has increased 262 per cent, while the mileage and motive power of the railroads has increased but 43 per cent. It is estimated that $5,000,000,000 will be needed in the next decade to equip the roads, to add to the mileage, etc., so that they may be able to handle the growing commerce of the country.

"The only solution of the problem is the improvement of the inland waterways. Commerce will be facilitated, rates cheapened by the fact of competition and the inland commerce of the country increased. If a panic in our country is to be avoided, the inland waterways of the country must be developed and the rivers and harbors must be improved.

"In the past there has been no fixed plan for the rivers and harbor improvement. This movement must be nationalized. Sectionalism and selfish motives must be forgotten in looking to the good of the whole cuntry. It is a national question, and it must be looked at in a broad and comprehensive manner."

Meeting in Washington.

Mr. Fox stated that 5,000 business men would meet in Washington this winter and express their views to congress upon the subject of inland water way improvements. He asked that Duluth be ably represented at this meeting, and that the influence of this locality be lent to the influence of many other localities to make national the movement that is growing more unified and stronger each year.

Maj. Graham D. Fitch, United States army engineer at the port of Duluth, stated that to his knowledge many appropriations made by the government in the past had proved ineffective, for the simple reason that they were often inadequate, and that after the work was half completed it would be years before another appropriation sufficient to complete the work was made. He stated that had investments been made in the past, through the desire of representatives to gain appropriations for their districts, regardless of the need of these approrpriations. The plan of a national movement would do away with this sectionalism, the major stated, and would result in needed projects receiving attention from competent officials.

Capt. Alexander McDougall told of the efforts in the past to secure improvements in the harbors, channels and lighthouses of the lakes. He stated that those working for improvements in the rivers and channels were pioneers in a movement that would work untold good for the commerce of future generations, and as the work for improvements in the past had borne its fruits in increased commerce for the present day, so would the efforts of today result in increased commerce of teh future.

James Bardon of Superior stated that Superior was behind in the movement of the national rivers and harbors congress.

Solon L. Perrin, also of Superior, commended the work of the national rivers and harbors congress, stating that it was deserving of the support of every section of the country.

Congressman Speaks.

Congressman J. Adam Bede stated that once, some years ago, when the rivers and harbors bill came up for action, the papers of the country didn't understand the bill and called it a "pork barrel." "Now, you know," said the congressmen, "that any congress? man would not commit suicide, so we didn't go against the sentiment of the country and pass that bill.

"Congress was ahead of the times. But we did create the national rivers and harbors commission. It was created for the purpose of making the people of the nation understand the need for inland waterways, the purpose of appropriations and to show that they were not pork barrels, nor wasteful. This sentiment has been created, in a great measure, and now we are going ahead to secure adequate appropriations.

Congress has appropriated $87,000,000 for improvement of the rivers and harbors. What we want is an annual appropriation of $50,000,000, so that the work of improvement may go right along, with the knowledge that the appropriations will be regular and continued. In this way the affairs of improving the rivers and harbors of the country may be conducted like the affairs of a well-ordered private business.

"The movement must be nationalized, so that adequate appropriations may be made for the deserving works. Under the direction of this movement that is being formed, you will secure needed improvements here, and the people out on the prairies of Nebraska will be made to understand that what helped the commerce of Duluth also helped the prosperity of the state of Nebraska. We must do our part to help this great movement."

Congressman James A. Tawney of the Fifth district, chairman of the congressional committee of appropriations, was unable to be present. A telegram from Mr. Tawney expressed his regret at being absent.

T. W. Hugo acted as chairman of the meeting, and, with the committee of the public affairs committee, will take up the work of securing subscriptions from the business men of the city.

valley the yield will be the best in years. At Carrington the prospects are fine.

Reports from South Dakota show that one of the biggest crops in its history is certain. Much new land has been cultivated for the first time and the returns from that source will cut a big figure in the totals this year. Take it all around the farmers of this state are feeling in a most optimistic mood.

MINNESOTA.

Better Than the Average.

Ada, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crop conditions are better than for several years. The pay yield promises to be more than the average.

Bumper Crop in Clay County.

Moorhead, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Clay county crop will be a bumper. The cutting of barley and oats has begun. The stand of grain is good, with heads well filled. Rains and hot weather have caused some rust on leaves, but no damage so far.

Prospects First Class.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The cool weather following the rain of Tuesday night and Wednesday has materially improved the crop situation. The early wheat is filling well and the late grain is coming on rapidly. Barley harvesting is general and the shocks stand thick. Wheat cutting will begin the first of next week and will be general the latter part of the week. Wheat has improved steadily for the past week, and the prospects now are strictly first-class.

Best for Four Years.

Glyndon, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harvesting begins with barley reports encouraging as to yield and quality, oats slightly less favorable; wheat, which will not be ready for a week or more, needs dry, cool weather. There is considerable lodged grain. The crop of hay is light. The general outlook is the best for four years past.

Wheat Makes Remarkable Showing.

Crookston, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The ushering in of August, during which month the crop in the Red River valley will be practically all harvested, is accompanied by continued excellent prospects. The wheat reports from all directions are most favorable, only a small percentage of the wheat which was sown late being poor. A local wheat expert returned last evening from an extended trip and got out into the fields and examined the heads closely, and stated that in many fields the heads averaged from 20 to 34 good, plump kernals, which is a remarkable showing. The cool weather continues, and is most favorable to a heavy yield of wheat. The early barley will all be cut the coming week and is a good crop, though the acreage is below that of last year. The very late barley is short and some of it will be lost because it will be difficult to bind it, where the straw is so extremely short. The early oats will also be harvested the coming week. A few fields of barley have already been harvested and the land plowed.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fine in Red River Valley.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The crop conditions in the Red River valley, in this part of the state, are fine. In this immediate vicinity the yield will be better than for six years, unless destructive storms, or heavy rains occur soon. The barley harvest is over and much of it is threshed. The wheat harvest has already begun in some higher sections of the state, and will be general in the valley early next week. The crop is light in many parts of the state, especially in some counties in the James and Missouri river valleys, and also around Devils Lake, but conditions have improved since the excessive heat early in the month, as the result of subsequent rains.

Average Yield Expected.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Recent rain showers, together with good weather, will bring wheat cutting on much earlier than anticipated. Grain at present is ripening very rapidly. Barley cutting is already well under way in this section, but it will be from a week to ten days before wheat will be harvested. In nearby locations grains suffered from heat, but the decrease in yield will not be very great. An average yield is expected.

Outlook Best in Several Years.

Carrington, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is the best crop outlook here in several years. The damage by the hot winds will be less than 10 per cent.

Conditions Excellent.

Ellendale, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The crop conditions are excellent and there will be a fair yield of all grains. There is a big incerase in acreage.

Yield 20 Per Cent Better.

Dickinson, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The wheat yield in Stark county will be 20 per cent better than last year. The acreage has been increased 10 per cent.

Largest Crop in Years.

Fairmount, N. D., Auug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—All crops in this district are good and, with favorable weather from now on, we expect to harvest the largest crop in years.

Average Yield Promised.

Hillsboro, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The crop conditions in this vicinity promise average yields of wheat, barley and oats. No bumper crops.

Wheat is Filling Well.

Bathgate, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Wheat is a little below the average, but is filling well. Cutting will begin in two weeks. Barley is fair to poor; cutting has begun. Oats and hay are light, but little flax was sown.

Average Good at Lisbon.

Lisbon, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Wheat is showing a good average crop with increased acreage, no rust. Flax conditions good on the average crop and an increased acreage. Oats about 85 per cent of the average crop. Barley shows an average crop. Oats and barley are being harvested. There is plenty of rain and perfect weather.

Variable in Missouri Slope.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Generally over the Missouri slope the grain crops are spotted as to condition. In some places the hot spell did little damage, in others less than half a crop will be harvested, while in still others the crop will not be worth cutting. It is safe to say there will be half a crop of wheat, flax, oats and barley. Corn is doing well and will be a good crop. We have had plenty of rain lately and good growing weather, which leads the optimists to hope for a two-thirds crop. Crops are good where grain was well put and vice versa.

Crop About Two-Thirds.

Grafton, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The drouth is broken and the crop in the valley is good, although the high lands were badly damaged. The average crop will be about two-thirds.

Thirteen Bushels to the Acre.

Bottineau, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Seasonable rains all the spring and summer, with an average amount of precipation, has produced fair crop prospects in this county. The extremely hot season of some time ago did litle injury as the heaviest rain of the season just preceeded. A conservative estimate of the wheat crop in this county averages it at thirteen bushels to the acre.

Small Loss in James River Valley.

Jamestown, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The crops in the James river valley are coming ahead well now, aided by copious rains. Wheat is filling well, but favorable conditions from now on will not compensate for the loss of about 30 per cent caused by hot winds and excessive heat. For the acreage sown, the yield is predicted about one-third less than the average.

The crop is very spotted. Early sown grain in our locality will be worse hit, while in an adjoining county the late sown appears to be the best. Some farmers report they will harvest fine yields in all cereals. That the best farming methods shows the best condition today seems to be the rule.

Stutsman county will harvest an average of eight bushels; barley is only fair and uneven; oats good.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen, S. D., Aug. 1.—That South Dakota will harvest the biggest crop in its history is shown by reports received here from many county seats and other points. Great care has been exercised in gathering this information, and it will be seen that all reports are unanimous on the one general proposition—that this year's yield should be greater than those of any previous year's.

Much hitherto unbroken land has been cultivated in the past two years and returns are beginning to be made from that source.

All parts of Brown county report the condition of wheat to be excellent. The last rain put on the finishing touches and the quality of the yield should be better even than that of a year ago. The barley is nearly all harvested and oats are yielding better than expected. Barring accidents, Brown county's crop should beat all records.

Ipswich reports that the crops in Edmunds county are in splendid condition. Two good rains have fallen there in the past ten days and the wheat is filling out rapidly. Harvesting will begin next week.

A report from Mound City states that the crops in Campbell county should beat all former records. A great deal of new land is under cultivation and the yield will be exceptionally good, both in quality and quantity.

McPherson county expects to harvest the largest crop in its history. The last rain is having a wonderful effect on the wheat and the quality will come up to all expectations.

Reports from Walworth county are to the effect that the 1908 crop should be larger and better than any ever known before. The last rain came just when needed.

Reports received at Webster indicate that Day county will harvest a bumper crop. Corn is making rapid progress, and wheat will beat all records.

In Marshall county farmers are making ready to harvest the wheat, which, they say, never looked better Other crops are in fine condition.

understood, sent Mr. Bryan a list of the dates of his engagements, showing when he would be able to devote some time to the national campaign, and expressed his pleasure at being able to do what he could for the success of the party.

The selection of Governor Johnson as one of the committee of fifteen to act in an advisory capacity with the national committee also shows that the best of feeling exists between the governor and Mr. Bryan.

It seems, however, that the Republicans in Minnesota are having more than their share of trouble, and that the thin coating of harmony varnish, which was applied after the passage of the Jacobson steam roller at the state convention, is already cracking and wearing off. The trouble seems to be with Jacobson, who, now that he has finally secured the gubernatorial nomination, seems to want to be the whole show and to be absolute dictator of the entire campaign. In fact, it is said that the trouble has reached such an acute stage that the other candidates on the ticket have about made up their minds to pay their contributions to the state central campaign fund and then drop all connections with that committee and look after their own interests individually or through a joint provisional committee.

While the other candidates feel that they are not in much danger of defeat this fall, they realize that it will be necessary to put up a fight all along the line in order to keep ahead of the game, as the uncertainty of the identity of their opponents makes their positions rather uncertain at this stage of the campaign. They feel that they have an interest in the campaign and the regular committee, as well as Jacobson has, and that they are entitled to some consideration in the planning of the campaign, which, it appears, does not coincide with Jacobson's views.

Under these circumstances there is an undercurrent of potential trouble which is causing considerable annoyance and which may break out in an aggravated form at a time when it will be most unwelcome and do the most harm for the whole ticket.

Of course, Jacobson cannot be blamed for being deeply interested in the plans of the committee and of wanting to have considerable to say about them. He may realize more clearly than do any of his friends that his nomination does not by any means insure his election, as there is a considerable element in the Republican party which is not at all pleased with Jacobson's nomination and exhibited such a lack of interest in the pre-convention campaign after his nomination became quite certain, that it is feared that this same lack of interest may result in many of them keeping away from the polls on election day. Then there is the uncertainty as to who his opponent will be. Still the others, while realizing that Jake has plenty to worry about, are not inclined to submit tamely to being shoved into the background as though they had no interest in the campaign.

Information about the unfavorable conditions existing in Minnesota seem also to have reached the Republican national committee, as it is reported that they have decided to set aside a considerable amount of money for use in this state and will arrange to have a number of prominent speakers from other states invade Minnesota in order to try to get the voters interestd and get them out on election day. While the details of the plans of the national committee for this state are not yet known it seems that they are alarmed at the prospect here and will spare no effort in an attempt to get the voters in line.

Governor Johnson has returned from an extended lecturing tour and is well pleased with the outlook for the Democratic ticket this fall, so far as the states in which he traveled are concerned. While he did not talk politics in his speeches, he was met at the various towns by Democratic committees, who looked after his entertainment while there and naturally politics were discussed to some extent.

"I think the Republicans will find the election will be much closer than they will like," said the governor. "If the election was to be held tomorrow, I believe Bryan would be elected, if the same conditions exist generally as do in the states which I have just visited.

"The Democrats seem to be thoroughly aroused and are united in their support of the ticket. The local conditions in many of the states are such as to greatly improve the chances for the Democratic ticket and there may be some surprises when the votes are counted. There is a strong factional fight on in Iowa and I believe we have a fighting chance there. The Democrats in Kansas are very sanguine and in Ohio and Indiana the local conditions will have an important bearing on the results in the national election. In several of the states in the Middle West the local conditions are such that the Republican party cannot put up the best kind of a fight and their factional fights will help the Democratic ticket.

"One of the most hopeful signs from the Democratic standpoint is the position of the railroad men and of union labor. The railroad men are deeply interested in the campaign and in the talk I heard on my trip, I found that they were generally for Mr. Bryan."

Governor Johnson will remain in St. Paul until Tuesday, when he will start out again, to be gone ten days, which will close his engagements for some time, and it is probable that the dates for his campaign speeches will be made at that time.

A. D. Brown of Madison, chairman of the Republican state central committee, has opened headquarters at the Merchants hotel, where he is sitting on the lid until the meeting of the executive committee, which will be held here on Aug. 4. There is not much doing just now, and Secretary James A. Martin has not moved down to the headquarters, and will not until after the meeting on Aug. 4, when arrangements will be made for opening the permanent headquarters. At present about all Mr. Brown can do is to extend the glad hand to his visitors, wonder who the Democrats will nominate and build air castles.

Frank M. Eddy seems in a fair way to receive his reward for making that nominating speech, which included the "eating pie with a knife phrase," which has made Jacobson and Minnesota famous all over the country. It is understood that he will share with James C. Matchitt of this city the honor of conducting the Republican press bureau, which has been in operation, in a way, for several months, under Mr. Matchitt's direction. Definite arrangements for this part of the campaign also probably will be made at the meeting on Aug. 4, around which all things center just now.

JUNIUS.

JOHN H. NORTON,

CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY.

I desire to announce that I am a candidate for County Attorney for a second term.

The office of County Attorney is one of the most important offices in the county, and requires a man of good judgment and judicial temperament, inasmuch as the duties are both administrative and judicial. During the year and a half that I have been in office I have, to the best of my ability, performed the duties of the office. I have been a prosecutor and not a persecutor. All departments of the office have had my careful personal supervision, and the work has been conducted in such a manner as to be beyond criticism. There has been no partiality or favoritism shown, and every one has had a "square deal." I have not forgotten, however, that the defendant, while often a poor man, without friends or money, has rights which the public are bound to respect. I have tried so far as lay in my power, to temper justice with mercy. Whenever I have had a criminal to deal with, I have dealt with him as a criminal, and every effort has been made to secure his conviction, but whenever the feet of the young have strayed from the path of rectitude, I have tried to adjust matters so that the unfortunate would have an opportunity to redeem himself.

In the efforts which have been made by all good citizens to eliminate the selling of liquor without a license, I have endeavored to suppress the evil. In the last eighteen months, there have been more persons arrested, convicted and fined for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, than in the entire previous history of the county.

With my assistants, the civil work of the county has not been neglected, and a large amount of money has been collected and turned into the Treasurer of this County on delinquent tax judgments that had been allowed to slumber for years. The building of a new Courthouse and the Courthouse commission have increased the work of the office, but the work has been expeditiously carried on without any delay on the part of my office.

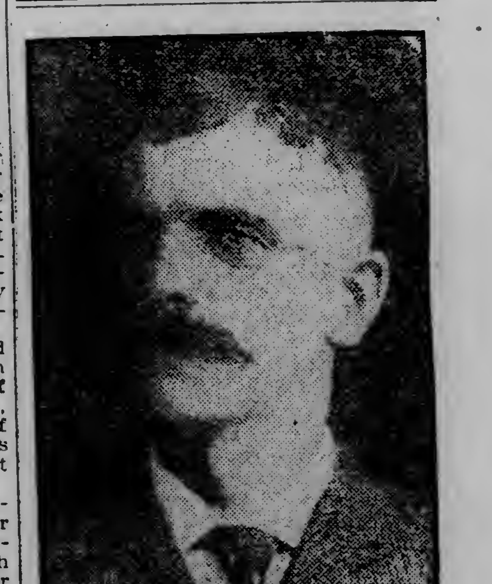
In the course of business, both criminal and civil, it is only fair to say that all parties coming in contact with the office, have felt that they have received substantial justice, as is evidenced by the fact that not a single case has been appealed to a higher tribunal.

The record of the office and the political usage of a second term endorsement, makes me the logical candidate for another term.

Taking all of these facts into consideration, I request the support of the public and ask their endorsement for a second term.

Thanking them for their kindness in the past, I have the pleasure to be, very respectfully,

JOHN H. NORTON.



Captain Darwin E. Stevens

Announces to his many friends in St. Louis county, and to all those interested in the "waking-up system" being applied to the office of sheriff, that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for that office.

"I fully realize the responsibilities pertaining to the office of sheriff, and that it is the most important office in the county to fill. There are many duties connected with this office that are vitally important to the people, and which, if not attended to properly, would cause the greatest inconvenience to those concerned.

"In the event of my election, I shall endeavor to perform my official duties promptly and efficiently.

D. E. STEVENS.

ON THE IRON RANGES

WATER CART MAN HAS CLOSE CALL

Caught Between Wagon Seat an Beam Over Hibbing Gate.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A serious accident was narrowly averted yesterday at the ball park. Henry Little, while driving the sprinkler from the grounds, after having sprinkled them with water, attempted to drive through the big carriage gate without descending from the tank. He was caught between the big cross beam on which gate swings and the seat and pinched. No bones were broken, and after a short rest he was able to continue his work.

Clarence Calligan has left for the Copper country, where his father, who has been suffering for some time, is not expected to live.

R. F. Reed gave a roller skating party last evening to a party of forty friends in the roller rink. A good time was enjoyed by everybody present. Many amusing incidents occurred sending every one home in the best of good humor.

Judge Thomas F. Brady, who has been absent from town for the past week, is expected to arrive home this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Watt of Virginia were over yesterday to attend the ball game.

RELEASE POSTOFFICE.

Just Established in Itasca County and Badly Needed.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Itasca county is soon to have a new postoffice. The name of the office will be Release, and it will be located at the C. V. Smith place at Balsam lake on t hte so-called Bigfork road, on section 9-58-24 with Mr. Smith as postmaster. The postoffice will be supplied from Grand Rapids through the Wabana route. The establishment of a postoffice at this place means a great deal to that section. In the past the people living in those towns got their mail through Powers postoffice about fifteen miles east of there in St. Louis county. The mail was brought from Powers to Crooked lake in the town of Balmm by trains on the Powers logging railroad, and from there the settlers got their mail, many coming as much as five to ten miles to get their mail, and some getting no mail at all. Of late, too, the service on the Powers logging road was very irregular, and the getting of the mail has become a very uncertain thing, so the establishing of the new office will be a great convenience.

VIRGINIA CHURCH NURSERY.

Little Ones Cared for While Mothers Attend Services.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The young ladies of the Presbyterian church of this city have arranged a plan whereby matters with babies may come to church and bring the babies with them.

A number of mothers have expressed a desire to attend service, but they hesitate to bring their little children to church. This matter was brought to the attention of the young ladies, and they have arranged to establish a nursery in the rear of the church where the mothers can leave their babies during the morning hour of service from 11 to 12.

TO MOVE HIBBING JAIL.

Will Stand on New Site Till City Hall is Built.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The plans of the common council in regard to the renting of a suitable building to be used as a jail during the building of the new city hall has been changed, owing to the expense that would be incurred. If a building were rented it would necessitate the hiring of two watchmen. This can be avoided by moving the present jail to the vacant lots north of its present location. Work will be started Monday morning.

HIBBING FANS JUBILANT.

Defeat of Virginia by Close Score Gratifying.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fans of Hibbing were overjoyed Friday. And they indeed have good cause for rejoicing as the mighty Graham had fallen. Hibbing finally laid one over on Virginia with the big hander in the box by a 2 to 1 score. It was a grand exhibition. Both twirlers pitching remarkable ball. Sage for Hibbing was in rare form. His work during the fourth, fifth and sixth innings being phenomenal. The same teams play again today. Gilligan will work for Hibbing while Curry will throw for Virginia.

NEW COMPANY IS NOW IN CHARGE

Alger - Smith Company Takes Possession of Tower Plant.

Tower, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Tower Lumber company has surrendered control of its mill and holdings here to the Alger-Smith company, the new owners taking possession yesterday. James Thompson, who for the past several years has been head bookkeeper for the retiring firm, is to be retained by the new company and will act in the capacity of manager. It is a satisfaction to the citizens here to have Mr. Thompson retained as he is a popular Towerite and fully capable of discharging the duties of his new position. The Tower Lumber company retires with the good wishes of Towerites in general. In the several years of its existence the company has been an important factor in the welfare of the city. The Smith-Alger company, while new here is an old established company and highly recommended, and since the greater number of the present employees are to be retained, it is not likely that much difference will be noticeable. It is reported that the new company will bring in about fifty families. This is not likely to happen until spring, for the mill will be operated only during the months previous to the freeze-up.

The Tower Lumber company has several million feet of lumber in the yards which will be shipped immediately. A prolonged blowing of the whistle for ten minutes Wednesday at 6 p. m. marked the closing of the active operations of the company. The mill was closed Thursday for a few minor repairs and opened yesterday morning under the new management.

MOHAWK EMPLOYE HIT BY ENGINE

Is Hurled From Tracks Near Colby and Seriously Injured.

Aurora, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Walter Hendrickson, employed at the Mohawk mine, was struck by the westbound passenger train at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Colby and seriously injured. Hendrickson and August Naimi were fishing at Colby lake and Hendrickson had left for the depot to get a paddle. At the lake the road has a sharp curve and he became confused as to the track the train was on. He went from one track to the other and as he placed his foot on the rail he noticed the train almost upon him and started to go back, when the bumper on the engine struck him on the chest and threw him to the other track. About thirty people from Aurora were at Colby on a picnic and were witnesses of the accident. H. L. Nicholson was the first to reach the man, and a few seconds later Miss Davis, a trained nurse in the crowd, reached the injured man. Among the picnickers was Dr. Darrow, the Iron Range surgeon, and he accompanied the man to Aurora. It was found that Hendrickson had his ribs crushed into his left lung and that he was bleeding internally, but it is thought he will recover.

DRILLING DISPUTED LAND.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A drill has been started on the disputed land on the north side of Ely lake, now held by the Weckeys, to ascertain whether the land around that part of Ely lake is worth any more than the ordinary agricultural land. The forty on which the drill is now was placed in dispute by the Fasen survey. The Weckeys claimed this land and have fenced it in, giving a quick claim deed to a Mr. Miller in Duluth. Miller & Coates of Virginia are said to hold the option for a lease, and they are the ones who have put up the drill. As there is every evidence so far that there is ore on that land, Eveleth will be benefited to a great extent by the discovery of ore on the land in question.

BUSINESS MEN WINNERS.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—In an interesting game played at the baseball park, Thursday afternoon, the business men's team defeated an all-star aggregation gathered together by Walker of the Fayal, and called White Sox. Most of the players on the latter team belong to the regular Fayal team and the victory of the business men was no small one. The both teams have been practicing for some time for the game, which was scheduled some time during the winter. The business men went under the name of McCarter's colts. The final score after four innings was 10 to 3 in favor of the Colts who easily put it all over the younger players. The features of the game were the pitching of Dr. Barrett who was summoned from the Fabiola hospital, and the all around playing of J. P. Tredinnick who was behind the bat for the colts. Alderman Hatch out in left field made a running catch almost to the fence, retiring the side with three men on bases. Manager Doyle of the regular Eveleth team was out in center field and made good. A large crowd was out to see the old timers play ball.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The local Odd Fellows have decided to own a home of their own, and at the regular meeting Thursday evening a committee was appointed to formulate some plans and report to the lodge at a future meeting. The committee consists of Messrs. B. M. Lippman, A. E. McKenzie, James Polglase, Walter Fitzgerald and E. W. Laschner. The committee will investigate available sites for a new building and obtain estimates of cost for a modern structure designed for both lodge and business purposes. It will also consider propositions for the purchase of buildings already erected if they are suitable fro thte purpose desired. Although it is probable that the lodge will finally decide to build and if they do they will erect a structure that will be a credit to the order and an ornament to the city.

Fast living, fast working, fast thinking bring their reward—sickness. Life's struggle becomes more and more intense as the twentieth century progresses. To equip yourself for the test you must have sleep, good digestion, steady nerves and clear mind. These can be secured and maintained by the daily use of golden grain belt beer, the ideal home beverage. Being brewed of pure barley, malt and hops, it furnishes nourishment in predigested form and acts as a tonic. Order of Duluth branch Minneapolis Brewing company.

NIGHT WORK TO STOP.

Northern Lumber Company to Lay Off Men at One Mill.

Cloquet, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—On account of continued depressing conditions of the lumber market, the Northern Lumber company will drop the night shift of its lower mill tomorrow morning. The market was very discouraging the early part of the summer and this spring, but is now reported as picking up gradually. In order to limit the stock in the yards in comparison with the sales, the shutting down of one shift was found to be inevitable.

On account of high water in the Mississippi river, the C. A. Smith Lumber company of Minneapolis have not been able to saw the logs that came down only running days, so their mill will start on the night shift some time next week. A large number of mill hands, who will be put out of employment here, will find places at the Minneapolis mill.

The number of feet of logs now in the St. Louis river and its tributaries will so far exceed this season's cut by all the Cloquet mills that logging operations during the coming winter for the local companies will be probably curtailed considerably.

NO TRIFLING

Will be Tolerated by Turks in Matter of New Constitution.

Constantinople, Aug. 1.—The situation at Adrianople, the headquarters of the Second army corps, is giving rise to much concern. The strong feeling there against the sultan has been evidenced by the tearing down of placards bearing the words "Long live the sultan," while at a meeting held in the public gardens, a protest was raised against cheers being given for the sultan.

Messages received here from the provinces set forth that the army will not tolerate any trifling with the new constitution, which must be upheld in its entirety.

Nashville pike. The following note was found pinned on one of the bodies: "Let this be a warning to you niggers to let white people alone or you will go the same way. Hugh Rogers better shut up or quit."

The negroes who were lynched were members of a lodge, and at a meeting recently, it is said, they approved of the murder of James Cunningham, a white farmer, by his negro tenant, Rufus Browder. This murder occurred in the southern part of Logan county, and it is supposed here that the mob was made up of men from that part of the county.

The negroes had been in jail for several days and while there has been considerable unrest since the attempt on the part of the mob to take Browder, the slayer of Cunningham, from the jail, some nights ago, no real trouble was anticipated and there was no guard around the prison. The effort to get Browder failed, owing to the fact that he was spirited out of jail by the sheriff and sent to Bowling Green, and later to Louisville, where he is now confined, awaiting trial.

The mob came in to town so quietly that not one of the residents of the city was awakened from slumber. Proceeding at once to the county jail, the jailer, Jake Butts, was summoned to the door, his residence being directly connected with the prison. When he made his appearance he found himself covered by rifles and shotguns and was given the command to turn over the keys of the jail or be shot down. After a short parley with the members of the mob, in which he tried to persuade them to go away without doing any violence, he was finally forced to hand over the keys. The mob then entered the jail, and finding the four negroes, forced them to go with them. Two of the men, not being given time to dress, were taken along in their night shirts, and the whole party proceeded at once to the tree on the outskirts of the city, on the Nashville pike, where the negroes were strung up in a row.

Contrary to the usual custom of mobs no shots were fired at the swinging victims, and the mob dispersed as soon as it had finished its work. There is no clue to the members of the band, as the jailer, the only person who saw them close enough to get a good look, could not recognize them.

The bodies of the negroes were cut down during the morning.

MACK NOW IN SADDLE

be announced in Chicago early next week. Mr. Mack said there was entire harmony between himself and Chairman Connors of the Democratic state committee, and that the national committee would not interfere with the nomination of the New York state ticket or with the state campaign.

During the next three days Mr. Mack will hold conferences at the Hoffman house with national committeemen from the Eastern states as to the make-up of the sub-committee, which probably will be composed of about fifteen members. While Mr. Mack will be chairman of the committee, a vice chairman will be appointed who will have charge of the Eastern wing of the committee.

Several Conferences Held.

Mr. Mack held conferences today with Urey Woodson, secretary of the national committee, and Roger C. Sullivan, national committeeman from Illinois. Headquarters will be selected here before Mr. Mack goes back to Chicago on Monday evening. Mr. Mack said, on his arrival here from Buffalo, today:

"I will be in New York until Monday night, when I shall leave for Chicago. While here I shall confer with national committeemen and prominent Democrats from states in the East as to the membership of the sub-committee which will have charge of the national campaign in New England and the Atlantic states. The make-up of this committee will be announced when I reach Chicago. I shall be chairman of this committee; in fact I will be chairman of all the committees of the national committee; but I do not know at this time who will be in personal charge of the New York headquarters. I shall spend most of my time during the campaign in Chicago, coming to New York occasionally."

Democratic Prospects.

Speaking of Democratic prospects, Mr. Mack said:

"I have heard from committeemen and prominent Democrats all over the country, and while it is too early to make forecasts, I can say at this time that the future appears bright for success. I have received numbers of letters from well known Democrats in many parts of the United States who were not active or interested in recent campaigns, who announce their readiness to do all they can for the ticket. I do not know of a Democrat who is not ready to do all he can. Judge Parker accepted immediately a tender of a position of the advisory committee and will do whatever the committee asks him. Governor Johnson also accepted a position on the same committee without delay.'

On State Affairs.

Of state affairs Mr. Mack said: "The Democratic state committee in New York is thoroughly competent and able to handle the situation without any intereference from the national committee. Let me say that the state chairman and I are in perfect accord. The national committee will not in any way interfere with the nominations in this state. Further, the state committee will conduct its own fight.

"The sub-committee, which will have direction of the national campaign in the East, will be made up of strong men and capable of conducting an efficient campaign. The state committee has never been so strong. Altogether everything will be done to make a strong fight in the Eastern states. I expect to leave for Chicago Monday evening."

Urey Woodson announced today that he would spend most of his time during the national campaign in Chicago, where the main headquarters of the national committee will be located. Headquarters in the East probably will be in the Hoffman House.

STARTLING TRAGEDY

been drinking heavily for several weeks, and it is believed, was demented.

Morrell was awakened early in the morning by Anderson climbing through the window of his room. He asked him what he wanted, and Anderson emptied two barrels of a shotgun into him. The housekeeper ran to the telephone to call for assistance, and Anderson, following her up, shot her dead.

From the brief story which Morrell had been able to tell, it is believed that Anderson, after killing the housekeeper, awakened to a sense of what he had done and endeavored to aid Morrell. The farmer says he remembers some man tried to help him, and that he heard a voice asking for forgiveness. It is also believed, from an examination of the body of the housekeeper, that Anderson attempted to undo his work there, but, realizing that the woman was dead, he went away and killed himself.

Anderson, when sober, was devotedly attached to Morrell, who had always treated him more as a friend than as an employe.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? ANSWER IS EASY

Nathan Kris Says It Means Business Success or Failure.

Some six or seven years ago the Duluth Consignment company was organized, and commenced doing business at 19 East Superior street. Their stock of goods consisted of crockery, glassware, dry goods remnants, etc., which was consigned to them from various parts of the country. Mostly cheap goods, they were the so-called job lots which were destined to fill the wants of the "bargain hunter." Later the Consignment moved to 24 East Superior street, and soon afterwards moved to their present location, 32, 34 East Superior street.

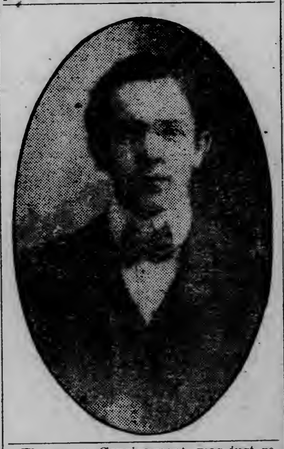
As long as the Duluth Consignment carried a cheap stock of goods, its name well defined the class of merchandise they had for sale, and did not fail to attract those people who practice extreme economy.



The name, Consignment, was just recently dropped by this firm, and in the future the store will be known under the name of Kris & Pass company.

Speaking of the name-change, Mr. Kris said: "We did not like the name, Consignment, from the start, but it was so well advertised that we thought it would be a better plan to wait with the change until we should have a sound footing; so, instead of dropping the name entirely, we connected ours with it, and now the time has come when we can use our name exclusively.

As to the results of the change, we are more than pleased with it. Already our daily sales are increasing substantially, thanks to the change.

The firm will deal mainly in ladies' and misses' ready-to-wear garments and millinery. Shoes for ladies, misses and children will also be carried on a moderate scale.

Mr. Kris will leave for the East on Monday for the season's purchasing trip. He will visit New York and Boston, returning about Sept. 1st.

mean more, scientifically, than the twenty-four hour flight which Count Zeppelin proposes to make within a few days in his monster aerial ship.

The gas bag of the Zeppelin airship is just twenty times as large as that of the Baldwin "aeronaut," and the eddies and counter currents in the air have practically no effect upon it. With Baldwin's dirigible, however, each varying disturbance will have to be counteracted. It is the success which Capt. Baldwin will meet in this one particular which will be the determining factor in the acceptance or rejection of his machine. That he will succeed in fulfilling all of the other requirements of the tests, Capt. Baldwin does not entertain the slightest doubt.

Must Balance Balloon.

In the past Capt. Baldwin has used a dirigible built especially for exhibition purposes. In these airships the balance was maintained at all times through the weight of the operator being shifted, much on the same principle that a tight-rope walker balances himself in mid-air. The specifications under which Capt. Baldwin was awarded a contract to build a dirigible for the army, this method will not be permitted.

Instead, side rudders or planes must be used, in addition to the balloonet, which is a balloon within a balloon, or by any other mechanical means. Capt. Baldwin will depend principally on the balloonet and the planes, of which he has four, two on each side of the frame, placed forward and aft.

In the meantime Capt. Baldwin is optimistic. He has made over 3,000 balloon ascensions without ever being scratched, and alhough he is 54 years old, he displays the energy oqf a much younger man, to say nothing of his enthusiasm. He is very resourceful and has already devised a means of shifting a heavy sand bar to overcome the difficulty of balancing, which is the only stumbling block over which he has expressed any concern.

the farming districts is very strong. His run against E. Y. Sarles two years ago was an exceptionally strong one, winning out against his opponent in an easy manner. The Democrats hope to re-elect him, claiming that he has performed the duties of his office in an able and sincere manner, and is therefore entitled to a second term.

Mr. Johnson, the Republican candidate, is also a very strong and popular man. It will be in the western part of the state that he will poll his largest vote, John Burke hoping to run best in the eastern and valley counties. Mr. Johnson is a successful attorney at law, and when elected to the legislature from his district as representative, he received the largest votes polled by any of the candidates in the county. This immense popularity is certain to have its effect on the result of the pending campaign.

Both of the candidates are quite confident over the outcome. Mr. Burke has already made a number of addresses at different localities in the state in favor of his election, while Mr. Johnson expects to open his campaign about Aug. 15. From that time until the polls close, North Dakota voters will have an opportunity of hearing both men, and with their ability on the platform, the fight should, indeed, be an interesting one.

Woman Committed to Fergus, Selects Babies From the Home.

Mrs. Larson Adds Another Stunt to List of Performances.

Mrs. Katherine C. Larson holds the record for queer performances in Duluth. She added one more to her string of peculiarities yesterday. In the morning she was examined before Judge Middlecoff as to her sanity, and was committed to Fergus Falls. As Mrs. Larson has never shown any dangerous symptoms she was let go, instead of being detained at the county jail as usual, and went home with her husband. Shortly after arriving home, however, Mrs. Larson disappeared and her husband did not know what had become of her.

She left the house and made straight for the children's home. There she told the matron that she wanted to adopt two children. She was shown the collection of motherless and fatherless babies and she selected two of the most promising youngsters in the lot.

Then she departed with the intention of seeing Probation Officer F. E. Resche and getting the papers fixed up. Fortunately for the youngsters, however, Mr. Resche was familiar with Mrs. Larson's case, and with difficulty he persuaded her to return peaceably to her home. Mrs. Larson appears sane when seen for but a few moments, and had the probation officer not known about the case it is probable that the youngsters would have been legally adopted by the woman who had been committed to the insane asylum.

This is the last of a number of queer stunts by Mrs. Larson. She stole carpets and rugs from a neighbor's house. She was haled into police court on this charge and gained notoriety by calling the judge loving names. Yesterday at her examination she was more than affectionate to the physicians who examined her, and while she has at no time been violently or dangerously insane, her mind is so badly unbalanced that commitment is thought wise.

FEATS OF HORSEMANSHIP.

Buffalo Bill's Horses Are Only Prairie-Bred Animals Before Public

Of the many distinctive features which Buffalo Bill's Wild West claims for its own, the presence of a group of Western range horses, trained to perfection, only attained by the thoroughbred of the circus ring, is a most noteworthy attraction. Some idea of the task of subduing the descendants of the wild horses of the plains can best be imagined when one compares the graceful movements and skillful feats of Buffalo Bill's trained animals with the antics of the bucking bronchos, which appear in the same arena.

The fractious steeds, born to the freedom of the prairies, do not easily submit to the curb and bridle of the cowboy, and less still to the master hand of the trainer who would teach them to perform the fancy steps and figures. But Ray Thompson has trained the Buffalo Bill horses to respond to his every command, and perform graceful feats without any punishment or urging on the part of their riders.

The star actor in the Ray Thompson troupe of horses is Joe Bailey, a beautiful specimen of equine beauty. Competent judges pronounce him the most perfectly trained horse ever exhibited. He is ridden by Mr. Thompson himself, and he performs the most graceful and difficult feats without apparent effort. His routine of tricks include the display of every "gait" known to horsemen, riding under saddle and without more than mild suggestion from his rider when to change and what to do next. There is no urging, no punishment. The horse seems to enter into his work with a spirit and evident enjoyment. He is appreciative of applause, too, and takes as kindly to the plaudits of the multitude as does any human actor in the exhibition.

The bucking bronchos illustrate the contrast; their wild gyrations and ill-tempered antics plainly show the difference in their work, although Joe Bailey is just as much a Westerner as are the fractious little bucking horses. There is the reckless Cossack from Russia; the real Indians of the plains astride their spotted ponies; the Arabian with his blue-blooded steed; English and Irish cavalrymen and horsemen from our own army, who perform the "stunts" of regulation tactics.

And so from the roughest sort of "rough riding" to the skillful and graceful feats of the well trained equine, Buffalo Bill shows every type of horsemanship. And the leader of them all, the old knight of the saddle, will appear on horseback himself at every performance, no matter what the weather. Lovers of horse flesh, or the hoof, have a treat in store for them when Buffalo Bill comes to Duluth, Saturday, Aug. 22.

Dr. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier, advertised in another column, is a matter of deep interest to all who would have their skin free from the baneful influence of the elements, or free from tan, freckles or sallowness or other skin blemishes, giving it a soft, pearly whiteness, and leaving the complexion clear and bright as crystal. It is highly desirable for those attending evening entertainments, when dancing heats the face and causes it to look greasy. The Oriental Cream removes this annoyance; it being a liquid preparation, it remains on the skin, giving it a charming bloom.

We recommend it cheerfully, because its properties have been tested more than a half of a century by the very elite of American and Continental society. While its naturalness of operation are such that the use of the cosmetic is not suspected it is entirely certain to beautify the face and impart the evidence of refinement and culture. We know it meets the wants of refined ladies who require a harmless, efficient beautifier and purifier of the skin, and is sold by all first-class druggists and fancy goods dealers.

OPPOSING TESTIMONY

Fight for Iron Land Near Syracuse Mine Grows Warm.

There Are Nearly 3,000,000 Tons of Ore on the Land.

The hearing in the Syracuse iron land case went on this morning, and Judge Dibell consented to hold court this afternoon in order to hasten proceedings.

Mr. Longyear and Mr. Bennett, the Minneapolis men seeking to register title to the land, were on the stand this morning. They both testified that George L. Chesebrough had admitted receiving $1,000 commission for the sale of the land to them, after they had arranged terms with him to buy the land for them. They said that he offered to give them the commission money if that would make things all right. They told him they did not care to do business with a man who accepted commissions from both sides, according to Mr. Longyear's testimony, and so repudiated the bargain they had made with him. This provided for Chesebrough's having the right to buy a two-ninths interest in the Atwell land at the end of two years. They would not live up to this agreement, in view of Mr. Chesebrough's double dealing, said Mr. Longyear.

Under cross-examination, Mr. Bennett said that there were between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 tons of ore on the land, as nearly as could be estimated after a thorough prospecting with drills.

Mr. Harrison, who is fighting the application to have title registered, said that he had secured evidence of Chesebrough's securing the commission from Atwell with the understanding that this was not to be used against Chesebrough's interest in the property, but only to make him pay back the $1,000 which he had received. Mr. Longyear said he did not remember such an agreement. He had never told Mr. Harrison that the land had become unexpectedly valuable, he said, but admitted telling him that they had undisclosed partners in the purchase. They had prospected within fifty feet of the south line of the land in question before buying, he said, and were fairly certain that it had a good body of ore on it.

The land involved adjoins the Syracuse mine, near Embarass lake, and is described as lot 5, section 5, township 58 north, range 15 west.

DULUTH HOUSE CAPTURES NORTH DAKOTA CONTRACT.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 1.—For the first time the contract for furnishing groceries and supplies for the state penitentiary was awarded to a firm outside the state. A Duluth firm has the contract.

BERRY PICKERS GETTING BUSY

Indications of a Bumper Crop in Vicinity of Duluth.

The berry picking season is in full swing. For over a week the cars to the ends of the lines in the outlying districts have carried out their regular quota of berry pickers early in the morning and brought them back in the afternoon, weary and dirty, but with pails well filled with luscious big red raspberries. The raspberry season is but a few days short of its best now, and the blueberries are nearly ripe.

The season is a fine one for the fruit. There have not been neough rains to beat down the bushes and knock off the berries, yet it has been damp enough to keep them flourishing and indications are that the berry pickers around Duluth will have gathered a bumper crop by the time the season is over.

Woodland cars early in the morning do a thriving business in the berry picking line, and the Bay View Heights incline in West Duluth also carries many into the immediate vicinity of the berry patches.

MINIKAHDA MEN IN THE LEAD

Johnson and Legg Play Off for State Golf Championship.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—For the third successive year the state amateur golf championship, which is being played for at the golf tournament at the Minikahda links in Minneapolis, rests between Harry G. Legg and Lynn H. Johnson, two Minikahda men, as a result of the third round of the championship flight played yesterday. Legg and Johnson started this morning on an all day's battle for the championship. Legg's remarkable score of 155 for the thirty-six holes in the qualification rounds Wednesday made him a favorite for the championship. Ward Ames of Duluth lost his game in the final of the first flight to J. E. Clifford, 3 up and 1 to play.

BOLIVAR IS DEAD.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—Bolivar, said to be the biggest elephant ever in captivity, died in his prison house at the Zoological gardens here last night. The bix fellow had but one rival in captivity, Jumbo. The latter was taller, but Bolivar was much heavier, weighing six tons. For twenty years he had been confined in a small enclosure at the zoo. Bolivar is supposed to have been 57 or 59 years old.

HAVE YOU READ THIS ADVERTISEMENT

If you have, won't you please read it over again? Or if you have not, won't you kindly do yourself a favor by taking five minutes—right now—and read every word carefully? You won't regret it.

Have you ever spent a few weeks at one of the fine Winter Tourist Hotels at San Antonio, Texas, when snow and "below zero" was making life uncomfortable up here in the North? Have you ever traveled through Southern California and visited the Orange groves, or the vineyards, where are raised the tons upon tons of magnificent grapes? Have you ever seen the beautiful Yakima Valley, or the Wenatchee Valley of Washington—or the Hood River Valley—where they raise the wonderful Strawberries? If you have not seen these, or some other similar localities, you cannot understand how we can make such an offer as we do. You probably have already come to the conclusion that we are either desperately hard up and are offering 100 per cent interest to secure money—or else we are offering a "get-rich-quick" or "gold-brick" scheme. Quite the contrary.

The simple, plain, honest truth is this: These lands we are offering are immensely fertile, as the soil is "river-silt," from 20 to 40 feet deep, and the climate is so favorable to the raising of vegetables, that three crops are produced every year. One crop of vegetables is harvested in December, another crop of vegetables comes on the market in March and April, and during the summer months—from May to August—the easiest raised and most profitable crop is Peanuts—which produce about 100 bushels per acre, and give a net profit of $50 to $60 per acre, at least. And all these crops are raised between the rows of Orange trees, as they are planted 18 by 20 feet apart. By the fourth year the Oranges alone will be giving a net profit of $300 per acre—and more. We had one of the best fruit experts in the United States go over our district and give us his opinion. This man was one of the Commissioners of the State of California, at the St. Louis World's Fair, and was one of the Judges of the Fruit Exhibit there. He stated that there was nothing in California as good as what we have in this Rio Grande Valley, either for fertile soil, favorable climate, or general productiveness. He bought a 40-acre tract—which we think was a fine expression of his confidence in his own judgment. He has already cleared, irrigated, and planted his land to Orange, Lemon, Fig and Walnut and Pecan trees, as well as Vegetables. Mr. James Stillman, the President of the National City Bank in New York, one of the biggest banks in America, invested $5,000 near us last year and by June first, this year, had taken a little over $10,000 back from his investment. He has several other—and some very large—investments near us. The highest officers of the Rock Island—Frisco System Railways, have several large tracts of this land—and if you buy one of our tracts you will be getting the same kind of land they have. These gentlemen can pick the whole continent over to find the best places to invest their private funds—and if this land pleases them—you ought to be satisfied with it. And they are not selling theirs, they are keeping it.

Why do we make you such an extremely fine offer? For the simple reason that we cannot carry the whole development work alone, as a great part of our capital is tied up in the land and in improvements, and also—we want our own friends—our own people whom we are meeting and doing business with every day right here—to have a chance to come in with us and secure a share of the immense profits in raising vegetables and fruit on this rich tract of land. We have made the price as low as we can, and believe we are giving a fair share of the profits—though for every $100 we give you in Cash Rentals, we will make $150 to $300—yet, as we are doing the work, we deserve the larger share. Another point is, we can get all the labor we need—good labor, too—at 50c per day or $10 per month. Labor is plentiful and living extremely cheap. As an absolute insurance of the success of all our crops, we irrigate from Artesian wells flowing at the rate of 50 to 150 gallons per minute, day and night—all through the year. And the climate is not too hot, for the cooling Gulf breezes blows from 7 o'clock in the morning till 3 o'clock the next morning. The crops mature earlier in our district than they do in California or Florida, and our crops are taken right from our doors by the buyers from the commission houses of Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, and even New York.

If you want a tract of this land, with our contract-lease, kindly get your application in at once, as applications coming in after next Wednesday, August 5th, cannot be considered at this price of $100. If you want to wait until the October number of Everybody's Magazine is out, on Sept. 15, we will have a full-page ad. there, offering some of our lands at $200 per acre, and lower cash rentals. But come now, as quite a bit of this 160-acre block reserved for our friends here, is sold already, though this was never advertised before four days ago.

Every statement made here is honest—absolutely honest in every particular, and we are telling you only the simple plain truth—and nothing but the truth—and we will certainly carry out our statements in every detail—but give us the chance to do these things for you.

STIRLING IMPROVEMENT CO., LTD.

P. McDONNELL, M. C. KNOWLES { Duluth Directors

IF YOU BOUGHT NORTH BUTTE WHEN IT STARTED AT $15.00

You would have been taking chances on its going to its present figure, $85—because, while the wealth of ore existed, yet its quantity could not be definitely known, nor could the actual cost of bringing the ore into the market be foretold. In this proposition we are offering you, there are no unknown quantities—there are no possibilities of failure.

Therefore an honest divide guarantees a minimum of profit of at least 100% the first year, and a greater profit every year thereafter.

We have purchased a block of very fine fruit land on the lower Gulf Coast of Texas, in the Valley of the Rio Grande. This land is the richest we have ever known of; the soil is a black sandy loam from 20 to 40 feet deep, and will raise any fruit or vegetables grown in the United States. There are no frosts, no cyclones, no hot winds, no detriments of any kind, and all the conditions of climate, soil, etc., are most favorable to the raising of immense crops. In fact, the profits received from the crops raised in our district are simply fabulous.

We are clearing this land, irrigating it from our artesian well, and planting it to Orange trees, and between the rows of orange trees (trees are planted 18 by 20 feet apart), we are going to raise winter vegetables for several years, until the orange trees need the space, which will not be for six or seven years. We plant the Satsuma variety of Orange, which is very quick growing, and begins to produce in 15 months. As we get the very highest market prices for our winter vegetables, the profits from an investment of this kind are immense. We want our friends to have a chance to share these profits, and we have set apart a block of 160 acres, which we are selling at only $100 per acre, on the following plan:

☛ You buy the land and pay $100 per acre, cash, and you may purchase one acre, two acres, or any number of acres; you receive your warranty deed and complete abstract. You give us a ten-year lease of the property, and we clear the land, irrigate it, and plant it with orange trees immediately.

Also we will immediately plant these tracts to vegetables, which will be harvested during December, and will, therefore, secure the highest prices for choice, fresh vegetables on the winter market. This land will raise three crops per year and will bring a gross revenue of about $250 the first year, and as soon as the orange trees begin to produce, the gross receipts per acre will increase very rapidly; but the expenses do not increase very much. At the end of ten years every acre will be producing a net revenue of at least $800 per acre. These statements are not guess work, they are the simple, plain truth about what is being done in our district. IN RETURN FOR THIS TEN-YEAR LEASE, WHICH YOU GIVE US ON THE LAND YOU PURCHASE FROM US at $100 PER ACRE, WE PAY YOU THE FOLLOWING CASH RENTALS:

ON OCTOBER 1, 1909, WE PAY YOU $100 PER ACRE.
ON OCTOBER 1, 1910, WE PAY YOU $150 PER ACRE.
ON OCTOBER 1, 1911, WE PAY YOU $200 PER ACRE.
ON OCTOBER 1, 1912, WE PAY YOU $250 PER ACRE.
ON OCTOBER 1, 1913, WE PAY YOU $300 PER ACRE.

On October 1st, during the years 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918, we pay you a cash rental of $300 per acre; and as long thereafter as you wish us to care for your land, we will pay you one-half of the net profits from the crops every year.

That is, from every acre which you buy now at $100—you will receive during the first ten years $2,500 in cash, and YOUR MONEY BACK AT THE END OF THE FIRST YEAR.

IN ADDITION to this very favorable profit which you will receive beginning with the first years, if some circumstances should arise whereby you might need to dispose of your land, we will take up your deed and contract lease at any time during one year after Oct. 1st, 1910, and pay you $150 per acre cash. This cash redemption value will increase at the rate of $50 per acre per year until Oct. 1st, 1918, after which a cash redemption value would have to be arranged. Therefore, at the end of ten years you would have received $2,500 cash rentals from the land, and if you wanted to sell this land back to us at the end of the tenth year by our cash redemption plan, we would then take back your land and pay you $500 per acre, thus bringing you $3,000 back in cash for every $100 you invest now. And your security is perfect—you have the land, and you have our contract to work it for you and care for every matter in first-class business-like order. You put in the first $100—and we do the rest—always—AND THE LAND PRODUCES THE PROFITS.

Such an investment—with such an immense profit guaranteed—and with such absolute security—has never, we believe, been offered in Duluth before—and we will sell not one acre at this price and on this contract after the 160 acres have been sold. Our lands will be offered at a very much higher figure very soon, as the only company offering a proposition anything like ours, is selling their land at $320 per acre.

As the work on these tracts will have to be started by August 10th, in order to get the crops planted in time, we can receive applications for this land at the price of $100 per acre, with this contract-lease, only up to August 5th and only until 160 acres are sold. If you wish to invest any amount from $100 up, kindly call in to our office and we will be glad to give you all further particulars you may desire. This matter cannot be delayed, as the crops must be planted very soon, so kindly make your application at once, AS THIS OFFER IS GOOD ONLY UNTIL AUGUST 5TH.

New York World: Advertising a religion in the daily press by means of a free-for-all paragraph competition is the very latest in church missionary work. Zangwill's satric proposal to start a new religion with one commandment, "Enjoy thyself," is scarcely more modern.

Baltimore American: A Philadelphia pastor has sent invitations to the men of the congregation to attend services in shirt waists. Whether this is good policy or not is a question that is open to discussion, but there is no doubt that a church where the members can be comfortable will be more popular than where the rigid and generally accepted rules are followed. Such experiments are always worth watching, at any rate, and often something can be learned from them.

Kansas City Star: In Bishop Potter the public beheld such an example of a genuine "dignitary" as is not often seen in the American branch of the Angelican church. His intelectual gifts, his high social rank, his ripe and finished education, and his position as the head of the most opulent diocese in America all combined to invest him with a degree of power and prestige that was unusual. Maintaining a certain lofty state that befitted his temperament and that was incident to the force of his environment, Bishop Potter showed the finest possible quality of humanity in keeping always in sympathetic touch with the masses of the people and in laboring without fatigue or relaxation to uplift them and ameliorate their condition. In the glorious cathedral of St. John the Divine, rising to the sky from its splendid eminence on Morning Side Heights, in upper New York, Bishop Potter leaves to the world a fitting monument of his illustrious ecclesiastical career.

New York Tribune: The Rev. G. W. McPherson, who in a speech in New York recently said, "While New York is the wickedest city in the United States, Chicago is worse—so bad that it cannot be called American; it isnt even civilized," is severely arraigned in a bulletin issued by the Chicago Association of Commerce. Referring to Mr. McPherson, the bulletin says: "This benighted individual should be taught that the intemperate use of the tongue is more baneful than the intemperate use of alcohol or other drugs that kill; the latter poisons the individual offender, while the former cuts and wounds the reputation of many." The association then goes on to set forth facts showing Chicago's greatness and goodness, its commercial and industrial resources, its prosperity as indicated by its bank deposits and the number of wage-earners at work, and its charities. One of the statements is that "Chicago has sixty-nine hospitals, a larger number in proportion to population than any other large city in the country, notwithstanding it has the lowest death rate of all of them."

A Faithful Friend.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1872, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. I have been a commercial traveler for eighteen years, and never start out on a trip without this, my faithful friend," says H. S. Nichols of Oakland, Ind. T. When a man has used a remedy for thirty-five years he knows its value and is competent to speak of it. For sale by all drugists.

CENSUS FOR CHURCHES

Canvass to Determine Religious Preferences May be Made.

Professional Census Man May Assist Churches in Work.

If a business-like individual calls at your house this summer and wants to know whether you are a church member, and what church you prefer, don't mistake him for an inquisitive meddler. Prospects are that a church census will be taken in Duluth during the summer, to determine what percentage of the population of the Zenith City are church-goers.

Augustus Heinze—he of the 57-varieties-of-pickles fame—has donated a substantial sum toward the salary of Hugh Cork, who is to make a business of taking a church censu throughout the country. It is planned to secure his services at Duluth, in connection with the Sunday school association and the ministerial association.

If this is done, a house-to-house canvass will be made, questions being asked of every resident who can be reached regarding his church attendance, his membership, or his preference. Cards are filled out for every person about whom information is secured, and these will be turned over to the churches for which a preference is expressed.

This gives the churches something definite to work on, and it is thought that an immense amount of good could be accomplished.

In some of the cities where Mr. Cork has conducted this novel form of census, the list of names secured was more complete than that secured by the workers on the city directory.

PLANS COMPLETED

Nutting, Jr., and Commander A. E. Culver, in charge of naval militia work in the office of Assistant Secretary Newberry. The lieutenants who will accompany the militia are Francis C. Whitten, James R. Combes, David Hanrahan, Ralph E. Pope and George J. Meyers. The Ohio militia will embark on the Hawk, the Michigan on the Don Juan de Austria, the Minnesota on the Gopher and the Illinois on the Dorothea.

SURREY DEFEATS PHILADELPHIANS.

London, Aug. 1.—The Surrey eleven defeated the Gentlemen of Philadelphia in the cricket match that came to an end at the Oval here today.

When the play closed yesterday the Philadelphians were at the bat for their second innings and they still lacked 168 runs to defeat the home team. Today they increased their score of sixty by only forty-five, leaving the Surrey team victors by 122, with seven wickets on hand.

The American resumed batting with good prospects of success, but before some fine bowling by Blackliidge and Lees, the visitors failed completely. Mason was the only man to reach a double figure. His score was 26.

Home indorsement, the public expression of Duluth people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Duluth reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in faraway places. Read the following:

Capt. M. McLean, marine captain, living at 4324 Grillat street, Duluth, Minn., says: "Lapse of time has only strengthened my appreciation of Doan's Kidney Pills. I gave this remedy my hearty indorsement in the summer of 1898, because of the good results I obtained from the use of it. It promptly and effectually rid me of a dull, heavy aching just over the kidneys, banished the restlessness that broke my sleep at night, and brought about a healthy and natural action of the kidneys. Since that time there has been no return of the trouble, which fact convinces me that Doan's Kidney Pills cured me permanently."

News of the Theater

AT THE LYCEUM

The Mack-Leone Players Will Present an Elaborate Production of "Strongheart" All of Next Week ---Additions Made to the Company.

What will probably prove to be the real dramatic treat of the stock season at the Lyceum will be the production of "Strongheart," by the Mack-Leone players all next week. This is the vehicle in which Robert Edeson, Ralph Stuart and Edgar Selwyn starred.

"Strongheart," probably the greatest college play ever written, tells the story of an educated full-blooded Indian, who is finishing a post graduate course at Columbia university, New York. He is past master at football, a good fellow and a friend to everybody who knows him, but because of his love of a Caucasian girl finds that "the knife of prejudice has cut the ties of friendship" and that he has ben ostracized from their set because he is an Indian. The play is extremely novel, is absolutely unique and original, as an Indian hero has never before been utilized for stage purposes.

The part of the redskin has great opportunities and as Mr. Mack lived amongst the Indians for years, he will be in a position to play the part as it has never been played before. Stanley Lamb of the celebrated Lamb children, who starred for several years in "Two Little Waifs," will be seen on the stage the first time in seven or eight years, in the role of Ross, the freshman. Mr. Mack has secured, by special arrangement, the services of four or five extra people from St. Paul, and as Mr. Fournier, the scenic artist, has been working for weeks on the scenery, the banner production of the year at the Lyceum is promised.

AT THE BIJOU

Popular Theater Will Reopen Monday With Modern Vaudeville—New and Costly Decorations and Improvements Have Been Completed.

The Bijou will reopen its doors to the public on Monday, after being closed for two weeks, to allow the owners time to redecorate and make several improvements, and Duluth people will see one of the prettiest vaudeville theaters in the Northwest.

A number of necessary improvements have been made, such as the installing of a large fire ventilator over the stage, and a fire-sprinkling system. The large exits leading to Michigan street have been changed from stairs to an incline, which makes the exits much safer, and many other improvements have been made.

The theater has been completely decorated. Another improvement that was much needed will be a ventilating system to put fresh air into the auditorium, which will be installed during the next few days.

The program for next week should surpass anything offered the past season, as the United Theater company is now in a position to offer the public the best possible vaudeville amusement.

Heading the bill commencing Monday matinee will be the "Rube Welch and Kitty Frances company," assisted by the Misses Coyle, Beatrice and Byrne, in a big comedy act, which has been featured in every Eastern city, and is now making a Western tour.

The newest musical comedy creations are introduced by this clever and talented company of artists.

An act that stands in the front ranks of vaudeville will be Ethel Hammond, a charming little singing comedienne, with a sweet voice and charming manner. Her songs and impersonations have won her praise wherever she has appeared.

A novelty, somewhat different from anything which is now in vaudeville, will be the Grazers, Arnold and Ethyl, in their newest creation, entitled "Going Into Vaudeville," introducing Arnold Grazer, champion toe dancer of the world. One of the comedy hits of the bill will be "Doc" Rice, who is known as the "Grand Master of Black-face Comedy." His original songs and stories are a laugh from start to finish.

As a big extra feature will be the Abdallah Troupe of six whirlwind gymnasts, who have been featured in every large city in both Europe and America, and patrons of the Bijou next week, will see the world's best troupe of acrobats, whose sensational and daring feats have earned them the distinction of being classed as the world's greatest acrobatic marvels.

Isadore Silver, Duluth's favorite illustrated singer, will sing one of his newest and best ballads, entitled, "If I Should Fall in Love With You," which is illustrated with beautiful colored views. A feature in the moving picture line will be views of the now popular Directoire Gowns, as seen in New York city, Paris and London. There will also be a spectacular picture, entitled, "Mystery Mountain." There will be no change in the policy of the theater, or prices. Three shows are given daily, at 2:45 p. m., 8 and 9:30 p. m. The box office will open Monday morning at 10 a. m. Seats may be reserved by either telephone.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Edwin Stevens the Most Versatile Actor in America ---George M. Cohan's Minstrel Show Starts Out---Maxine Elliott Has New Play.

New York, Aug. 1.—Edwin Stevens, who scored an enormous success as the Devil in Henry W. Savage's trial production of "The Cloven Foot" at Hartford, Conn., last week, is an actor who started at the top of the ladder and stayed there. During a career of twenty-five years on the American stage, Mr. Stevens never has played a small part, and he is probably the most consistently successful player before the public today.

About a quarter of a century ago Mr. Stevens combined a bank position in San Francisco with the profession of an oratorio singer. Miss Alice Oates, then one of the most popular prima donnas in America, visited San Francisco with her opera company. Her leading baritone suddenly became ill and in seeking a substitute to sing the important role of Mourzeoux in "Giroflo-Giroflia," Miss Oates found Mr. Stevens and engaged him. It was his first stage appearance, and he scored so decided a success that he was signed for a term of years by the management of the Grand opera house, where he became leading man with the stock company playing that theater. One of his first hits was with "Nana Sahib," in which he played the role of the Colonel.

At the close of the season Mr. Stevens returned to the bank as paying-teller and remained there until an attractive stage opportunity presented itself, when he went to Portland, Or., where he became manager of two theaters and owner of one. He not only managed his theaters, the Tivoli and Casino, but directed the productions at both houses and alternated between the two as leading man.

Following his managerial career in Portland, Mr. Stevens did Lorenzo in "The Mascot" and the title role of "The Mikado." He played "Rip Van Winkle" in Planquette's opera of the same name and followed this with a long season in grand opera. His first appearance in New York occurred seventeen years ago at the Star theater, where he played the role of Hadad in "Said Pasha" and also stage managed the production.

After his engagement at the Star he was signed by Rudolph Aronson as leading comedian at the Casino theater, where he succeeded Francis Wilson and played four successive years. Later he scored a great hit at Wallach's theater as the Duke Bamboola in "The Sea King." Mr. Stevens' first dramatic role in New York was that of Count Aevitott in "Cleopatra." Simultaneously he appeared as the Major in a vaudeville-raiser called "The Major's Appointment." His first starring tour was in "Wang," which he played for a season and left to become a member of the famous Daly Stock company at Daly's theater.

Mr. Stevens sought the engagement, as he expresses it, "for polish and discipline. I had been playing comedian for so many years with musical pieces, at a time when the leading comedian was of such importance that practically he could do as he pleased, and I sought the intelligent and artistic direction of Mr. Daly to correct the mistakes that so many years of professional freedom had developed."

Beginning with the leading male role in "The Two Executioners," Mr. Stevens successively and successfully played many roles at Daly's theater, until he electrified New York in the character of the Russian general in "Countess Gucki." Later he played the same roles in London with great success.

On his return to New York he evidenced wonderful versatility in the many parts he played at Daly's. In one week he appeared in the title role of "The Magistrate;" as Marquis Amari in "The Geisha;" as Sir Peter Teazle, and as Malvolio.

After leaving Mr. Daly, Mr. Stevens placed himself under the managerial direction of Charles Frohman, playing the title role in "His Excellency, The Governor," Signor Bollati in "Captain Jenks," Baron Stein in the all-star cast of "Diplomacy," and scored an enormous hit in "Prince Charlie," in which William Faversham made his first appearance as a star and which was withdrawn after two performances at the Empire. Indeed it was an open secret that the piece was withdrawn because Mr. Stevens made a greater success than the star.

For the past two years Mr. Stevens has appeared during the regular theatrical season in vaudeville, playing "A Night Off," "Cousin Kitty" and "An Evening with Dickens." Last summer he went to San Francisco as the star of the stock company at the Tivoli. He was engaged for four weeks, but his engagement proved so popular that the season was lengthened to four months.

Mr. Stevens has played every sort of a part in every sort of a play and opera. His experience is unlimited and his career unique. By his physical characteristics he is peculiarly qualified to play the Dauphin "The Cloven Foot" while his artistic talents are beyond question. Mr. Savage expects him to score a wonderful success and believes "The Cloven Foot" will score dramatically as big as a sensation as was made in operatic circles by "The Merry Widow." "The Cloven Foot" will be the first production at the Garden theater in September.

George M. Cohan's minstrel show, with George (Honey Boy) Evans as the star, opened Monday night in Atlantic City and starts out on a tour that promises well in the beginning. George M. John H. Blackwood, a former newspaper man in Washington, and who went West with Mrs. Carter as her manager and remained there to direct the destinies of the Belasco theater in Los Angeles, has taken over another house there and will be his own manager hereafter. Blackwood opened and operated the Belasco stock house for Messrs. Mayer and Belasco of San Francisco. He was the resident manager in Los Angeles. Recently he took over the Auditorium in that city and transferred his allegiance to that theater. He has also engaged for his leading man, Louis Stone, long with the Belasco company, and who is the most popular stock actor on the Pacific coast. Blackwood is now in the East, booking plays for the first season of his new theater.

The forthcoming tour of Joseph and William W. Jefferson in "The Rivals" will be one of the longest and hardest ever undertaken by a theatrical organization. Their season opens early in Aug. and will continue until the following June, in which time the company will travel about thirty one thousand miles and play in nearly two hundred towns. The tour embraces thirty states and six of the Canadian provinces.

"Paid in Full," Eugene Walter's virile play of American life has now outlived all its rivals both in New York city and Chicago. On Broadway, at Wagenhals & Kemper's Astor theater it has passed the double century mark and the Chicago company has now presented the play over 100 times. Considering that these records have been made in the heat of summer, with the strongest possible opposition from parks, resorts of various kinds and other dramatic attractions, the circumstances are remarkable. It is a matter of fact that not a single dramatic attraction that began its career at the same time, or subsequent to, the production of "Paid in Full" in either Chicago or New York, is now on the boards, yet the Wagenhals & Kemper presentations continue prosperously in both cities.

Miss Ivy Gerald has awaited for 200 performances to determine that "Paid in Full" is a real hit before she comes forward with a claim of early proprietary interest in that piece. Miss Gerald says she wrote a sketch and submitted it to Katherine Grey, who turned it down. It was later suggested, so Miss Gerald claims, to Walter, and out of this he evolved the present hit, "Paid in Full." There is one amusing side of these belated claims of plagiarism that the late Bill McConnell pointed out. This is that no one ever comes forward to claim a failure.

Maxine Elliott's new play for her new theater will be by Clyde Fitch, who has provided her with the only real success she has had since becoming a star. The piece is to be called "The Social Guide," and, as indicated, will deal with social life in New York city, a subject that Fitch has applied to before with good results. Fitch has been spending the spring and early summer in Europe, and is due back soon. He disposed of a number of his former plays while abroad and they will be seen this winter in Germany, France and Italy. This is all the result of the unusual vogue of his play, "The Truth," in these countries. It is a singular fact that Europe has raved over "The Truth," which has never been a success in America.

Joseph Santley, the real boy actor and author, has just completed a new play in which he is to be a star next season and send thrills through popular-priced houses of the country. It is to be called "Lucky Jim."

While New York has been talking about its new theater Chicago has jumped into the lead and actually established one. By arrangements made with Donald Robertson last week the Fullerton hall in the Chicago Art Institute will be placed at the disposal of his associate players and they will commence there in September a season of thirty weeks, which will be devoted to the production of the modern dramas by the best authors of Germany, France, England, America, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and Russia. The financial responsibilities will be assumed by the directors and members of the Chicago Art society. They number 2,500, and this will leave the stage producers free to follow their scheme without considering the financial aspect of their productions. It will be purely a case of art for art's sake, and the attendance at the theater will be limited to members of the society backing the undertaking. The outcome will be watched with interest, for its success means a tremendous step forward in the right direction and the establishment of theaters that will be ultimately relieved in a measure of the taint of commercialism.

George Kingsbury will manage the Music Halls in Chicago, which Kohl & Castle are to install in the Olympic theater, one of their former vaudeville houses in the Windy City. The new show to be presented there the coming season will be called "A New Yorker in Chicago." The outcome is apparent at a glance.

In her petition in bankruptcy case Mrs. Leslie Carter-Payne, the actress, was on the stand in the United States court in New York city last week and admitted that she owed $194,318.62 with assets of $59,926.18, leaving her creditors to hold the bag for $134,000. In her statement Mrs. Carter said that Charles B. Dillingham still owed her $16,000 on an unfilled contract, and that as partner of David Belasco she still had money coming from that manager, but was unable to say how much. Mrs. Carter says he first trip netted her $60,000 the season before last under her own management, but that she lost money on her recent tour.

Phoebe Davies, who has been with "Way Down East" from the day it made its first hit, will be clear of that play this season. She is now in Los Angeles preparing a trial week of the dramatic version of Bret Harte's story "Two Men of Sandy Bar." Miss Davies made the dramatization herself. Recently, in London, she purchased the American rights to the new comedy, "Mrs. Tantalus," and will be a star in that piece when she brings it out next November, with a prominent English player as associate star. Miss Davies will also rehearse the companies that are to tour in "Way Down East."

She will be supported by Oswald Yorke and a carefully selected company, while the production will be made under the personal stage direction of Collin Kemper. "The Stronger Sex" has been one of the great successes of the London season, registering a run of over 200 performances at the Haymarket theater in the British metropolis.

When Henry B. Harris gave the name of "Hudson" to his beautiful New York playhouse, it was not only in appreciation of the Dutch explorer, Heinrik Hudson, but also because Mr. Harris, who is thoroughly American in everything he does, wished to have his theater bear the name of one of the first American settlers. Not content with the mere name, Mr Harris is to further honor this historical character by the presentation on a new drop curtain, which is being made for the theater, of the great Hudson entering the river which forever after was to bear his name.

The curtain, which is designed and painted by Joseph A. Physioc, is of Russia linen with a four-foot border of gold, the latter decorated with a nautical treatment of ropes. The body of the curtain offers a picture of Hudson's ship, "The Half Moon," entering the river and flying its crescent flag. The sky shows the gray and purple of the early morning, with the majestic Palisades on the side, while on the other is seen the heads of a number of Indians peering over the rocks. At the bottom is a portrait of Hudson from an authentic painting.

It is a peculiar circumstance that the first production on which this curtain will be raised is a play whose locale represents the Hudson Bay trading post, for this is where the first scene of "The Call of the North," in which Robert Edeson appears on Aug. 24, is set. To enhance the atmosphere of this scene Mr. Harris has had a second curtain especially made, which will set four feet to the rear of the drop curtain. This will represent the Northern trading post in mid-winter, so that before the play begins the audience may be given an idea of the severe winters and great hardships of the traders during this season. This curtain raised unveils the regular scene which opens the play, that of the glorious aspect of the late spring in the Hudson Bay country.

Master Gabriel, one of the smallest actors in the world, has been engaged by Klaw & Erlanger to sustain the title role in their New York Herald cartoon play, "Little Nemo," as caricatured by Windsor McCay and now being made ready for the stage by Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith. Another engagement by Klaw & Erlanger for this production is Billy B. Van, for the character of Flip.

Master Gabriel first came prominently into the limelight by reason of his admirable conception of Richard Outcault's famous cartoons of Buster Brown.

"The City Chap," is the title of George Ade's latest play output, and is to be made known to the amusement loving public by Cohan & Harris early in the coming season, with Jack Norworth in the title role, surrounded by an excellent company of dramatic and singing artists. "The City Chap" is a play with musical environments supplied most liberally by Benjamin Hapgood Burt, who has delivered a number of songs that have the true melodic and rhythmic swing, with accompanying lyrics of particularly convincing value.

The theatrical season of 1908-09 for Charles Frohman enterprises was practically opened last week when two companies, "The Girls of Gottenberg" and "Fluffy Ruffles," were assembled for the first rehearsal. The members of the "Fluffy Ruffles" company were summoned to the Criterion theater. "The Girls of Gottenberg" company assembled at the Knickerbocker theater, where the production is to begin its season on the 1st of September. The roster of both companies is now complete. Miss Hattie Williams, the star of "Fluffy Ruffles," has just returned from Paris, and Miss Gertrude Millar, whom Charles Frohman is importing from the Gaiety Theater company is shortly to sail for New York. Besides Miss Millar, Mr. Frohman is bringing over Ernest Cossart, Warwick Wellington, Henry Vincent, Ridgwell Cullum, Overton Moyle, Leslie Gaze and Miss Edith Kelly, all well known upon the London musical stage, for prominent parts in "The Girls of Gottenberg." Lionel Mackinder and James Blakeley, last season with "The Little Cherub" company, will also be sent from London to play the chief male parts in "The Girls of Gottenberg."

THEATRICAL MEN SEE BETTER TIMES AHEAD

Advance Agent of Prosperity on the Road Again, Declare Managers---Many New Productions ---Bright Outlook for High-Class Plays.

From inquiries made last week it is evident that a majority of the theatrical managers are more hopeful of prosperity for the coming season than they were a month ago, says the New York Times. Though conditions are as yet by no means entirely normal, the managers say there is a general return of confidence largely inspired by the ambitious announcements recently made by the leading producers. The announcements were never before on such a large scale, and the more prominent men in the business declare they have determined to accept the risk and go ahead undisturbed by disasters of the past season.

Klaw & Erlanger, Charles Frohman, the Shuberts, William A. Brady, Henry W. Savage, Wagenhals & Kemper, Charles Dillingham, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., H. B. Harris, and many more declare confidently that they will produce more pieces than last season. Klaw & Erlanger, under their own name, are becoming producing managers on a scale they have never before attempted, and are devoting their attention almost solely to American works by American authors. The Shuberts state that they will have some ten more productions than last year, and the Frohman budget for two continents is ever bigger than usual.

If there is to be a shortage in productions, it is to be for the popular priced and melodrama theaters. The lesser managers, whose names even are not known to the New York public, are necessarily those who have felt their losses the most severely, and who find their operations the most seriously crippled.

Though a campaign year is ordinarily regarded as a "late season" among theatrical men, announcements already issued make it evident that the New York theaters will open at the usual times. The same is said to be true of the leading theaters in the larger cities and recognized theatrical centers throughout the country, though some postponement may be expected.

However, the "one-night stands" are practically not yet booked to any extent. This is unusual at this time of year, and is regarded as an indication that the number of small attractions will be less than usual during the season, and that openings on tour will be late. The booking agent for one of the most prominent firms in the city said a few days ago that the absence of bookings for the small towns was most exceptional, and that he had found it possible to engage practically any time he desired.

The vaudeville bookings are also late, but this is laid largely to the uncertainty of the situation created by the new Morris opposition and to the difficulty of readjusting salaries that were very large during the "advanced vaudeville" competition of a year ago.

During the last two days several managers have been out of town, and others have not desired to discuss the matter in detail, leaving their announcements to speak for themselves.

Among the managers interviewed, Henry W. Savage, H. B. Harris and Lee Shubert are especially optimistic. William A. Brady is not so confident, even though he expects to make many productions.

"Any season is a good season for a truly good attraction," said Mr. Shubert. "I believe that better times are coming, and that the events of the next few months will justify the prediction. I am not prepared to say that the season for the smaller towns may not open somewhat later than usual, but I feel sure that the high-class productions for the leading cities will be well under way at the customary time. Every one must be aware that rehearsals are now in progress in practically every available hall and theater.

"I do not consider that the campaign will have any serious effect on the theaters and as I have just said, the people will always go to see a genuinely fine presentation of a genuinely fine play or musical comedy. I have added to my list of stars, and I expect to send out ten productions more than during the last season."

"I am optimistic with regard to the outlook for the coming theatrical season," said Mr. Harris. "Possibly the best proof of my belief in the return of a settled and sane prosperity is my own extensive plans for the year, opening with the production of 'The Traveling Salesman' here at the Liberty theater on Aug. 10. It is not necessary to repeat a list of my offerings, which will be more numerous than ever. A glance at the forecast of other managerial plans would lead me to think that my sanguine view is almost universally shared by theatrical producers."

"As everybody knows or should know, the advance agent of prosperity has been getting in some good licks for the past month, and signs of better times for the coming season are unmistakable," said Mr. Savage. "This is more apparent in the business world than it is in the artistic, but as the theatrical world has both its business and its artistic sides, the promising conditions of course will be felt by the producer of stage pieces. One has only to note the improvement in general business and the bountiful crops to be justified in giving his predictions a decidedly optimistic coloring.

"An excellent sign is the large number of new productions that the producing managers have ordered. I hardly believe that the times will improve greatly for what may be called the cheaper attractions unless they are to be sold at bargain prices, but the demand is certainly flattering for the better operas, the better plays, the high-class actors, and the better productions. I am launching nothing but my newest plays and my best companies this season, and do not hesitate to say that I am expecting one of the best years in my experience. I anticipate that the producing managers will all be pleased as soon as the season opens."

"I see nothing to indicate an early recovery of prosperity in general," said Mr. Brady, whose fame as a prophet has spread since a year ago, when he predicted the depression of the past season. "I see nothing to make me think that the theater is in for what may called a good season. Of course, I prefer to be wrong in my opinion. The history of our periods of business depression has been that the theater is the first to feel the effects and the first to recover, but in the depression of last fall and winter the theater held its own long after every other line of business had suffered. It is my belief that the theater will be as slow to feel the resurgence of easier money as it was to feel the all-around drop in values."

THE MOODS OF STAGE BOSSES

Stage managers, as a rule, are funny combinations. They are salads of peppery temper, sweetness of humor, and slipperiness of whim, with a plentiful dash of human kindness thrown in to render them digestible.

It would be hard to imagine a more excitable man at rehearsal than William A. Brady. The moment he enters the theater his company is on tenterhooks. The women nervously feel of belts and collars to make sure they are on all right. The men clear their throats and endeavor to look unconscious, succeeding as people usually do under like circumstances.

Mr. Brady advances to his place with a rush and stentorious breathing. His manner fairly exudes, "Here I am! Here I am! eGt to work! I'm in a firing mood today and won't brook any nonsense!" What he really does say is:

"Where! Hot! Beastly weather. Well, get ready!"

The rehearsal commences. Mr. Brady goes to the back of the theater. He throws his coat open. Something goes wrong and he tears yelling to the front. The difficulty adjusted, he retreats. Again he hurries to the stage. This time he has discarded his coat. Back he goes again. Next time he makes his appearance his collar is off.

By the time the rehearsal is at an end he is as nearly dressed as possible for him to be and remain outside the dressing room—or the city jail. He is minus collar, cuffs, vest and coat. His shirt is open. His suspenders are hanging down. His face is red and perspiring, and, on the whole, he looks an object for charity or the insane asylum. His people also appear worn and dragged. Rehearsing with this manager is strenuous work.

Under Control.

Gustav Thomas has himself under the best of control. It is rarely he allows his temper to run away with his tongue. Some of his people have wondered whether he possesses temper. Mr. Thomas directs with his megaphone entirely. If anything is not as he thinks it should be he turns the instrument to the actor who has disturbed and speaks quietly to him, not stopping the work for a moment.

The manager is considerate in numerous little ways. For instance, he is most particular that meal hours be observed. No matter how great the need for hurry, he insists that a certain time be taken off for lunch.

"I do not see that I am so considerate," said Mr. Thomas. "I do no more for my people than the laboring man does for his horse. An animal is not expected to work many hours without food and rest. If it were compelled to, its work would not be of the best. I am purely selfish in my—consideration, as you call it. I look ahead. I want to keep my people in good trim so they will do me credit."

Lackaye's Sarcasm.

The sarcasm of Wilton Lackaye is the horror of the stage folk he rehearses. He is never loud-mouthed. He is never scur of visages. He rarely loses his composure. But his tongue—his bitter, biting remarks—can cause a man to grovel or a girl to whimper when a hard word or look would produce no effect. He does not glory in this power of his. At times he is ashamed of it, but it is as much a part of him as his generous heart, and he cannot help it.

People call Clyde Fitch "the confidence man." He is great on confidences. He rarely corrects one actor before another. Instead, he calls the various ones aside, tells them of their failings and suggests improvements.

He is a master hand at details. There is nothing too small to claim his attention. A pane of glass cracking must crack so that it sounds "cracky." If it is supposed to rain, it must rain like rain and not like a shower bath or a tub of water spilling. This tendency toward detail has made Mr. Fitch what he is.

Fitch's Detail.

In his latest play, "Girls," now on at the Chicago opera house, Mr. Fitch's detail work is superb. His girls—three bachelor maids living alone in a tiny room on the fourth story of a New York flat—are continually doing just the right things—the things girls do. Some of them are funny; some pathetic. All are true to life.

J. C. Hofman is whimsical. One never knows just how he will be. One day he is in the best of humors. The next he enters the theater with a face as black as a thunderstorm. The next he is sad and distrait. Just the same, he is considered one of the best managers in the country, and is generally beloved by the actresses and actors with whom he works.

"It's great to be a manager," said Mr. Fitch the other day.

"But it's not all joy. It's work—the real work we hear a lot about but that few people know anything about. Still, it pays, and its price is good to a man who likes success and appreciation for which he has attained to after long years of struggle."

LOVEMAKING IS FREAKISH

According, That is, to Some of Our Stage People Today---Interesting Lines Drawn About Some of the Popular Plays.

The conventional way of lovemaking is not to be compared in the same day with unconventional lovemaking, which partakes of the unusual and freakish—the kind of lovemaking to see which we pay out good money into the boxoffice of a theater.

As a rule love is made preliminary to marriage and it consists of honeyed words, candy, kisses and a few quarrels; a fit or two of jealousy and numerous situations. Sometimes it is spiced by papa's disapproval or mamma's rage. The principal thing about it is, however, that it is sweet—just as sweet as it can be. This is when it is conventional.

But Shakespeare did not believe in adhering to the conventional. So he wrote "The Taming of the Shrew."

You know about Petruchio? And Katherine? She was one woman upon whom soft words had no effect. She was a creature of dominating personality, who would brook no interference and would acknowledge no master. In a case of this kind there was no way but for mere man to assert himself and assert himself he did. Love would not win her. A blacksnake should. Those of you who have seen the play will remember the way in which she was hauled over the coals and married and then beaten around from pillar to post after marriage until she was forced to acknowledge herself worsted. This being done she became one of the most lovable of women.

This, then, is one freakish way of lovemaking. It has been known to be effective in cases other than Katherine's, though it is safe to predict that it would not do at all times and with all conditions of women.

A Bad Start.

"Liar!"

This is what Frances Starr, playing as Juanita in "Rose of the Rancho," would shriek at Charles Richmond, her lover, whose name in the play was Karney. Instead of being the docile little thing that she should have been she seemed possessed with a demon of unrest and suspicion and whenever her lover would approach her with endearing words endeavoring to win her confidence and love, she would dart away from him shrieking at the top of her voice:

Liar! Liar! Liar!"

This method of procedure was unusual for it is not often that a woman will hold out for so long against the attentions of a man who really cares for her. She is rather more inclined to believe that he is fonder of her than he appears to be. Had Juanita not been clearly of Spanish extraction the conclusion would inevitably have been that she hailed from Missouri, where things—even true love—must be proved and shown at their face value. Of course, in the end Karney wins her for his own, but as a man said in speaking of the play:

"He had a devilish hard time doing it."

Strange Story.

The love story of "Candida" is a strange one and full of peculiar situations. In this play we have a minister's wife who is beloved of two men—her husband and a poet. She is a high-spirited girl, upon whom the monotonous round of life in a parsonage brightened by no amusement, has begun to pall. She meets the poet, who falls in love with her. Her husband sees how things stand, and though he is madly jealous of the other man, he feels that he can trust his wife and he makes no pretense of watching her—in fact, he makes opportunities of leaving her and the poet alone together. In the end, when Candida is called upon to choose between the two, she takes her husband. The chances are, however, that if he had betrayed other propensities save his absolute trust and belief in her—had he honored her and spied upon her—she would have taken the other man.

Here was a case where a man showed his love by leaving the woman who was the object of it entirely alone and to her own devices.

A hint for unhappy husbands.

There is some funny love-making in "Man and Superman." Here the man in the case is the doubting Thomas. He is decidedly in love, but he thinks that he in turn is not beloved. The consequence of this state of mind is that the woman takes upon herself the role that by all laws of etiquette should be the man's, and pursues her errant swain madly. She chases him from place to place in an automobile. Finally she lands him and compels him to believe that he is the one—the only one—for her.

Sauerkraut Love.

For "sauerkraut lovemaking with a twang of spaghetti and a halo of cigaret smoke one must be referred to "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." Victor Moore as Kid Burns and Fay Templeton as Plain Mary certainly do make the slang and exclamation points fly. The air is black with a line of talk which you get nowhere else excepting

FAIR TO BE RECORD-BREAKER

Minnesota State Fair Managers Offer $72,000 for Premiums and Prizes and Are Spending $25,000 for Vaudeville and Circus Attractions.

PART OF THE NOVELLOS TROUPE.
Austrian Acrobats and Animal Trainers. Grandstand Program Afternoon and Evening. Minnesota State Fair, Aug. 31-Sept. 5.

In keeping with the policy which has steadily developed the Minnesota state fair during the last forty-nine years and which sees each succeeding year a larger and better fair in each department, the board of managers for this year have not only decided upon the expenditure of $32,000 for the prizes in the speed department, and of $40,000 for premiums, but have also increased the appropriation for amusements, until $25,000 will be spent this year for the vaudeville and circus attractions with which to amuse the grandstand crowds and those who will patronize the horse show and trained animal show in the live stock pavilion.

This unprecedented expenditure for amusements has made possible the booking of aerial, acrobatic, gymnastic, equestrian and other features of the circus-vaudeville type, of excellence and originality superior to any that have ever before appeared at any state fair.

Prominent among these features will be the famous Novellos, an Austrian combination of acrobats, trained elephants, horses and dogs, which is quite the most pretentious as well as the most sensational amusement feature on tour this season. The Novellos troupe will be the star number on the grandstand program each afternoon and evening of the state fair, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, and there will also be such features as Paul Batty's trained bears; the Six Flying Banvards, aerialists from the Circus Schuman, Berlin; the famous Judge-Dacoma Family, acrobats, and the Seven Grunathos, who have the reputation of being the greatest septette of women acrobats ever seen.

Then there will be Douglass and Douglass, acrobatic comedians; the Six Josettis, and a dozen other features which will keep interest at the top-notch during the intervals between the races both afternoon and evening.

A reputation of being the greatest sextette to be concluded each evening by the great historical spectacle, "Fer Ridgely in '62," which is to be participated in by 300 Sioux Indians from the Sisseton reservation, and twice as many white men, and by a $1,000 display of Gregory's famous fireworks.

An innovation in the amusement department in this year's fair will be the fancy horse show, cattle show, and hippodrome, given each evening in the live stock pavilion, and including beside the best of driving and saddle horses in the Northwest, a parade of the prize taking cattle, the horses on exhibition at the state fair, and a trained animal exhibition, which will include such features as Treat's Seals, Madame Marie Smith and her high school horse Mizpah, and Prof. Lon Sunlin and his trained bull, Bill, Fink's mules, etc.

A special attraction for this new form of state fair entertainment will be the Crack drill squad from the University of Minnesota.

As in other departments, the board of managers of the Minnesota state fair is making extraordinary efforts and expenditures to make this semi-centennial fair a record-breaker in every way.

SILVER CITY IS PLEASED

New Mexicans Feel That Merger of Comanche and Copper Gulf Means Resumption of Activity at the Camp—Headquarters in Duluth.

Silver City, N. M., is well pleased with the merger of the Comanche Mining & Smelting company and the Copper Gulf Mining company. Offices of the new enterprise will be located in Duluth.

The New Mexicans see in the combine a resumption of activity there which will spell greater advances and prosperity for Silver City and the entire Burro Mountain mining district, as well as dollars for the men interested in the development of the properties of the two companies.

The men at the head of the combination have had years of experience in mining work and are backed by dollars enough to permit them to pursue a vigorous policy, meaning the opening up of both properties and the placing of them on a basis where they will yield good returns to the investors.

As soon as possible it is expected that the Comanche claims will be settled up, the Silver City smelter opened and a resumption of activity on the Pinos Altos and Burro Mountain Mines of the combined interests.

There are some big men interested in the enterprise and it will be directed from the headquarters of the combination, which are to be located in Duluth.

The following editorial is from the Silver City Enterprise:

"The news of the big merger of the Comanche Mining & Smelting company's interests with those of the Copper Gulf Mining company is the most important that has reached Silver City in many a day. It means the opening up of the mining industry of this section on a larger scale than was ever attempted before. The Copper Gulf company is composed of moneyed men who think nothing of spending a million before they start producing a pound of ore. The are conservative business men who make a business of manufacturing copper. They have had years of experience in the business and they know pretty accurately just what obstacles they must overcome to make their investment a profitable one, before they go into a thing. If plenty of capital and conservative businesslike management count for anything, then the success of the merger in their big venture is already assured. It means the setting up of the Comanche claims, the opening of the Silver City smelter and the resumption of work on the Pinos Altos and Burro Mountain mines of the combined interests. In short, it means a general revival of mining in this section and the effect on business conditions will be immediate and decisive."

HER HEART WAS PIERCED

Indiana Girl Dies From a Most Peculiar Condition.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 1.—Within five minutes after she awakened her mother to tell of a peculiar sensat on that had come over her, Miss Violeta Bowen, aged 16, died from leakage of the heart. It is one of the most peculiar cases that has ever come to the attention of local physicians. A postmortem examination developd that a minute sharp instrument resembling the point of a needle had entered her heart through the artery. Frequently during the past few months Miss Bowen complained of piercing sensations, first in her hand, then in her forearm, next in the shoulder and finally in the chest. It is believed that the point of a needle entered her hand and traveled all the way to the heart. Miss Bowen came here from Denver two weeks ago with her mother, Mrs. Tressa Walden.

WASHINGTON PIE.

Almost everyone has heard of Washington pie, but there seems to be no agreement of opinion as to what member of the pie family rightly bears the name of the Father of His Country, says the New York Sun.

"Washington pie?" says the man from Way Down East, which is beyond Boston, repeating your question. "Why, sure, I know it. There are three layers of spongy cake, with two layers of jelly or strawberry preserves in between and white frosting on top. It's bully, too, and I wish I could get it here."

"But that's not Washington pie," interrupts the woman from the West, "that's simply layer cake. Washington pie, though, is something like cake. But there are only two layers of cake, and in between is a creamy filling made of eggs and milk and sugar and a little flavoring. And you put powdered sugar on the top."

"That's Boston cream pie," chorus two persons from Boston itself, who speak with the assurance that betrays their habitat. "And what's more, we never heard of Washington pie. Do you think it fitting to name a pie after an important historical figure?"

"I've been making Washington pie for years," interposes mildly a woman who lives in Brooklyn and isn't ashamed of it, "and my Washington pie is a pie and not a cake. I grind apples into a pulp and mix the pulp with sherry and use that as a filling for an ordinary open-face pie. The completed article looks much like pumpkin pie, and it's the toothsomest thing I know."

Now what is Washington pie?

SOX POUND CODY AGAIN

Clark Attempts to Retrieve, But Falls Before Sox.

Krick Hands Out Second Blank in Three Days.

The fair fan—or fanness, or——. Anyway, she had a lovely time yesterday. The weather was just like Teddy Roosevelt's welcome. The peanuts were crisp and brown, and the pop sparkling. There weren't many men in the grandstand to blow horrid cigar smoke in her face. Josie Krick pitched, and the White Stockings won, 5 to 0. What else could any feminine devotee of the national pastime ask?

Lured by the beautiful weather and the cool breezes which blows out at Athletic park, she was out in force yesterday. Young and old, big and small, pretty and plain, single with friends, and married with children, she was there with frills and frivolities to enjoy the fun. There was only one feature to detract from her pleasure. Womanly sympathy for the under dog fought with loyalty to the home team, and which conquered is a question that no mere man would attempt to answer. Ain't it just too awful, Mabel, that those poor Fargo boys couldn't get around the bases even once. And that big Mr. Clark seems to be such a nice man, too.

The poor Brownies, buffeted around on the sea of baseball adversity, sure were the under dogs again. Josie Krick stood over them, and they cringed at his knees. For the second time in three days, he ran the burning iron of runless defeat into their suffering souls, and did it with a finish that can be attained only by the true matinee idol. Josie is that. He didn't give the Fargoites even a look, and it is the privilege of the baseball matinee girl, as well as the theater variety, to admire the hero, even if he is married.

Seriously, the game was a buzzer. It had everything played on the lot this year beaten for speed. There weren't many spectacular features, but the Sox plodded along, gave a grand demonstration of how they intend to go to the top for that pennant, and ended it up by swatting the daylights out of Cody Clark and making a victory that they had already won a good one.

The Fargoites had few chances, and what they did have they couldn't take. Only three times they reached third base, and then with two men out and the third an easy victory to Krick and his backers. Josie was pitching ball every minute of the time, and enjoying it. The play behind was that of league leaders, not runners down for the cellar championship. It was spear and stab, throw and catch everything that came along, and, with good pitching in front, the boys behind did their part nobly. There was only one little slip. In the ninth inning, John Ness, sure of his man, dropped the throw from Wescott on Al Williams' grounder. It didn't count for anything, for Siner fanned, Godfrey flied out, to center field and Williams was caught between second and third by a throw from Pratt.

After being chased to the seclusion of the bench Thursday, Clark thought that he would come back yesterday. He did come back for a few innings. For seven innings he had the Sox going for fair, with but four badly scattered hits and one run, which was contributed by Clevenger's error. The misplay put Monroe safe on first base, and O'Brien followed up with a slashing two-base hit, scoring Thorsen, who was running for Monroe.

Clark went to pieces in the eighth. Wescott hit one to left that went through Siner, and he went to second. Monroe walked and Ness bunted safely, filling the sacks. O'Brien came forward with a single, scoring Wescott, and Dave Williams popped out. Pratt is the pinch hitter of that outfit. He pinched Fargo severely, hitting for two sacks and scoring two men, Darby going down at the plate trying to score from third. Hopkins singled and Pratt scored, Hopkins being caught trying to take second on Godfrey's fumble of his hit.

The game was played in one hour and thirteen minutes, despite the fact that hits, passes and errors were numerous. To add to the game's remarkable features, Josie Krick got a real live two-base hit. Nothing fluky about it. In the seventh inning, with two down, he cracked one right on the proboscus, pushed it out between right and center and went down to second base, where he stood to receive the plaudits of the surprised fans. Truly, 'twas a great day for Josie.

HIBBING BEATS MIGHTY GRAHAM

Sage Outpitches Virginia Twirler and Gets 2 to 1 Victory.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a pitchers' battle between Sage and Graham, the Hibbing Colts won from Virginia yesterday by a score of 2 to 1.

The game was fast and well played. Sage had a little the better of the argument, but there was little to choose between in the work of the two men. Hibbing supported its pitcher perfectly, however, while the Virginia players made two errors. Hibbing scored in the first and sixth, and the Virginians just saved themselves from a shutout by working one man across the plate in the ninth inning.

THEOBALD WINS AGAIN

Maroon Southpaw Lets Brandon Down With Four Hits.

Kellar is Hit Hard and Winnipeg Scores Easy Victory.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Theobald let Brandon down with four scattered hits last evening and the Maroons won another game from the league leaders, by a score of 4 to 0.

The southpaw was in fine shape. He issued four bases on balls and contributed the only error himself, getting into several bad holes, but he always pulled himself out by good work. His teammates supported him well in the pinches and there was little doubt of the result after the first two innings.

Kellar, who pitched for Brandon, was hit hard, the Maroons getting ten hits, three of them for two bases. Two runs were scored in the first inning, one in the second and one in the seventh. Kellar was given errorless support.

Brandon plays two games here today and leaves for Duluth Sunday, Fargo coming Monday for a week's series.

COLERAINE LOSES TO JIM HANEY

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—With Old Jim Haney pitching excellent ball, the Eveleth team defeated Coleraine here yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 0.

Haney pitched his best game since he has been with Eveleth. The Irishmen could get but five hits and they were badly scattered. Eveleth got to Lein in the first, seventh and eighth and scored three runs easily. The batting of Voss, who cracked out two doubles, and the fielding of Freer were the features of the game.

THE GOLD SUPPLY.

Banker and Investor: The following is believed to be a fairly accurate record of the gold production of the world to date:

United States	$3,040,000,000
Australia	2,720,000,000
Russia (with Siberia)	1,500,000,000
Colombia	950,000,000
Africa	950,000,000
Brazil	800,000,000
Mexico	250,000,000
Canada	200,000,000
Bolivia	220,000,000
Peru	150,000,000
India	130,000,000
Other countries	250,000,000
Ancient production	100,000,000
Total	$11,400,000,000

The director of the United States mint estimates the total of the world's supply of gold as about $5,000,000,000. The inference is that nearly half the gold mineral has gone into jewelry or the arts, or is hoarded or lost. We do know that about two-thirds of the annual production of $400,000,000 now goes into coin. As the quantity increases every year, it is apparent that in less than ten years the total of gold money will increase from $8,000,000,000 to over $3,000,000,000.

NOVELTY RACE PLAN

Owners Stand a Better Chance Than Before to Win Money.

Having secured for the early closing events a list of entries which gives promise of the speediest sport of kings ever seen in the Northwest, Supt. of Speed C. M. Griggs is now busily engaged in watching owners of other fast harness horses nominating their favorites for the late closing events of the Minnesota state fair to be held this year from Aug. 31 to Sept. 5 inclusive.

Early closing events, including the $5,000 free-for-all trot announced for Monday, Aug. 31; the $5,000 Minneapolis trot," Friday, Sept. 4 the $5,000 "St. Paul pace," Tuesday, Sept. 1, and the $3,000 "Famine pace," for Wednesday, Sept. 2, brought on the entry books of the state fair a list of horses such as High Ball, Maude C and Dana Patch, that give ample evidence of the determination of the best class of horse owners to make some new records and some more money on the world's record mile track at Hamline.

The racing events, the closing date for which is Aug. 10, are six in number, and each is for a $1,000 purse. Number 10 is for the 2:12 trotting class, number 11 the 2:18 class, and number 12 for the 2:25 trotting class. Number 13 is for the 2:19 pacing class and is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 21. Number 14, for the 2:15 pacing class, is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 3; number 15, for the 2:09 pacing class, is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 4; number 16 is to be trotted on Monday, Aug. 31; number 11 on Tuesday, Sept. 1, and number 12 on Friday, Sept. 4.

The Novelty Plan.

All these late closing events are raced on the novelty plan, "three heats only and each heat a race," and the money is to be divided as follows:

Ten per cent of the purse will be reserved until the close of races and awarded to the horse winning a majority of the heats (a dead heat being considered a heat for each horse participating in making same), and in case of a tie on heats won, those tied are to race same off with an extra heat. Ninety per cent of the purse to be divided into three equal parts, and each part (30 per cent of the purse) is to be subdivided into five moneys—45, 25, 15, 10 and 5 per cent, for the respective winners in each heat. In case of a dead heat, those portions of the money involved in that heat shall be divided equally between the horses participating in the making of the heat dead.

In all these three races the entry fee will be 5 per cent of the purse, but there will be nothing additional from the winners. In all cases no payment will be necessary on the date of nomination, but on or before 9 p. m. of the date before the race occurs as stated in the program, the entry fee must be paid; otherwise the horse cannot start. Any number of eligible horses owned by the same party may be entered, but the full fee will be charged on each horse, and entries cannot be transferred.

Positions in these "3-heat" races will be drawn as usual by the drivers before the start of the first heat. In the succeeding heats horses will start as they finished in the preceding one.

Advantages of System.

In speaking of the advantages of the "two-heat" racing system Mr. Griggs says: "Several things are very important in this matter: First, for no greater charge to start a horse than before, horse owners stand several times as many chances to win money as heretofore, and if they do win money, there is no additional tax. They win a great deal more net than before. The money also is divided more equitably, and there is a greater chance of its being divided between more horses. Five horses, instead of four, win money, and it may be that even more horses than five may participate in the money in a race, because in each heat a horse stands to win money, instead of waiting till the end of the race to see whether he is in it or not.

"A horse winning third money in any one heat has practically got his entrance fee back. If he wins first money in any one heat and is distanced in the second, he is still ahead, because he gets the first money in the first heat. It is a system which offers a great many more chances to the horseman to get a piece of the money, and at the same time the horses which are the consistent winners will get more money than they got under the old plan."

KETCHELL IS WINNER

Middleweight Champion Knocks Kelly Out in Third Round.

Italian Has Better of Two Rounds, But Fails to Last.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—Stanley Ketchell knocked out Hugo Kelly of Chicago in the third round of their fight here last night. A left shift to the jaw, after Kelly had all the better of the two opening rounds, gave the latter his quietus.

The men entered the ring at 10:15 p. m. In the first round Kelly drove a left and right to face and Ketchell slipped to his knees. He was up quickly, mixing hard, but Kelly whipped left and right to the stomach. A wicked mix followed, Ketchell putting right to the head, and Kelly right and left to the body. As Kelly backed away, Ketchell caught him on the jaw with a left. Kelly had a big lead as the round ended, although he had a swollen eye.

In the third and last round Ketchell sent in three lefts to the jaw as quick as a flash. The third caught Kelly flush on the jaw and sent him to the floor as if shot. He was unable to rise, and was counted out.

In the presence of Referee Jack Welsh, the stake holder and hundreds of spectators, Ketchell and Kelly weighed in at 6 o'clock. The scales were set at 158 pounds, and the figures were not exceeded by either fighter. It was understood, however, that Kelly is the lighter of the two by at least three pounds. The men, after weighing, were driven to the Coliseum to don their fighting clothes, after which they lolled about the dressing room until summoned for action.

Every seat was sold long before the doors to the Coliseum were opened and additional tiers of benches were hastily constructed. The receipts will approximate $20,000. Interest in the battle was intense, and traffic in the vicinity of Golden Gate park, where the pavilion is located, was blockaded by crowds of men discussing the chances of the two pugilists and fighting for admission.

In introducing the men, Referee Welsh stated that they had agreed to fight with one arm free and to protect themselves in the clinches. Ketchell entered the ring favorite of odds of 10 to 4 and even money was offered that he would win inside of fifteen rounds. There was not much Kelly money in evidence.

DETROIT'S BEST MEETING ENDS

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1.—What proved to be the most brilliant and successful Grand Circuit meeting ever held in Detroit ended yesterday afternoon with a continuation of the fierce struggles that marked the five days. The 2:07 pacing stake was the feature and it threatened the record in the first four heats. Copa De Oro, the favorite, never won a heat.

Darkey Hal, the Canadian mare, went by the others in the stretch in the first heat and won handily in fast time. In the next Auto took the pole very soon and held on, winning by a neck from Copa De Oro in a fierce drive with Darkey Hal at the second horse's ear. Another hard drive and Auto won the third heat. Snow did not offer to try very hard with Darkey Hal in this mile, but in the fourth came fast with her in the stretch, and sending Auto to a break near the finish, won handily. The fifth was easy for Darkey Hal. Auto broke badly and was distanced, and in the stretch George Gano fell in a heap, throwing Driver Cox, but neither horse nor driver was hurt.

The 2:13 trot was a battle royal, Colonel Osborn, Busy, Teasel and Prince C. winning heats in turn and Prince C. being the best in the fifth mile. Zomalta had an easy thing in the 2:20 trot, making two victories for her this week.

OUTSIDER IS WINNER.

Beauchop Trails for Time, But Comes Up at the Finish.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Beauchop, an extreme outsider, easily won the Delaware handicap at one mile here yesterday. The colt ran a remarkeble race. He was off poorly, trailed his field for half a mile and then went after the leaders. On the upper turn he was fourth and closing very strong. As the field strung into the stretch he took command and won by two lengths from Marathon, with Royal Tourist third. Moquette, a western horse, easily won the Mohawk selling 1⅛ miles.

GOES FAST MILE.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1.—Dan Patch went an exhibition mile at the state fair grounds yesterday, the closing day of the Great Western circuit races. He stepped the mile in 2:07¼. With the exception of the 2:15 pace the races yesterday were uninteresting. Results:

2:12 trot, Chamber of Commerce stakes, purse $700—Clare Copper won; Beauty Wright, second; Bonney, third. Best time, 2:10¼.

Free-for-all pace, purse $1,000—Hedgewood Boy won; Don Roma, second; Echo, Jr., third. Time, 2:05¾.

2:15 pace, Bankers' stake, purse $700—Birt won; Billie Seal, second; Farmer Boy, third. Time, 2:09¼.

SPEED SUPREMACY OF THE HARBOR TO BE SETTLED

THE NORTH BUTTE.

THE DOMAN.

The owner of a speedy motor boat is just as proud of his craft as is the owner of a speedy horse of his steed. His boat is always the best. If he sees a boat he thinks he can beat in a race, he is anxious to try it out. If there is one within range that he thinks secretly can beat his boat, he continues to boost his as the best and steers clear of anything like a speed contest.

There are as many speediest motor boats in the Duluth harbor as there are speedy boats. By reason of much talk over the motor boat supremacy of the harbor, it is very probably that the condition will not continue for long. The owners are arguing among themselves. Their friends are arguing for them and the result will be a series of races some time this month that will clear up the question for all time and bring out some of the speediest running through water Duluth people will ever have a chance to see.

Up to this year, the Doman, owned by Frank H. Wade of West Duluth, and the North Butte, formerly owned by Richard Schell, but now the property of J. D. Mahoney, had undisputed sway. They raced several times and the owners of both boats still claim the supremacy. The argument between the two has been lost somewhat now, however, in the discussion over the arrival of two new boats.

Buster, owned by Guy Warren, and Julius Barnes' Robert B. are the new ones and they are fast. Buster is a little boat with a 40 h. p. Stirling engine, which sends it through the water at a great rate of speed. Robert B. is somewhat larger than Buster and is equipped with a 60 h. p. engine. Both are fast enough to compete with the Doman and North Butte and when they get together the spray will fly.

DULUTH MAN PRESIDENT

G. G. Hartley is Head of Minnesota State Golf Association.

Tournament Will be Held on Northland Course in 1909.

Duluth was doubly honored at the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Golf association at Minneapolis by the election of G. G. Hartley as president of the association and the awarding of the next annual tournament to the Northland Country Club of Duluth. The annual meeting was held after the day's play Thursday.

President W. F. Brooks presided, and clubs belonging to the association were represented by J. R. Marfield and Wendell Hertig, Minikahda; G. G. Hartley and W. W. Walker, Duluth; W. H. Lightner and Mr. Doran, Jr., Town and Country; G. P. Williamson and C. E. Holdeman, Bryn Mawr; C. H. Hood and C. S. Albert, Lafayette, and Vice President J. E. Dobbin of Faribault.

Although of not such high standard as the championship, some good golf was played in the second round of the second flight, as follows:

J. E. Clifford defeated William Dalrymple 1 up.

Dr. John Butler defeated E. P. Towne, 4 up, 3 to play.

H. W. Fisher defeated J. H. Plum, 2 up, 1 to play.

The second round of the third flight resulted:

H. J. Burton defeated A. M. Miller, 3 up, 1 to play.

F. T. Parlin defeated C. H. Hood, 2 up, 1 to play.

G. P. Williamson defeated A. McQuillen, 5 up, 3 to play.

M. C. Lightner defeated L. R. Wells, 3 up, 1 to play.

After the elimination of the first sixteen from the championship round they were immediately drawn for play in the consolation event. A big surprise in this affair was the defeat of Drake Lightner by J. E. Geraghty. Much was expected from this young player from the Town and Country lcub, and although being put out in the first round by Harry Legg, he was looked upon to win the consolation, and his failure to make a better showing is quite a disappointment.

L. W. Carpenter defeated W. W. Walker, 1 up.

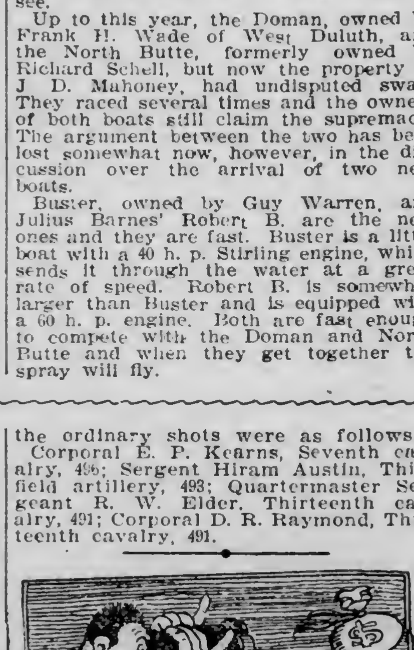
PISTOL COMPETITION.

Lieut. Tedge and Sergeant Block Lead Army Men of Lakes.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—The pistol competition of the army shoot of the department of the lakes was taken up at Fort Sheridan yesterday. Those classed "distinguished pistol shots" were led by Lieut. S. J. Tedge, Fourth cavalry, with 519 out of a possible 600, while Sergeant Harley Black, Sixth field artillery, was second with 510.

The leaders in the competition among the ordinary shots were as follows:

Corporal E. P. Kearns, Seventh cavalry, 496; Sergent Hiram Austin, Third field artillery, 493; Quartermaster Sergeant R. W. Elder, Thirteenth cavalry, 491; Corporal D. R. Raymond, Thirteenth cavalry, 491.



Everything looks good for the White Sox to greet Brandon with a percentage of .500 Monday. The fans have been hoping for just that. While a team is over .500, it is always dangerous. While under .500 it is in the rut, so to speak, and not capable of its best work.

It is too bad Fargo must take such a series of trimmings, but the Sox have simply been driven to it. They were beaten and humiliated up in Canada and crossed the border chafing under their wrongs and vowing dire revenge. They have taken some of it out on the poor tail enders and should win two of the remaining three games, at least. There would be no complaint on their winning all three, which would give them a good start toward pulling Brandon down.

The Angels are not as far ahead of the Sox that they cannot be overtaken. It will take great ball playing and an almost unbroken string of victories, but the Six won six out of eight games and should have won them all. On the previous trip, the Angels dropped three out of four. Athletic park isnt a very lucky lot for O'Dea and his men, and the chances for their taking a series of wallopings next week are very good.

Everything now depends on that last trip into Canada. If the same sort of luck attends the Sox as has on the other trips this season, there is absolutely no hope for them. If they get something like an even break in the luck, they may bring the rag home. The Sox can see nothing but a big percentage of victories during the present home series, so that the Sox should leave here Aug. 16 with a percentage headed for .600 and both the Maroons and Angels within striking distance.

Managers of ball clubs may choose outfielders principally for their hitting, but a poor fielding outfield can lose a good many games, as Duluth fans have had reason to know this year. Had the Sox the outfield they have now all season, they would be close up to Brandon and might be in the lead. Game after game was lost in the early series by misjudged and muffed fly balls to the outfield. There wasn't a head or arm in the field. Now little if anything gets away. Fargo might have won a game or two in this series, if the outfielders had not been on the job so well. The Browns hit the ball hard and far, and it is up to the men in the gardens to cover some ground. In the days of Pagels, Morrow and Haney, it couldn't be done. Now, hits are cut off and the team is winning more games.

Stanley Ketchell's victory over Hugo Kelly last night was no surprise. Every follower of the fight game expected it. Papke licked Kelly decisively, Kitchell whipped Papke and Kelly had no possible chance for a victory.

The result only emphasizes the oft-repeated statement that Ketchell is the king of the middleweight class, as Jeffries is king of the heavies. There isn't a middleweight in the ring today, who will beat the Grand Rapids boy. Papke is undoubtedly the best middleweight in the country, next to Ketchell, but one meeting with the Polish boy was enough for him. He hasn't even asked for another match.

When the day comes when Ketchell will be able to enter the heavyweight division, there will be breakers ahead for Tommy Burns and anybody else, who happens around looking for trouble. Ketchell is a perfect fighting machine, a wonder in defending himself and inflicting punishment, and he will be the pugilistic sensation of the age.

ENDORSES MOVEMENT TO SECURE STATUE BY RODIN

A Former Duluthian Says the Opportunity Should be Seized.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As a former citizen of Duluth, a former contributor to the columns of The Herald, and as one who still holds the continual advance and progress of the city in gratified concern, I read with deep interest Bishop McGolrick's appeal to the citizens of Duluth, published recently in The Herald; an appeal to consider Rodin, the French sculptor, as the artist for the contemplated statue of DuLhut, the great explorer of the seventeenth century, in whose name the city is distinguished. I am moved to add some words to those of the bishop, if may be, to suggest in supplement the value of so significantly unique a possession.

To be able to secure from the hands of the greatest living French sculptor his conception of his countryman, the first white man who trod the rugged northern shores of the lake where the city now lies, would signalize to the world at large conditions of life in Duluth as nothing else could. It would, as the bishop suggests, be an individual and distinguished memorial, and it would link the past with the present in a manner so graciously fitting that all men would recognize the quality of it.

Situated at the head of the largest body of fresh water in the world, drawing commercial and industrial sustenance from noble forests, vast grain fields, and the richest iron mines on the continent, possessing all the vigor, and purpose and illimitable ambition of youth, Duluth, the city of today lies in a land of superlatives, commands and claims the attention of the world and is content with nothing but the superlative; but this city has a past, one that appeals insistently to the imagination. It is linked in history and name to that old-world romance which wrote itself on the new in the development and exploration of America. It is a romance of enterprise, daring, and a fearless courage which sent men of gentle lineage and courtly habits, imbued with the noblest aims of their era, to an untrodden and savage wilderness, and who can deny that the deeds of DuLhut, the man have been repeated in the city that bears his name, or that the name has been an inspiration to faith in the vision of the city of those early settlers who linked the two together?

In the perspective one may readily see how harmoniously Bishop McGolrick's appeal fits itself to the circumstances. If the explorer knew envy, murmurings, the tongue and pen of those who deride and belittle, he never allowed them to dim the lustre of his purpose, which was to plant the banners of France where no white man had ever been before and to claim them in the name of his king; and though his name "had lain for a century dead," it lives today when no man remembers that of his detractors. So, too, the valiant city has lived and demonstrated, even though she seemed once to die, the work that destiny laid upon her.

The art of Auguste Rodin, today the greatest living French sculptor, has been decried, and his ideals belittled, but he has worked on unhindered; steadily clinging to his purposes and ideals until he has brought to the world to see them as he seems them, to recognize his meanings and the truth of his art.

During this past year we have heard much of the great French master, and been stimulated by published books and articles about him, and more actively by Mayor McClellan's comparison drawn between Saint Gaudens, the American sculptor, and Rodin, in his memorial exhibition held at the Metropolitan Museum in New York last February. But if this has brought the French artist more insistently before us, it has also taught us that there are no comparisons to be made. Every great artist stands alone, else he is not great. He must be himself, and his art his own, "not Launcelot's, not another," for in the genius of art there are no comparisons.

Rodin is an artist who appeals to the imagination, a man who has studied humanity, and in monumental art, the real test of a sculptor's greatness, he stands supreme. His rendition of the ideal as he sees it appeals with the force of genius, the quality by which the observer "feels" the meaning of the artist.

When Saint-Gaudens was given his first commission for the city of New York—the Farragut statue in Madison Square park—he was little known in America, but he had ideals and he was in sympathy with his subject—indeed, he was aflame with it. He made it, as Mayor McClellan called it, one of "the four cantos of our great Civil war poem." The others were his Lincoln in Lincoln park in Chicago, the Shaw memorial, and the fourth, the Sherman memorial of Victory, on the Plaza in New York. Vivid, marvelous and inspiring, every one of them, they are monuments to Americans by an American. Kenyon Cox said of him: "Saint-Gaudens had lived through the Civil war. He had felt, as a boy, the stir of its great happenings in his blood, and its epic emotions had become part of his consciousness."

So, one fancies, it is with Rodin. No one else could quite so well interpret the underlying romance, the emotions, the impulse that would sway the Frenchman of the seventeenth century to explore the fields of untried effort; to carry his flag, as the sculptor has carried his flag of fancy, to realms where never before thought had been. It must be a man of imagination who, rembering the France of yesterday, can vision the America of tomorrow, where the statue will stand as a memorial to a pioneer and an inspiration to youth to come.

Duluth is so individual, so picturesque in tradition, history, events and situation, that it is endowed with peculiar distinction. It expresses itself, and its meaning, industrial and commercial, is not hard to read; but in the sense that cities, like humanity, have a message to hand to posterity—a message that is borne only in the building of the City Beautiful—I congratulate the city of Duluth that it is offered and can secure the best in beauty and form of art to carry that message. I shall feel the same pride of possession for the city if she secure the statue by Rodin as I do whenever my eyes fall upon the impressive grandeur of the Farragut and Sherman memorials. They express harmony and the living sympathy of the artist with his subject. They are modeled in its atmosphere, as Rodin's will be in the atmosphere of his.

LOOKED LIKE SEA SERPENT

"Headed ten points east of south and making ten knots an hour against a four-knot current, as the captain said, I saw a sea serpent in the Bay of Bengal, when I crossed from Calcutta, on the steamer Kumsang. He was not very big around the body, but he made up for that in length, for he was at least 150 feet long. I say at least, as quite 150 feet were in sight, but, as his tail and head were invisible, I have no doubt the reptile measured more than 200 feet over all. He was distinctly visible, traveling within a half mile of the steamer, on what was apparently a set course, and was in sight more than an hour. We could, no doubt, have kept him in view several hours had not the captain changed his course so as to keep away from him.

"These hideous big things are not infrequently seen in this part of the world—in fact, I am informed by the captain (Mr. Buller) that they are to be seen so often that no report is made—not even an entry in the ship's log. I endeavored to take a photograph of him, but that was quite impossible, as he was so far from the ship and so low on the surface, and only half exposed to view. I consider it the most remarkable sight I have seen since I left Ohio. I am more than glad that I have been so fortunate as to see a real, live sea serpent in his native element, as I really never believed that there were such things. I always thought sea serpent stories were pure fabrications, but, now that I have seen one with my own eyes, I shall never again doubt the truth of what I read in the Sunday papers. Really, I would rather have missed seeing mysterious India than to have missed seeing that monster."

An entry of the sense of the foregoing (but expressed in different words, perhaps) is neatly penned in a book bound with flexible black morocco, which looks like a Bible, but on the cover of which is stamped in gold letters: "Around the World: My Diary." The owner of the book is a plain-faced, plainly-dressed little woman from a little town in the southwest corner of the Buckeye State, says a Singapore correspondent of the New York Evening Post. It would not do to mention her real name here, as this letter may be reprinted by one of the Cincinnati papers and cause trouble. She is not due at home for over two months more, as she must "do" China, Japan, Hawaii and the Pacific coast, but some of her friends might recognize her from the Bible-like book, the opening chapter of which tells of the send-off her friends gave her, and her first sleeping-car experience en route to New York. She was spectacled and inseparable from a kodak and a note book, and she was continually asking questions—the sort which drive sea captains off the deck to the seclusion of their rooms. At first the other passengers thought she was a missionary going to China for the first time, but it developed later that this is her first venture beyond Cincinnati and Chicago, and that she had taught school and saved money ten years so as to go around the world.

But to return to the sea serpent.

It was about seven bells in the afternoon, and we were forty hours out of Penang. The Kumsang had a cargo of 1,700 coolies for the Straits, six or seven passengers and twenty dead Chinamen. The dead Chinamen had parted this life in Calcutta, and were now en route to China to rest in the lands of their ancestors. They were in heavy rope-bound, rooster-guarded boxes, manifested as "twenty cases, said to contain human bones." Capt. Buller and I sought seclusion on the bridge, and were discussing the American colony in Hongkong, and wishing we were as near to Hongkong as we were to Singapore, when the chief officer, Mr. Finnan, who was on watch (the Scotch engineer called him "Haddie" for short) came up, and, pointing over the ice quarter, said:

"There's a pretty sight, Captain."

The captain looked and turned to me. "Take a look, sonny. What d'you make it out to be?"

I looked—and then I looked again, carefully. "Capt. Buller," I said, "you have good stuff down below, but I've had only two pegs of it. It's a new brand to me, but I've an idea that's a snake out there, and (and I looked again) it's an all-fired big snake at that."

A half-mile off our course and headed our way, but more to the south, was what looked like a big snake, about as big around as a nail keg, and with no beginning or end. Over one hundred feet of him was in sight, and he was going full steam ahead, with an effortless, undulating motion, every three feet of his long body bobbing out of water with rhythmic regularity. "A headless sea serpent," said I to myself. I asked the captain for his glass, and his brown eyes twinkled as he gave it to me. I braced myself against the wheelhouse and focused on that snake. Instead of 150 feet of sea serpent, I saw about fifty porpoises playing their well-known game of follow-the-leader—as porpoises will, you know—each following in the wake of the other like ducks going to a pond. Each one went under the surface, came up a half-fathom ahead, and dived again, all in a straight line and regular as clockwork. Viewed at that distance without a glass the effect was of one long body, going at high speed, with snake-like movement.

"What an item for the diary," I remarked. "Wonder if she is on deck?"

"I'm on, and she will bite easily," said Capt. Buller, stepping out of his carpet slippers and substituting a pair of dancing pumps. So we went down the ladder and strolled on deck. After a turn or two we stopped suddenly in front of the schoolma'am's chair, and Buller excitedly clutched my shoulder with a grip that made me wince. "By Jove! Look at that! A sea serpent, by God! First I've seen this year!"

"What do you say, captain? A sea serpent? Do tell! You must be joking," said the schoolteacher (who, for convenience sake, we will call Miss Brady), dropping Murray's "China and Japan" in her excitement. "Where is it?"

"Straight off there, plain as the nose on your face. Wonder you hadn't seen it before."

"For the lands' sake! Sure enough! Who would have thought it? What, how long it must be; how remarkable! Think of it, a real, true-enough, sea serpent," and she dug the notebook out of a mysterious fold in her skirt. "What will you do, captain?"

"Do, madam? Do? What do you expect me to do? I shall make a course as far from that thing as I can; why, madam, if—"

"Surely, Capt. Buller, this must be so very extraordinary! You must make an effort to capture the monster."

"Capture him! Holy smoke! (sorry, madam; beg pardon). Why, my dear Miss Brady, if this ship went within 100 yards of that there snake; he'd swarm on board, the middle part of him, I mean, and then he would haul himself taut, and the Kumsang, with her 1,700 soulless coolies, would go to the bottom—seven miles under."

"But surely, captain, it is not so dangerous as that! There must be some way of capturing the monster. It certainly must be of great value to the scientific world—such an unusual thing. Can't you shoot it, or—something?"

"He would probably be worth £5,000 sterling to the British museum," said Buller, "but the risk is too great. I must change our course," and the captain made a hurried retreat, reaching the safety of the bridge just in time to escape bursting with laughter.

But the ship did not change its course—the "monster" did, instead, and the ship and the "serpent" slowly lost sight of each other. After a while Buller was calm enough to go on deck again with a sober face. Directly Miss Brady and the note book came up to us and remarked: "Of course you will report this on arrival at Singapore," Capt. Buller?"

"Report what, madam?"

"Why, the serpent, of course! Surely, it is so extraordinary."

"Report it, Miss Brady? And who would believe me if I did report it? Fifteen years ago, when I first came on this coast, I sighted that same snake and I made an official report of it at Calcutta. The papers printed columns about it—and me—and even today, when I go into the club or meet another captain, I am greeted with 'Seen any sea serpents this trip, Buller?' It was a great joke, you know, when Capt. Buller of the Kumsang reported the sighting of a sea serpent. The boys will never forget it. Nearly every captain who crosses the Bay of Bengal regularly sees that same snake every two years at least, but they never mention it. I've seen him, myself, nine times in fifteen years, and I know three others like him between Singapore and Nagasaki.

"Report it, madam? Why, we see that sort of thing so often we never think of mentioning them. If we did, no one would believe us. We'd just be laughed at."

"You don't say!" was all the little lady from Ohio said. "Well, I'm glad I saw it, anyway."

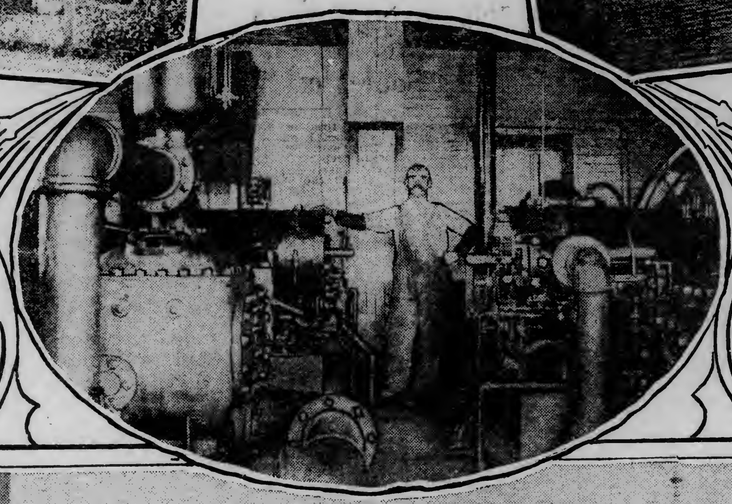
DULUTH HAS THE FINEST WATER SUPPLY IN AMERICA

ONE OF THE RESERVOIRS

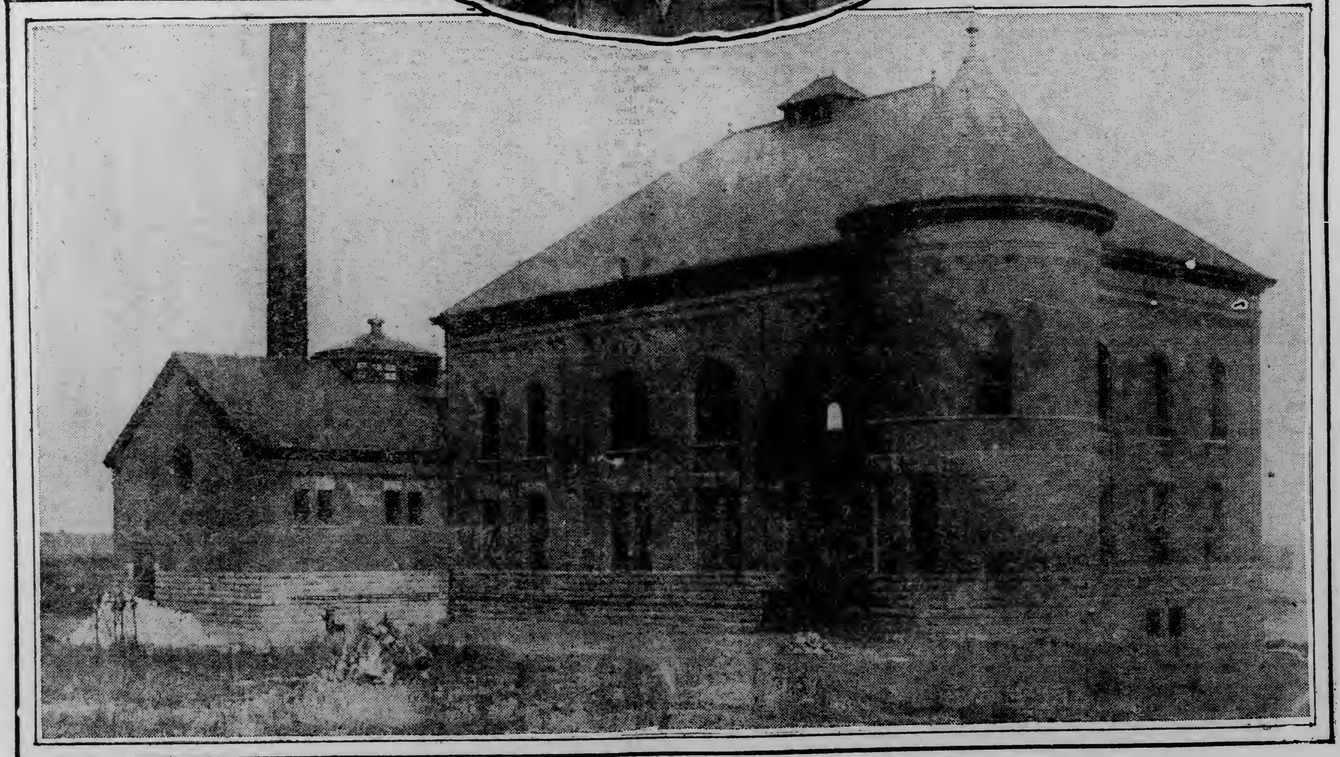
DULUTH PEOPLE USE 2,500,000,000 GALLONS OF WATER A YEAR

WOODLAND RESERVOIR AND VALVE HOUSE

15TH AVE EAST PUMP HOUSE



F. HAMM.



LAKEWOOD PUMPING STATION.

The finest water supply in the country!

That is what Duluth has today, and its value to a city cannot well be overestimated. It is one of the city's foremost advantages. This alone gives Duluth a supremacy over the Twin Cities, St. Paul, with the healthy but brackish swamp water, and Minneapolis, with only the deadly Mississippi water, that weighs most heavily in her favor.

Great, cold Lake Superior, clear as crystal, pure as distilled water, and never warmer than 42 degs. in the dark depths from which the city's water supply is drawn, is the most ideal water supply in the world. None other of the Great Lakes approach it in purity, and chemists use it impartially as they would distilled water. It contains no trace of hardness and is as near pure hydrogen and oxygen as any natural water supply can ever be.

So much for the source. In addition to this Duluth is now acquiring one of the finest and most dependable supply systems anywhere. This is in face of unusual difficulties. The Duluth system is confronted with the task of supplying people on all levels from the level of the lake to nearly 900 feet above it. To do this all from one reservoir, or from a number of reservoirs 900 feet above the lake level would result in a water pressure that would mean disaster to the best water fixtures yet evolved by plumber's skill. As a result, Duluth really has three separate systems. These systems are known as the lower, or main system, the middle system and the upper system. Every portion of the city is now supplied from one of these three systems, with the exception of New Duluth and Duluth Heights, where the people are still dependant upon wells.

Each of these three systems covers an elevation of about 275 feet. The lower system is, of course, the principal one. On this there are the three great reservoirs, that on Thirty-first avenue east, that on Fifteenth avenue east, and the new big reservoir at West Duluth, which is soon to supply not only the western end of the city but Proctor as well.

The other three systems are not yet provided with reservoirs, but the land for these reservoirs is already purchased and as soon as the financial condition of the department permits they will be built. What is known as the middle system covers about 250 feet of elevation above the lower system. It is supplied by three tanks on Thirteenth street, which have a combined capacity of 360,000 gallons, and these have an elevation of 550 feet above the lake.

The big hillside extension, which has been going on for the past year, is a part of this system, and brings an additional total of 46,362 feet of mains to be supplied. Supt. Case in his report for last year stated that a new pumphouse to supply this additional service would be necessary.

A new pumping station has just been completed at Forty-fifth avenue west on Grand avenue, as it was found that the pressure from the big uptown reservoir was not sufficient to fill the West Duluth reservoir for more than six feet. This pumphouse is now complete and ready for operation.

The third, or upper system, is on the hilltop, and while this is also supplied with a reserve in tanks as yet, the land has been purchased for a reservoir, and one will be constructed in the near future.

Last year the big Lakewood pumping station supplied 2,079,505,000 gallons of water to the three systems. This was an increase of 168,000,000 gallons over the year previous. The work was done very economically, the total cost of pumping per million gallons being about $8.50. The average daily consumption of water during the year in the city was 5,700,000 gallons.

The city now has nearly one hundred miles of water mains in its three systems.

There are outstanding $3,121,000 of mortgage bonds on the system requiring an interest charge annually of $185,900. The earnings of the department last year exceeded all expenditures, including this interest charge, by $86,700. The increased earnings over the previous year were nearly $63,000, while the increased expenses for operation repairs and interest were only $23,800. These figures show that Duluth's exceptional water supply is on a sound financial basis.

FROM FRISCO TO NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 1.—Completing a walk from San Francisco to New York in sixty-three days and twenty-three hours, which he said was a record, Sergeant Walsh of the United States army, on a furlough from his station at the Presidio, walked into the mayor's office in this city yesterday. He carried a pole, from which the American flag flew. Sergeant Walsh said he made the walk on a wager that he could not cross the great divide twice, and he added that he had already crossed it once going west.

Walsh lost fifty pounds weight during the trip and declared he would not make it again for $100,000. At one part of his walk, he said, he crawled along a trail nine inches wide, 1,000 feet high, where a burro would not go. He declared that he was snow-blind from the reflection of the sun on the snow of the mountain tops. He had the signatures of many mayors and town officials on his route. Sergeant Walsh is 52 years old.

POSITION FOR ELLIS.

Ohio Lawyer Offered Assistant Attorney Generalship of United States

Cincinnati, Aug. 1.—Wade H. Ellis, attorney general of Ohio, has been offered the position of first assistant attorney general of the United States.

Mr. Ellis, who is resting after the strenuous work preceding the nomination of W. H. Taft for president, has asked for time to consider the appointment. Before and during the Republican convention, Mr. Ellis was engaged on the Republican platform and it is believed that his strenuous efforts in that connection were responsible for his present prostration. The letter from Mr. Bonaparte, the United States attorney general arrived yesterday, but Mr. Ellis was in a condition which forbade consideration of the proffer before two weeks has elapsed.

ANNIVERSARY OF LINCOLN'S BIRTH

Will be Celebrated at Springfield and All Over Country.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1.—Preparations are being made for the celebration, on an elaborate scale of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ahrabam Lincoln, on Feb. 12, 1909. The exercises will be held in this city.

The entire proceedings will be under the general direction of the Lincoln Centennial association, of which the following are the charter members: Melville W. Fuller, chief justice of the United States; Senators Cullom and Hopkins of Illinois; Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, Adlai E. Stevenson, Governor Deneen, James A. Rose, secretary of state for Illinois; Congressman Benjamin F. Caldwell; ex-Governor Richard Yates of Illinois; Melville E. Stone, New York; John W. Bunn of Springfield; Horace White, New York; William Jone of Springfield.

Invitations have been issued to the president, the members of his cabinet and to the ambassadors, ministers and consuls of the foreign governments.

Among those who have already intimated their intention of being present if possible are: Ambassadors Bryce and Jessurand, William J. Bryan and William H. Taft.

The program in Springfield will consist of formal ceremonies at the grave during the morning, a public meeting in the afternoon and a banquet at night. Two features of the celebration have been practically agreed upon and the education al authorities of each state will be asked to carry them into effect. The same program which will be carried out in Illinois will also be observed in every school house in the country, and, at a certain hour of the day, every school child in the land shall stand and, facing in the direction of Springfield, repeat the brief speech that Lincoln uttered as he bade farewell to his friends and neighbors in Springfield the day he left for Washington in 1861.

FROM THE MINES AND THE SMELTERS

ORE BLOCKED OUT AT MIAMI

Consulting Engineer Channing Estimates a Total of 6,750,000 Tons of Ore in Sight---Reduction Works to be Erected.

Globe, Ariz., Aug .1.—"We have now blocked out on three levels of the Miami mine 4,500,000 tons of ore and estimate there are 2,250,000 tons additional near the ends of the various drifts and crosscuts; or a total of 6,750,000 tons of ore of which we are reasonably assured.

"This ore body has been opened 1,050 feet in length, 700 feet in width and 400 feet vertically.

"The Miami is already one of the largest copper mines in the world, and the limits of the ore body have not been reached, the headings being still in ore."

This is the statement made by J. Parke Channing, consulting engineer for the Miami Copper company. Mr. Channing has been here for two weeks, and in that time he has made a thorough examination of the company's mine, and as he himself admits, the figures representing the dimensions of the ore body and probable tonnage of ore as at present developed, are very conservative.

The cutting of a station at a depth of 570 feet in the shaft has been completed, and the work of opening another level started. As the shaft and station are in ore at that depth it is safe to assume that with the progress of development on this new level the tonnage of ore in sight will steadily increase.

Prof. Richards of the Boston Institute of Technology, an authority on ore concentration, and who has made a very successful test of the Miami ore, visited the Miami property two weeks ago and was impressed by the magnitude of the deposit and its adaptability to treatment.

Mr. Channing, in his report dated March 12, 1908, estimated that with the first 1,000-ton unit of a reduction works in operation ,giving an annual production of 14,000,000 pounds of copper, based on 350 days' running time, the profits at 12-cent copper would be $4200,00 per annum, and at 15-cent copper, $840,0000 per annum. This estimate was made when the ore in sight was 2,000,000 tons. Now that more than three times that tonnage has been developed, the company will be justified in building a concentrator of at least 2,000 tons daily capacity, which would make possible an annual production of 28,000,000 pounds and profits on a 15-cent copper market of $1,680,000.

The management has plans practically completed for the reduction works which are to be erected near the mine, but no part of the construction work will be commenced until the Gila Valley, Globe & Northern railroad is extended from Globe to the Miami property, a distance of about seven miles.

THREE FURNACES ARE GOING

Jerome, Ariz., Aug. 1.—With the resumption of work at the United Verde Copper company's smelters, which have been closed for repairs since July 2, the management announces that the output of the plant will be considerably increased, giving employment to a larger number of men. Three furnaces are now running full blast at the great plant turning out bullion in steady streams.

Work is also being rushed on the lower tunnel, which will tap the mine at a depth of 1,000 feet. This tunnel is now 4,400 feet in and a drift is being run from the shaft to connect with the tunnel. The drift is now in 1,100 feet from the shaft and the management expects that connections will be made by Oct. 1. The estimated length of the tunnel is 7000 feet. It will serve the double purpose of drainage and working tunnel, being large enough for a double electric motor track.

It is believed in Jerome that the smelters will be moved to a point near the Verde river below the mouth of the tunnel later, but there is no proof that the company contemplates a move of this kind soon. Adding further color to the belief that the smelters will eventually be moved is the fact that a corps of railroad engineers in the service of Senator Clark is now making surveys into the Verde valley through the Mogollon mountains from Flagstaff with a view of finding the most feasible route into the valley. However, the company is making many improvements in the present smelting plant in the way of adding modern machinery, which indicates that the plant will not be moved to the Verde in the near future.

IMPERIAL COPPER COMPANY

Expected to be Soon Producing 1,000,000 to 1,300,000 Pounds Monthly---Development Company of Arizona is the Controlling Factor.

Globe, Ariz., Aug. 1.—For several years the Imperial Copper company, with properties near Red Rock, thirty miles west of Tucson, has been a producer of copper, shipping ore to the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas, and its shipments have returned as high as 900,000 pounds of copper per month.

The Development company of Arizona is the controlling factor in this company, which was organized in 1903 with $5,000,000 capital in $10 shares in addition to which there are $2,000,000 of bonds authorized.

Last February the company ceased operations as a shipping proposition and became a producing property by placing in commission a concentrator and a smelter, the latter with one furnace of 35 tons capacity daily. These reduction works cost the Imperial company $700,000, paid for partly from earnings and partly from advances made to it by the Development company. A second unit is in process of construction and a third is under contemplation.

In June the company produced 650,000 pounds of copper, in May, 600,000 pounds, in April, 500,000 pounds, in March, 450,000 pounds, and with a second unit in commission in about two months, production should range from 1,000,000 to 1,300,000 pounds per month. The cost of production is not far from 10 cents per pound, crediting precious metal values against the cost of copper of 8½ cents per pound.

The company has just made a three years' contract with the American Metal company for the refining and selling of its copper, based upon the average monthly quotations.

The properties of the Imperial Copper company are still in the development stage, and with the financial strength of the Development company of Arizona back of it, a mine of large proportions is expected to be opened. In fact the management of the company say that their goal is a 50,000,000 pounds per annum producer.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Rich Strike Said to be Biggest Thing That Has Occurred in Southern Hills for Years--- Surrounding Ground Staked.

Keystone, S. D., Aug. 1.—An exceedingly rich strike on the group of claims owned by Gunderson & Williams, between the head of Grizzly Creek and the base of Harney Peak, has caused great excitement in this district and within two days after the strike was announced all the surrounding ground was staked. The new strike is reported as being the biggest thing that has occurred in the Southern Hills in many days. The group consists of about forty claims, on which considerable work has been done and many assays and tests made, the results of which have always been kept a profound secret. Now it is announced that Col. James A. Clark, one of the veteran mining man of the Hills, has become interested in the property. Mr. Clark inspected it and thoroughly sampled and tested the different dumps and the results were far beyond his best expectations, as the tests gave high value in gold, nickel, cobalt and two other metals, any of which can be worked at a profit. Mr. Clark has declared the property to be the richest in the Southern Hills. He is now having a more thorough analysis made and if this proves satisfactory a deal will be made on an option which calls for the payment of $200,000.

The receiver's sale of the Clara Belle property is set for Aug. 3 and from present indications Mr. Hebert, who is heavily interested, will secure complete control and recommence active operations.

The Golden West management at Rochford is continuing its search with the diamond drill to secure some high grade ore. In the upper levels of the property there are large bodies of low grade material on which there is a small profit, but the company feels certain that some richer ore can be located with greater depth.

The Portland Mining company is actively engaged in shipping from its workings. The shipments are regular and contain ore from the $150 vein that was struck some months ago. When found this ore body was in the flat measures, but later developed into a vertical that gives promise of being permanent. The company is also working the old Decorah property on the other side of Green Mountain. It has driven a new tunnel to tap the ledges and make a shorter haul.

On Annie Creek the Reliance is doing well. Most of its necessary improvements, that have held back the operation, are completed and the company is now grinding out the regular 150 tons a day.

On Squaw Creek Setter, Peterson & Bowman, who are leasing the Two Johns property, are shipping at regular intervals $50 ore.

The Imperial company is progressing

NEW FURNACE TO BE BLOWN IN

Bisbee, Ariz., Aug. 1.—Among the interesting developments in the Warren district during the week were the initial holding operations at the new hoisting plant of the Copper Queen company at the Sacramento shaft, through which in the near future all the Copper Queen ores will be hoisted. The coming week will see another important event—the blowing in of one of the two new 500-ton furnaces at the Douglas smelter of the Calumet & Arizona company. The foundations for the new large capacity furnaces have been completed and it is believed that one of the furnaces will be emplaced and ready for blowing in by Monday. The converters have all been moved to the opposite side of the main smelter building to make room for the additional furnaces.

With the installation of the two new stocks, work will immediately begin on the enlargement of the old furnaces, which when completed will give them a capacity of 500 tons each and the entire smelter al the efficiency and capacity of a 3,000-ton plant.

The task of remodelling the reduction works has been similar, in a great many ways, to that of reconstructing the Cananea smelter, but a far more difficult one owing to the fact that at the latter works operations were suspended for eight months while at the Douglas smelter reduction work has continued with little or no decrease in output because of the many important changes which have been in progress.

The July production was probably slightly lower than that of June because of unavoidable hindrances.

Important underground developments may be expected in the near future at the Superior & Pittsburg group of mines, the most important of which to the district at large is the exploration of the Briggs, where activities for the last three years have been confined to unwatering the shaft. Developments at the Junction and Hoatson shafts are also being closely watched by mining men.

Instead of sinking the Briggs shaft to further depth, the shaft will be raised after drifts have been run from the Junction and Hoatson shafts, thus eliminating all danger of impediment by water. As soon as the station on the fifteenth level of the Junction is completed, the drift toward the Briggs will be commenced and on this level the large mineral zone on the Top Gallant claim of the Briggs, which on the ninth level had undergone considerable leaching will be explored.

The ore bodies in the Junction mine, which were recently encountered are being developed with excellent results. Enough exploration work has been done to conclusively determine the fact that the Junction will be one of the big mines of the Warren district. An underground visit to the mine was made last week by a Miner representative who is able to confirm the recent reported strikes, although reports given out by the management of the company seemed very conservative, especially as to the grade of ore after the trip. The lenses of ore recently encountered show increasing richness and general samples in some localities have yielded assays of 14 per cent copper with sufficient iron and sulphur contents to make it an ideal smelting ore.

The territory visited included the localities of the two most recent strikes in the mine, those of the past two weeks. That made on the 1,200-foot level last week was made in crosscut No. 29 which runs off of drift No. 19, on which a winze has been begun. The ores encountered are both sulphide and oxide and assay on an average of 10 per cent copper. The ore body was encountered in the crosscut and a raise was made in it. About twelve feet of ore was penetrated in the raise. The lense dips at an angle of 45 degs. At a level with the floor of the crosscut the ore body is six feet in width and nine feet thick. The ore occurs in an altered limestone through which is disseminated small copper values.

Crosscut 29 runs at a right angle from drift 19 and a crosscut will be started from the drift toward the lense.

On the 1,300-foot level, where two strikes were made in the past two weeks, the ore has increased in richness. In crosscut 14, at a distance of about 100 feet from drift No. 3, the main extraction drift, rich sulphide and oxide ores were encountered on Saturday night last which are of a higher grade than any yet encountered in that working.

In crosscut No. 21 the richest ore ever encountered i nthis mine were cut the past few days. It consists of sulphides and oxides, a considerable portion of which is bornite or peacock ore. A number of shipments have already been made to the smelter which include these ores and the returns have been highly gratifying to the management. The ore in this crosscut averages between 12 and 13 per cent.

On the 1,300-foot level much water must be handled at present but the flow will diminish as the level beneath is worked out. From this level the water is pumped by two 2,500-gallon low-lift pumps which raise the water to the 1,000-foot level, at which station is located the immense plant which raises the water to the surface. On the 1,400-foot level there is naturally more water than on the level above, which is also raised to the 1,000-foot station. The 1,200-foot station pumps will be lowered to the 1,500-foot level in a short time, as the former level has been entirely drained.

RESUMPTION OF EAST BUTTE

Management Planning to Start Work Soon---Possibilities of a Concentrating Plant—Little Mina Mine Showing Up Great —Some Fine Ore Bodies on Thousand-Foot Level.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 1.—Robert H. Gross, the new president and general manager of the East Butte Copper Mining company, has been in Butte the past week, familiarizing himself with the property and affairs of the company. He has found the affairs of the East Butte company in a very satisfactory condition and the mines in good shape. The company has a good treasury and Mr. Gross is considering the question of resuming operations. He has convinced himself that the East Butte has the possibilities of a big producer. From the surface to the 400-foot level there are more than 1,000,000 tons of concentrating ore, and President Gross believes the company could make money even at present prices if it had a big concentrating plant. The question of building a concentrator is being considered, but whether it will be built now or not, the company will resume shaft sinking. The big three-compartment shaft designated as No. 1 to distinguish it from ten other shafts on the company's property, is more than 900 feet deep and it is to be taken to the 2,600-foot point at least. When work was stopped the bottom of the shaft was in fine ore body, containing some glance. There seems little doubt that the East Butte, with greater depth, will have good ore bodies. The Boston & Montana, Anaconda, Butte & Boston and the Butte Coalition are mining on all sides of the East Butte ground and shipping the richest copper ore that has ever been mined in the world.

"If the ore is in our ground we are going to get it, for we are going after it," said President Gross. "I want to assure the stockholders that they will have a good, economical business management, and that if the ore is in the ground as every one says it is, they are going to have a copper mine. But there already is a mine there, for leasers have mined on the 1,000 level for years and have taken out a large amount of ore."

Mr. Gross has not yet fully determined what work to start first, or when operations are to be resumed, but it is probable that the first work will be in unwatering the mine preparatory to sinking the shaft deeper. There isn't very much water in No. 1 and the shaft can be cleaned out in a short time.

The Parrot Mining company has perhaps its greatest prospects in its new mine, the Little Mina, which is being developed into a really important producer. The future of the Parrot mine itself may be more or less of a problem, but the Little Mina is no longer a problem. It is opened by a shaft 1,000 feet deep and by three levels, at the 600, 800 and 1,000, and preparations are being made to sink the shaft 500 feet deeper. At present mining is confined to the 1,000 level, where the vein, located south of the shaft, has been opened east and west nearly 500 feet. On the west sill there are 160 feet of ore, four feet wide, giving an average assay of 3½ per cent copper and six ounces of silver to the ton. To the east there is another body of ore about 170 feet long and three feet wide, giving about the same average assay, while another ore body on the east end is 100 feet long and 18 feet wide, giving an average assay of 4 per cent copper and six ounces of silver. Several feet in width run 12 to 15 per cent copper, but the whole body eighteen feet wide is broken down and mined together as second-class ore. It is estimated that the big body of ore will be found at least 400 feet longer, extending up to the end line of the Little Mina, to which point the same ore body has been opened on the 800 of the Nipper mine, owned by the Butte Coalition company.

The Little Mina is yielding about 150 tons of ore per day, but preparations are under way to increase the output. A new auxiliary engine is being installed for the purpose of sinking the shaft to the 1,200 level, and a new permanent hoist will also be installed with a capacity of 500 tons per day and capable of working to a depth of 2,000 feet. The Little Mina vein has been pretty well explored and it seems certain that the property will develop into a big copper producer. In addition to the development done by the Parrot company on the 600, 800 and 1,000 levels, the vein has been opened and worked in the Nipper on the east, and has also been opened by a crosscut from the Mountain Consolidated mine of the Anaconda company on the 1,200 level of the latter mine, connecting with the 1,000 of the Little Mina. The Mountain Consolidated lies considerably north of the Little Mina, while the Buffalo mine of the Anaconda company lies north and east. The Nipper adjoins the Mina on the south and east. Directly west of the Little Mina there are no producing mines.

The Reins Copper company stockholders, at the annual meeting held in Butte, filled the board of directors with Pittsburg men, with two exceptions. J. F. Reins and Glen Thompson of Butte were retained on the board. The Pittsburg men are Col. James M. Guffey, E. W. Marland, W. P. De Armitt, A. P. Childs, Jr., T. N. Bernsdell, George D. Prentice, John H. Galey, W. P. Johnson and August Hartje. At the meeting 1,708,000 shares of stock out of 2,000,000 were represented. A report of the affairs of the company shows that $129,000 was expended in operating the mine and for new equipment and that ore of the value of $20,000 was shipped last year. Operations were not carried on during most of the year, the mine being closed at the beginning of the financial panic. A special meeting of the stockholders will be held Aug. 10 to vote on the proposition of issuing $600,000 in bonds.

The West Gray Rock mine, one of the Butte & Boston producers, is reported to be developing surprisingly. On the 400-foot level a big body of ore was opened recently and it is growing larger as mining proceeds. Miners

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Only a Few Scattering Sales of Ore Reported---Pickands-Mather Company Looking to the Future.

Conditions in the Lake Superior iron region continue disappointing. A few scattering sales of ore are reported, but the tonnage placed is greatly below expectations. The reduction made in price has had little effect in inducing furnacemen to enter the market. The product of the mines is moving slowly, and there is little confidence now that conditions will show any immediate improvement.

Ore cargoes are scarce, so much so that the lake vessels now out of commission include more than half the wild tonnage and a considerable proportion of the ships of the transportation companies. Fifteen boats of the Steel corporation's fleet have not been fitted out at all. Instead of additions to the number of active bulk carriers, looked for with the advent of July, the idle list has grown. A few inactive mines have resumed operations during the month, but they are of the smaller class. None of the big producers are adding to their forces. Many are working only half-time.

One of the largest sales of ore effected lately has been one by the Florence Iron company, operating the Florence mine, which, since the shutdown at Commonwealth, has the distinction of being the only producing property in the Wisconsin porion of the Menominee range. The Florence will ship approximately 100,000 tons during the remaining months of the season. The mine produces an ore of low grade. Still, it has forwarded upwards of a million tons during the past six years, and just at present it is faring better than many a richer property. The operating concern is subsidiary to the Industrial Securities company of New York, which, in addition, controls the American and St. Lawrence Pyrites companies of the Empire State; the Seaboard Coal & Coke company of Alabama; the Birmingham & Atlantic and Adirondack & St. Lawrence Railroad companies, and the Durango Consolidated mines of Mexico. The Florence Iron company still has large deposits of ore at Florence, notwithstanding the fact that the mine has been worked for more than a quarter of a century, and at Iron River, at the western end of the range, it is developing the Hall tract, a property that gives excellent promise. A novelty is a fine farm of 480 acres at Florence, 130 acres of which are under cultivation, and thirty additional acres are being cleared this season. The working force at the mine is being doubled in size. It had been reduced to the minimum.

Notwithstanding the present dullness in the iron trade, when mining deals are the exception, there is tangible evidence that Pickands, Mather & Co. are still adhering to their far-seeing policy of discounting the future. Not only are they opening new mines and pushing the development of older properties on the Mesaba, Gogebic and Menominee ranges, satisfied the time will come when there will be a market for all the ore that can be produced, but they are steadily enlarging their holdings. Next to the Steel corporation, they are actively interested in more developed mines than any other operating concern in the Lake Superior region. These properties number twenty-seven, fourteen of which are on the Mesaba, six each on the Gogebic and Menominee and one on the Marquette range. Aside from this, Pickands, Mather & Co. are exploring a number of promising tracts, even on the Cayuna extension of the Mesaba, and lately they have increased their holdings of mineralized lands in the Iron River and Stambaugh districts of the Menominee range, among others taking over the Winton and Berg properties, in section 19, 43-34. Both of these tracts are favorably located on the formation, ore having been cut on either side of them, in fact. Pickands, Mather & Co. are already exploring in the same portion of the Menominee, and with very likely indications of adding the Swanson, Youngs, Bucholtz and McColman properties to their list of producers, which in that particular field comprise the Baltic, Caspian and Fogarty, all splendid mines. At Red Rock, at the northern edge of the Crystal Falls district, the Cleveland concern is pushing the development of a deposit located by diamond drills some time ago. Shaft sinking is in progress. There is little doubt this property will become a good-sized producer. At Amasa, not far from Red Rock, Pickands, Mather & Co.'s "old reliable" Hemlock is working a good-sized crew, but on one shift only. Not much ore is being shipped ,and this is going forward all-rail.

Quite as active in preparing for the future is the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, also of Cleveland, and of which W. G. Mather is president. This big independent concern is operating a large number of mines, most of which

ARIZONA'S COPPER OUTPUT

Now Back to the Normal, But About 8,000,000 Pounds Per Month Under the Capacity of the Territory's Ten Smelters.

Bisbee, Ariz., Aug. 1.—The production of copper in the territory of Arizona is now back to normal, but still about 8,000,000 pounds per month under the capacity of the ten smelters of the territory, including the El Paso Copper smelter of the American Smelting & Refining company, which is tributary to Arizona ores.

The estimated production of copper of Arizona for the first six months of 1908, by camps and companies, has been as follows. We likewise give the monthly smelter capacity of each company:

Estimated production for six months—

	Pounds.
Bisbee, Copper Queen	38,500,000
Bisbee, Calumet & Arizona	24,160,000
Clifton, Ariz. Copper company	14,500,000
Clifton, Shannon	8,950,000
Globe, Old Dominion	17,895,000
Jerome, United Verde	14,500,000
Morenci, Detroit	9,500,000
Tucson, Imperial	2,750,000
Humboldt, Ariz. Cons. S. Co.	...
Benson, Custom plant	...
El Paso, A. S. R. Co.	5,000,000
Total	135,752,000

Estimated monthly capacity—

	Pounds.
Bisbee, Copper Queen	9,000,000
Bisbee, Calumet & Arizona	5,000,000
Clifton, Ariz. Copper company	3,000,000
Clifton, Shannon	2,500,000
Globe, Old Dominion	5,000,000
Jerome, United Verde	3,500,000
Morenci, Detroit	2,000,000
Tucson, Imperial	650,000
Humboldt, Ariz. Cons. S. Co.	1,000,000
Benson, Custom plant	1,250,000
Total	32,400,000

The Consolidated Arizona Copper company's Humboldt smelter is cold, and the company is undergoing a re-organization. The Benson smelter is likewise idle, but was never a success, except possibly to the promoters. The Imperial company's smelter is being enlarged to a monthly capacity of 1,250,00 pounds and the Copper Queen and Calumet & Arizona smelters are both being increased in capacity.

The Arizona smelters now have a monthly capacity of 33,400,000 pounds of copper per month, as against a present output of about 25,000,000 pounds per month, so that there is plenty of room for growth.

It is very evident that the territory's production this year will exceed last year's figures of about 226,000,000 pounds, with the first six months' output at the rate of 270,000,000 pounds per annum. Arizona should this year again lead all states in copper production, as it did last year, and by the time Montana is in position to get back to normal conditions, Arizona should so increase as to maintain its lead.

Next year there will be another smelter erected, that of the Shattuck-Arizona company at Douglas, contracts for which will soon be let, while the Arizona Commercial Copper company is now raising money for the erection of a smelter plant.

The Globe district is showing the greatest progress of any of the Arizona camps and the most promising new property there is the Miami under the development of Adolph Lewisohn and associates.

It is apparent that the old companies, with the possible exception of the Old Dominion, have practically met the limit of their production and that any further increase will have to come from the newer companies—the Superior & Pittsburg, Shattuck & Jenn companies in Bisbee, the Arizona and Miami companies at Globe and the Ray properties at Kelvin, which are controlled by the Utah Copper people. There are many small properties scattered all over the teritory, however, some of which may develop into important producers within the next five years.

AT THE MINES AROUND GLOBE

Globe, Ariz., Aug. 1.—Recent important work on the Superior & Boston property has been the exploration on the 450-foot level of the Great Eastern mine, east of the main crosscut, to determine the strike of the Black Hawk lode. This has been carried on under the direction of Frank H. Probert, consulting engineer for the company, who has made a close study of the geological features of the Superior & Boston property and he is greatly encouraged by the developments in the east drift north of the shaft, which last week broke into ore near the hanging wall. Supt. W. E. Carter states the face of the drift now shows eight feet of hematite carrying some copper. The drift has been turned slightly to follow the footwall and indications point to the opening of a new lenz of commercial ore. Drifting is now in progress east and west from the bottom of the winze in a body of high-grade ore thirteen feet wide. The Gardner shaft is down 240 feet and sinking continues. Development of the Great Eastern has now reached the stage that admits of no doubt of its value and there is every reason to believe it will become one of the best mines in the Globe district.

J. W. Bennie, general manager of the Shannon Copper company of Clifton, has been spending considerable time here directing the development of the Black Hawk mine of the Arizona Commercial Copper company, he being the consulting engineer for that company. Development on the east end of the Black Hawk mine has opened a large tonnage of ore, some of it very good grade. For the past several months operations have been largely confined to the sinking of a working shaft, which is now down 533 feet, and driving a drift, 900 feet in length along the vein, to connect the old shaft with the new one. A station at 500 feet in the new shaft was completed last Monday, when a crosscut was started to connect with the long drift from the old shaft.

S. L. Gibson, president and general manager of the Gibson Copper company, spent the week in Globe. The company is now opening the fifth and sixth levels, from the old shaft, and doing some other development work. Shipments of ore are limited to about

BUTTE & ARIZONA TO RESUME

Directors Meet in Butte and Decide to Begin Operations at Property Near Bisbee---Tunnel to be Pushed Forward.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 1.—At a meeting of the directors of the Butte & Arizona Copper Mining company, held in Butte last week, it was decided to resume operations at the mines in Arizona immediately and a telegram was sent to Supt. Caspar Schultz at Bisbee to prepare at once to begin work. The mine is located at Hereford, about thirty-five miles from Bisbee, and as soon as supplies can be taken into the camp operations will be resumed.

In speaking of the action of the directors A. P. Pohndorf, president of the company, last night said:

"Since the big fire occurred last spring, whereby our surface buildings were destroyed and the machinery damaged, we have been closed down. In the meantime we have had men at work repairing and replacing the machinery and erecting new buildings so that now we are in as good or better shape to operate than we were when the fire occurred. There is no water in the tunnel and workmen were able to go through all the workings as soon as the debris was cleared away, showing that no bad air had collected in the tunnel. The fire was a heavy blow to us, for we fully expected to reach the lead within a short time when we had to stop suddenly. The tunnel is in 2,300 feet and when we tap the vein it will be at a vertical depth of about 550 feet. We will begin work right in the face of the tunnel where we left off. Everything, except supplies, is in readiness to begin driving the tunnel in to the lead."

In addition to excellent copper showings the Butte & Arizona carries much silver. Some of the assays have shown as high as 400 ounces of silver to the ton and 40 per cent copper. President Pohndorf says the mine will be a good producer without taking into consideration the copper values. Most of the Butte & Arizona stock is held in Bisbee and Butte.

THE COPPER CREEK COMPANY

Arizona Company That Has Expended $200,000 on Development---New Electric Plant Being Installed---Mill to be Ready by Dec. 1.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 1.—Roy Sibley, superintendent of the Copper Creek Mining company, is in the city and submitted to an interview in reference to the property of his company situated on Copper creek about twenty miles east of the Mammoth.

The company owns two groups of claims on the creek which when developed promises to be among the great copper bodies of the territory. Within the past five years the company has expended about $200,000, and outside of external improvements, has 7,000 feet of work to show for it. Under the plans of the present year there will be expended on improvements about $154,000, aside from the work that is being done and will be done in the way of opening up the mines. The company has good properties, knows it, and is willing to make it a mine before commencing to expect dividends.

On the American Eagle a double compartment working shaft is being driven. It is now down seventy feet and will be continued to the depth of a thousand. At present the work is being done by a gasoline hoist, but this will shortly be replaced by an electric plant, which is said to be the acme of perfection.

A special force of mechanics is now on the way from Los Angeles to the mine for the purpose of putting in the new plant, which will consist of a 250-horse power Corliss engine, a Blake crusher and crushing rolls with a capacity of 200 tons a day. The mill the manager expects to be in readiness to crush ore by Dec. 1.

Between the Mammoth and Copper creek is twenty miles of road, built by the company last winter under the superintendence of Mr. Sibley, that is considered one of the best pieces of road making in the territory. The Calumet & Arizona people, whose property adjoins that of the Sibley company, have a party of surveyors in the field and the indications now are that within the next two years at least a Copper Creek branch road will connect with the Southern at Benson. In that event Tucson will lose much of the trade that now comes to it.

BEWARE THE MARKET BUZZ SAW.

Unless history, for the first time, fails to repeat itself, a lot of people in this country, some of whom probably live in Duluth, are nearly due for a very painful and costly stock market experience.

The revival of business and the rosy prospects for the immediate future have been reflected in the stock market, which is merrily discounting all the good news that is due for many months to come. There have been several near-real "stock booms," and before snow flies there will probably be more of them. People who refused to put a penny into stocks last fall, when they were at the lowest level for years, will fly into the market and buy at the top, paying the profits of those who had the sense to buy low; and presently these victims will find themselves, as many found themselves last fall, holding the empty bag.

Let's hope that Duluth will not get excited this time, and that whatever comes in the stock market, it will keep its head.

The experience of last fall should have been a lesson to everybody. Pretty nearly everybody that had anything to do with stocks at all was pinched, many people very badly. The lesson was that the stock market is somebody else's game for most people, and that the outsider's chance isn't nearly as good in it as it is in a poker game where everybody but the outsider plays with marked cards and has a sleeve full of aces.

Yet unless the lesson has penetrated deeper and made a more lasting impression than now seems probable, the newly-grown wings that were singed last fall will presently be fluttering about the newly-lighted lamps of the stock market, ready for another try with the flames. It's funny, but moths seem unable to profit by the experiences of others; and no matter though every one that dashes into the blaze is burned to death, all the rest believe that it will be different in their cases, and that they will come out whole.

Everybody who applies a little sound common sense to it will agree that the best thing to do is to keep entirely out of the stock market. The only man who really makes money out of it is the bookmaker—beg pardon, the stock broker—who takes commissions for making trades. Paper profits disappear in the twinkling of an eye; margins vanish like a candle flame in a hurricane; the elusive hope of sudden riches beckons the heedless plunger over bogs and swamps and into the abyss of disaster.

Last fall, everybody was condemning the stock market game and especially the margin trade. The stock market game is just as dangerous and the margin trade is just as infamous now as they were then. Can it be that the people have forgotten their wounds so soon?

Duluth will be the better for it if its people, observing the stock market game from afar, thrust their tongues into their cheeks as one who would say "You can't catch me twice at that game!" and pass by on the other side.

But if you must play the game, try to remember 1907, and don't go beyond your depth.

A TAX ON BACHELORS.

It is impossible to withhold admiration of the persistence with which the Baltimore Sun continues to advocate a tax on bachelors, even in the face of unduly hilarious criticism which often amounts to downright scoffing.

Of course, much of this levity comes from bachelors, who refuse to take the proposal seriously; though why they should not take it seriously, in view of the obvious fact that they are in the minority and would have to submit if the majority ever got really roused up to the need of imposing such a tax, passes understanding.

We are altogether inclined to the belief that the Baltimore paper is right, and that a tax on bachelors would be a splendid thing to have from every viewpoint. There are but two ways about it: either it would raise a lot of money for public purposes, or it would result in driving a lot of bachelors into matrimony; and as that is where they belong, society stands to win in either event.

There is no reason why the bachelor should oppose the tax, except that he is fundamentally selfish—and makes blind use of his selfishness, too, since every woman will tell him that real happiness is only to be found in matrimony. If he were not selfish, of course he would not be a bachelor. Except for a very slender band of men who are bachelors through shyness—though it is a rarely shy fit of shyness indeed that a clever woman cannot overcome—evidently most bachelors are bachelors because they prefer to be that rather than married. Now if they prefer to be single, and value that state, they ought to be willing to pay for it; because they must have learned by this time that there is nothing desirable on this earth that must not be paid for in some form or other. Since bachelorhood must be paid for anyway, why not pay for it in cold cash that will benefit society, and that will serve in a measure to redeem the injury that bachelors do society by refusing to assume the responsibilities of becoming husbands and fathers?

The tax on bachelors would serve a double purpose. It would raise new revenues for public purposes, which might well be devoted to relieving the misery caused by men who marry without regard to their ability to support a family; and it would discourage that particular selfishness which takes the form of bachelorhood. It would weigh particularly with those who refrain from matrimony because of its expense, and who stick their tongues in their cheeks when they hear the remark that "two can live as cheaply as one." Evidently these men do not believe that; so they continue to let one live on their incomes instead of experimenting with two. Yet if it were going to cost money, also, to remain single, these men would think twice before abandoning themselves to a career of habitual bachelorhood. If they marry, as a result of the bachelor tax, let us hope that they will fall into the hands of women who are good managers of mankind; for the man that bases his choice between matrimony and bachelorhood upon motives of economy is going to be a hard proposition for a wife not skilled in the separation of money-lovers from their idol.

THE FLOOD OF POOR BOOKS.

Every reader of current fiction must have felt, even though he did not precipitate the thought into tangible phrases, just what is expressed by William Dean Howells in an entertaining interview in the New York Times: "There is a forced production of unreadable material today that offends chiefly for its lack of good taste. A vast army of uneducated readers has grown up in this country who may be quite as eager for good taste in their reading as their ancestors were, but it is not to be found."

To say that reading material not offensive to good taste is not to be found is putting it altogether too strongly, and beyond any question Mr. Howells would be as quick to say so as anybody, even though the above remark gives a contrary impression. It is only necessary to state, as proof that the impression is wrong, that Mr. Howells himself, most delightful, most characteristically American, most charmingly entertaining yet most conscientious and ennobling of modern American authors, is still alive and still writing.

Yet the publishers' presses are busily turning out a tremendous avalanche of inferior matter, the marvel of which is that it finds buyers and readers; for doubtless that is the reason the publishers turn it out, since they are in business for business reasons, and they surely wouldn't put out an inferior book as a favor to its author or for fear of hurting his feelings by rejecting it. Mr. Howells used a happy expression when he spoke of this product as "forced," for every page of it bears evidence that the world is applicable. The average current novel shouts in every line the story that its author had said to himself: "I will now write a book that shall make me much money;" and that he thereupon did write a book, toiling painfully to fill space and to expand the thinnest kind of a plot into a certain number of pages. Very few of the works of fiction that are unloaded upon the American people these days are written by men with anything to say; and no great book was ever written yet except by a man who had an earnest and important message which he wished to lay before his fellow men.

The usual popular novel is ground out after a mechanical fashion by a man—or a woman—who has chosen letters as his trade because he likes writing and not because he is fitted for it. The plot is strained, the processes of the story are obviously mechanical, the character-drawing is crude and often wholly lacking, the people of the story being little better than dummy imitations of humanity. With the most "successful" novels—if it be success to sell like wildfire for a month or two and then be properly forgotten—the process is simply to lash jaded appetites by as much sensational "action" as can be crowded into the space of an ordinary volume; exactly like emptying the red pepper box into a salad for the use of a man whose taste had become vitiated by abuse. If the producers of such novels judge the condition of public taste accurately—and their enormous sales must make them believe that they do—the outlook for popular appreciation of good literature is pessimistic indeed. Yet this discomforting fact should not be allowed to obscure the more encouraging truth that at the public libraries, Dickens, Thackeray, Howells, Scott, Balzac and George Eliot are still in lively demand; which would seem to prove that if we could get more books like these the public would read them, if it could only pick them out of the terrible inundation of mediocrity and worse that flows unceasingly over the land.

A PALPABLE HIT.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal, irrtated by the manner in which "a certain fanatical set in the North falls to nagging and scolding the South whenever there is the slightest incident demonstrating that the South draws the color line," turns itself to a discussion of the color line, as it exists in the North and the South, in which it scores heavily.

In brief its contention is that while the South makes no bones about drawing the color line, the North pretends it has no color line but draws it more rigidly, and with more offense to the negro, than the South ever did.

"Down here," says the Tennessee paper, "there is no pretense of the non-existence of the color line. It is drawn—drawn sharply and plainly, and in consequence there is no needless humiliation of the blacks. They see the line, know that it exists, and are not deceived by any hollow pretenses that encourage them to overstep it, only to meet with the rebuff that humiliates. And the line, too, is on large and material things. There is no small, petty, mean business where it is concerned. But in the country where the scolds of the South are bred all is different. The line is neither plain nor certain. It is a creature of whims, producing tragedies and farces, and because of its uncertain nature far more fatal to negro happiness and safety than is the fixed policy of the South."

Anybody familiar with conditions both North and South must agree that there is much truth in this description. There is a color line in the South, and there is none in the North; but the existence of the Southern color line is a fixed and definite fact, and the non-existence of the color line in the North is mere empty theory. The result is that the negro, who knows just where he stands in the South, must be mightily puzzled at times as to his situation in the North. It is easily conceivable that a Southern negro, weary of the distinctions imposed upon him in a land where a strict color line is drawn, might be attracted north by the report that no color line is drawn in this section, and be grievously disappointed and painfully humiliated by his reception here.

The Memphis paper gives as an instance of the Northern attitude toward the negro a story from Long Island to the effect that when Booker Washington, whom the Commercial Appeal rightly describes as the greatest negro of his day, sought to have a telephone put into his summer home, a number of summer residents tried to prevent it. "This sort of thing," says the Tennessee paper, "is small business. Practiced on a man like Booker Washington it is positively contemptible. The South has its color line, certainly; but it takes no such petty and hypocritical shape as this. It doesn't teach the people to either act or tell the lie, and it doesn't give a cordial welcome with the tongue to stab the more surely with the hand."

This is a pretty severe lecture, but there is much truth in it, and it is good for the people of the North to be told such truth once in a while. One's conception of the equality of man may be shocked by the Southern color line; but one's conception of Northern liberality will often be disturbed by such evidences of hypocrisy as that furnished by the Long Island neighbors of Booker Washington.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE CROPS.

Elsewhere tonight The Herald publishes a comprehensive series of crop reports, received today from points entirely covering the spring wheat country of Minnesota and the Dakotas, that makes very interesting and encouraging news; about as pleasant reading, in fact, as could be provided at this particular time.

Everything, including our prosperity, comes from the soil. When the soil is reluctant or weather conditions bad, crops are poor and times are hard. When the soil yields gladly and fruitfully, times are good.

This year, judging from these reports, which are thoroughly reliable, the crops are going to be excellent in the Northwest, and as good prices are already assured, this can mean nothing but great prosperity. The soil is the source of our wealth, and good crops form the cornerstone of prosperity.

This means a great deal to Duluth and the Northwest. The infrequent combination of good crops and good prices makes it particular promising. When this magnificent harvest begins to move, a season of unexampled prosperity for the Northwest can hardly fail to set in.

With the usual local exceptions, due to one cause or another, the general condition appears to be good. The hot spell a few weeks ago did some damage, which the later cool weather and welcome rains largely remedied. In a few scattered localities the damage had gone beyond reach of the improved weather conditions, resulting in decreased yields. Mostly, however, the rains came in the nick of time and insured a good crop.

It is all exceedingly hopeful and encouraging. The marketing of these crops will presently bring a rain of money over the Northwest, and that can mean nothing but an assured crop of prosperity, which has been—less in the Northwest than elsewhere, however—in some slight danger from the recent but happily passing spell of depression.

THE CHURCH AND SOCIETY.

It seems needful again to make it clear that in speaking of the failure of the church to meet its opportunities in this country The Herald was actuated by no spirit of captious criticism, but solely by a desire to be helpful. The church has such a splendid opportunity to become a great power for good in this world by taking up the problems that are so close to the people and that are assuming such vital importance to them, that anybody who sees that opportunity to a large extent wasted, and fails to speak of it as earnestly as he may, is guilty of neglect and self-stultification. The idea was not original with this newspaper, for there are others who are making similar appeals to the church to awake to its duty to society. Some of the loudest and most earnest of these appeals come from the church itself. For instance, Rev. Charles F. Aked, the brilliant pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church of New York—John D. Rockefeller's New York church—says in an article in the current Appleton's magazine: "It has become so clear that not the dullest can miss it that the church which has nothing to say to social problems has in our day no claim to existence." The Herald had not dared to put it so strongly as that; but it has no desire to weaken the fervor of that ringing alarm.

"Soon," continues Dr. Aked, "if it be not laughed off the face of the earth, it will remain only as the house founded on the sand, the refuge of the idler, the self-seeker and the coward, but a refuge that will fail them when the storms that are gathering break upon it. We may be profoundly thankful for the promise of many mansions in the sky, but the gospel for the day demands better homes below and better men and women in them."

The church is earnestly working for the individual regeneration of humanity, and in that work it is contending with social and economic conditions that make it desperately difficult, if not, in many cases, impossible. The Golden Rule seems to be the spirit of Christianity; yet a merchant who practiced the Golden Rule in his business, under existing conditions, would be almost certain to fail. Surely the work of the church for individual regeneration would be easier and more effective if conditions could be so changed that this would no longer be true. Out in the world, in the membership of the political parties, there are thousands of earnest men and women who are striving with all their energy to bring about this change; yet in the church, as an institution, even the discussion of these problems seems to be barred.

Some may consider this a delicate subject, but even delicate subjects are important, and more good is to be attained by discussing them than by tacitly permitting them to slip into obscurity. With the whole people struggling with pathetic earnestness and sincerity to solve the social problems that afflict them, and the church wilfully and persistently neglecting to give these problems any attention though every one of them is a stumbling block to the progress of Christ's kingdom on earth, surely it is not remarkable that somebody should rise to declare that the church is overlooking a chance to gain the sympathy and adherence of the masses of the people, as it most assuredly would if its efforts were directed toward the practical improvement of living conditions in this world as well as toward improving the prospects of humanity in another world. Let us live one existence at a time.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Dwight T. Evans, at the Hotel Lenox, says that the Democrats with Kern on the national ticket will probably carry Indiana. Mr. Evans says that Mr. Kern is considered a great campaigner in Indiana and that the Hoosiers will support him loyally.

The vice-presidential candidate is considered one of the very best lawyers in Indianapolis, or in the state. He was president of the Indiana State Bar association, is an authority on certain branches of the profession, and is one of the leaders of the legal profession in the state.

Down in Indiana, according to Mr. Evans, they think that Mr. Kern will be able to throw the support of a majority of the Republican votes of his state to Mr. Bryan. They believe in Kern, whom they consider a man of sound and ripe judgment, of great legal and executive ability—a man whom they would not be afraid to trust in a great office.

It's not pleasant to be ill and disabled, but it's still more unpleasant to be ill and disabled and know that you might have avoided it.

Horace Patrick, at the Spalding hotel, is eunable to leave his bed, and he hasn't the thought to comfort him that he did everything possible to avoid it.

The injury occurred in a runaway in Fredericksburg, Mo., over a week ago. Mr. Patrick was driving with a customer and two other men, in a two seated buggy behind a spirited horse. A bicycle rider came up the road and for some uncountable reason ran into the horse. This started things, and in a moment the horse was hitting down the Missouri pike at a speed that took the breath away from the four men.

The man holding the reins dropped them and jumped. He was severely scratched up and received several minor injuries. The other two men quickly followed his example, one being bruised from head to foot, and the other receiving an ugly cut upon the scalp, a sprained arm and other injuries.

Mr. Patrick stuck until the ship was about to sink. He tried to gather in the lines, and failing in this, decided to follow the example of his companions and jump from the buggy.

He jumped allright—that's all he knows. He came to fifteen minutes later. He was conscious of a badly sprained ankle, but asido from that did not feel very severe suffering.

From Fredericksburg, Mr. Patrick went to St. Louis. He began to feel somewhat worse from the effects of his fall, but was able to get about and attend to business. From St. Louis he went to Chicago. Maybe it was because of the fact that most everybody that goes to Chicago suffers from some malady, that Mr. Patrick began to feel the effects of his fall. His suffering became acute and he was hardly able to be driven to the Northwestern depot.

Coming up from Chicago to Duluth his suffering was intense. When the train reached this city it was thought that it would be necessary to carry the injured man to the hotel upon a stretcher, but exerting all his will power he was finally able to pull himself together and walk to the hotel. When he reached his room in the Spalding he collopsed.

Now, Mr. Patrick knows what is the matter with him. His back is injured severely and a doctor calls twice a day to keep him aware of the seriousness of his injury. Every time he moves a sharp, shooting pain reminds him of his injury and also makes him think if he only knew how serious it was in the first place, perhaps he could have averted some of the more serious consequences.

THE WEATHER.

The weather got itself unsettled again somehow last night and after more than twenty-four hours of perfection, this morning it was cloudy and threatened slight showers. It was pleasant, however, except for the dubiousness as to excursions of various sorts for this afternoon and tomorrow. The weather man expects partly cloudy weather with scattered local showers tonight and tomorrow. Last night's lowest temperature was 58 degs. and yesterday's highest was 76 degs.

A year ago today it was showery.

The sun rose this morning at 4:47 and sets tonight at 7:41, making 14 hours and 54 minutes of sunlight, a minute more than an hour less than the year's longest day.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Light rains fell during Friday or last night over the middle Atlantic and west Gulf states, New Mexico and Northern Alberta, due to slight barometric depressions central off the Virginia coast, and over Eastern Texas, Arizona and Northern Montana. The low pressure in the Northwest also caused warmer weather in Alberta, British Columbia and South Dakota. The Dakota high pressure area has advanced to the Lake Region attended by cooler weather over the southern part of that section, Ohio valley states and northern New England. Indications favor more or less cloudiness in this locality tonight and Sunday, with possibly scattered showers.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Bertie—I see in this papah that the Turks, don't you know, are to have a new Constitution.

Chawlie—I suppose the poor beggahs lost the old one smoking Turkish cigarettes.

Washington Star: "I suppose you will refrain from abusing the opposition candidate?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "affairs in this wonderful nation have reached a point where a politician takes more pride in his enemies than in his friends."

Cleveland Leader: "Why don't these South American countries settle their petty disputes by arbitration?"

"They hate to waste the time. They can finish a half-dozen revolutions in the time it would take to arbitrate once."

Philadelphia Press: "I never saw a man with such a head for business," said the first fly.

"Smart, is he?" asked the other.

"Oh, I mean for our business; he's so bald-headed, you know."

Philadelphia Inquirer: "Yes," said Dubley, sentimentally, "this is a lock of Mabel Brown's hair. Although she rejected me, I will still treasure it."

"Really?" remarked Newitt. "By the way, you haven't seen Mabel lately, have you?"

"No. Why?"

"Well, you'd better have that lock bleached."

Chicago Tribune: The man at the telephone in the summer resort hotel was observed to turn pale.

"What!" he exclaimed; "you don't mean it!"

Apparently the person at the other end of the wire did mean it, for the man turned to the proprietor of the hotel and gasped:

"Landlord, I have just learned that my house in the city was burned to the ground last night by long-distance telephone!"

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

The Blessedness of Being Idle.

"Twelve rules for the conduct of life." This caption of an article caught my eye the other day as I was running through the papers. It emanated from one of those prudent persons who every now and then arises to mark out the path of rectitude for their less enlightened fellow men. As I am none too wise touching the conduct of my life, I started to read the article. Rule 1: "Never be idle." I read no further. It was pretty strenuous doctrine for this time of year and, indeed, for any season, "never be idle." Would the man have us run the machinery night and day? Or would he have us fill every waking hour with some useful occupation?

Rather let us sing the praises of idleness for a moment. We rate efficiency and achievement so high, we so constantly exhort our young people to be up and doing, we declare that it is absolutely necessary to have a purpose in life, and to stick to it, and we forget the great complementary truth that ought to be emphasized at the right time and in the right way. There is a time for idleness, sheer idleness, for the putting aside of engrossings tasks and problems and even those forms of physical recreation that keep life tense and highly spiced. We need o evacuae the mind now and then, to let it lie absolutely quiet, or go "wool gathering."

Some men—more is the pity—have devoted themselves so assiduously to their business or profession that they have almost lost the ability to idle. They may take a vacation, but it must be spent where there is a plenty of diversion. They must have a merry-go-round, or its equivalent, or the spot where they are ceases to be a pleasure resort, and they flee in a swift automobile to some place where there is something doing morning, afternoon and evening. Just to lie on the grass under a tree and look up through its branches at the scudding clouds, or to stretch out on the beach and watch the distant sails come and go, would be little short of torture.

To others—and they are to be congratulated—the chance to spend even one day doing absolutely nothing is a rich privilege. A clever story in a current magazine describes the efforts of a wearied mother to get a day of absolute quiet in her home during which the children, the cook and the telephone would have no claim upon her. The rest of the family offered their co-operation. The husband brought up the breakfast with the children trooping after her. But somehow the habit of resorting to mother had become so firmly established in that family that her long anticipated and greatly needed "quiet day" turned out a complete failure. Then the physician intervened and packed her off to the country for a period of complete idleness.

Aside from physical benefit, the intellectual and spiritual gains from this utter relaxation are immense. Wordsworth was right when he sang:

"We can feed these minds of ours with a wise passiveness."

Had men been always busy and never idle we should not now have great works of art, masterpieces of literature. Such achievements grow out of great thoughts and these in turn are the product of a certain amount of contemplation, of brooding. "While I was musing the fire burned," said the Psalmist of old. The vision comes to him who has the quiet receptive mind. Down deep in your subconsciousness are things which may never emerge unless you will let your mind lie fallow for a season. Idleness often flashes a light into these otherwise dark chambers of the brain.

It is not the idleness of the idle that I am extolling, but the idleness to which the faithful worker is entitled, nay, which he needs if he is to go on with his work productively year after year. For out of such seasons of quiescense—and they need not be so very long—come new joy in labor and fresh strength for life's conflicts.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Maybe the reason some women don't hesitate to color their hair is because generally it isn't theirs.

The maddest girl in the world is the one who ate onions because she was sure nobody was going to call, and then he came.

A good way to get men to drink plenty of water and pay lots of money for it would be to put an internal revenue tax on it.

A man is hardly ever prouder of anything than when he sat in the same smoking room of a sleeping car with some politician and told him what time it was.

Funds Can Be Used.

Chicago Post: They are going to spend $46,000,000 for the improvement of the Russian army. We never knew anything that needed it more.

See the Point?

Washington Post: Drinking is a habit that grows. It's all right for a man to indulge in an occasional smile, but he shouldn't allow it to develop into a perpetual grin.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOUTH

By SAVOYARD.

JOHN JAMES INGALLS once wrote a chapter on "Blue Grass" that was simply delightful, as was everything that fell from his tongue or flowed from his pen. He classed Indian corn as a grass, and very properly, and dwelt in eloquent periods on the stately beauty of that plant, king, as it is, of all the crop vegetables; but it is ignoble, indeed, compared with the giant oak, the graceful elm, the stalwart hickory, the imperial pine of the South. These, too, are grass, monarchs of the vegetables.

'Tis some sixty years since that George D. Prentice, in controversy with John Brough, then editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, put this doggerel in the Louisville Journal:

If all flesh is grass as the Scriptures say,
Then Johnny Brough is a load of hay.

To which Brough, who weighed above 300 pounds, made this reply: "It would seem so from the way that ass down at Louisville is nibbling at us." Prentice always declared that it was the best Roland ever returned for one of his Oliviers. Prentice was then the leading Whig editor of the Mississippi valley, and the Journal the leading Whig organ. Brough was the foremost Democratic editor of that region, and the Enquirer the chief Democratic organ. It was in that elder day when politics was far more strenuous than now. Prentice became a bulwark of the Union in 1861 and wrought tremendously to save Kentucky to the Union. Brough became war governor of Ohio mainly because the Marietta railroad thought David Todd, while war governor, gave business to the Hocking Valley road that the Marietta coveted. Brough beat Clement L. Vallandigham, but the G. O. P. had some experts to count the returns.

And speaking of hay, the year 1907 the area mowed in the United States was 44,028,000 acres; the average yield per acre 1.45 tons, the total product 63,677,000 tons, and the value $743,507,000, just about the value of the cotton crop, which in 1906 was $721,547,237. New York leads in the production of hay, 5,896,000 tons. Iowa is second, with 4,900,000 tons. Pennsylvania is third, with 4,568,000 tons. Ohio produced 4,050,000 tons. Missouri, 4,060,000 tons. All the rest produced less than 4,000,000 tons each. It should be observed, however, that in the matter of tonnage, per acre, no state east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio equals Louisiana, that yielded two tons the acre. Mississippi, per acre, beat New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Connecticut, and all the other Northern "hay states," out of sight. What will the physical energies of the agricultural South be when they are brought to perfection? There is my own state of Kentucky, that produced in 1907 but 598,000 tons of hay, and yet, without much effort, her yield might have exceeded that of New York.

I was talking with a man the other day who contended with me that there was no energy at the South except what had been sent down there in carpet bags after the war. I represented to the fellow that war was the supreme test of "energy," and when that was applied the South, next to revolutionary France, distanced the whole world, and that I was not unmindful of the 80 years' struggle, at the end of which Holland gained her independence of Spain. He said: "Yes, but your traitor secretary of war stole our guns, and, of course, you licked us at the start." I am not sure, but it was either King Solomon or Lord Bacon who said that a wager is the only argument that appeals to your fool, and so I offered to bet him that the Southern arsenals did not have their quota of muskets when Fort Sumter was fired on, while the Northern arsenals had their quota. I had investigated the matter, and was betting on a certainty. He was not as big a fool as his talk had led me to suspect he was. He declined my bet.

But that is aside. Here is Georgia with a yield of hay per acre far surpassing New York, and yet her total yield is insignificant. Why? Georgia saves the labor of the harvest by allowing live stock to graze on pasture that could easily be made meadow.

But that is going to be changed after a while. It is already demonstrated that our cotton states are the natural home of the alfalfa plant, and I have somewhere read that the tick, so terrible to the cattle of the gulf states, cannot exist in a field planted to alfalfa. If that be true, then the hay statistics will tell a different story to the next generation, and the matter of a restoration of the soils of the cotton country is as simple as shoeing horses and easier.

In dairy products, poultry and eggs, the supremacy of the North is even more pronounced than it is in the growing, the harvesting, and the saving of hay, and yet in the gulf states it ought to be as profitable to make and sell a pound of butter for 20 cents as it is to make that pound of butter in New York, or Illinois, or Wisconsin for 25 cents. The South has at least 5 cents a pound advantage on the cost of production.

In Wisconsin a cow must be kept in a parlor six months of the year, and on the Gulf of Mexico that cow will not suffer if allowed to run at large all winter. In Wisconsin the pasture season is short. In Alabama it is long, but Alabama all her life has been growing cotton, and only lately turned her attention to mining coal and forging iron. With alfalfa and intelligent dairy farming, that means provident rotation of crops, Alabama would soon become a greater milk, butter, eggs, cheese, and poultry state than New York, and raise two bales of cotton with less labor than she now raises one bale. There is a man down at West Point, Miss., in the black lands between the Noxubee river and Okolona, whose plantation was literally worn out growing cotton, so that it would not produce half a bale an acre, on soil where, in 1850, there had been abandoned in the field on Jan. 1 half an acre, because there were not sufficient hands to pick it.

This man went in for alfalfa, cow peas and hogs, with the result that he gets eight tons of hay per acre a single season. He sells hogs by the carload that are fatted at half the cost of the Iowa or Nebraska hog, and he has restored the fertility of his land to the extent that it now produces over a bale of cotton to the acre.

What tha man has done—and I wish I could recollect his name—all his neighbors can do. I told John Sharp Williams about him, and besought John Sharp to lay off 100 acres of his Yazoo land and try alfalfa. All the satisfaction I could get out of John Sharp was, "I'll consult Kit about it." Kit is a boy of 7 summers. John Sharp is from the distinctively cotton country, but I do wish he would try a patch of alfalfa. One day I saw at Lake Providence, La., white clover about two feet tall. What would alfalfa do there? It would get to the eaves of the house.

Thousands and thousands of our population are leaving the high-priced lands of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa, and have gone across the border, settled in the Dominion of Canada, and voluntarily become subjects of King Edward VII. There they get cheap homes with nearly all the conveniences they left in the States. There they have low taxes, something they did not have in the States. There they enjoy cheap living, a blessing utterly and hopelessly out of fashion in our free country. There the country is not tossed in a blanket every four years, to the discomfiture and terror of business, to see who shall be the first man in the land.

If I were a young man I would go there too, to get out of and away from the cant of American politics—for example, both parties are fishing for the pension vote. But that is sacrilege, and I take it back.

If the South were known to the men of Iowa as I know it, Iowa would send farmers to the South instead of to the Canadian Dominion.

Yet of a noble race was Shenkin.

And so the South will manage to jog along as independent as that Viking of the high seas, who loved the storm and entered into battle with it.

NO POLITICS FOR MITCHELL

Former Miners' President Will Not Take Part in Campaign.

New York, Aug. 1.—John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, said last night that under no circumstances would he take any part in the presidential campaign.

"I will not say whether or not I am in sympathy with the stand taken by Mr. Gompers."

He said: "I will not say what side I am on or make any predictions. I am still and will remain a member of the national executive council of the American Federation of Labor, but I did not attend the conference of the heads of the national labor organization.

"I am on very friendly terms with President Roosevelt and think very highly of him, but that would not sway me politically. Our friendship was not brought about by politics.

"I have never met Mr. Taft and do not know what kind of a man he is, except what I have read about him. I have met Mr. Bryan twice, but know very little about him.

"I want to say positively that I am not talking politics; will not give any opinion as to what is likely to occur or who is to be elected, and I want to avoid being put in a position where it might be said I was going to take part in the campaign which I am not."

Mr. Mitchell's name had been mentioned as a candidate for vice president on the ticket with Mr. Bryan and also for governor of Illinois on the Democratic ticket, and in this connection he said:

"The holding of a political office never appealed to me. I will devote my time to other duties."

What a New Jersey Editor Says.

LABOR

LAWS ARE OBSERVED

Factory Inspector Says There is No Illegal Child Labor.

Employers Are Willing to Comply With the Laws.

"There is no unlawful child labor to my knowledge in this district," said August Hagberg, state factory inspector, who has this week completed his spring report to Labor Commissioner William H. Williams of St. Paul.

Mr. Hagberg has St. Louis, Carlton, Lake and Cook counties for his territory, and makes a report twice a year, regarding the way in which the factories guard against accidents to their employes, how they look after the health conditions and whether or not they employ children under age and without the right of a certificate from the board of education. The certificate from the board of education is only allowed to children who are older than 14 and whose circumstances require them to earn a living. Even if they have the permission from the school board, boys and girls under 16 cannot work in places where there is any danger from the machinery, or having in any way their health impaired. The law also provides that no child shall be sent errands into districts of the city where there are immoral influences.

Stores which employ a great many women as clerks are required by law to have chairs, stools or some place for them to sit down and rest behind the counters while they are not engaged in waiting on patrons. The law also states that there shall be special dressing room arrangements for them. It is the duty of the state factory inspector to see that these laws are obeyed before making his reports—one in the spring and the other late in the fall. Mr. Hagberg has already started on his rounds of inspection for his next report.

"I have held this position here for four years, and never have I run across more than ten or twelve children who were under age, employed in factories where they ought not to be. The owners of mills, factories, stores and other places who hire a great deal of labor, do not try to break the law. It don't do them any good, and it is liable to get them into trouble," said Mr. Hagberg. "I have always found such people willing and anxious to obey the law, and to accept and carry out, to the best of their ability, any suggestions of the state factory inspector in regard to the sanitary conditions, fire protection, machinery safety appliances in and about their factories, mills or railroad yards, for they come under my inspection as well as the rest."

Though not a member of the longshoremen's union, Henry Perrault, who is well known among labor organizations of this city and state, has been appointed district organizer of the longshoremen's union, by Daniel O'Keefe, international president, to succeed Gordon O'Neill, who has held the position for the past year.

Mr. Perrault has been the president of the Federated Trades assembly for several terms. At the last election he declined to accept the nomination for another term, having too much outside union work to do to longer permit him to continue in office. He has been a prominent figure in the work of the local union labor circles, and has taken a hand as delegate from the trades assembly in many of the state federation's annual conventions.

There will be a meeting of the last year's Labor day committee at Kalamazoo hall, Sunday.

WOODMEN WITHDRAW FROM FEDERATION.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 1.—The Modern Woodmen of America has withdrawn its membership from the National Fraternal congress, a federation organization with about fifty affiliated societies. This action has been contemplated since the last session of congress at Buffalo, August, 1907, when a resolution was carried which committed the affiliated societies to the policy of asking state legislatures to enact a law providing a minimum table of assessment rates to be changed by all societies alike.

Head Consul Talbot opposed this resolution at the time and he was supported by nearly half of the societies in attendance. The royal Highlanders, a society with headquarters in Lincoln, has already withdrawn from the congress, and other societies are contemplating doing so, according to Woodmen officials. The Woodmen officials are discussing the advisability of forming a new federation of societies, not satisfied with the action of the national fraternal congress.

Chronic Diarrhoea Relieved.

Mr. Edward E. Henry, with the United States Express company, Chicago, writes: "Our general superintendent, Mr. Quick, handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some time ago to check an attack of the old chronic diarrhoea. I have used it since that time and cured many on our trains who have been sick. I am an old soldier, who served with Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley four years in the Twenty-third Ohio regiment, and have no ailment except chronic diarrhoea, which this remedy stops at once." For sale by all druggists.

MACHINE FLIES THROUGH THE AIR

New York, Aug. 1.—Rising from the ground like a giant bird and darting through the air at express train speed, Henri Farman's aeroplane, the "heavier than air" flying machine he brought here from France to demonstrate its ability to fly, made its initial flight in this country late yesterday afternoon at Brighton Beach. It rose from an especialy prepared runway at the will of the inventor and after attaining a height of twenty-five feet flew straight ahead on a direct line, finally alighting with exquisite grace when the noted air pilot diminished the motive power.

During the brief space of time in which the aeroplane was skimming over the center field of the race track, the few hundred spectators, most of whom were friends of the inventor or rival aviators, watched the flight with breathless interest. The instant the trim looking machine landed cheers rent the air—cheers far more enthusiastic and vociferous than those of a race track crowd. Farman was surrounded and literally hugged by the jubilant aeronauts. Members of the aero club of America, under whose auspices Farman will conduct public flights at Brighton Beach, wanted to carry the successful inventor off the field on their shoulders.

When the machine was started it ran swiftly along on its wheels for 240 yards and then Farman turned a lever, which sent it into the air like magic and away it flew. The propeller made a whirring noise as it turned 800 times to the minute. Only 350 yards were covered in the air in this flight, but a few minutes later Farman made another try and traveled 760 yards in the air. He could have gone much further, he said, but feared striking a pile of lumber.

These flights are preliminary to Farman's public flights which will begin today.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Moderate Gains Indicated Each Week With Irregular Progress.

New York, Aug. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co's. weekly Review of Trade says: Trade reports continue to indicate moderate net gains each week, although progress is irregular. Some sections make much better headway than others, the Southwest leading while improvement is slowest at the East. There is also a similar irregularity in returns from the industries, some occupations gaining steadily while others proceed erratically. The net result however, is a larger volume of business in the aggregate, and comparison with this time last year are especially cheering, when it is considered that a year ago all records up to that were being eclipsed. More plants have resumed, wholly or partly, but there are still many unemployed.

At a further slight reduction in prices of Bessemer pig iron the Pittsburg market has experienced increased activity, and other material markets are somewhat busier, including coke ovens at Connellsville. Most finished steel lines are quiet, new contracts coming forward slowly and for small quantities, but specifications on old orders aggregate a fair tonnage. Each week the production of all the mills increase slightly, more plants constantly resuming, although usually on part time with reduced forces.

More inquiries are received in the primary markets for cotton goods, and there is hopeful feeling regarding the future, but actual transactions are still restricted. Purchases so long have been of a hand to mouth nature that more or less frequent sales are necessary to meet the wants of trade, but speculative operations, almost unknown. Some wholesale clothiers have concluded initial operations, although all woolen mills have not been opened, especially the better grades of goods. The feature of the market is the resistance to fabrics of low price, of which additional lines may be opened at any time.

New England shoe manufacturers report business quiet since the departure of Western wholesalers, and mail orders are not large. It is expected, however, that supplementary business will soon appear. Tanners are asking still higher prices for heavy sole leather, and hemlock overweight dry hide sides are notably scarce, as high as 25 cents being demanded on small lots. A better inquiry is noticed for belting, but this, although buyers are not offering over 37 cents.

The market for hides shows a further advance in prices. Foreign skins are firm with a brisk demand for all descriptions.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Two men were killed and six seriously injured, two of them probably fatally, in the Ontario & Western yard at Mayfield, Pa., Friday. The men were repairing cars of a siding, and another train crashed into hem.

Reports received from Labrador indicate that at least forty fishing vessels were wrecked in the northeaster which swept that coast early in the present week. All but three of the men of the crews reached shore, but fully 400 of these were without food or shelter for seven days, and their sufferings were severe.

John Finney, the negro who, two weeks ago, beat 11-year-old Mary Jamison almost to death in Franklin county, Va., in an attempt to criminally assault her, was Friday convicted in court at Rocky Mount. Finney will be the first criminal sentenced to be electrocuted in Virginia.

At the mining town of Stafford, Raleigh county, W. Va., 100 kegs of powder in a powder house exploded, nearly every building in the town being wrecked and several people were seriously hurt. The cause of the explosion is unknown. The damage aggregated $200,000.

LOOKING FOR FORGER.

North Dakota Bankers' Association After Henry Blackman.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The North Dakota Bankers' association is hot on the trail of a forger, and Secretary W. C. Macfadden of the association has mailed cards to the police and the financial institutions of the state, giving a description of Harry Blackman, who obtained money from the bank at Orr, N. D., by forgery. Blackman signs himself as Frank J. Kelly, and is described as 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 165 pounds. He worked for some time at McCanna, N. D., and was last seen at Lakota, on July 4.

The work of the association has been very efficient in assisting in locating forgers, bank robbers and other criminals, and has been a means of preventing much of the work of check artists in this state.

SOCIETY

THE most interesting of summer guests who have been entertained by Duluth hosts during the season are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Applin of London, England, who arrived during the week to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Patrick. Both Mr. and Mrs. Applin are known in the artistic world of London. Mr. Applin is a prominent literary man and Mrs. Applin is known on the stage as Miss Edith Olive. This is her first visit to America, although she has had a most interesting career on the English stage. She has appeared in productions of the old Greek tragedies, has interpreted Maeterlinck, and has had much other experience. Her American appearance was as "Ruth," in "The Great Divide," following Margaret Anglin in the role.

Mrs. Applin has had barely time to receive her impressions of America. "You do things so rapidly," she said. "You go from one thing to another at once while we would have planned it out in every detail several days in advance. My landing in America seems to be quite typical of your country. We arrived at half past one at New York. Mr. Kennedy met us at the quay and told us that his wife, Edith Wynne Mathison was giving a reading of 'Electra' that afternoon at Brooklyn, and would I please hurry over and read Clytaemnesta. We had read together before, of course. But I hdn't even thought of it and of course I said at once: "Oh, I coulin't possibly do it" But by half past three I was in Brooklyn reading. We never should have done so in London. We should have planned it all out carefully and taken several days to think it over.

"As an audience, I don't find very much difference between the American and the English. The American audience is perhaps a little more alert, and more willing to be entertained. They are not quite so 'flabby' as the English audience. As a people, they seem to have an endless amount of nervous energy. It seems to me that if we might get a little more of your interest and alertness and you could get a little more of our repose that we might have an ideal people."

As yet, Mrs. Applin's plans for her next season are not complete, but in probability they will include an American tour.

Several delightful affairs are being planned in her honor during the next two weeks.

Mr. Patrick and Mr. Applin left yesterday for a ten days' fishing trip to the Nipigon.

The Venetian water carnival, which will take place in August, promises to be the gayest and undoubtedly most beautiful of the affairs of the month. The boat club, in its various resorts at Spirit lake, Pike lake, Oatka beach and the main house, has been the scene of continuous galety during the summer. The informal dancing parties, the little dinners, the luncheons and picnic parties have kept the members and their friends happily occupied during much of the summer. Saturday afternoon and evening is a gala occasion at the club, but the water carnival will be the climax of the club season.

Mrs. H. C. Marshall received yesterday afternoon in compliment to her guest, Miss Hegeman of New York. The living rooms were prettily decorated in the summer garden flowers, and in the dining room, pink roses were used. Presiding at the tea tables were Mrs. A. M. Marshall and Mrs. Wells Gilbert. During the receiving hours, from 4 to 6 o'clock, about eighty guests called.

Mrs. Henry Swart of Winnipeg returned today to her home, after a several weeks' visit with her mother, Mrs. Harriet L. Carey of Lakeside.

Miss Retledge of New York is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Patrick.

Mrs. A. M. Fenton and children of 1222 East Third street spent the week at Solon Springs. They had as their guest, Miss Grace Meloy of 1221 East Third street.

Mrs. J. C. Shepard left today for Ashland, where she will be the guest of friends.

Mrs. W. W. McMillan entertained informally yesterday afternoon at her home, 1016 East First street, in honor of several former Duluth women, who are the guest of friends in the city.

Miss Gertrude Leng entertained the members of the Philathea club during the week at her home on East Third street. An informal program of readings and musical numbers was enjoyed by the guests. One of the most feted brides of several seasons was Miss Frances Mary Richardson, who Wednesday evening became the bride of Joseph Gorin Harrison. The wedding, which took place at St. Paul's Episcopal church was a most beautiful affair and in spite of the shower which arrived most inopportunely, a more brilliant assemblage was seldom gathered at the church. White asters with bay trees and palms were used with most charming effect for the decorations. Clusters of the flowers were tied at the pews and the chancel was banked with the chosen decorations.

At 8 o'clock, the wedding music was played with A. F. M. Custance at the organ, and the bridal party entered. The ushers, Messrs. Harvey Clapp, Paul Hale, Tracey Fairchild and Elmer Whyte entered first and were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Emily Piollet of Towanda, Pa., Miss Rosalind Longley of Pawtucket, R. I., Miss Elizabeth Sternberger of Jackson, Ohio, and Miss Jessie Hartley of this city.

Mr. Harrison, with his groomsman, William Harrison, awaited the bride at the altar and the service was read by Rev. A. W. Ryan.

The bride looked very beautiful in her gown of white satin. The extreme simplicity of the robe which was fashioned after the directoire model accentuated the girlish beauty of the bride. The sheath-like skirt was of severe simplicity. The soft folds of the material extending down the front of the gown to relieve the plainness and the skirt continued into a three-yard train. The yoke and long mousquetaire sleeves were of Venetian point lace and a fall of duchess point lace at the yoke front was an added touch of beauty. She wore no gloves, the sleeves of the gown falling well over her hand. A band of exquisite embroidery fitted closely under the arms for the finishing girdle and a long, full tulle veil completely covered the costume. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley and bride's roses.

The maid of honor was gowned in a white gown of marquesette trimmed in princess lace, and she carried pink roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 227 West Third street. In the reception rooms decorations of white asters and perennial phlox with ferns and palms were used. Receiving were the parents of the bride, with Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Harrison, parents of the bridegroom, and Mr. Harrison and his bride.

Mrs. Richardson wore a gown of silver blue corded silk of the directoire model, trimmed in deep fringe and embroidery in the self tone. Mrs. Harrison wore a gown of white lace.

The young ladies of the bridal party assisted about the rooms. In the dining room bride's roses were the decorations, and the piazza was especially beautiful in blooming plants and baskets of flowers.

Mr. Harrison and his bride left for a wedding trip to the Georgian bay. The bride's going-away gown was of brown cloth with a large black hat. After Oct. 1st, they will be at home at 1407 London road.

Costumes that presage FALL STYLES

SATIN GOWNS ARE ULTRA.

MODIFICATION OF MUCH TALKED OF SHEATH SKIRT.

SHOWING THE NEW SLASHED SKIRT.

NEW CUT OF COAT AND SKIRT.

Startling Revelation of the New Directoire-Elaboration Rife-Many Buttons-The Satin Vogue-Colors and Trimmings.

The French mode of the eighteenth century, known to fame and to dressmakers and tailors as the Directoire, will undoubtedly dominate the styles of the coming autumn. In its various modifications the modern adaptation sometimes gets quite far away from the original models, distinguished for their tight skirts, short-waisted coats cut away at the front and their collars high at back and sides. The variations of these details are noted in the tailored coat and skirt suits intended for practical purposes and developed in such materials as mohair and lightweight serge, in such ultra-fashionable colors as mulberry, slate green, taupe and bronze brown. They are trimmed with fancy braids of kindred tone or with soutache-embroidered black satin bands.

Black Satin Buttons.

More buttons are used on tailored coats of the modified Directoire type t' in have been seen on outside garments w thin the recollection of the oldest dressmaker. This does not mean that they are employed to close the fronts of the coats, for these are often blindly fastened, especially if a waistcoat is employed. The buttons are set along the shoulder seams, they outline the fronts by being placed a trifle back from the edge, they punctuate the short waistline, the underarm seams and the cuffs. Two dozen large-size buttons are not considered an extravagantly large number to put on one coat, and in 9 cases out of 10 they are covered with black satin. In most instances they are disc-shaped, varying in size from the proportions of a nickel to that of a silver quarter, but a few are oval or olive-shaped, and many show applications of satin matching the shade of the cloth suit which they decorate.

Elaborate Afternoon Costumes.

While the continuous lengthening of the simply tailored suit coats is quite marked and their shaping differs radically from those of last year, they bear but slight resemblance to the coats which accompany elaborate semitailored afternoon costumes. These are of fine, lightweight broadcloth in all the fashionable medium-dark shades. Some are champagne, biscuit or taupe colored, but there are many navy, electric and Copenhagen blues, and all tints of gray from London smoke to pearl. The skirts of these costumes are long, soft and clinging, some of them absolutely plain and others trimmed with silk cable cording or soutache. They have the raised girdle waist finishings and are practically built on to self-colored chiffon, lace or net blouses, for the so-called three-piece elaborate afternoon costume actually consists of a coat and a princesse or one-piece frock.

Cloth "Picture" Coats.

Afternoon costume coats are chiefly distinguished for their eccentricities, for they are alike only in so far as they are short-waisted. Sometimes the backs are so long that without a trained skirt beneath them they would almost sweep the floor, but they usually curve gradually away from above the waistline in front. Other coats hang straight to the knees in front and then are cut away sharply toward the back. In direct contrast, and to be recommended because they lend grace and long lines to the figure, are those having tight-fitting backs terminating at the waistline, and long, narrow and straight fronts reaching far below the knees.

Black and Khaki.

Separately considered, black and khaki costumes are immensely smart at the moment. The black gowns are of smoothly finished broadcloth similar in design to the elaborate afternoon costumes, but worn without a suggestion of contrasting color beyond the white about the throat and, perhaps, in the trimming of the large black hats which top them. Khaki colors are chosen for smart toilettes of the same character. They are embroidered chiefly with soutache and trimmed with fancy braid. While numbers of costumes in these two colors are in one tone, there are few garments on which a touch of one or the other of them does not appear. Black is employed in most instances on champagne, green, white and blue, and the khaki on grays, pinks, mauves and mulberry.

The Overgrown Cabachon.

Cabachons of many varieties are seen on all the elaborate tailormades. They are of cable cording, chenille, velvet, jet and all manner of fancy metals and beads. From the modest proportions of an ordinarily-sized hatpin head, they have grown to more than the diameter of a silver dollar. Indeed, one enthusiastic importer of such goods asserts that they are of the circumference of a bread and butter plate. Be that as it may, cabachons are certainly tremendously popular and add wonderfully to the smart effect of a costume.

The Satin Vogue.

Satin is enjoying such tremendous vogue at the present writing that it would seem as though the supply of this lustrous material would be exhausted by autumn, even though the makers work over time. Entire costumes for afternoon calling and the races are of black and such fashionable shades as taupe and wisteria in satin. The skirts are clinging and usually untrimmed, but the coats are half-fitting and very elaborate. Some of them are cut quite short at the front and hang in straight, loose lines to the top of the high girdle, and at the sides and back they are of three-quarters depth. Others have the one-button open fronts, which show the lace jabot on the blouse worn beneath them, and slope away sharply from the waist line. A third type, and one that is distinctly Directoire, is cut away from a few inches below the underarm seam, so that in front the effect is that of an eton. This, however, is one of the extremes and only to be carried by a woman of exceptionally good figure and graceful bearing.

Embroidered Net Coats.

If lined with satin or taffeta the same embroidered net coats that are now being worn with Marquisette, voile, satin and lace reception and garden party gowns may be made to do duty during the autumn and even at some winter resorts. These coats show soutache, chenille and Tokio embroideries in self or contrasting colors. Usually wide silk braid outlines their edges. They are from 38 to 50 inches long and even round the bottom. Their sleeves, of the moderate-sized Bishop type and of seven-eighths length, may be furnished with cuffs at the same time that the tucked satin incroyable collar is added to the neck.

Magpie Effects Fashionable.

That the trend of the times is toward magpie effects is evidenced in the large number of such semitransparencies as Marquisettes, grenadines and voiles, made up in black and white and white and black, a difference more marked than distinguished. Many of these materials are bordered and afford opportunity for the carrying out of tunic draperies and classic effects. They are perfectly adapted for the modest modifications of the much-discussed "split" skirt, for the borders may be arranged into draperies that fall apart and disclose a pleated silk or chiffon underskirt. This idea will be extensively utilized during the autumn and coming winter in the case of costumes combining smooth-faced cloth and sicilienne, a material which is to be one of the fashionable fabrics of the year.

Silk Sleeves Back Again.

To state that silk sleeves are back again and very much to the fore may sound like an Irish bull. Nevertheless, the old-fashioned idea of putting silk sleeves into cloth dresses is one of the coming fads notably in elaborate afternoon costumes. These sleeves are generally of the mousquetaire type, but not always of mittaine length, for while some of them extend well over the hand, others scarcely cover the ugly wrist knuckle—peculiar to the thin woman who can easily wear the Directoire gowns. When the silk sleeves do not wrinkle over the arm, as the mousquetaire type should do, they are plain and embroidered. In the case of some of the elaborately trimmed costumes, to thus embellish the sleeves seems like "carrying coals to Newcastle." But Dame Fashion, having torn herself away from the simple lines, seems bent upon going to the other extreme and votaries appear quite willing to follow her lead.

A Question of Petticoats.

Women who have been practicing the new method of walking, adopted in deference to the sheath-fitting skirt, which hugs the limbs closely and threatens to tie up the feet in the wad of cloth which lies upon the ground, declare that to wear a petticoat beneath one of them is an absolute impossibility. Therefore, knickerbockers will at least be worn beneath the sheath skirts, though women may not entirely give up what has long been regarded as the most attractive detail of the feminine wardrobe.

Knickerbockers Are Fascinating.

If some of the old-time leaders of the women's suffrage party who fought hard for the privilege of wearing masculine attire had adopted trousers of the present knickerbocker type instead of the ungainly looking bloomers they might have had less opposition—and ridicule—on the score of costume. The "knickers" worn beneath the Directoire skirt are of softest, supplest satin, precisely matching it in color. They are trimmed with lace, embroidery and ribbons. Some of them have big jeweled buttons at the knees, and others silver buckles, like Bobby Shafto, who "went to sea," according to the nursery rhyme.

Fichu and Square Effects.

If more attention were paid to the shape of the individual face when considering the question of bodice drapings results would more frequently be satisfactory. To the woman with a full, broad face a pointed yoke or guimpe is always infinitely more becoming than one that is square or round. And to the woman with an oval or thin face the square or round yoke is a great improvement. All elaborate bodices, whether pointed or square, are now cut so exceedingly low that the treatment of guimpes is of vast importance from the sartorial viewpoint. Naturally they cannot be unlined for more than a few inches below the throat, and, therefore, the groups of horizontal shirrings in the net should be set so closely together that the chiffon mounting of the lining proper shall seem to merge gradually into the net. Many guimpes are still made with sleeves, both long and short, for while the tight sleeves are coming in and the jumper is on the verge of departing, there are certain types of semitransparent costumes that will at least go through next winter. All of these have conspicuous yokes, and draped, half-long sleeves.

Less Cloth Required.

The glad tidings are being shouted over the land that less cloth goes into gowns than has been the case for many a long year. But this news has the usual string tied to it, and in this instance it is the difficulty of making the gown, for everybody who has ever attempted to make feminine apparel realizes that it is far and away easier to put together a fancy dress than one that is simple. Trimmings will cover up a multitude of shortcomings in the matter of cut and outline, but a straight, scant skirt, with an embroidered panel or border and a bodice arranged in artistic folds enriched with Tokio or chenille handwork must be absolutely right or they would better not exist.

Fashion Notes and Novelties.

A radical departure in gown trimmings and one that is certain to win popularity as soon as it comes well to the front is the use of gold bullion buckles in lieu of cabachons, for the two decorations are never used on one garment. The buckles are about one and a half by three inches in size and are made of buckram, covered with satin, on which the gold bullion is so thickly embroidered in long darning stitch that not a thread of the fabric shows. These buckles are set at the waistline of gowns, on shoulder draperies and on sleeves. They are especially effective on black and white broadcloths, which are not trimmed with any other color.

A good way to utilize pieces of bordered materials is to make them into fronts for separate waistcoats, such as are worn beneath mohair and pongee tailored coats. If the bordering is sufficiently wide it should be turned sidewise and shaped into a tight-fitting waistcoast. If there are only scraps at hand, the vest should be made of pongee matching the suit in color and the bordering utilized for the short, pointed revers and the flaps of the tiny hip pockets. Some of these waistcoats are on distinctly mannish lines, but quite long over the hips and slightly cut away at the bottom. The backs are of thin silk in order that the garment need be no warmer than is absolutely necessary.

When long, clinging skirts are the mode it is quite as necessary to devote the utmost care to foot dressing as when ankle-length runabout costumes are in the height of favor. Because the pump apparently reduces the size of the foot, as well as aids in the simulation of the Spanish arch instep, which does not always exist, it is deservedly popular. This summer Dame Fashion has many fancies in the matter of such shoegear. Not only is she clinging to her early love, the tan pump, which is developed in every conceivable shade from the darkest khaki to a yellowish champagne, but she cherishes an affection for deep brown shades to harmonize with the tobacco brown tailor and elaborate afternoon costumes which are so strongly in evidence at the races, the open-air horse shows, the exhibitions of pet dog associations and all the semipublic places where the ultra-fashionable woman, representing America's most exclusive element of society, may be viewed at close range. Such pumps are of canvas, soft kid of ooze leather, and while there is no suggestion of clumsiness about them, they are on decidedly common-sense lines. There is no good reason why grace and comfort should not be combined, and happily for the woman with tender feet, much improvement has been made in latter-day shoe designing to bring about a joining of these two qualities.

A new and fetching combination in women's pumps intended for street wear has a wide toe, a very wide Cuban heel, high arch and short vamp. Any woman can be fitted with a shorter pump on this plan, and can wear the high heel without discomfort, as the wider toe provides ample room and the weight is distributed upon the ball of the foot without jamming the toes forward into a narrow, wedge-shaped space. To avoid a clumsy appearance the sole is trimmed close to the toe.

While some of the shoes designed particularly for street wear are decorated with the tiniest of fabric or ribbon bows, others carry large gunmetal, silver or gilt buckles. These are not especially conspicuous, and they certainly add tremendously to the smart effect of a costume.

Not only because black gowns are extremely fashionable, but because the feet usually look best in that dusky color, suede, ooze, patent and glossy black kid pumps are very much worn. Some of these are lightly made and exceedingly comfortable.

White pumps for the street are chiefly of canvas and ooze, on the models of both the practical and the semidressy types. They are usually finished merely with stitching and have tan leather heels or they are bound and trimmed with white kid and have heels covered with the same material. Where a costume combines white and khaki, however, the white pumps are sometimes trimmed with yellowish-brown kid, but they are never worn with any other costumes, as they would render the feet unpleasantly conspicuous. Other novelties which are wonderfully chic, but too decided in character for the city's streets, are those of gray ooze with scarlet heels and buckle, of vivid green in combination with white calfskin and light tan, of pearl gray with large mother-of-pearl buckles, and of champagne or maize suede with black trimmings and buckles.

White satin pumps are the dancing footwear par excellence of the current summer. And very stunning affairs they are. Just to look at them through a show window would make a healthy girl of normal tastes long to dance. They are fitted with the thinnest of soles and the highest of satin-covered Louis heels and their toes are just a wee bit too finely pointed to spell comfort, but who cares for that if the feet suggest the proverbial little mice stealing in and out beneath the petticoat. Quite the most fascinating feature of these satin dancing pumps is the decoration of their vamps. Some of them are embroidered in butterflies and small flowers done in pearl beading or gold and silver bullion. Others are ornamented with rhinestone embroideries or buckles, but as yet no one has followed the example of a star in a well-known New York theater who wears a pair of dead black ooze pumps with vamps bearing her initials in rhinestones.

Black satin pumps have ever been considered immensely smart with black evening gowns. This year they are modeled after those in white and similarly decorated. But as jet continues to be fashionable, and it is rumored that violent contrasts are going out of sartorial date, the woman who contemplates the purchase of such pumps would better have the jet embroidered.

No longer is it a hard and fast rule that stockings shall match pumps. More frequently the hosiery worn on the street harmonizes with the skirt and is, therefore, not so conspicuous. It is a well-known fact that the most colored hosiery wears better and is cooler than black. That may be another reason why so much in tan, gray and blue is noticed. The well-bred woman does not go about the streets of a city in openwork stockings, although she may wear the gauziest of silk or lisle in warm weather. In fact, the thinner the hosiery, if not of Peek-a-boo type, the more elegantly dressed does the foot appear.

Stockings to be worn indoors are most ornate. Black and white ones are decorated in self and contrasting hues, chiefly in floral effects. Some of the finer sort have insertions and medallions of lace set into the instep and others are elaborately beaded and spangled. These, of course, accompany the satin dancing slippers worn with paillette gauze ball gowns.

CORRECT PUMPS AND HOSIERY.

Clerical collars which fit closely around the throat and button at the back are the latest inspirations of the people who believe that their mission in this world is to dress the necks of the multitude. They are of white and colored linen, made very stiff and high, similar to those worn by the clergy, and to some women are immensely becoming. They look especially well with tailored shirtwaists and runabout suits, and are in line with the band-trimmed tall hats. With anything of the lingerie or Directoire order they are, of course, out of the question. In the class with the clerical collars are the tailored white linen stocks finished with dainty tabs and tiny pearl buttons, but they may also be worn with the plainer types of lingerie waists—meaning those without yokes—and serve to lend a fresh appearance to a blouse which has been worn several days in succession.

Marie's and Ned's Experience With Two Bears.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

"Sister, let's go for a walk in the woods," said Ned to his sister Marie one fine morning. It's cool and nice since the rain and we may have some thrilling experiences."

"All right, brother," acquiesced Marie. And then they started out for the walk through the woods. Their surroundings were new to them, for they had been at the big country hotel just a day, having arrived there in company with their mother and father on the previous morning. Consequently all was of the deepest interest to them, and as they wandered along the shady country lane — going toward a deep, dark-looking wood—they noted with enjoyment everything they passed. There was a little rustic bridge, crossing a tiny stream, a fine, big boulder near to the roadside and ever so many wild flowers bordering their path.

"I'm so glad we've come to this lovely place for the remainder of the summer," cried Marie. "It's all so wild and beautiful. And just think of what we may find in the woods!"

"Yes, I wouldn't wonder if there are lots and lots of squirrels, rabbits and chipmunks," declared Ned. Then a thought struck him, a thought that seemed not quite so agreeable. "Say, Sister," he said in an undertone, "suppose we should—meet—a bear!"

Marie only laughed, then said: "Oh, all the bears have been killed off long and long ago by the hunters of the early days, and not even a trace of one is left." Marie was very brave at this minute, and her undaunted spirit caused Ned to laugh at his own apprehensions and to cast off all fear.

Pretty soon they reached the edge of the timber and found it dense and ringing with the songs of wild birds. "Oh, isn't it just like some of the forests one reads of in fairy lore?" cried Marie.

"Yes, and at every step I fancy we'll come upon a terrible monster, or a fairy, or a witch," declared Ned, a boy with a very vivid imagination.

"I only wish that we might see some of those remarkable things," laughed Marie. "But these things live only in books, you know. I'd be very glad to see something that really does exist—even a bear or a lion—but these woods have been inhabited by men too long to hold any wild animals. But, say, Brother, one of the ladies at the hotel told mamma last evening that there is a fine lake in the woods here. I wonder if we can find it? She—the lady—says it abounds with fish. We must get papa's fishing tackle and come here fish—"

But Marie stopped short and grasped hold of her brother's arm. "What's that moving down there—just ahead of us—there through that underbrush?" And Marie's breath came quickly and her hand trembled.

Ned looked in the direction his sister designated, and to his horror saw a huge black object moving to and fro. It was very close to the earth and appeared to be nosing about in the weeds. Anyway, whatever the object was which they could see through the underbrush, it was very formidable, and Ned, never very brave at best, and possessing a marvelous imagination, was so frightened that he could scarcely speak. But with eyes bulging and voice trembling he whispered: "See, there a few feet away is another black thing—as big as the first. They are bears! I can see them plainly! Come, let's get out of here as quickly as we can. Or shall we climb a tree? If those bears smell us, they'll take after us, and we'll never, never be able to run faster than they do! Oh, hurry, Marie, and say what we shall do!"

"We'll run for home," whispered Marie. "But let's creep carefully from this spot, for we are so near to the—the—whatever—they—are—that they might hear us if we made a noise. Come, creep after me. And as soon as we're a little way off we'll sprint."

Ned obeyed his sister and together they crept stealthily from the spot where fear had almost transfixed them. But when a safe distance from there they took to their heels and fairly flew through the woods, Ned falling heels over head as his toe struck a vine-covered stump. As he lay sprawling there, howling with pain and declaring that his toe was broken, and that now the bears would overtake him and eat him up, Marie, always brave under trying circumstances, stopped in her mad run to assist him and to console him by saying they were now out of sound of the bears, and too near to the outer edge of the woods for the wild things to come there for them. But all the while that she was consoling Ned she was trembling with fear for her brother and herself.

And while in this predicament Marie was startled by human voices very close to them, and quickly rising from her stooping posture she was surprised and happy to see her father and another of the hotel guests coming toward them. At the same moment her father caught sight of her and called out: "Why, daughter, I didn't know you had left the hotel! Where's Ned?"

Ned raised himself on his elbow and exclaimed: "Here I am, Papa, and I fear I have a broken toe. But let's not mind about my toe, but get away from here as fast as we can, for there are two huge bears down the path a piece. Come, papa, look at my toe a minute, and then help me up."

In a few minutes Marie had explained their dilemma to her papa and the gentleman who was with him, and the way both men laughed was a sight to behold. Of course, papa first examined Ned's toe and found it was only strained a bit, but no bone broken nor skin injured. "It's only a little knock," papa explained. Then he and the gentleman roared with laughter over the idea that there were bears in the woods.

"Come, son and girlie," said the papa, "and we'll just go to the spot where the bears are supposed to be stopping. You know that nearly all the great scarecrows that frighten folks half out of their wits prove upon investigation to be anything but dangerous."

But it was with reluctance that Marie and Ned followed their father and his companion, and when they neared the spot of danger they both warned their leaders, declaring that they might be killed.

The Squirrel's Party - A Story for the Wee Ones.

BY ANNIE JAMES.

A dear little squirrel was frisking about in a big green park, when into his choice place came a party of boys and girls with a very nice lady. The lady was the mamma of one of the little boys, and the other children were her son's guests, and they were all going to have a picnic in the park.

"Oh, there's a little squirrelie!" cried one of the children, and at once all eyes were turned on the little squirrel in question. "Say, why can't we have him to our party, Mamma," asked the little host of the party, addressing his mamma, the lady in charge of the picnic crowd.

"Well, I really think it's more in keeping that the squirrel should act as host and we as guests," said the mamma, smiling at the pretty squirrel that was standing on his hind feet and looking very much amused at the funny beings who had come all uninvited into his wood.

"Oh, then let's call it the squirrel's party," suggested a little yellow-haired girl, who wore blue ribbons and a white frock.

"Yes, it's the little squirrel's party!" agreed all the other little ones.

"In that case Mr. Squirrel should come and make us welcome," declared the mamma. "But, you know, the manners of animals—especially of squirrels—are not like the manners of people. So we shall have to behave toward Squirrelie as he would like us to do. In the first place, we must let him understand that we are his friends and do not intend to do him harm. In the second place, we must be very quiet when he is in our midst, for squirrels do not like too much noise and commotion. They are afraid of romping and shouting, and will run away from their best friends if they behave noisily. So, all be seated in a pretty circle—leaving room for Squirrelie to enter at one side—and then we'll set out some nice luncheon for him and invite him to come in."

The children did as suggested and sat as still as little mice, and then mamma put out some nuts and bits of candy on a big green leaf which was placed in the center of the inclosure made by the little picnickers.

"And now, Johnny James, you may go and invite the squirrel to come to his own party," said the mamma, giving a hulled nut to Johnny James and bidding him to take it close to Squirrelie and offer it to him. "And when he comes near enough to bite the nut you must move backward a little, holding the nut just out of his reach, till at last you have coaxed him into the circle. Then he'll have his luncheon right here with us. And after he has found that we are his guests he'll not be afraid."

And sure enough, just as sure as the moon is made of green cheese and a pot of gold is to be found at the end of the rainbow, a little squirrel will go into even a circle of boys and girls to get at a dainty luncheon, for squirrels do love to eat. So it was not very long before Johnny James had coaxed Squirrelie to join the group of picnickers, who were in reality his guests, though it is very likely the little bushy tailed fellow did not know it. And as soon as he had eaten a nut or two he took up another one and ran off with it, and to the great amusement of the children—his guests — he buried it beneath a little tuft of grass, and then he returned and got another nut and took it to his storehouse also.

"You see how industrious he is?" asked the mamma. "He even works when he is given a party. But, of course, we excuse him for what appears to be bad manners, for a squirrel's manners are not those of a well-bred boy or girl. And now, if you are all hungry, we'll open the baskets."

And amidst a shout of eagerness—for each boy and girl was as hungry as could be—Squirrelie ran off to hide till the commotion should subside. And, strange as it may seem, that party of young picnickers did not take any notice of their host, Mr. Squirrel, while they were eating their luncheon.

"It's a bad way to treat our host," declared the mamma, pointing to the squirrel that was perched on a tree limb, eyeing the crowd.

"Well, he'll have to mend his manners if he wants to give boy and girl parties," explained the little girl with yellow hair. Then she fell to eating a sandwich and forgot her host who was perched in the tree.

A Young Housekeeper's Lesson.

A young married woman walked into a grocery store the other day, angry to the roots of her hair. Throwing a piece of yellow substance on the counter she shrieked forth to the grocer's clerk who had taken refuge behind the counter:

"Here, you swindler, is the soap that does the washing alone; the soap that makes wash day a thing of joy, when the housewife may sit in her easy chair and receive callers; the soap that makes a lather fine enough for a man to shave with, but which takes out every stain—no matter of what nature—from the linen. Here is the soap—"

"I beg your pardon, ma'am" began the clerk.

"Never mind, sir; don't interrupt me," broke in the irate bride.

"But, ma'am," insisted the clerk, picking up the piece of yellow stuff the woman had thrown upon the counter, "this isn't soap, this is cheese."

"Cheese!" exclaimed the astonished woman. "Cheese?"

"Yes, ma'am, your husband bought three pounds of soap yesterday, and also three pounds of cheese. This is the cheese, ma'am."

"Well, that accounts for the other thing, also," said the young housekeeper, becoming milder in temper. "That's why I couldn't get a suds today and why—the welsh rabbit tasted so queerly last night."

Getting Even.

"I guess I'll get you, Mrs. Bird!"
Said wandering Thomas Cat.
"You'd make a splendid dinner,
You are so nice and fat."

But Birdie saw old Tommy
And quickly flew away;
And as she went she sang to him:
"Wait—till—anoth-er—day!"

"Ah-ha! you juicy creature;
You're a worm just the right size!"
Cried Birdie to a little worm.
"You exactly suit my eyes.

"I'll just dip down and get you!"
But Wormie gently stole
Beneath a sheltering tuft of grass
And dropped into his hole.

And as he went he murmured:
"Mrs. Birdie, go away!
I love to live too well to be Eaten by you today."

Tommy Tupper and the Fairy.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Tommy Tupper was a little boy that lived a very, very long time ago. In fact, he lived so many, many generations ago that during his lifetime fairies existed—a thing which proves that Tommy Tupper was of a past age.

And Tommy Tupper (which was not his real name, but only a name given to him so that our English speaking little readers may have no difficulty in pronouncing it) was a very poor boy, living with an old aunt and uncle, who willingly shared with their orphan nephew what little they had of the world's goods. But all three went to bed hungry many and many nights, and all three went cold many and many winter days. Only in the summer did they have any comfort, and that was because the weather was so warm that they needed few clothes, little food, and could sleep out of doors under the glorious skies, which were studded with stars that seemed to Tommy Tupper to be forever winking at him as he lay on his back looking up at them and wondering what they were.

And one night, as Tommy Tupper lay on his pallet watching the stars wink, he began to form a plan in his mind. And the plan was for his future. He had been thinking of late that the sort of life he was leading could not always endure. He must get away from the poor old uncle and aunt and their poverty. But how was he to depart from his kinsfolk without their consent? And he knew that while he was still of tender years they would object to his leaving them. And Tommy Tupper knew that it was their love for him that would prompt their refusing to grant his request to leave them.

"I'll creep away at night while they sleep the tired sleep of the old and overworked poor," said Tommy to himself. "And in the morning they'll be too weary to follow me, for their breakfast will be scanty and they will get no strength from it. Besides, they must hurry into the fields to work, for the winter's provender depended upon the crop they can raise with their own old hands from a worn-out field that stretches stingily along a hillside."

And as Tommy thus pondered the old uncle and aunt slept soundly on their pallet, which was spread on the soft grass that grew about their cottage. And they did not awake when Tommy crept softly from his bed and went off over the hill, following the road that led to a city, many, many miles distant. Tommy had often heard of this city, but had never been there.

And, as he walked along through the dust, the calm of an August night about him, he began to think of the fairies of whom he had heard so many wonderful tales. Old Aunt Peg—the relative with whom he had lived during his orphanhood, and who had been a second mother to him—had so often said to him: "Maybe, my son, the fairies will bless thee with good luck some day. May it so happen." And then she would sigh, the deep-drawn sigh of the anxious, loving and hopeful mother. And Tommy had wondered if, indeed, the fairies would come to lead him to wealth and power.

But just as he was thinking of this he heard a sound beside him and, glancing up, beheld a strange-looking old dame walking softly along the road with him. He had not noticed her approach, and had no idea how long she had been accompanying him.

"Good even', lad," spoke the strange woman. "Goest thou far tonight?"

"I am going to the city," replied Tommy. "But as I do not know how far it is from here I cannot tell how long I shall be making the journey. Dost thou know whereabouts the city is?"

"Many leagues distant, lad, and your young feet will become very tired, and thy head dizzy with distance, and thy stomach empty for food," replied the woman. "But maybe I may bear thee company. I am going in that direction."

"I shall be glad of thy company," declared Tommy, already feeling the loneliness of being alone. "And maybe thou canst tell me about the Fairies, and where I am most likely to meet them."

"Dost thou wish to be blessed by a Fairy for good luck?" asked the old woman, looking closely into Tommy's face.

"Oh, very, very much," cried Tommy, eagerly. "I am a very poor lad, and have no one to help me one little mite."

"What—and hast thou no parents—no kin?" asked the woman.

"I have an aunt and an uncle," explained Tommy. "But they are as poor as can be. Why, very seldom do we have enough to eat. And my uncle and aunt are now too old to make a fortune. The Fairies do not help the old."

"Oh, I understand," said the woman. "And thou dost wish to find the Fairies on thy own account! Am I right?"

"Yes, good dame," admitted Tommy.

"And not for thy uncle and aunt?" asked the woman.

"For none but myself," declared Tommy. "I have run away this night that I may go to the city to seek my fortune. And I hope to meet a Fairy on the way."

"And thy uncle and aunt—what will they do when they find thee gone?" asked Tommy's strange companion.

"They will grieve very hard, for they love me as their own," said Tommy, proudly. "And they may try to overtake me. But that they cannot do, for they are old and feeble, and hunger makes them weak. No, they will never set eyes on me again."

"Ah, then, if thou dost chance to meet with a Fairy, and she gives thee a good-luck charm, and thou dost make thy fortune straightway thou wilt keep thy abode a secret from thy kinfolk! Is that thy plan?"

"Yes, for it will be through my own effort that I get the fortune," declared Tommy. "And should my uncle and aunt hear of my good luck they would straightway wish to come and live with me. And I do not wish to have myself hampered by queer old country folk. They would cause the city aristocracy to laugh at me—no matter how rich and powerful I might be. You know, good dame, that old country folk—and those that have always been so very poor—are made light of by very fine folk. And my uncle limps in one leg—he cut it with an ax last winter and a very bad wound made him lame—and my aunt has a bent back—from carrying faggots for our fire—and coarse feet and hands. Of course, they are very good folk, and have given to me all that they could possibly give, but I could never allow them to appear in my castle—after I have made my fortune—and make a jest of me."

"Let us be seated for a moment," suggested the old woman. "I am a bit weary of walking in the dust, and am at the end of my journey in this direction. Besides, you must be very tired also."

Tommy admitted that he was a bit tired in his feet, and sat down on the roadside. After he was seated the old woman, who was yet standing, threw off her cloak and disclosed to Tommy the most beautiful youthful form and face he had ever seen. "Now, young lad," said the new creature—who was not an old woman at all, but a fairy queen—"I must ask you some questions about your uncle and aunt. I shall return to them and give them a good-luck charm. And I shall cure the wound in thy uncle's leg and straighten the bend in thy aunt's back; and I shall see that their fields yield plentifully, abundantly, and that no more hunger or cold will cause them to suffer. I shall make them rich and happy. Ah! they are noble folk to take into their poor house the orphan son of a kinsman. And they love thee like their own, thou sayest?"

"Oh! and thou art a real, real fairy?" questioned Tommy, his eyes wide with wonder and happiness. "And will not thou do first for me? Oh! I do so wish to become rich and powerful."

"Ah! thou art a most selfish lad," said the fairy queen, a little frown wrinkling her brow. "And thou wouldst leave in wretchedness, sickness and poverty thy own dear old kinsfolk—they that hast loved thee as their own, have suffered and worked for thee? Ah, and dost thou dare to beg of a fairy a good-luck charm? Bah, lad, thou hast yet to learn that no good luck could come through even a fairy's charm to one who is selfish and ungrateful. To thy uncle and aunt I shall go, and shall tell them not to break their hearts about the cruel lad who willfully ran away from them, leaving them in their loneliness and poverty, that he might the better thrive without them. Ah, do not ask of a fairy a good-luck charm! Fairies help only the good. Remember that. And if thou canst feel shame for thy conduct toward thy good uncle and aunt, they may take thee into their arms and forgive thee. But none of my help wilt thou receive till thou art truly repentant. And remember, we fairies can read the human heart. I shall know whether or not thou art trying to deceive thy kinsfolk and me. And now sit and ponder over what has happened in thy young life, and repent of thy selfishness and heartlessness. I shall return to thy people to explain that thou art not dead nor stolen, but just running away, but that doubtless they will see thee soon, for thou are so young that thy heart will show thee thy follies before another full moon. And now adieu. I am off to thy uncle and aunt, who will need my good-luck charm." And so saying the fairy queen left Tommy Tupper sitting in the dust, wondering how he could ever have been so ungrateful to the dear old uncle and aunt who had done so much for him. And in his young heart was being born repentance and love. And tears streamed down his cheeks as he thought of the grief he was about to bring to the dear old folk who had been second mother and father to him.

And then he saw the fairy beckoning to him, and she was crying out:

"Thou hast repented of thy sins and art forgiven, lad."

"Good-even', lad," spoke the strange woman.

They Include England's Formost Scientists, Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir William Crookes; the Celebrated Prof. William James of Harvard and Prof. Simon Newcomb; Camille Flammarion, Cesare Lombroso, and such Noted Scientific Discoverers as Roentgen, Koch, Behring and Schiaperelli.

Lodge's Ambition to Become a Scientist Awakened by a Chance Reading of An Old Book---His Important Work in the Interest of General and Technical Education---Prof. James Interesting for Other Reasons Than That He is a Brother of the Abstruse Novelist---Arthur Balfour An Eminent Lay Searcher for the Spirit-Land.

By JOHN S. HARWOOD

Is there a spirit-land? Today, many of the world's most famous scientists—men who have contributed to the good and advancement of mankind in countless ways—are bringing their highly trained minds to bear on the great, asborbing and overshadowing question of an after life. Not to run over the list exhaustively, Crookes, England's leading men of science; Camille Flammarion and Prof. Simon Newcomb, the noted French and American astronomers, respectively; Prof. William James, this country's best known psychologist; Dr. Robert Koch, discoverer of the germ of tuberculosis; Roentgen of X-ray fame; Behring, contributor to mankind of the diphtheria serum; Schiaperelli, discoverer of the canals of Mars; Cesare Lombroso, the criminologist—these are a handful of the more famous of the world's present corps of highly trained scientific thinkers who are engaged from time to time in investigating scientifically, as far as such a thing is possible, this question of a future existence.

Everything that is capable of being placed under the term psychical receives the keen scrutiny of these eminent searchers for a hereafter. That is, they consider everything occult their proper field of research, at the present state of the search. And so it is no unusual thing for this or that great man, whose epoch-making discoveries have resulted from the coldest sort of reasoning, to attend secret spiritualistic seances, to frequent clairvoyance parlors, to show keen interest in the latest stories of telepathy, and, yes, even to give serious attention and a lot of valuable time to investigating a ghost incident reported to a society of psychical research in which he has membership.

The Duty of Science.

Generally speaking, the scientist-searches for a spirit-land have been led to make their investigations of psychic phenomena through the well-known scientific dictum that it is the duty of science to explain the unexplainable whenever and wherever possible. The things called psychic phenomena may or may not be material evidence of the existence of a future state; yet, when a noted man of science begins his research in this comparatively new field for his kind, he becomes, perforce, a searcher after the spirit-land.

It is interesting to note the present results of their investigations on the minds of the men making them. Camille Flammarion has conducted researches in psychic phenomena for forty-five years. Usually he has made his investigations in the company of other noted scientists, sometimes with the aid of such well-balanced laymen as the late Sully-Prudhomme, and infrequently, alone. Some time since he disavowed any belief in spiritualism, and yet he has placed himself on record as believing that all scientific investigators of spiritualism have not been made the dupes of the mediums. What then? Right here the eminent astronomer halts, declaring that man's knowledge is not yet sufficient to explain these phenomena, which his investigations have caused him to hold to be realities.

This, broadly speaking, is the attitude of Schiaperelli and Lombroso, of Behring and Koch. Prof. James has stated that he has discovered from time to time in his psychical research things strangely real. Sir William Crookes has expressed rather guardedly his belief in the existence of spirits and their ability to communicate with mortals. But as for Sir Oliver Lodge, he has boldly announced to the world that "communications were received from the dead in secret and exhaustive tests," which he and other members of the Society for Psychical Research conducted.

Required Crucial Proof.

"Not easily or early do we make this admission," said Sir Oliver. "In spite of long conversations with what purports to be the surviving intelligence of these friends and investigators, we were by no means convinced of their identity by more general conversation, even when it was of a friendly and intimate character, such as in ordinary cases would have been considered amply sufficient for identification of friends speaking, say, through the telephone or typewriter. We required definite and crucial proof, a proof difficult even to imagine as well as difficult to supply. The ostensible communicators realize the need of such proof as fully as we do and have done their best to satisfy the rational mind. Some of us think they suceeded. Others are still doubtful."

This was the statement that recently astonished all England, coming, as it did, from so world-famous a man of science. Perhaps, as the venerable Goldwin Smith suggests, Sir Oliver, "great in his own line," has been duped in this. And perhaps— At any rate, Sir Oliver—not excepting Camille Flammarion—is probably spending more time investigating psychic phenomena than any other scientist who includes this among his other recognized fields of endeavor.

Sir Oliver has long been a leading spirit in the English Society for Psychical Research, founded to investigate alleged material manifestations of another life and numbering numerous scientists and laymen among its members. It was through his efforts that a national psychical observatory was founded in England for the scientific investigation of all psychical subjects, and under his direction the observatory's work has been largely carried out. His interest in psychical matters goes back to his student days when he met and became a friend of F. W. H. Myers, known in England before his death as a critic, poet, psychologist and spiritualist. Sir Oliver, who was then, as he is now, enthusiastic on the subject of scientific research, saw in the occult a splendid field for scientific investigation, and from that day until he could begin such research under what he considered the most favorable circumstances, he never lost sight of his desire to look scientifically into the subject.

Could Find no Fraud.

Since the death of his friend Myers, which occurred in 1901, Sir Oliver has been more than ever interested in this psychic labor. Myers had longed to prove communication of spirits with persons still in the flesh. To this end, just before he died, he left with certain friends a sealed package containing some writing by him, with instructions not to break the seal and read the contents until he, as a spirit, had revealed half of the writing to one medium and half to still another medium. Each half was to be unintelligible until combined with the other, when the writing in the package would be made plain. One of the friends to whom the package was intrusted was Sir Oliver Lodge, who has declared that its contents were seemingly revealed in the way that the dead man had planned. At any rate, he could ascertain no fraud in the revelation; still as a man of science, he could not hold that this was proof of the existence of a spirit world, and since the occurrence of this incident his research for spirit land might be called monumental. In this search he has not lagged, as have many scientific men; on the contrary, his quest seems to gain zest as the bald spot on the crown of his head spreads down toward his neck.

When all is said and done, it was only through accident—a fortunate one, indeed, for the world—that Sir Oliver became a man of science. The son of an English pottery manufacturer, he threw aside his books and set about to learn his father's trade when he was 17. For several months he kept at the work, with no thought of ever going back to his studies. Then, one day, in an idle moment, he picked up an old book from a desk, began reading casually, then with absorption; and when he put the book down it was with the determination to become a scientist. The book he read was "The English Mechanic," and from it he gained his first definite idea that there was such a thing as a scientific world.

With his initial savings Sir Oliver began his self-education as a scientist. He purchased scientific books and pored over them assiduously whenever his duties in the factory would permit—and sometimes when they wouldn't. He made all manner of amateur experiments in chemistry and physics; he became completely wrapped up in his scientific purpose; and his father, despairing of reawakening his son's interest in pottery making, let him go to London as a student in the University College.

A World-Wide Reputation.

Lodge was 30 when he began his real life's work as a teacher of science in Liverpool. His position was that of professor of physics in the University College. There he remained for nineteen years, during which period he built up his world-wide reputation as an authority in mechanics, electricity and other provinces of science. Electricity has been his specialty, as is pretty generally known; but it is not so well known that long before Marconi and other wireless wizards flashed above the scientific horizon, Sir Oliver Lodge conducted extensive experiments looking towards wireless telegraphy. Electro-magnetic waves, the basis of wireless telegraphy, were practically jointly discovered by him and Hertz, working independently; and because of this and his subsequent investigations, Sir Oliver has been called the father of wireless telegraphy, though, of course, the world probably will never couple his name with that of Marconi.

To-day, Sir Oliver, at the age of fifty-seven—tender years for one who has accomplished so much in the name of science—is the head of the comparatively new University of Birmingham, which has the backing of Joseph Chamberlain, his money and his wide influence. Though chartered less than ten years ago, this educational plant, under the leadership of Sir Oliver, is carrying on scientific and technical work on a far larger scale than any other British seat of learning. Two years after he began to show his executive ability as university president he was knighted, an honor which Sir Oliver took modestly, as he ever has the praise of the scientific world, which often has had occasion to praise him liberally.

Personally, no "big" man could be more pleasant to meet. He not only attracts by his modesty; he also has a winning smile, and kindliness sits in every line of his face. Physically, he is patterned after the giants, standing six feet four, and he has taken such good care of himself that he still possesses most of the really phenomenal strength for which he was famous among the cronies of his youthful days. He attributes much of his success in life to his physical endurance; for it has enabled him to carry on prolonged research that would have exhausted the average man early in such a task.

His friends in this country are practically as numerous as the people he has met; in his native land there is no scientist more popular, and both because of this and his position as a scientist anything that he says publicly regarding his search for a spirit-land is listened to with great respect by the body of the people. Sir Oliver's popularity at home rests on his ability to explain abstruse scientific subjects popularly, and his willingness to do so, as well as on his pleasing personality.

Sir William Crookes.

Universally recognized as the premier chemist of the British Empire, Sir William Crookes of late years has attracted considerable attention to himself by his search for a spirit-land. Indeed, this search has become a sort of hobby with him, and he goes to no end of trouble to look into the slightest so-called psychic phenomena, in the hope that thereby he may be brought a step nearer towards the ultimate solution of the great problem he has set before himself in the eighth decade of his life. From time to time Sir William has made public statements regarding his investigations, and all England, as in the case of Sir Oliver Lodge, listens attentively, even when the great chemist hints at the probability of communication with the dead.

For almost half a century Great Britain—in fact, the entire scientific world—has been giving serious heed to the pronouncements of Sir William Crookes. He made his initial scientific hit when he informed mankind of the discovery of a new element, thallium, which he had come across in residue from a solphuric acid works. A little later he announced it as his belief that many of the so-called elements were capable of being broken down into other elemental substances; and time has amply proved the correctness of this then somewhat revolutionary theory. The radiometer, measuring the intensity of solar radiations, is Sir William's invention. So is the celebrated Crookes tube, for lighting; and so is one of the approved present-day methods of treating ore. In short, his important contributions to the learning and comfort of the world have been too numerous to mention here.

Though he is not generally given the credit of being one of its inventors—just as Sir Oliver Lodge's name is not popularly connected with wireless telegraphy—still it is true that Sir William was one of the fathers of electric lighting. His was the first house in London to be so lighted, and his were the hands that strung the wires and made the lamps. The filaments in these lamps were of cellulose, treated in a strong solution known only to the inventor; and ten years after he had begun using them they were still giving light, every one of them. Sir William, however, was doomed to disappointment in connection with this lamp—it was never put on the market, various lawsuits among inventors of other electric lights discouraging him in his original intention of marketing the light. His friends say that the one regret of Sir William's life has been the world's inability to behold in him one of the pioneers in electric illumination.

Was a Boy Wonder.

Knighted five years before Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir William has spent practically his entire life in scientific research. As a boy in "knee pants" he thus busied himself. When he was 17—at which age Sir Oliver Lodge first learned of the existence of the world of science—he captured an important college scholarship in the Royal College of Chemistry; and two years before he reached his majority he mapped out for himself the course of research that eventually led him to make many of his most important discoveries. He was, in short, a boy wonder. To-

FAITH IN CUYUNA RANGE.

General Belief New District Will Soon be Shipping Ore.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Cayuna range will soon be among the producing ranges seems now very probable. For many months, in fact, several years, it has only been a matter of time. The Rogers-Brown Ore company has long been fighting quicksand and water to get to the ledge at its Rabbit Lake shaft, and at last it has won out. The shaft hit the ledge several days ago, and all trouble from quicksand is now said to be over. Air compressors are being installed for the purpose of running air drills for penetrating the rock, and it will doubtless be but a few weeks before they begin to accumulate a stockpile. While the company is very reticent as to its intentions, yet it is well known that spurs from the Northern Pacific tracks to both he company's shafs have been surveyed for months, and it would not be surprising to see Cuyuna ore going down the lakes by the shipload in another year.

Franklin W. Merritt of Minneapolis, who is heavily interested in the Cuyuna range, was in Brainerd Wednesday and was showing samples of ore from the Rogers-Brown shaft, which certainly looks all right. The Rogers-Brown company is also said to be interested in properties at Fort Ripley and Randall, south and southwest of Brainerd, which are reported to be rich in mineral. In fact, current report has it that the richest ore found in Crow Wing county thus far has been near Fort Ripley, and at Randall it is said to be even richer.

The association also gives notice that it will oppose any measures tending to take away privileges granted by the Constitution.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

MINNESOTA

BLACKMAIL IS ALLEGED

Hallock Man Said to Have Demanded $100 "Hush" Money.

Is Arrested by the U. S. Marshal for Threatening Through Mail.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States Marshal H. A. Rider of Little Falls arrived last evening from Hallock, having in custody Herman E. Wold, who is charged with having used the United States mails in an attempt to blackmail a former photographer of Hallock, who is now located in a North Dakota city. Wold is said to have written a letter in which he demanded $100 at once or he would tell of an occurrence in the photograph gallery at Hallock some time ago.

The photographer claims that the incident referred to was an attempted statutory crime on the part of Wold which the photographer would not permit. Wold is well connected and the affair has created a big sensation. Post-Office Inspector Hughes has secured the evidence against Wold, who will have a hearing before United States Commissioner Mix today.

STEARNS COUNTY DEMOCRATS

Pulling Together and Hopeful, Says Senator Ahmann.

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator John J. Ahmann of Torah was in the city this week and speaking of politics said:

"The Democrats of Stearns county will get together this fall in a general old-fashioned way. There is a general feeling that Bryan is much stronger than he was either time that he ran before. Personally I believe that Bryan is the greatest living American. In the face of two defeats he holds today the confidence and respect of a greater number of Americans than any other man who has been in the public eye. I have talked with hundreds of Republicans. They say that they were for Roosevelt, and that they are Republicans, but as between Taft and Bryan, they are going to vote for Bryan. There was never a better spirit of harmony among the local Democracy than there is today."

Speaking of the governorship, Senator Ahmann said: "It is of course to be regretted that Governor Johnson will not be a candidate, but as he is a poor man and now has the opportunity to earn something for himself, his wishes ought to be respected. He has served all of the people and the Democratic party faithfully. I hope that ex-Governor Lind can be induced to accept the nomination. Either Lind or Johnson could be triumphantly elected."

FLAG LEAVING PACIFIC.

Lessening of Shipping in American Bottoms Don't Surprise Hill.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 1.—The announcement that the Hill lines had abandoned the marine portion of their share in the trade with Japan and China, while retaining affiliation with Japanese steamship lines, came as a shock to many people of the Northwest. According to Chairman of the Board James J. Hill of the Great Northern, it was to be expected.

"Why," exclaimed Mr. Hill, "our Pacific trade has been gone for a year. As long as fifteen months ago I told them what was coming."

Asked if the action of the American trans-continental roads in withdrawing from the Pacific carrying trade was due to resentment at the action of the interstate commerce commission, Mr. Hill replied:

"Resentment? No. The commission cannot be blamed for enforcing the law. The Pacific trade was given up because it did not pay. America today has no flag on the high seas, or might as well not have, for we cannot compete with any other country and must hand the load over to anybody that asks for it. The only way for us to continue in the Pacific trade would be for the railroads to own their own steamers and run them at heavy loss.

"We are not a seafaring nation. We have no sailors, though under the law, Americans must constitute two-thirds or three-fourths of the crews. What we must have to make an ocean carrying trade possible is not subsidies, but intelligent legislation—legislation that helps instead of hinders."

MEMORY OF COL. COLVILL IS BEING KEPT GREEN.

Part of it is of jutting rocks and the beach runs into the river some distance. It will be kept as a public playground and park in memory of the gallant Minnesota soldier.

A statue of Col. Colvill is now being prepared for the rotunda of the state capitol. Mrs. Alice Neill is president of the association.

MINNESOTA

GREAT GROWTH OF MINNESOTA

Remarkable Progress is Made in State's First Half Century.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 1.—The state of Minnesota yesterday closed the fiscal and the first half century of its existence, with $2,968,282.64 in the treasury, the total receipts for the year being $12,446,268.64, a gain of about $1,200,000 over the preceding year. Compared with the figures for 1858, when the total receipts were $268.90 and the balance at the end of the year was $4,063.18, these figures forcibly demonstrate the growth of the state during the fifty years.

Figures compiled by State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart, contrasting the state's financial condition in 1858, afford some striking illustrations of the change in the conditions. In that time the total amount raised by taxation has grown from $554,000 to $28,000,000; the assessed valuation of all taxable property from $41,000,000 to $4,450,000,000, and the annual cost of maintenance and operation of the state institutions has grown from $7,500 to over $2,000,000, with a total expenditure for the support of these institutions for the semi-centennial period of $33,000,000.

When the state started doing business, it had a state prison and a few normal schools. Now it has institutional property worth $20,000,000, and has permanent school and university funds aggregating $16,500,000, with 2,750,000 acres of land still unsold, the proceeds of which will go to these funds.

BIG ELEVATOR DEAL.

Park Rapids Men Planning to Acquire Several Elevators.

Park Rapids, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—L. H. Rice, owner of the electric lighting plant and flouring mill here, and other well-known citizens, are said to be interested in a big deal that if consummated means the purchase of all the elevators along the line of the Great Northern, from Browerville north as far as Park Rapids. If the promoters are successful in this, men will be placed in charge of the elevators in the different towns, and a general business will be conducted.

All kinds of grain will be bought and in addition lumber yards will be put in at each town, and the elevators will handle wood, coal, flour and feed and also lumber.

It is expected that the deal will be closed up this week.

KILLED IMMENSE BEAR.

Section Foreman, Tired of Being Robbed, Slays 500-Pound Brute.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The largest bear reported yet was killed recently at Nakodah, a little way station between this town and Littlefork. The section foreman found that his provisions were disappearing and, even after finding who the thief was, did not care to murder the intruder, but hung the hams and other groceries on higher pegs, but bruin was equal to the climb and insisted on having more than his share. The foreman was compelled to go gunning, and brought down a 500-pound specimen.

NORTHERN PACIFIC IS GOING AFTER ALL WEEDS.

Tuesday afternoon it was started out on the Fergus branch to scorch down the weeds along that line, a job that will take about three weeks. After completing its work there it will be brought back and started out on other lines. R. W. Robertson is in charge of the machine.

WISCONSIN

ROCK FALLS HAS OLD POSTMASTER

George Chamberlain Held Position for Fifty-One Consecutive Years.

Rock Falls, Wis., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Appointed postmaster here by Pres. James Buchanan in June, 1857, George H. Chamberlain now in his eighty-second year, but still enjoying remarkable health for one of his years, probably enjoys the distinction of being the oldest postmaster in point of service in the United States. There are few cases on record of the same person holding the position for fifty-one consecutive years. Mr. Chamberlain was born in Canaan, N. H., Jan. 12, 1827, and came to Briggsville, Wis., in 1851, clearing his own farm, and five years later came where Rock Falls now stands, helping to clear and survey the present townsite.

In 1857 Mr. Chamberlain received his commission as postmaster, the first in Rock Falls to be honored with the position. The document was signed by Aaron V. Brown, postmaster-general in the administration of Pres. James Buchanan. Although receiving his appointment under a Democratic president, Mr. Chamberlain avers that he has always been a Republican since the party was organized and voted for every Republican nominee for president since 1856. Mr. Chamberlain, however, is very conservative in his politics.

In 1857 the town of Rock Falls was surveyed and in 1859 Mr. Chamberlain laid out the village. Now it has institutional property worth $20,000,000, and has permanent school and university funds aggregating $16,500,000, with 2,750,000 acres of land still unsold, the proceeds of which will go to these funds.

TEACHER'S BODY IS FOUND.

Body of Rice Lake Victim Located After Dragging.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of Miss Clara I. McNown, teacher in the manual training school at Rice Lake, and formerly of Eau Claire, who was drowned in Rice Lake last Wednesday night, while out on the lake alone, was recovered after dragging and brought here today. It was taken from here today on the Omaha to her old home at Mauston, Wis., for burial.

A strange feature about the case is a remark the dead woman made to the boatman who warned her not to go on the lake Wednesday night because of a threatening storm.

"Never mind, if I am not back by 9, I will be in a safe place."

Thursday morning the empty boat was found near the east shore right side up, and in it were her purse containing a small sum of money. The body was found yesterday morning by the men who had been dragging the lake since it was quite evident that she had drowned. The point where the body was found was found some forty rods distant from where she embarked and the water where it was found was about ten feet deep.

Enraged by Machine Not Stopping, Uses Butt End of Whip.

Jamestown, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Anton Fried of Wimbledon was badly pounded by Clarence Campbell, a farmer near Spiritwood lake. Fried was going to the lake with a party of three in his automobile, when he met Campbell, who was driving a team and leading three horses. Campbell signaled Fried to stop. The auto slowed down to permit the driver and horses to pass, and when opposite the machine, Campbell got out of the rig and struck Fried several times with the butt end of a whip, until he was in an unconscious condition.

A warrant was secured at Wimbledon, and a number of citizens, accompanied by the marshal, started after Campbell, who, it was understood, was attempting to evade arrest by getting into Griggs county. He was overtaken, and, at a hearing before Justice Benson, was discharged on the ground that he was arrested under a warrant issued in Barnes county for an offense committed in Stutsman. Another warrant, charging assault with a dangerous weapon, was sworn out at Courtenay, and Campbell was taken before Justice Horn, who bound him over to the next term of the county court, under $300 bonds.

INDIAN IS "SWEATED."

Acquitted by Jury, Officers Force Him to Confess.

Bottineau, N. D., Aug. 1.—The jury in the Indian, Little Rising Sun's case for the murder of Seidel, brought in a verdict of not guilty, based on the theory that the evidence of the Peltiers, who will be hung for the same murder, was no good. They swore that he did the deed while they watched, but their stories were so improbable that the jury found them guilty and freed him, but the officers were dissatisfied with the verdict and began sweating the whole bunch again, with the result that the Indian, after he was told that he was to be hung and the Peltiers given three years, told an entirely new story, and admits being present and saw the Peltiers kill the Seidels. He was rearraigned at once for the murder of Miss Seidel. If he pleads guilty the chances are he will be given a life sentence.

HOME-WRECKER IS SHOT.

Enraged North Dakotan Takes Law in His Own Hands.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Albert Malm, a farmer living five miles east of the town of La Moure, is in St. Luke's Hospital in a dangerour condition with a bullet from a .32-caliber revolver lodged somewhere in his skull.

He was shot as he emerged from his house Monday morning by Andreas Lundquist, who claimed that Malm had been the cause of separating him from his wife and five children.

Lundquist was subsequently arrested by Sheriff Crudes of La Moure and is now locked up in default of $10,000 bail to await the result of the victim's injuries.

NO FIRE ESCAPES PROVIDED SO HOTEL MAN IS FINED.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 1.—Because he failed to obey A. M. Anderson, the state hotel inspector of North Dakota, J. B. Spoonheim, owner of a hotel at Northwood, was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $31.50. Spoonheim had been ordered to provide ropes for each room in his hotel, so that the guests could escape in case there was a fire. This is the first case in Grand Forks county in which a hotel man has been fined for not obeying hotel regulations.

COURT CLERKS ORGANIZE.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 1.—Clerks of court of North Dakota organized permanently here with the following officers: President, G. O. Raugust, McLean county; vice president, N. H. Rinde, Walsh county; treasurer, M. W. Spaulding, Grand Forks; secretary, A. W. Cook, Burleigh county.

GRAND FORKS FAIR ENDS.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 1.—The Grand Forks fair and international exposition came to a close Friday. It was by far the most successful fair that was held in North Dakota this year, in point of attendance and the extent of the exhibits. That exhibitors appreciate the liberal treatment accorded them was shown, and they will be boosters for Grand Forks and the fair when they return home.

DAKOTA BRIEFS

Fargo, N. D.—On Aug. 15 the law firm of Ball, Watson, Young & Hardy will be dissolved, E. W. Hardy retiring from the firm. Aubrey Lawrence, at present a member of the law firm of Ball, Lawrence & Roddle of Brookings, S. D., has been admitted to membership.

Devils Lake, N. D.—Sheriff Belford has recently instituted a new rule in regard to the mail of prisoners confined in the county jail, and the rule is hardly to the liking of some of those who enjoy the genial sherin's bill of fare. It requires all mail to be opened by the sheriff before it is delivered to the prisoners or forwarded.

Valley City, N. D.—Mrs. James Coop, better known in Valley City as "Grandma" Coop, aged 78 years, is dead. She has been in poor health for two or three years, being an intermittent sufferer from a complication of diseases which defied the skill of physicians.

Fargo, N. D.—Robert Young, a well-known drayman of Fargo, died suppenly Thursday at his home at 12 Sixth avenue north of heart trouble. The deceased was 48 years of age and came to North Dakota from Canada and located near Grandin, where he farmed for twenty-four years.

Bismarck, N. D.—The first annual report of the North Dakota Live Stock association has just been issued and is a very interesting volume to the stock men of the state.

Grand Forks, N. D.—As William Julke, a farmer living near Arvilla, attempted to step out of the way of an automobile at the fair grounds Wednesday night, he was hit by Charles Hanson's machine and thrown to the ground, suffering a terribly lacerated arm and various cuts, although escaping with no broken bones.

SOCIALISM AND SLAVERY

Says a questioner to me recently, "Socialism would make men slaves to the state, would bring about a condition in society that would abolish all individual incentive and force rule by the fellows at the top in all things."

First of all, I am compelled to ask this question of those who claim that Socialism stands for despotism in any form. Is it not true that the existing state is a class evolved institution, that it has brought into existence to function as the especial and exclusive defender and protector of the property owning class in society?

That statement being true, and I challenge any lawyer or student of historical fundamental statutory law to disprove this assertion, then it must be evident to the impartial observer that we are living today under a system of slavery. Can any person deny that the property owner in any community has the absolute power to call to his aid and assistance, in all conflicts between labor and capital, the local, state, and federal law guardians?

Can any specific instance be cited where the state's guardians of law and order have been called out to protect labor against the encroachments of capital?

Is it not true that in a society where classes exist, whose interests are diametrically opposed, that the wealth-owning class control the governmental institutions and use them as means with which to keep in subjection the propertyless class. Under the laws of this state, which is emphasized in a local ordinance, any man who is seen loitering on the streets and appears to be out of work can be arrested on mere suspicion on the charge of vagrancy, and unless he can show that he has a visible means of support can be sent to jail. The inference to be drawn from this is that under the law as it now exists a man without property has no rights that society is bound to respect. Tell me, you non-Socialist, where is the equality under the law for both rich and poor?

Socialism is against rule by a sect, or faction, or class. Socialism contends that under system that permits a few men to own the resources of nature—land and capital—there must and will essentially exist, rulers and ruled, masters and slaves, exploiters and exploited.

Socialism does not believe in vesting control in any autocratic agency of any of the functions of industry. Socialism holds that the workers in any given industry shall have home rule in the affairs pertaining to the working of such industry, leaving to themselves the right of choosing who shall be their supervisors, etc., assuming that the workers in any particular occupation are better able to decide who are best fit for purposes of superintendence than those outside of such occupations.

Socialists believe in rule from the bottom and not from the top. Socialism does not intend to impose upon any man what work he shall or shall not perform, but it does contend that the self interest of the individual will cause them to recognize the necessity of working in harmony with each other. That there may be a friction at times we are not prepared to deny, but we do assume that men who have come to an understanding of the benefits that can accrue to them from co-operative production, will be willing to allow all questions upon which there is not mutual agreement to be decided by a majority vote. Can any person claim that this method implies a condition of slavery?

Man, today, is a slave to his necessities. The average workman is compelled to struggle for his material needs almost all his life time. Hardly any time is alloted him for pleasures, or studies. What has a workman to lose by a change from private to public control and ownership of industries of the nation? Surely a nation of copartners is preferable to a nation divided into classes, part masters, part slaves? A vote for Socialism is a vote for life, liberty, and happiness for all men.

THE COLORADO DISTRICTS

Stratton's Independence Outputting 1,000 Tons Monthly of $30 Ore---July Dividends of Vindicator Company Reaches Total of $60,000.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 1.—The Bender lease on Stratton's Independent mine, Cripple Creek, is in a 4-foot ore body at the junction of four veins which return $100 a ton. The mine is outputting 1,000 tons monthly of $30 ore.

The Vindicator Gold Mining company outputted 2,000 tons of $40 ore during June. Most of this tonnage came from levels above 1,000 feet. Screenings run $60 a ton. The main shaft is being sunk to 1,300 feet depth. The company is one of Cripple Creek's substantial dividend payers, the July quarterly disbursement being $60,000.

The Livingston Leasing & Holding company has been incorporated to take over and operate the Livingston mine, a famous Boulder county, Colo., producer. The shaft will be sunk to 1,200 feet.

The Whitmore lease on the Lady Stitch mine of the Stratton estate, Cripple Creek, is in a three-foot vein which assays $50 gold a ton.

The Prince Albert Gold Mining company, Cripple Creek, is driving a tunnel from the gulch just south of the mine to a point 1,200 feet in Beacon Hill. A dike which traverses the vein and a vertical vein join at the objective. The Gold Dollar flat vein is supposed to be met at the junction.

Work has been resumed on the Jo Dandy, Hiawatha and other Beacon and Raven hills properties, Cripple Creek. The latter is yielding $50 ore.

The Vindicator Gold Mining company, owner, is operating the Hull City placer property, Cripple Creek, under the leasing system, and a large tonnage of $30 ore is outputted.

A lease and bond for $11,000 for three years have been taken on the Bullion group of mines, Eureka district, Central City, Colo., by the German Gold Mining and Milling company.

J. N. Caldwell of Denver has taken a lease and bond on the Eureka mine, Prosser Gulch, Central City, Colo. The main shaft is to be sunk deeper. Leasers are taking $40 to $100 ore from upper levels, with good grade tailings. The lead-copper smelting ore carries $50 to $80 a ton.

A cleanup of the Buell mill, Central City, Colo., resulted in a retort valued at $1,600. The ore came from the Sleepy Hollow mine, operated by the Pearl Tatum Gold Mining company.

The Wild Horse mill, under lease to Henby & Anderson, Cripple Creek, treated 850 tons of ore during June, the gross bullion value being $4,382.55. The ore comes mainly from the Wild Horse mine, though partly from the dumps of the Ramona.

The Stratton's Independence outputted 1,660 tons of thirty-dollar ore during June. Twenty-one sets of lessees are operating and shipping regularly. Pherson Bros. are breaking ore from a cave on the surface which exposes a big vein of $80 to $120 ore.

The Elkton Consolidated Gold Mining company, Cripple Creek, realized net profits of $273,322.92 during the year ended March 30, 1908. Of this sum $257,500.00 was disbursed in dividends at the rate of 1½ cents a share, bi-monthly. The company's total dividends to date are $2,116,959.79.

BIG SMELTER NOW ASSURED

For Battle Mountain---Project Backed by New York and English Capital---Capacity of Plant Will be 250 Tons Daily.

Battle Mountain, Nev., Aug. 1.—That Battle Mountain is to have a smelter plant for the treatment and reduction of ores of this district now seems well assured. The advantage this enterprise will be to the Battle Mountain country can not be overestimated, as it will make this beyond question, one of the most active and productive mineral producing districts in the whole state, if not in the entire West.

Battle Mountain's wealth of the metals is established beyond any shadow of doubt, the district having long since passed that period of uncertainty which inevitably attends the opening up and proving of all new camps.

As has been the case with many other mining regions the perplexing problem that retarded progress and prevented the district from fully coming into its own, was the question of the treatment of its ores. On account of the great diversity of ores requiring different methods of treatment, mills never seemed to adequately meet the situation, but with the coming of a smelter which recovers the precious metals from every known character of ore, the specter of disappointed hopes, which has often arisen and confronted the miner when success seemed most certain, and like the ghost of Banquo, would not down, will vanish and in its place will be seen the hand of opportunity pointing to the glorious and golden future.

The project has behind it New York and English capital, and the capacity of the plant is to be 250 tons per day. This will be enlarged as fast as the production of the district will warrant.

To Maj. Scott, lately of Leek Lake, Minn., but now of Battle Mountain, belong the honor of getting this smelter. He canvassed the district and raised the bonus asked by the smelter company. The Battle Mountain mining district, among others, includes Alder creek, in which the Maj. Scott property is located, Copper basin, in which is situated the well-known Pedro group, rich in gold ores and apparently limitless in area and depth. In this basin is also located the property of the Western Mining company; the Giant mine; the Glasgow-Western company's properties. On Big Cottonwood, five miles distant, is located the Lucky Strike, owned and operated by ex-Senator Thomas Kearns of Salt Lake and E. P. Evans. This is a silver-lead proposition of very rich ore, from which shipments are being made. There are a number of promising properties bonded and being actively developed around the Pedro, and in other parts of the district.

There are no changes of importance to note, either in the underground developments or the operation of the surface works of the Old Dominion. The flow of water into the mine from the Gray territory as well as from the region of Pinal creek, is still excessive, but is being handled without difficulty. The sinking of A shaft below the fourteenth level is now proceeding with three shifts employed. At the smelter everything is moving with customary regularity and an average output of copper for the month is promised. Shipments of copper have been made every day or two of late and yesterday afternoon the copper dump was almost clear of metal.

The organization has been completed of the McMillen Silver Mining company, to take over the Stonewall Jackson mine and adjoining group of claims, which for the past year and a half have been held up by the McMillen-Stonewall company and development work, carried on under the superintendence of V. Y. Smith of Globe. The directors of the new company are: William G. Rice, Henry V. Snell, George Kingdom, Robert B. Hegardt and V. Y. Smith, who have chosen their officers as follows: President, V. Y. Smith; vice president, George Kingdom; secretary and treasurer, R. H. Hegardt. As will be noted, the directors are all mining men of prominence, and with two exceptions, connected with the management of other large mining companies operating in this district. With the proceeds from the sale of 100,000 shares of the stock the company should be able to build a 100-ton cyanide mill and will have available for treatment 24,000 tons of 8-ounce ore on the old dump and a considerable tonnage of ore that can be recovered from the old workings. Work will be started on the property in the near future and the shaft now 120 feet deep will be sunk to a depth of 300 feet.

say they are working on a veing 18 feet wide and the ore assays 7 per cent copper.

The North Butte Extension company is paying off its debts and expects to be in shape to resume operations in a short time. The first claims to be paid off were those of the laborers for June and July.

The Butte Central & Boston Copper company appears to have more difficulty in raising funds, and claims against the property of the company are increasing. It was represented a short time ago that $8,000 or $10,000 would pay off all pressing debts, but attachment after attachment has been placed on the property of the company until now it will require $20,000 or $25,000 to pay off the claims. The latest attachment is by the Butte Commercial bank, which sues for $5,000 and interest due on several notes.

The Butte-Milwaukee compauy has received its new machinery, which was ordered last fall, and preparations are being made to resume sinking on the Colonel Sellers claim, on which a shaft was sunk 700 feet deep before operations were stopped by the financial panic.

Gradually many of the new companies in the Butte district, which were forced to stop work by reason of the money stringency last fall, are resuming development work. The North Butte Mountain company, which owns a group of claims in the Butte & Bacorn district, is the latest to become active again. It is reported to have let a contract for sinking a 500-foot shaft.

The Suprise Eagle company is also making arrangements to resume work on its property in the southern part of the city.

pacity of the plant is about 2,000 tons daily but it is expected that more than this quantity of ore will be handled through the shaft.

The new hoisting plant and its accessories will completely revolutionize the Copper Queen's methods of handling its large quantities of ore, and while it is not anticipated that fewer men will be employed, the saving to the company through hoisting all ores through the one hoist will be great, the most economical feature of the new method being the direct transmission of the ore from mine to smelter because of the excellent location of the new hoist. The other shafts will be used mainly for hoisting and lowering men and timbers and for pumping, although the Copper Queen has but little water to contend with, owing to the fact that the entire district is being drained through the Superior & Pittsburg shafts.

steadily at a depth of 600 feet. The formation is being crosscut both ways from the bottom of the shaft sunk on the Gunnison claim. This shaft recently penetrated the quartzite and the new strata contains material that promises high grade ore. Shipments continue regular.

The American Eagle mill in the Bald Mountain section is undergoing a remodeling. A new Dorr classifier to handle the sands is being installed. The slime presses are being lowered down the hill to permit of the operation of the gravity process and two more slime presses of equal capacity will be added, which will be adequate to handle all the slimes. It will require several weeks yet to put the plant in shape for running.

Secretary T. A. Harding of Des Moines, Ia., of the Pluma Mining company, writes that arrangements are being made to finance a mill of from 500 to 600 tons daily capacity. The Pluma company owns a large acreage near the city. An English company which has been securing ground in the Black Hills recently took an option on the property at $2,500,00. The round adjoins the Homestake and it is believed that the Homestake belt traverses it.

are on the Marquette range, the others being on the Gogebic and Mesaba, and it is developing more and exploring for others. The bulk of its development work is in the Swanzey district of the Marquette range, where it controls a very large acreage, containing extensive deposits, and where—a fact but little known—the first ore found was discovered forty years ago by United States Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin, who at the time was layin gthe foundation of the fortune he subsequently carved from the forests. Some prospecting was done by Mr. Stephenson, but it was not until the lapse of a number of years that the earlier producing properties were opened, and it is only now that the field is being developed on an extensive scale. One of the new mines is named the Stephenson, in honor of the Badger State millionaire-lumberman-statesman.

The latest properties at which the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company has instituted development work in the Swanzey district are the Kidder forty, owned in fee by Alfred Kidder of Brookline, Mass., and a tract near Johnson lake. The overburden of sand is heavy at the Kidder and a concrete shaft is to be sunk by the air-lock method, as was done at the new Smith mine, which adjoins at the west. It is of interest in the connection to note that Mr. Kidder acquired the land years ago, at a time when because of the discovery of promising quartz it was thought there were good prospects of opening a silver mine in the vicinity. The white metal did not exist in paying quantities, but it is quite certain that the iron ore now discovered will eventually return the owner of the fee a good income in the form of royalties. A railroad spur to both the Kidder and Johnson lake tracts is in progress of construction for the Chicago & Northwestern company. M. J. Peppard & Co., contractors of Minneapolis, are doing the work, which is expected will be completed some time in October. Adjoining the Kidder is a tract owned by the Steel corporation. It also contains ore and eventually will be developed. Other mines in the field are the Stegmiller of the Steel corporation, and the Austin, Smith, Stephenson and the two Princetons of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company. A model town—Gwinn—is being established by the latter concern, and in near proximity to it private parties have platted a townsite and are selling lots. A large force of men has been employed at Gwinn the past two seasons, and it is altogether likely that all of next year will also be required to complete the improvement work now mapped out. This work includes the installation of water and sewer systems and the building of streets. Aside from this, three steel bridges are being erected, spanning the Escanaba river at the townsite, and extensive building operations are under way.

It was stated recently that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company was to extend the scope of its activities to the Menominee range, a district in which it has never before operated. It appears now that the invasion of the fields will be on a more pretentious scale than was first surmised. Following an inspection of various iron county lands by the company's geologists, it is the understanding that a considerable number of tracts are being taken over at the western end of the range and will be thoroughly and systematically tested. In the same portion of the Menominee fields, Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland have recently acquired leases on the Blair and Michaels properties, in Section 23, 49-34. These tracts have been explored by diamond drills the past ten years, and now that the largest operating concern in the district have taken them over, the results of the prospecting work are believed to be entirely satisfactory. Ore has been found, it is known, and much of it lies deep. The properties will be given railroad facilities next year. The Hollister mine, which M. A. Hanna & Co., of Cleveland are opening in the Crystal Falls field, has been given additional pumping capacity, and increased attention is now being directed to mining work.

M. A. Hanna & Co.'s Richmond mine, a Marquette range property, which produces a siliceous ore and which had been idle since last fall, has recently resumed operations. Shipments have been started and it is expected that the mine will be wrought continuously until the close of navigation. A force of eighty or 100 men will be employed. At the Beacon location, where its Champion mine is the sole producer, the Steel corporation has awarded a contract for the construction of 21,000 square feet of concrete sidewalk. Considerable more work of the same kind will be done next year also. The old Pioneer property, out from Michigamme, Marquette range, is being tested with the diamond drill. On whose account the work is being done is not known. The ore indications are good.

The Ashland Iron & Steel company, subsidiary to the Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company, is erecting a fine new shafthouse at its Yale mine, on the Gogebic range. The Ashland furnace of the company is still inactive, following the suspension of operations some two months ago, and the time when it will go into blast again is indefinite, depending altogether upon the state of the pig iron market. The idleness of the 175 men laid off at the Steel corporations Norrie mine, at Ironwood, pending the installation of the new hoisting plants at two of the shafts, was of short duration. The miners have been transferred to other workings of the company.

WORLD FAMOUS SEARCHERS

day some of his eminent fellow-workers are wondering why he has taken up so seriously his investigation for a spirit land. To them Sir William has made this reply: "To stop short in any research that bids fair to widen the gates of knowledge, to recoil from fear of difficulty or adverse criticism, is to bring reproach upon science." This belief, says Sir William, has given him strength to enter upon all the various research work with which his name has been connected for five decades.

Because of his international fame as a psychologist, Prof. William James is this country's most famous investigator for a spirit land, though, doubtless, he is not giving as much time to this species of research as are some other well known Americans, for example, Prof. James H. Hyslop of Columbia university and secretary of the American Society for Psychical Research. James frankly admits that he has gone into the study of spiritualism and other so-called psychic phenomena in the hope that he may find a truth or a theory that will help mankind to lead a higher life. "To find a balm for men's souls," is the way he has put it. To this end he has attended seances and made other numerous investigations; and, speaking of seances, he says that while much that was said by the mediums was worthless, being a mere jumble of words, yet other things that were said seemed strangely real. For this reason he is continuing his research until such time as he is able to determine whether through them a clue may be found that will lead to the discovery of the "balm for men's souls."

Makes Himself Understood.

Though he deals in one of the most abstruse branches of learning known to men, Prof. James, according to his old students has the happy faculty of making himself clearly understood. (By the way, this is a reputation not possessed in a noticeably large degree by his famous brother, Henry, the novelist.) Unlike a great many very erudite men, he dearly delights in having his auditors question his theories and argue with him. He has acknowledged this to be one of the things that made his active years as professor at Harvard a real pleasure to him. But once, when he gave a course of lectures at Leland Stanford university, the class swallowed his theories without a protest, and the professor, genial soul that he generally is, lets his face cloud up when he recalls the incident.

James, to the initiated, is the daddy of pragmatism, which he himself has described as "a new name for some old ways of thinking," the average man taking his word for it. He is also the inventor of the laboratory of physiological psychology. Today this mode of studying psychology in connection with physiological experiments on frogs and other animals, is in vogue in most of the colleges of the land. The laboratory at Harvard is the best equipped of its kind in the world, though when James founded it, it consisted of some very simple apparatus and a half dozen or so frogs.

James, by the way, is an interesting example of a highly successful man who did not find his true field of endeavor until after he had tried several things else. First he determined on a naturalist's life and went so far as to accompany Louis Agassiz on one of his deep sea expeditions, but when he returned home James announced that he couldn't be a naturalist—the names of fishes and other naturalistic stuff with which he came in contact were too difficult to remember, he said. Then he turned to medicine and took his degree; and not until after he had taught anatomy and physiology at Harvard for several years did he get started in the line of work through which his fame has come. He lacked two years of being forty before he struck his gait; he is now 68.

Other Spirit Seekers.

W. F. Barrett, professor of physics at the Royal College of Science, Dublin, and a former assistant to the late Prof. Tyndall, has been a consistent seeker for evidence of a spirit-land since the day, twenty-six years ago, when he helped to found the English Society for Psychical Research. Like Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir William Crookes, he is a former president of the society, which also numbers among its former heads and present active members the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour, some time premier of the British empire. Lord Rayleigh is another prominent English seeker after possible evidence of a future life; in the world of science he has been a big figure since the late seventies, his specialty being physics. Prof. Simon Newcomb is a former president of the organized researchers in this country.

Here Prof. James H. Hyslop is undoubtedly the most prominent of the psychical researchers; he has got into the full glare of the limelight from time to time by his various announcements that he has held communications with the spirits of departed friends. Also, his position as secretary of the American Society of Psychical Research has frequently brought him into the public eye.

Prof. Hyslop's career as a college teacher goes back to the eighties. At present he is professor of logic and ethics at Columbia, from which important post various unsuccessful efforts have been made to oust him by persons not at all in love with his connection with psychical matters.

Here, then, is an appreciable quota of the world's leading thinkers—most of them scientists—seeking more or less fervently for possible evidences of the existence of a spiritland. Some of them have many years before them in which to continue their research; others are drawing to the close of life. Will any one of them succeed in establishing evidence that will scientifically establish the existence of a future life? Or will all of them pass beyond, leaving us in as great darkness—except for faith—as that in which we now walk?

PROPRIETY OF WEARING NEGLIGEE IN PUBLIC

(Copyright, 1908, by Fairchild Co.)

With the recurrence of the "dog days"—and such violent examples of them, at that, as we dwellers in the East have been treated to in the first two weeks of July—the much mooted question of whether or not man is justified in appearing in public without his coat is once more holding the attention of the chroniclers of the fads and foibles of the moment.

We "stand" for a great deal in this country of ours, and murmur not. With the thermometer in the lower eighties we are apparently perfectly content to carry on our shoulders the burden of our woolen coats which warm our backs like veritable mustard plasters, scorning to make any special provision for the idiosyncracies of a climate now acknowledged to be many times more humid than that of the frankly tropical regions.

But when the mercury reaches the nineties, as it did in New York recently, a few of the courageous ones, in an effort to lighten by airing the more sweltering hours when the sun blazed down most viciously, discarded their coats and were promptly refused service in one of the city's fashionable restaurants.

A summer or two ago, when the so-called "shirtwaist man" first appeared upon the startled vision of metropolitan life, and the coatless male threatened to be an all-pervading feature of summer life in our greater cities, such a hue and cry was raised by the guardians of the proprieties" that the man in the street promptly donned his coat again, and, except in a few isolated instances, was content to swelter in silence.

Ever since, however, with each recurring summer, we have been reading how some venturesome spirit has been refused his dinner because he wore no coat, so that it is not at all surprising to note that this annual incident of American life has again occurred, superinduced, no doubt by the tremendous heat of early July.

Vast Change Has Occurred.

This now familiar incident would hardly be worth commenting on again—so much has already been written, pro and con, about the matter—were it not for the fact that there has been such a vast change in the general character of men's wear in the last twelve months, and that there are now so many more points in favor of the genus shirt than there were when the original "shirtwaist men" first made their futile appeal for popular consideration.

Certainly the well-dressed man of the hour, even without his coat, should not be a subject of opprobrium. His trousers fit snugly at the hips. Should there be any fulness, it is gathered in by two small straps and buckles, one on either side, and these are hidden from view by the neat, narrow leather belt which now plays so important a part in the summer costume of the day. The ugly single strap and buckle in the back of the trousers, bunching up the cloth in multitudinous crinkly folds, is a thing of the past. Then, too, the modern negligee shirt is, indeed, a thing of beauty. Made of silk, or, more practically, of silk and linen, embellished with stripes of many a gorfleous color, and with the initials of the wearer embroidered on the sleeve, it is often, as far as its effect is concerned, criticised. Most men look extremely well in this fine raiment. With the shirt is worn one of the beautiful silk scarfs, chosen to match the stripes in the shirt, or to correspand with some shade of the silk with which the monogram is embroidered. The collar is of the fold-over, lock-front variety, which fits closely about the neck, entirely concealing the collar button in the back.

Dressed "comme cela," one would suppose, at first thought, that the "shirtwaist" man would meet all the requirements of even the most fastidious.

In spite of the fact, however, that apparel of the kind cited above is such a far cry from the bit or miss effects that were characteristics of the garments worn by the pioneers in the crusade to abandon the coat, yet is is to be noted that the men who are careful enough in regard to the details of their dress to make it possible for them to doff their coats without offense, never do appear in public places without them.

Informality in Dress.

Informality in dress has been carried to great lengths in recent times, particularly in New York, where even in midwinter men are seen at daylight social functions in sack suits and fold-over collars, and this silk hat and frock coat are less and less seen, either at receptions or "of a Sunday." One would, indeed, be tempted to fear that the thraldom of the coat in midsummer would be escaped from entirely were it not for that wonderful "savoir faire" that seems to be inherent in the American man, and which may always, in the final reckoning, be counted upon to prevent his doing anything not quite "right." That curiously intangible censor of men and things, "good form," after all, rules supreme.

The fact remains that one never feels at all "right" without a coat, and as long as this feeling exists—and it will take much more than the spasmodic efforts on the part of the few "reformers" to expunge that innate sense which Americans possess of what is "coming il faut"—there is little likelihood that our men will attempt to appear in public without their coats, even though the thermometer is registering in the nineties.

The answer to the question, "How shall we dress in torrid weather?" scarcely lies in all introduction of trousers and negligee shirt as an universal costume, but rather in the general acceptance of some fashion of garment more conformable to the requirements of our present climate.

Some radical change, not in form, but in the substance of the suitings required by the dictates of fashion for wear during the "hot waves" would seem to be inevitable. Not only the comfort of the community, but, what is more important, the actual health and well-being of our people, demands it.

A Cause of Sunstroke.

It has been pointed out that conventionality is one of the primary causes of sunstroke; that while everything is being done for man's comfort in the manufacture of sanitary and gauze-like underwear; nothing is being done to make his outer garments more endurable for wear during the "heated term."

It will be recalled that there were a number of abortive attempts made, during the very hot seasons of a few years ago, to introduce suits of linen crash, seersucker, mohair, etc., but as these hot spells were followed by a series of cool Junes and late summers, these garments became somewhat of a drug in the market and the manufacture of crash deteriorated. "Summer" suits of this kind failed to hold their shape and the general public did not take kindly to them. The linen crash suits, which were not at all cheap garments, soon came to be manufactured with a preponderance of cotton in their makeup. This was the beginning of the end and soon the clothing shop knew them no more.

With the extraordinary climatic changes, however, which have marked the present season a decided movement has been noted tending toward a return to the use of linen crash, mohair and summer fabric suits on the part of many of the exclusive dressers in the metropolis. There is now some hope that the long-awaited "reform" in summer wear for men is really at hand.

One has only to look at the postmen, policemen, messengers, firemen and other "public" personages, to say nothing of the truckmen, drivers, conductors, motormen and coachmen in our Northern cities, to realize the inhumanity of expecting our people to dress in woolen clothes with the mercury at blood heat.

Some of us sit day by day under electric fans in our offices and yet feel suffocated. What must be the sensation of the toilers in the full glare of the sun?

In the matter of dress for our officials alone we might well follow the example of these Southern countries where linen uniforms are worn. But why should these comfortable garments be confined exclusively to official use? What can be more suitable for the New York tropics than suits made of the beautiful monairs and fine linen crashes obtainable today?

As to "Bad Form."

Is it not, perhaps, a mistake to feel that because a thing is unconventional it must necessarily be "bad form?" The modern mohair suit is indeed a thing of beauty, possessing as it does those most necessary requirements of an ideal midsummer garment, lightness of weight combined with sufficient "body" to hold the shape. It seems probable that as soon as our men realize the great desirability of these suits, that they will be numbered among the most sought after "lines" of the present season.

There is, however, still one more point to be made in considering conventionality in dress and its relation to tropical summer clothes. Assuming that one has a deep-seated objection to appearing on the street in crash, mohair or some one of the like lightweight fabrics and elects to wear one of the always satisfactory outing flannels, why not select a white one? In this matter of not wearing white clothes in the city conventionality seems to rule us with a rod of iron. Even if white flannel is no cooler than black—a mooted question—it at least looks cool, and that is half the battle.

When there are so many beautiful patterns to choose from, outing flannels not only of pure cream white or white with self stripes, but also suitings of white with fine stripes (either close together or in some instances, quite far apart), why must every one go on wearing dark blue or black suits? When the thermometer registers 95 degs. in the shade, with the humidity in proportion, if the majority of men donned white suits, they would certainly look so cool that it is safe to say the greater majority of them would feel cool as well. White is summer's own color. Are not the dark suits really the ones that are "bad form" because they are so entirely unsuitable?

WISHED TO END HIS LIFE

Despondent Lover Tries to Commit Suicide Three Times.

Twice With Acid and Once With Gun, All Failures.

Following the refusal of Sadie Hall, an 18-year-old girl, to marry him, Amos Sharkey of West Duluth made three attempts at suicide last evening, all of them proving unsuccessful—thanks to the watchfulness of the girl's father and the police.

The young man, who is 23 years of age, called at the girl's home, 430 South Sixty-first avenue west, last evening. According to the story he told the police, he had been friendly with the young woman for some time, and last evening he determined to bring matters to an understanding. The young woman refused to consider an early marriage. As the young man left the house, the girl's father, John Hall, saw him take a bottle of carbolic acid from his pocket. He followed the young man, and, just as he raised the bottle to his lips, knocked it from his hand.

The father then notified the police, and Officer Peterson found the young man in Tracey's saloon, on Raleigh street. While talking to the officer, Sharkey started to take a cigarette case from his pocket and another bottle of carbolic acid fell out. The officer confiscated this, but Sharkey denied the story of his attempted suicide. He left the saloon shortly afterwards and went to the Mattax saloon, on Fifty-seventh avenue west and Raleigh street. Here he attempted to borrow a gun, saying he was going fishing and wanted it to take with him. The proprietor refused the request.

About 1 o'clock this morning, Officer Brouillette found Sharkey still wandering about the streets, and took him to the West Duluth police station. He finally admitted that he had attempted to commit suicide. He was released this morning, however, as he appeared to have recovered in part from his fit of despondency.

It was learned in a West Duluth drug store this morning that Sharkey had bought carbolic acid there on July 20. After that no poison of any kind had been sold to him, at the request of a relative, who feared that the young man's despondency over his love affair might lead him to some desperate act.

LUCKY IN ONE WAY.

"The late Valerian Gribayedoff," said a Chicago art editor, "was one of the first American newspaper sketch artists. On that account he leaves behind him a famous name.

"As Gribayedoff said himself, the last time I visited him in Paris, his fame was due not to his great artistic skill, but to his luck in coming first.

"And he added with a laugh that it was always lucky to come early and avoid the rush, instancing the case of a restaurant in the Latin Quarter, where a young poet had a large tureen of soup spilled over his coat one evening.

"The waiter, in response to the savage outcries of the poet, said good-naturedly:

"'Oh, well, you needn't alarm yourself, sir. There's no harm done. Our soup never stains after half past 7.'"

HOW A TRAMP PAID.

Judge's Library: A young lawyer whose cases were few, was asked to defend a poverty-stricken tramp accused of stealing a watch. The lawyer pleaded with all the ardor at his command, drawing so pathetic a picture with such convincing energy that, at the close of his argument, the court was in tears, and even the tramp wept. The jury deliberated but a few minutes and returned a verdict of "Not guilty." Then the tramp drew himself up, tears streaming down his face as he said: "Sir, I have never before heard so grand a plea. I have not cried since I was a child. I have no money with which to reward you, but" (drawing a package from the depths of his ragged clothes), "here's that watch; take it and welcome."

FAILURE IS HARD BLOW

Many Laborers Will Lose the Savings of Years.

News of the failure of the Austrian banking firm of Frank Zotti & Co. of New York, which occurred a few days ago, is gradually finding its way into the Austrian colonies of Northern Minnesota, taking with it sorrow and desolation. Hardly an Austrian colony exists in any of the mining towns of Northern Minnesota which was not severely hit by the failure of the New York house, which had on deposit thousands of dollars of the hard earned money of poor foreigners, who preferred to trust their savings to their countrymen, and will lose nearly all they had.

Frank Zotti & Co. were supposed to be as solid as the rock of Gibraltar. Nobody ever questioned their stability. For years they have handled the deposits of Austrians throughout the United States and every man received his full 4 per cent, which they paid on savings deposits, and had every dollar returned to him when he wanting it. Austrian banks in and around mining camps, paying 3 per cent on savings, were ignored that the depositors might be certain of their money in the strong vaults of Zotti & Co.

When the crash came nearly every dollar was wiped out. Money, which had been hoarded for years toward the realization of dreams of homes in the native land of the hoarders, unattended by hard work and privations, went down in the wreck. It is said that not more than 20 per cent, and possibly not that much, will be paid the depositors. Depositors, who cannot read English, are being informed by their countrymen as best they can, but it may be months before some of them know their wealth has gone and they must get a new start in accumulating savings.

WORK OF THE PARDON BOARD

One Pardon Granted and Several Sentences Commuted.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state board of pardons today granted a pardon to Alexander McEwan, sentenced to life imprisonment from Minneapolis in 1906, for manslaughter. He kicked a man to death in a Minneapolis resort, following a quarrel over one of the inmates.

While only one pardon was granted, several commutations of sentences were issued, making each practically eligible for parole immediately. Ole Severson, sent from Winona county for life, for having carnal knowledge of a child, had his sentence cut to twenty years.

Thomas Taylor, sent from Itasca county for fifteen years for grand larceny, had his sentence reduced to ten years. His sentence was the limit under the law, and the board considered it excessive.

Frank Carey, also of Itasca county, serving a sentence of three years and six months for forgery, was commuted to two years. He will be released at once.

Practically all the other cases, including no less than eight from Ramsey county, were denied outright. Several were continued for the production of additional evidence.

OCEAN STEAMSHIPS.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

Pearson's Weekly: A wagon laden with lamp globes collided with a motor bus, and much of the glass was smashed. Considerable sympathy was felt for the van driver, as he gazed ruefully at the shattered fragments. A benevolent-looking old gentleman eyed him compassionately.

"My poor man," he said, "I suppose you have to make good this loss out of your own pocket?"

"Yes," was the melancholy reply.

"Well, well," said the philanthropist, "hold out your hat—here's a shilling for you, and I daresay others round will give you a helping hand."

The driver held out his hat, and several persons dropped coins into it. When the contributors had ceased, he emptied the contents of his hat into his pocket. Then pointing to the retreating figure of the philanthropist who had started the collection, he observed:

"Well, he is a take-down! He's my boss!"

You couldn't discuss the events of the day in the world unless you had read your newspaper. You cannot "shop" intelligently unless you have read the store-ads.

It is the tea grown on the hillsides of the world-famous Nuwara Eliya district in Ceylon, used in "Salada" Tea, that gives it that rich, uniform delicious flavor.

CROP YEAR HAS ENDED

Total Grain Receipts During the Year Were Small.

Poor Crop Reflected in Reports of Board of Trade.

The crop year of the Duluth Board of Trade ended yesterday and statistics compiled by the secretary's office show that the total receipts of all grains during the twelve months just past were 70,598,510 bushels against 898,260,103 bushels for the same time in the crop year of 1906-07.

Last year's crop was small, which accounts for the high price of grains since last September. Prices were unussually lofty and people who have not exactly appreciated what the reason was, can easily see why, by comparing this year's report with the one issued on the first of August a year ago.

The total shipments show practically the same difference. Total shipments of all grains during the year were 70,462,440 bushels, against 86,663,468 bushels for the year 1906-07.

	1907-1908.	1906-1907.
Durum whete	21,697,799	24,154,308
Winter wheat	144,231	122,172
Totals	43,912,704	52,827,343

Shipments of wheat last year and the previous crop year follow:

	1907-1908.	1906-1907.

Total receipts of harley during 1907-1908 were 7,511,136 bushels against 10,449,849 bushels the year previous. Shipments of barley were 7,461,222 bushels against 10,-864,000 bushels the year before.

Total receipts of flax during the last year were 14,914,000 bushels against 20,-691,621 bushels for 1906-07. Shipments of flax were 15,005,822 bushels against 21,-063,947 bushels the year previous.

Total receipts of corn were 81,089 bushels against 129,237 bushels the year before and shipments were 81,089 bushels against 138,102 bushels the previous year.

Total receipts of oats were 3,768,14 bushels during the year and the previous year, the total was 4,068,416 bushels. Annual shipments of oats amounted to 3,-784,803 bushels against 5,270,528 bushels in 190607.

Total receipts of rye were 471,284 bushels against 653,643 bushels the year previous. Shipments were 482,000 bushels against 730,820 bushels a year ago.

BREACH OF RULES.

Double Sin of Jerry Day, the Freight Flagman.

New York Sun: "I was asleep in the bunk shanty over in Jersey," said the fat engineer, "when I awoke suddenly with a start. I could hear a sawmill goin' to beat the band.

"'Now that's a fine layout,' I says to Hank Simms, in the next bunk. 'How under the canopy do they expect a man to sleep, buildin' a bunk shanty right near a sawmill?'

"'Sawmill nothin'!' says Hank. 'That's Jerry Day, the new flagman for Archie Dun, snorin' over in the trainmen's bunk room. Ain't he a pippin?'

"'If that anti-noise society gets hep to him,' I says, 'they'll hotfoot him out of this community instanter.'

"There was no more sleep for us that afternoon, so we got up and sat in at a hot game of pinochle.

"Jerry Day was first out with Archie Dunn that evenin' on the first 79 'n' I was second out on second 79, freight runnin' so heavy them days that they were runnin' the fast freights in two or three sections.

"When it came time for us to leave the freight yards the fog was so thick you couldn't shoot holes into it with a machine gun. I tell you I was mighty cautious goin' over the Jersey meadows, wovin' along on only about two notches of steam on the throttle.

"Pretty soon on the heavy air I heard a sawmill goin' full blast.

"'Strange,' I 'says to myself, that they're running' a sawmill in these parts this time of the night.

"There was a peculiar sound to that sawmill that I'd heard before. All of a sudden it came over me like a flash what it was. 'That's that green flagman of Archie Dunn's,' it came to me; he's just hidin' his red lantern under a bushel of snores while his train is stalled.

"So quicker'n a deaf 'n' dumb man can say Jack Robinson I got my engine in back motion. I couldn't see a thing, but from the sound of that foghorn ahead we'd stopped about a caboose length this side of that warnin' snore.

"The fog shifted for a minute 'n' there was the tail lights of Archie Dunn's caboose almost restin' on the nose of my cow-catcher. It was a lucky thing for me that I had recognized the deep snore of that flagman.

"Mebbe I didnt climb onto that caboose 'n' give that new hand a brief 'n' pointed speech on the rules 'n' regulations of sleepin' on duty, especially dwellin' on the necessity of the flagman totin' his red 'n' white lights seventeen telegraph poles back when his train stopped on the main track.

"A week or so after that I was second out again behind Archie Dunn. An' it was just such a foggy night as the one I was speakin' of before. Sherlock Holmes himself couldn't penetrate the density of that Jersey meadow mist.

"I was movin' along again under two speeds forward, keepin' my weather goggles trimmed for trouble ahead. Just as sure as you're born, over the meadows there came to me again that forty-sawmill power snore of Archie Dunn's rear guard.

"'So,' I says to myself, 'my little heart to heart talk with that flagman bore no fruit, eh? Well, I'll just give him a little bump this time 'n' see what a little scare will do for him.'

"You can just imagine I was pretty warm under the collar, comin' up on that feller snoozin' on the breastworks twice in two weeks. I kept gettin' closer 'n' closer to the snore, but there didn't come along any hind end for me to bump into.

"I got a little scared myself then, thinking mebbe I might hit 'em too hard, so I sot up in the air 'n" we swung to under the lee of that warnin' snore. Well, now, mebbe I hadn't made up my mind to write up a round robin on that careless flagman of Archie Dunn's.

"You bet what I would say in my report would end his usefulness to the railroad. I hadn't reported him the first time, thinkin' he was young 'n' new to the business, relyin' on my little talk to reform him. But it was all off now. Discipline required that I must make out a written report.

"We laid there a few minutes, with that feller snorin', me jawin' to myself 'n' mebbe cryvin' him just a little of his sound sleep, when all at once the fog cleared away as if it had been sent for. You could have bowled me over with a toothpick! Sean that track ahead of me as far as I could see straight across the meadows I could detect no tail lights of a train ahead. But off to the right in the fields was a really 'n' truly sawmill merrily on the works which was probably workin' over time on some little extra job.

"Now, say, mebbe I didn't feel as cheap as a pair of ice skates in the summer time. I nearly got laid off for ten days myself for delayin' that fast freight. However, I can truly say that I have never been so fooled before or since."

HIS ESCAPE.

Chicago News: "I've got some sad news for you, my friend," said the young man with the oakleaf brown necktie. "Brace yourself for a shock. Will you have it all at once or by gentle degrees?"

"This is one of my busy days, so you'd better just let it come in a chunk," answered the florist.

"Here goes, then," said the young man. "I'm moving out into the suburbs. As soon as the movers can get around to us we're going to revel in the pure, invigorating air of Clovermede and I'm cast for the part of spading the spacious back yard. You know what that means, don't you?"

"Sure," replied the florist. "It means that the handy man of Clovermede is going to get a job at 20 cents an hour."

"That is not the vital significance," said the young man. "It means that I'm going to escape from your clutches. It means that spring is here and spring is when the flowers bloom, tra la. I'm not going to turn over my weekly salary to you for your violets and roses."

"Is she going to move, too?"

"She is not," replied the young man. "She stays right where sae is. The point is that when I want to offer any floral tribute I'm going to meander forth and cull the simple blossoms of the field until my garden blazes out in a glory of color. You'll see me out in the mornings plucking the modest daisy, the daffy-dilly, the—"

"What made the down-dilly daffy?" asked the florist.

"Trying to buy New York violets at a dollar and a quarter a bunch from you snarks, probably," the young man answered. "It certainly will seem good to come to step out with a bunch of fragrant blooms and know that they haven't set me back so far that I have to economize on the laundry to catch up. I'm told that marigolds grow wild in profusion in Clovermede."

"I've been there," said the florist, and, not doubting your word, I can't imagine anything growing wild there. It's about the tamest-looking place I ever saw."

"There are crocuses in the woods," said the young man, "water lilies whiten the ponds and there are wild roses in season. There are johnny-jump-ups along the margin of the brooks—"

"And dandelions on the lawns," said the florist.

"I won't have to depend on the wild flowers long," said the young man. "As soon as I get that back yard spaded I'm going to sow it down to sweet peas and carnations and chrysanthemums and hollyhocks and verbenas and everything else you can think of, and I'll have flowers to give away to all my friends. I'm going to make flowers a drug on the market. I'm going to get even with you. I always said that I would and now the time has come. All that's worrying me is what I'll do with the money I'm going to save."

"You might endow a hospital," suggested the florist. "Don't you think you could start some sort of little candy factory out in Clovermede? If you could raise your own chocolates you'd be fixed, wouldn't you?"

"I wish I could," sighed the young man. "Still, in the summer a girl doesn't crave sweets as much as she does in the winter. There's ice cream of course, but as soon as the weather gets warm the theaters will all be closed and, with all their faults, the summer gardens are a little easier on a fellow's pocketbook."

"It's about six of one and half a dozen of the other," said the florist. "But what are you in here for this morning?"

The young man handed his purse to the flower merchant. "Open that and count the contents," he said. "If there's enough there I'd like to have you box me up a spray or two of that white lilac. I'd appreciate it if you could let me have the purse back after you've taken the money."

"There's only $12 in here," said the florist, "but I'll let you have a bunch i. you'll be satisfied with having them wrapped in tissue paper. It won't run to a box. Where did you get that confederate money, anyway?"

ACCOMPLISHMENT AN ASSET.

Doors Open to a Girl Who Can Do One Thing Well.

New York Sun: "Wise persons are continually giving advice to the ambitious girl who comes to New York to make her way," said a club woman. "They tell her how she can best live and dress, and what she should spend and study. But I have never known one of them to recommend her to have the thing which, in my opinion, is the most valuable she can possess—namely, an accomplishment.

"I don't mean an accomplishment like china painting or making lace, but one which is entertaining, like singing or reciting or performing a classic dance. For the girl who can do any little thing of this sort really well, doors of both studies and drawing rooms are flung open, and she has a chance of meeting people who will be of advantage to her in every way.

"For instance, a stenographer came to this city last fall and went to work at $8 a week. She had a pretty hard time before she obtained even that, too. She was really a clever young woman, with a gift for mimicry and recitation; above all she had an unfailing sense of humor.

"She jollied a working girls' club and for one of their meetings composed a comic account of the trials of an inexperienced stenographer trying to get a job in this city. This she delivered so brightly, with such a clever imitation of the various business men whom she interviewed and the fellow unfortunates she met that one of the patronesses of the club who was present asked her to repeat it before a prominent women's club of which she was a member.

"This the stenographer did and many of the women who heard her speak that second time became much interested in her. One of them soon afterward secured her a place as secretary to a wealthy woman, in whose house she now lives, with a salary of $18 a week and no expenses. Working up by slow degrees in business offices that girl would still be years away from such a competence.

"I know of a young governess who today is earning $75 a month and is having a beautiful time sailing around the world on a private yacht with her young charges. She received that place through reciting some amusing child monologues at a literary evening when the wealthy woman who now employs her happened to be present.

"Even the striving artist cannot afford to despise an opportunity to meet people here in New York, for there is no way of securing orders so sure as that of becoming personally known to people who are able to give them. A young woman who has more orders for portraits than she can finish in six months to come is one who had made herself proficient in cutting portrait silhouettes from black paper for the amusement of her friends.

"She was asked this winter to cut these silhouettes for the benefit of a bazar given for charity, which she did, fixing up her booth to represent a photographic studio and charging each sitter 50 cents. She met dozens of fashionable people in this way, and they have been the means of her present prosperity.

"An ability to play or sing well insures a girl being asked to all sorts of receptions and evening affairs, and opens up all sorts of opportunities to her. The wise young woman who is preparing to face the world in New York, or any other city, will not despise a pretty accomplishment, even if it is only an ability to recite light bits of verse cutely.

"Money spent in learning to make herself entertaining is money well invested, for all in New York want to be amused, and will cultivate the friendship of any one who is able to cater to their amusement and that of their friends."

REDEEMING THE SAHARA.

Irrigation Enlarging the Oases—Fast Camels Help Commerce.

The French have now in their service in the Sahara desert some thousands of camels that can travel about two and a half times as fast as the ordinary baggage camel. This fact is doing more than anything else to bring the whole desert into subjection to France, says the New York Sun.

The French regard the mehara, as these fast camels are called, as so important for their future work in the desert that they are bending every effort to increase the number. They have recently offered money prizes which will be distributed among those inhabitants of the cases who breed the largest number of mehara and the best specimens.

Some of the prize money will go to the owners of animals that win in trials of fleetness. The people of the oases will thus have an opportunity every year to see camel races, which will be a new form of sport among them.

At present the French cannot get all the mehara they need to provide animals for the Saharan military companies that are scattered among the new posts. The mehara are also wanted for the large caravans by which the government intends, in advance of the building of railroads, to connect the principal oases with the markets of Algeria.

The natives are not able to raise all the wheat they require, but their palm groves are yielding more and more dates. They expect hereafter to have an enormous quantity of dates to send North, and the camels that carry them will bring back cereals and other needed supplies. The French hope to have 100,000 fast camels in the service within a few years.

The Sahara is also benefiting by a larger water supply every year. The date crop is increasing because the French are so active in drilling and digging through the upper rocks and tapping deep sources of water. This work last year added 7,-550 gallons of water a minute to the supply in one of the oases of Wad Rir.

This additional amount will irrigate 2,-000 acres of palm groves and the oasis will be increased in size to this extent. The additional water will nurture 120,000 trees, from which a revenue of $60,000 a year may be derived besides an important sum from the cultivation of forage plants, vegetables and fruit trees in the groves.

A single well that was sunk last year in the region of the Wad Rir gives the high yield of 2,600 gallons a minute and the formation of a new oasis of 30,000 palm trees is now in progress.

Fast camels and water are thus doing wonders for the Sahara. In the Wad Rir region fifty years ago there were only about 300,000 date palms where now much more than 1,000,000 are cultivated; and the population, now 30,000, has quadrupled in a generation.

Perhaps the governor general of Algeria is right in his prediction that the French enterprises will make it possible to provide food for 1,000,000 more inhabitants than it now supports.

"HE'S GOT IT."

The very newest slang expression among college undergraduates, where slangy and picturesque expressions always are up with and often ahead of the times, is "He's got it." If a man has "got it" he is distinctly all right; his fellow students have put on him the seal of their unqualified approval; they have bestowed on him the highest praise they can bestow. There is about him an indefinite something, morally and mentally, that makes him all right—a square, clean, capable, likable chap, says the New York Sun.

As is the case with most slang the genesis of "He's got it," is hard to trace. It will be seen, however, that the mysterious, intangible "it" is pregnant with meaning. The expression first came into note last fall when the papers told of the prayer made by Tad Jones, the Yale quarterback, on the morning of the Harvard-Yale football game. "Fellows," said Jones at the Yale dinner after the game, "when I got up this morning something was wrong. I didn't have it. So I went to my room and knelt down and prayed, and when I arose I knew that I had it." Yale won the game.

With Jones something was missing—confidence regarding the outcome of the game, clear judgment or some condition of mental preparedness—the missing "it." Since then the expression has come to be more general in meaning. A fellow may try hard and mean well, but if there is something lacking in his ability to accommodate things he "hasn't got it."

LUCINDA'S EXPERIENCES.

New York Sun: "I have had a novel experience," said Lucinda. "I certainly have.

"This afternoon I went shopping in Fifth avenue. Automobiles and carriages and fine shops and people, life and motion and color all the time—why, I love simply to walk in Fifth avenue, and here it was, as gay as could be, and then we heard the sound of an ambulance gong coming nearer and nearer, the ambulance moving in and out among all those fine carriages and automobiles, hurrying some poor man that had been hurt to the hospital, and then in a minute it rushed past us, and then we saw the young ambulance surgeon in immaculate white sitting there so cool and easy while the ambulance hurried by and everybody turned to look, and then the first thing I knew—

"The ambulance surgeon bowed to me! Bowed beautifully, to me!

"And wasn't that a surprising experience? Well, it certainly was! And did I know him? Why, sure. T. and S. last year, and now in one of the great hospitals and going out with the ambulance.

"Why, we read about him in the papers all the time. Some dreadful thing happens, and everybody is all wrought up over it, and you read long accounts of it, and then we come to where it says the wounded man was attended to by Dr. So-and-So of Such-and-Such hospital, and that interests us greatly because we know him, and here he is in all these wonderful things. And then to think that I should meet him! on the ambulance! in Fifth avenue! and that he should bow to me! from the ambulance!

"Wasn't that an exciting experience? And what do you suppose can happen to me next?"

WHEAT GOES UP THREE CENTS IN NORTHWEST

Duluth and Minneapolis Lead Markets in Big Bulge.

Flax Is Strong and Shows Good Gain at Close.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 1.—Wheat took a decidedly bullish turn during the short session today and closed more than three points higher than yesterday in Duluth and Minneapolis. Other markets showed substantial bulges.

The rust news of the day was merely a reiteration of what has been said before, although Snow and Inglis were out with new bullish reports. Feeling about the Northwestern situation was bullish during all of the session.

The market seemed to have been oversold and to covering by shorts was attributed some of wheat's strength today. Trading was on rather a narrow basis so that the least little movement had an immediate and decided strengthening effect on the market.

It was a bank holiday in Liverpool and there were no cables from that city. Berlin closed 1¼d lower, Budapest unchanged and Paris ⅛c@⅜c lower.

The September option closed 3¼c higher in Duluth and Minneapolis, 2⅛@¼c higher in Chicago, 1¼c higher in New York, 1⅝@⅞c higher in St. Louis and Kansas City and 2⅜c higher in Winnipeg. The December option closed at 98½c in Duluth. It closed 2⅝c higher than yesterday in Chicago, 3⅛@¼c higher in Minneapolis and 1¼c higher in New York.

September corn closed ⅞c higher in Chicago and September oats closed 1c up.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,023,000 bus, last year 961,000 bus. Shipments 849,000 bus, last year 356,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 630,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 377,000 bus, last year 326,000 bus. Shipments 284,000 bus, last year 482,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 4,706 bus.

The volume of trading in the Duluth market was small, but the tone was very bullish. September wheat opened ⅛c higher at 97¼c bid and advanced to $1 with hardly the slightest set-back. It then declined to 99⅞ but rallied to $1⅜ and closed there, a gain of 3¼c over yesterday. December wheat was inactive and closed at 98½c bid.

Durum wheat closed ½c lower and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 1⅞c over September for No. 1 northern.

Flax was in fair demand and closed stronger here. September flax opened unchanged at $1.24½ bid, went as high as $1.25¼ and closed there, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. October flax opened ⅜c higher at $1.23¾, declined to $1.23, rallied to $1.24¼ and closed there, a gain of ⅞c over yesterday. Other options were inactive.

Oats closed 1c lower and other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices: Wheat—No. 1 hard, on track, $1.19; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.18; No. 2 northern, $1.13; September, $1.00⅜; December, 98½c; durum on track, No. 1, 94c; No. 2, 92c; September durum, 89½c; October durum, 89¼c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Strong General Demand for Wheat Sends Prices Up Early.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—A strong general demand based on hot weather in the Northwest and reports of black rust caused a sharp advance in wheat prices early today. September opened a shade to ¼c higher at 90¼@⅛c to 90½c and rose to 91½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 358 cars against 476 cars last week and 451 cars a year ago.

The low point for September was 90⅛@¼c. The market closed firm with September up 1¼c at 92⅜@½c.

The corn market was dull but strong on hot weather and the absence of rain. December and May showed an early advance of 1c. September opened ⅛c higher at 74⅞c and sold at 74¾c. Local receipts were 145 cars with 22 of contract grade.

Sentiment became bullish in the latter half of the session and the close was firm. The low point was at 74½c and the close was ½c higher at 75c.

The hot weather in the Northwest coupled with influence of other grain markets caused activity and strength in oats. September opened a shade higher at 44⅛c, sold at 44c and then advanced to 45⅛@45c. Local receipts were 135 cars.

The provision market was active and strong in sympathy with an advance in hogs and the grain strength. September pork opened 12½@15c higher at $15.90 and sold at $15.97½. September lard was 2½@5c higher at $9.57½ and September ribs were 2½@5c higher at $9.07½.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Stories of Black Rust Send Wheat Prices Up With a Rush.

Minneapolis, Aug. 1.—Wheat advanced with a rush today. While black rust has been known to be general in the Dakotas the local trade had concluded that the wheat was too far along to be injured. The appearance here today of a crop expert from the fields who took a serious view as to probable damage and wired Chicago to this effect, started buying. Minneapolis elevator stocks decreased 62,944 bushels for the week, leaving 1,580,289 bushels here out of which must come 50,000 bushels more for the decrease of one day. Receipts were 107 cars against 138 and in Duluth 58 against 88. Chicago's receipts looked big but neither Kansas City or St. Louis got as much as expected. Near the close some of the shorts who had stood out persistently bought in and the market was very strong, both the September options passing the dollar line and old September passing $1.01. both closing strong. September opened at 97@97¼c; high $1.00½; low, 97c; close, $1.00¼. Old September opened at 97¾; high, $1.01⅛; old, 97⅞; close $1.01. December opened at 96½c; high, 99c; low, 96⅜c; closed, 98¾c. Old December closed at 99¼c.

Milling wheat was in good demand at $1.12 for good No. 1 Northern and $1.09@1.10 for No. 2. Close No. 1 Northern, $1.13¼; spot, $1.12 to arrive; No; No. 2 Northern, $1.11 spot; $109 to arrive.

No. 3 wheat, $1.06@1.08.

No. 3 yellow corn, 73¼@71¼c.

No. 3 white oats, 54⅜@54⅞c.

No. 2 rye, old, 73⅜c; new, 71¼@72¼c.

Barley receipts, 6 cars, including two cars new barley, one of which, a bulk head car with the grain in poor condition, brought 47c. The other was unsold late. Old crop barley was almost even with yesterday. Close, 49@57c.

Flax was in fair demand at 1c under Duluth September. Close, $1.24.

Millstuffs steady and in better demand at $18.50@19 for bran in bulk.

Flour advanced 10c for patents and millers quoted it strong at the advance. The higher cost of wheat was the sole reason, as demand is very light. Shipments, 42,739 barrels. First patents, $5.85@6; second patents, $5.75@5.90; first patents, $4.35@4.45; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

POP AT THE BALL GAME.

He sat in the back of the press box at American League park, with his small son. Furthermore, he was one of the talkative sort and let the surrounding world get the benefit of what he knew. The small son was being taught to score, and he wasn't very keen on it, because Pop was bothering him so, says the New York Sun.

"You start with the pitcher and number them right around," said Pop. "The pitchers 1, the catcher's 2; first base, 3; second base, 4; shortstop, 5; third base, 6; right field, 7; center field, 8, and left field, 9."

Now, Pop's notation happened not to agree with that of any of the men in the press box. Almost any one knows that the shortstop is 6 and the third baseman 5, while the fielders are numbered from left to right, and not the way Pop had them. The result was deep cursing every time the shortstop got an assist or a putout, because Pop bellowed out to his small son, "Write it down, 5-3," when every one knew it ought to be 6-3.

Son after a while rebelled, "I donwanner keep score."

Pop said, "Go on, now. You gotter learn, because some day when I bring you up here I'll want to watch the game and let you keep the score. I'm giving up the game for the sake of teaching you to-day."

But Son got his release about an inning later. One of the New Yorks got up to the bat in the fourth inning.

About every one else in the stand knew it was Moriarty, who had taken Stahl's place in left field two innings before when Stahl was put out of the game for objecting to the umpire calling him out on strikes.

'Come on, now, hit it out, Jake!" vociferated Pop, and kept on cheering for Stahl.

One of those in front stood it for a little while, but finally he turned around and remarked, "Ah, cheese it, that ain't Stahl, you loud mouth; that's Moriarty." And Pop was so crushed he didn't harry his young son the rest of the game.

JOHN BURNS AND THE KIDDIES.

British Congregationalist: A characteristic story of John Burns is told by a correspondent, the correspondent having had it from the master of a London secondary school.

A colleague on the staff of the school was accustomed to take his boys to Battersea park for games of football and cricket. A small tip to the policeman, it is said, was found to secure the best pitches, and the small children of the neighborhood were turned off to allow the boys to play. One day the policeman saw the master and his class approaching and began to clear the ground.

A stentorian voice from a neighboring tree cried, "Leave those kiddies alone. The park is for them and they shall not be turned off.' And down clambered the president of the local government board.

MADE COPY OF WOE.

The Literary Laundry Opened by the Honeymooners.

After their marriage the Honeymooners continued their literary work, so the world found the match more charmingly appropriate than ever, says the New York Sun. A young poet with an additional talent for very charming fiction and a writer of stories distinguished by their delightful truth of feminine character who could also be tenderly poetic when she took to verse—could there be any two persons more adapted to each other?

"Surely," more than one of their friends suggested, "this match was made in heaven."

That was the conclusion of all when there were discernible in Darby's verse tenderer gems of poetic thought than had ever dwelt there before and Joan's little stories were warmer and penetrated more deeply than they ever had previously into the mysteries of woman's heart.

"It was just as we said," murmured the friends again, "this marriage was made in heaven."

It was the eye of the magazine editor, peeled to human interest in any of its phases not too intensely interesting, that first detected a lack of harmony in the house of the Honeymooners. Nothing interfered with the amount of their literary output. Poems and fiction followed in the old-time alternation from both sides of the family.

It was in the themes that the difference lay. Mrs. Honeymooner's heroines did not get out of their difficulties of heart and home with their old-fashioned optimism. They remained in their unhappy condition. Mr. Honeymooner's poems ceased entirely to dwell on the delights of the man whose life was crowned with the love of woman.

This change in the character of their literary creations could not fail to impress itself on the usually unimpressionable editors. The situation showed itself to the world and the friends of the couple when one editor accepted from the discouraged pen of Mr. Honeymooner a story containing a novel and interesting psychological problem, according to the magazine announcement. Its thesis was the greater happiness of widowers and an attack on the superstition that men were unhappy merely because their wives died.

Perhaps even this use of the family lingerie for purposes of copy would have escaped notice if the story had been a few words longer or shorter. In the first instance it would have come down to the bottom of the page and no more would have been required there. In the second, it would have ended at the bottom of the previous page and there would have been as little need of one of the magazine fillers used for just such exigencies and indexed as verse.

But it was necessary to fill the page, and in the hurry of making up the magazine for publication the editor was delighted to find a poem of exactly the right length. It was called "The Wife Deserted Weeps at Home," but neither its contents nor the fact that it was the work of Mrs. Honeymooner interfered with his delight at finding a piece that fitted exactly.

In anybody but a magazine editor such a juxtaposition would have been considered proof of sense of humor. As it was, nobody suspected anything else than accident. It had the effect, however, of opening the eyes of their friends to the unhappiness of the Honeymooners, and it explained the changed feeling in their literary works. So when the couple finally agreed to part after a short married life and had this decision made permanent by the aid of the law, there was less talk about heaven's share in their promising union.

It was not to be supposed that the minds of writers should be taken quickly from subjects that loomed big in their lives. It was no longer necessary for Mr. Honeymooner to intimate delicately to the world his unhappy state of mind by means of a magazine story at the rate of 2 cents a word.

Equally superfluous was the effort of Mrs. Honeymooner to let her friends know her state of mind through a two stanza poem. Now that they were divorced, everybody knew what they meant and they could have resumed the cheery, happy ending, inoffensive literary style of their pre-marriage days. But they didn't.

They kept right on with misunderstanding wives, heartless husbands, unsympathetic spouses and the stock in trade that cast a damper over their compositions soon after their wedding. They naturally never met, but the magazine world threatened to be inundated by this wave of marital unhappiness.

It had gone very well in the beginning by the way of a change, and the parted couple saw no reason why it should not continue. With their usual perversity the editors thought otherwise and the manuscripts began to come back.

They continued to come back, and their return meant that there was nothing more doing in the marital unhappiness market. The financial crisis that threatened the former members of the Honeymooner family was nearly as serious as their personal disagreements had been.

"Perhaps, perhaps," advised the magazine editor to whom the former husband turned for advice, "there might be a market for some of the marital unhappiness stories, although as a rule we don't go in much, you know, for unhappiness of any kind. Our readers don't care for it. If, for instance, only you wrote them, or only the former Mrs. Honeymooner did, they might be sold, but with both of you turning them out right along, I am sorry to say frankly that I don't think the market for them will continue."

Here was a problem. They were very easy just now to both of them, those M. U. stories, if they only could be made to sell. But with the two typewriters busy on the M. U. stories there would be a continued glut.

"If you could arrange to divide the field," the editor went on, "it might then be possible to use them. But with such a supply—

Mr. Honeymooner realized the truth of the suggestion. It was not possible for him to suggest to Mrs. Honeymooner that she hand over such a productive field to him, least of all possible after her really ladylike conduct about the alimony.

He pondered as he left the office of the magazine which had formerly used the work of both. As he wandered uptown he found himself suddenly in front of a large office building. There a literary agent to whom he had often appealed had her office.

She was in her office. It was after her business hours, and only violent beating on the door and the call of his name several times convinced her that it was worth while to break her rule and receive a customer at this hour.

"Leave the matter to me," she said. "I am to see Mrs. Honeymonner tomorrow. I'll arrange it; you see."

He had never known this enthusiastic young person, who generated electricity by her active manner to fail in anything. So he went away in the hope that the martial unhappiness market; both in prose and verse, might not go altogether to the dogs.

It was no surprise to him when he heard from her a few days later.

"Mrs. H. has consented," the letter read, "to hand over to you for one year from Jan. 1 next the entire period of your married life. You are entitled to use much of the time immediately preceding the wedding as may be necessary to make the story clear.

"During this same period Mrs. H. will have absolute use of the period of your engagement, together with as much of the time preceding the date on which you entered into a formal engagement as may be indispensable to he ruses. These conditions apply with equal force to verse and prose.

"It is furthermore agreed that this compact is to continue in force for the term of one year only. Mrs. H. agrees with me that at that time it will be to the mutual advantage of the parties to change the conditions of this instrument in such a way that she may have the period of her married life, while Mr. H. becomes entitled to the time of the engagement. This suggestion is not, however, to have any binding force."

Of course Mr. Honeymooner signed his name to this very satisfactory understanding and returned it to the businesslike literary agent. The M. U. literary market is thus preserved.

Mr. Honeymooners' fidelity is commended by his friends, who see in his stories and poems that he has recovered from the blow of the divorce and the unhappiness that preceded it. A poet, they say, never loses his ideals.

Mrs. Honeymooner's work, on the other hand, shows that she is evidently happy, for she is again writing the same stories and the same little poems about the young couples that always marry happily. After all is is sometimes the man that feels it all, most people say.

Mrs. Honeymonner bears up under this criticism, for she knows that she will control the other side of the martial unhappiness market next year. Sympathy will again be with her regrets and lost illusions.

HE SHUT THE WINDOW.

Tit-Bits: There is a certain old gentleman who partakes of the qualities of the diamond as it is mined, but whose lack of "polish" is a sad trial to his eldest daughter. The old gentleman, as he expresses it, "got thar with both feet when some dude investors come pirutin' 'round the range." Not long ago the family were gathered in the library, one of the windows of which was open.

"That air—" the father began, but was quickly interrupted.

"Father, dear, don't say 'that air' —say 'that there,'" the daughter admonished.

"Well, this ear—" he again attempted, but was as quickly brought to a halt.

"Nor 'this ere;' 'this here' is correct,"

"The old gentleman rose with an angry snort. "Look here, Mary," he said, with asperity. "Of course, I know you have been to school and all that, but I reckon I know what I want to say, an' I am going to say it. I believe I feel cold in this ear from that air, and I'm going to shut the window!"

Fact-hunters find all days "open season" in The Herald advertising columns.

Never since Calumet & Arizona and North Butte were put on have the people of this part of the country had such a chance to make big money as they now have on Ballaklava. It is without question the one to buy. Already big bodies of rich ore are opened up on the 500 and 700-foot levels; the shaft right now is almost to the 800-foot level and will be to the 1,000 in less than 80 days. They have rich ore in the shaft, and, remember, this mine is working the very same veins as those of the North Butte.

Ballaklava should earn enough in dividends in 12 good working months to pay for the mine at the rate it is now selling for. Watch the stock begin to climb. We were bidding $8 all day today and it sold to $8.12½. You could not pick up 1,000 shares under $12. The stock is not one to only expect a few points on, for it has possibilities so big that it may sell at $80 a share and pay big dividends on that price.

Superior & Pittsburg also looks good to me and should easily sell at $22. Greene-Cananea should sell at $20. Keweenaw also looks like much higher priced stock, but Ballaklava, I honestly believe will pass them all when it becomes known what this mine really has. It has stood through every depression and is good as gold all the time.

All the lower priced issues are acting fine. Red Warrior and Mowitza are active. Carman very strong tonight. Copper Queen is being taken in big blocks whenever offered. Butte & Superior will make you all wonder one of these days, for it has had no advance to speak of and when it starts the whole country goes after it. It should sell at $3 this fall, and it is safe at this level.

To my customers who reside in Hibbing, beg to call your attention to the fact that Mr. G. A. Fraser will be my correspondent in that city and if you call at his office you can get any information you wish regarding any copper stocks handled in the country. FEW TRANSFERS HAVE BEEN CLOSED THIS WEEK

Many Inquiries Have Been Received Regarding Property, However, and Work is Begun on a Number of New Residences.

There have been few transfers in Duluth real estate this week, and no big ones. In fact, so far as closed-up deals are concerned, it has been an unusually dull week. But the real estate men will not concede that it has been a dull week.

"I haven't got many transfers to report this week," said a prominent real estate man yesterday, "but we have a great many calls to go out and show property, and I have a number of deals which ought to go through next week." This fairly expresses the situation as outlined by most of the Duluth realty men.

The report that the Steel corporation had commenced actual work, with a good-sized crew, on the railroad spur from the present Northern Pacific line in Superior, to the bay front, where the big bridge is going across to the steel plant site, has caused renewed confidence, which, while it has not brought any great activity as yet, is still making itself felt. The assurance that it gives that construction work on the big plant itself is at least a possibility for the near future, should help Duluth real estate to resume at least some of its wonted activity.

A number of fine residences have been commenced during the week.

J. A. Clarey, contractor, has started work on A. W. Kuehnow's new frame and stucco residence. This is to be located at Eighteenth avenue east and Second street, and will cost about $6,000. The plans are by Anthony Puck.

Mr. Puck has also finished plans for a brick residence for J. J. Haleyn at Sixth avenue east and Third street, to cost about $5,000. The contract for this will probably be let early next week and work commenced at once.

Plans for a $4,000 frame residence for John Beerhalter are still in Mr. Puck's office, but practically complete. Mr. Beerhalter expects to build at Sixth avenue east and Third street.

At Hunter's Park Frank E. Church will build a $4,500 house this summer. F. L. Young has drawn the plans for the residence. It is expected that the contract for this residence will be closed up today.

George H. Schulenberg is also planning to build a house this summer. It will be a frame dwelling, but one of the most modern residences in the city, and will cost $6,500. It will be located at Fifteenth avenue east and London road.

W. A. Hunt is working on the plans for a $7,500 residence for Dr. A. H. Schildt, to be located on Second street between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth avenues east. These plans will be complete and the contract for the erection of the building let some time next week.

John Hilliard, contractor, started work this week on a residence for Thomas McNaught on First street between Tenth and Eleventh avenues east, to cost $8,500. W. A. Hunt is the architect.

·FIRST·FLOOR·PLAN· ·SECOND·FLOOR·PLAN·

This design is characteristic of the Swiss style of building. The materials—stone, stucco and timber work—are most effectively employed in its interior construction. For a hillside location this style of a home would be decidedly appropriate and attractive.

The plans are both compact and practical. The entrance is one of the attractive features of the front, and is placed at the ground level, opening into a vestibule five steps below the first floor level. It is very easy to realize what an attractive apartment this living room would be. The front group of casement windows, the wide fireplace and French windows opening onto the veranda are all pleasing features of this room. At the rear of the living room is the den or library, separated by sliding doors, so that it can be closed for privacy or thrown open to be used in connection with the living room. The deep veranda is one of the good features of the plan—to be screened in summer and inclosed with glass during the colder months. The dining room, on the left, has a fireplace and china cabinet built in, and is lighted by low casement windows. The dining room and kitchen are connected by a large, light pantry. The rear stairway to the second story and basement is accessible from the kitchen. The basement stairway and entrance is combined with the kitchen entry.

Four corner bedrooms, with large closets, are provided in the second story. The rooms are all entered directly from the large, light hall. The bathroom is of a good size and conveniently accessible.

With oak finish in the first story, pine finish in the second and hardwood floors througout, hot water heat and plumbing, such a home would cost $10,000 to build in Duluth. Anthony Puck, architect.

SWEEPING REDUCTIONS IN REALTY VALUATIONS

Board Will Take Twenty Per Cent From Assessor's Figures.

The Total Valuation of City Will Not Exceed $38,000,000.

The assessed valuation of real estate in the city of Duluth this year, as fixed by the board of review, will not exceed $29,000,000, it is understood, and the total assessed valuation of both real and personal property will not exceed $37,000,000 or $38,000,000 at the outside. The increase in real estato valuations over last year will amount to something less than $4,000,000, according to reliable information. This means that sweeping reductions will be made in real estate valuations as fixed by the city assessor's office.

The board of review is still in session, and will not complete its work until next week, probably about Tuesday or Wednesday. The reductions have not been made yet, but it is a certainty that there will be reductions, and the understanding is that they will be substantially as above. The decrease will be general all over the city, but will affect buildings more than anything else. The valuations of virtually every business block in the city will be decreased about 20 per cent, it is said. This will apply to all parts of the city. There will be no discrimination. While board members feel that there are structures here and there that are properly assessed, they are not in a position to pick them out now, and to be sure that reductions are made wherever they should be made, the decrease will apply all over the city, thus avoiding all possibility of discrimination, either intentional or otherwise. In doing this, the board feels that it is better to tax an occasional owner too low than to tax the majority of them too high.

"Six or eight people have come to me in the last day or two,' said Mayor Haven this morning, "saying they heard through an employe of the city assessors office that, for political reasons, I favor valuation reductions only in certain instances, and that I was going to insist on a 20 per cent reduction on buildings where the results would be beneficial to me by adding to my political strength, while with the other buildings I was going to let the present valuations stand, thus practicing gross discrimination.

"This report is utterly false, and without the slightest shadow of foundation. Politics is in no manner mixed with the action of the board. It is the man who is spreading the story who is trying to make political capital. I am endeavoring to see that everybody is treated with perfect justice and impartiality, and I can assure you positively that whatever reductions are made will be of a general nature, affecting all the property of the class where any decreases are made. The reductions will be the same percentage in every instance and will apply all over the city. There is no question that valuations are unreasonably high on the big majority of buildings and on some of the real estate. There will be no discrimination whatever. Everybody will be treated alike.

"Next year a real estate man with a knowledge of local property valuations will be employed to assist in making the assessments. The present system is inadequate, and under it a fair basis of valuation cannot be determined upon. A man with a practical working knowledge of real estate valuations can be expected to accomplish more satisfactory results."

According to figures given out by the city assessor's office yesterday, the total assessed valuation of real estate, as fixed by the employes of the department, is $37,861,57. The board, it is understood, will cut this total down to about $29,000,000, or less. Personal property valuations will stand as assessed, at about $9,000,000.

Last year's total valuation for real and personal property was $34,001,218, exclusive of real estate exemptions, amounting to $4,420,000. This year the exemptions will be about $1,000,000 more than that, on account of the Wisconsin Central railroad properties acquired within the city limits. These are reached, with the other railroad properties, under the gross earnings law, the city receiving no direct benefit. The figures given above for this year are exclusive of exemptions.

RED LIGHTS WILL STAY

Disorderly Resorts Will Not to be Moved From St. Croix Avenue.

West End Citizens Protest Against the Glen Location.

"The location of the red light district will remain unchanged as long as I am mayor of Duluth," said Mayor Roland D. Haven this morning. "The houses of ill fame are now situated in the best possible district. It would be folly to move them. I would have no objection to seeing them removed to a point nearer the lake shore, but I will not stand for having them taken from the general St. Croix avenue location."

This expression of opinion was brought out by the visit of a special committee appointed by the Scandinavian Temperance alliance, which called upon the city's chief executive this morning. The alliance held a meeting last night, and decided to enter a vigorous protest against removing the red light district to the Twelfth avenue west location. Bert Wheeler, Rev. C. G. Carlson and Rev. John Anderson were appointed as a committee to call upon the mayor and inform him of the alliance's stand.

The report that the disorderly houses were to be taken from their present location on St. Croix avenue and transported to "the glen," at Twelfth avenue west, gave rise to a storm of protest in the West end, particularly from residents in the immediate neighborhood of the glen. The meeting of the Scandinavian alliance was called last night for the special purpose of taking up the question.

Park Pointers and business interests are objecting strongly to allowing the houses to remain where they are now. They argue that the property where they are situated is too valuable for business purposes to be devoted to its present use, and that the resorts are in plain view of people going to and from the Point, and going to and from their work along Lake avenue. It is further contended that the district draws an undesirable class of men to Lake avenue, and results in the operation of objectionable saloons along Lake avenue.

AT JOYLAND.

The Program for Sunday Includes a Balloon Ascension.

Tomorrow, Sunday, Aug. 2, will see great doings at Joyland-White City, and big attractions will amuse the patrons of this popular resort both afternoon and evening. In the afternoon there will be a band concert from 2:30 to 4:30, which will include a program of popular music, bits of classic and a little ragtime. Immediately after the concert in the afternoon, Prof. Gage, world famous balloonist, will make a sensational flight to the sky, accompanied by Bedelia, Frank Bostock's trained monkey and parachute jumper. Bedelia is supposed to be the most intelligent monkey ever brought to this country. She has been trained to make this ascension and after reaching the height of 800 feet will cut away the parachute and race with Prof. Gage to the ground.

On the free platform Miss Lourette Reitz, who is fast coming to the front as a singer, and who will be tendered a testimonial Aug. 12 at the Congregational church, will be heard in a new Eastern hit, entitled "Love, Make My Dreams Come True." Miss Reitz will soon leave to complete her studies in Berlin and tomorrow at Joyland and Aug. 12 will be the last opportunity her friends will have to hear her. Otto Jeancon, famous baritone, will also be heard in some selections from "The Time, the Place and the Girl."

Prof. Gage is the man who accompanied Roy Knabenshue on his first flight in a real airship at the St. Louis World's fair. He says there will be no disappointments and unless the wind is blowing a perfect gale he will make the flight to the sky as advertised. The hour set for the double ascension of this man and money is about 4:30 p. m. and a big crowd is supposed to be on hand to see the ascension, which is interesting in itself. In the evening there will be another grand band concert with songs. During the week there will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday night dances in the pavilion and the Joyland grounds will be open to picnic parties. For Sunday, Aug. 9, Mr. Getz announces the engagement of the full Third Regiment band of fifty musicians in a week of popular concerts.

LOOKING FOR A STEAMSHIP

To Send Former Netherlands Minister Back to Holland.

Willemstad, Curacao, Aug. 1.—The news that President Castro had withdrawn the exequateurs of all the Dutch consuls and vice consuls in Venezuela until such time as the Netherlands' government apologizes for the alleged insults put upon Venezuela, was received in Curacao this morning by correspondence from the steamer Dagfred, which passed by the port, but did not stop.

The colonial government is in telegraphic communication with several steamship lines in an effort to get a vessel to come to Curacao and take M. de Reus, the former minister of the Netherlands to Venezuel, who was expelled by President Castro to some point where he can connect with a steamer for Holland. The difficulty is that practically every steamer leaving here touches at a Venezuelan port, and this the minister does not desire to do.

THIEVES ENTER WEST END STORE

They Get $8 Cash and New Outfits of Clothes.

Two unknown thieves made a good haul at the clothing store of S. W. Hill in the West end last night.

Gaining entrance through the rear door of the store, they broke open the cash drawer and got $8 in money. They then helped themselves to the stock of clothing, supplying themselves with complete new outfits, including clothing, shirts, shoes, hats and underwear.

The police have no clue to work on.

FLOOD SWEEPING DOWN THE SAN GABRIEL RIVER.

Azusa, Cal., Aug. 1.—Fifteen feet of water is sweeping down the big fork of the San Gabriel river, carrying trees and driftwood with it, as the result of a cloudburst in San Gabriel canyon. All stages have been tied up and communication with the camps is cut off. A rescue party has been formed and will start for the mouth of the canyon to offer assistance if it is needed.

SCHOOL BOARD'S ANNUAL MEETING

One New Member, W. E. Magner, Will Take His Seat.

The board of education will hold its annual meeting this evening, at the high school, when the officers to serve during the ensuing year will be elected and standing committees appointed. One new member, W. E. Magner, elected at the recent school elections, will take his seat, and J. J. Le Tourneau will retire as a member of the board.

The completed plans for the new Ensign school, which is to replace the old Horace Mann building on the site of the latter, at Twenty-tird avenue west and Tenth street, will probably be submitted to the board by the committee on the maintenance of buildings and grounds. It is probable that the contract for the erection of the school will be let.

Unless the board decides otherwise this evening the fall term of the public schools will probably begin Sept. 7.

SUES BLACKDUCK DOCTOR.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mary Johnson, as administratrix of the estate of her son, Oscar J. Johnson, who died March 9, last, from heart failure while convalescing from an attack of diphtheria, has brought suit against Dr. John C. Koch of Blackduck, who treated the cast, for the sum of $5,000 damages for her loss, on the grounds that he negligently attended the case.

The case was taken up yesterday afternoon in district court before Judge Stanton. E. E. McDonald appeared as counsel for the defendant and demurred against the complaint. Arugments on the demurrer were listened to by the judge and decision reserved.

SCORES OF WORKMEN ARE BRAVING DEATH TRYING TO REACH ENTOMBED MEN

Twenty Shut in Gangway of Colliery at Mahoney City.

Men Are in Great Peril From Deadly After-Damp.

Mahoney City, Pa., Aug. 3.—Twenty men were entombed today in the gangway at the Knickerbocker colliery by an explosion of gas. Two men, badly injured, have been taken from the mine, but seven others are believed to be in the gangway, which is closed and filled with deadly after-damp. Scores of workingmen are braving grave perils to reach the entombed men.

The mine is situated west of here and is operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company.

BRYAN'S SPEECH TO BE SHORT ONE

Acceptance of Nomination to be Made in Few Words.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 3.—Contrary to expectation, the speech of acceptance of William J. Bryan will be a short one. He stated today that, by actual count, it contains 5,300 words. While the issues of the campaign will be discussed, it is understood they will not be gone into at any great length, his views being reserved for more elaborate treatment in the several speeches he intends to make.

It is not anticipated that any important visitors would come out to Fairview today. Although a scorching sun beat down on Lincoln, rendering it difficult to find a comfortable spot anywhere, Mr. Bryan busied himself with a vast accumulation of mail. Almost every communication addressed to him from different parts of the country bring encouragement on the political outlook. Especially gratifying to Mr. Bryan are the advices from the Democratic newspapers, reporting steadily-growing contributions to the campaign fund.

MEMBERS OF BAR CALL ON TAFT

Virginia Lawyers Exchange Felicitations With Candidate.

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 3.—Members of the Virginia Bar association, to the number of about thirty, called on Candidate Taft, in his offices at the Homestead hotel, this morning, and introductions, handshaking and a general exchange of felicitations were indulged in for some time. The association tomorrow begins its twentieth annual meeting. Judge Taft will address the gathering Thursday, and has been asked to make a banquet speech Thursday night.

"Yes," was his reply, "it is true I was never in better health in my life. It is this air down here, and then my exercise. It really does not seem that there is much in a game of golf, but it requires just enough skill to divert the mind from the walking that is necessary, and in that way one gets real exercise without the fatigue."

No conferences were on the list today. The early hours were as usual devoted by Mr. Taft to the handling of his correspondence, and then followed the trip over the four-mile golf course.

FIERCE CLOUDBURST VISITS VERDI, NEV.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 3.—A telephone message from Verdi, Nev., says a destructive cloudburst visited that section yesterday in which one life was lost. Scores of livestock and cabins and a great quantity of logs were swept away.

A cloudburst in Spanish canyon near Steamboat Springs yesterday caught several persons in the rush of waters, but after battling desperately they finally saved themselves. McM. Ross and James Burke, were severely hurt. Much livestock and timber and a ranch were destroyed.

PYTHIANS AT BOSTON

Between 75,000 and 80,000 Delegates and Members Present.

Boston, Aug. 3.—The twenty-fifth convention of the supreme lodge, and the biennial encampment of the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias, with the annual convention of the Pythian Sisters, were formally opened in Boston today, with an attendance estimated at from 75,000 to 85,000 delegates and members. The Pythians will hold business sessions and parades and enjoy trips about the city for six days, closing next Sunday with a religious mass meeting, presided over by the grand prelate of Massachusetts, the Rev. Allan A. Stockdale, at the Union Congregational church.

The most interesting feature of the gathering proved to be the encampment of the Uniform Rank, which formally dedicated Camp Joseph H. Lyon, at Franklin Field, today, and here the chief features of the first day's program was held.

Early in the afternoon the convention delegates gathered in King Solomon temple to witness the exemplification of work by King Solomon temple of the Pythian Sisters of Boston.

Camp Dedicated.

Immediately after the work the camp at Franklin Field was dedicated. Representative D. Sidney Woodworth of Boston, president of the ways and means committee, formally turned the camp over to Charles A. Barnes of Jacksonville, Ill., the supreme chancellor, who accepted the camp, and in turn passed it over to Arthur J. Stob-

DROWNS TO SAVE HIS SON

Sacrificial Heroism Displayed by a New York Driver.

New York, Aug. 3.—To few men does fate offer an opportunity for such sacrificial heroism as she accorded James Farrell, an humble driver, last night, whose body now lies in the front room of his home, where on the wall hangs the blue ribbon awarded him by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, May 1 last, for being the most careful driver in New York.

Farrell, who was 45 years old, was swimming with his 17-year-old son, Arthur, off the pier at the foot of West Fifty-second street, when he was overcome with a weakness. His son swam to him and threw his arms around his father's neck to hold him up. The father, with the instinct of a drowning man, threw his arms around his son's neck. But, realizing that he would drag his son to the same death he was facing, the father, who had the reputation of having never used a whip on a horse in his twenty odd years as a driver, released his hold and sank.

ENTERING A NEW ERA

Political and Financial Conditions of Dominican Republic Improve.

The American Receiver Reports on the Situation There.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Important information concerning the political and financial conditions in the Dominican republic is contained in a letter, under date of June 25, which has been received by Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, from W. E. Pulliam, United States receiver of customs at Santo Domingo.

The belief is expressed in the letter that, with the inauguration of President Caceres, the Dominican republic will enter upon a new era, and that the last vestige of formidable revolutionary tendencies in the republic will have been discouraged effectually.

Political Conditions.

Discussing political conditions in the republic, Receiver Pulliam says:

"Gen. Ramon Caceres, who is just completing the unexpired term of the presidency to which he succeeded in January, 1906, after the sensational withdrawal and subsequent deportation of President Morales, has been

LITTLE GIRL TRAVELS FAR

Eight-Year-Old Comes Safely to Michigan From Syria.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 3.—Ida Baccash, a black-eyed, curly-haired child of 8 years, stepped off a steamer from Chicago yesterday, having journeyed alone for 10,000 miles from Damascus, Syria. The child's trip was the more notable owing to her having been stranded without friends in Marseilles, France, a Syrian who had offered his protection to the little girl having robbed and deserted her at Marseilles. Appealing to the proprietor of the hotel, the child succeeded in having word of her predicament sent to her father, who was then in New York, and additional funds were promptly sent her. Relatives met her in New York and placed her on board the westbound train, and her father was awaiting her arrival here on yesterday's steamer from Chicago.

SCORCHING HOT WEATHER IN THE GRAIN BELT SENDS WHEAT AND CORN SKYWARD

Extreme Bullishness Marks Trading at Chicago and Board of Trade Was Wildly Excited.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Scorching hot weather throughout the corn belt and the Dakotas and Minnesota threw the board of trade into wild excitement today and sent the price of wheat and corn soaring skyward. The former grain advanced nearly 3 cents a bushel and the latter showed almost an equally sharp bulge in prices. Bullish sentiment in wheat, which has been developed recently, as the result of "black rust" reports from the Northwest, broke out with intense vigor today, on the receipt of a dispatch from Minneapolis, which claimed that the "black rust' is worse than in 1904, and that the crop is simply burning up with the heat.

The advance in corn was helped along by a dispatch, which stated that the corn crop in Central Illinois has begun to "fire," owing to the excessively high temperature.

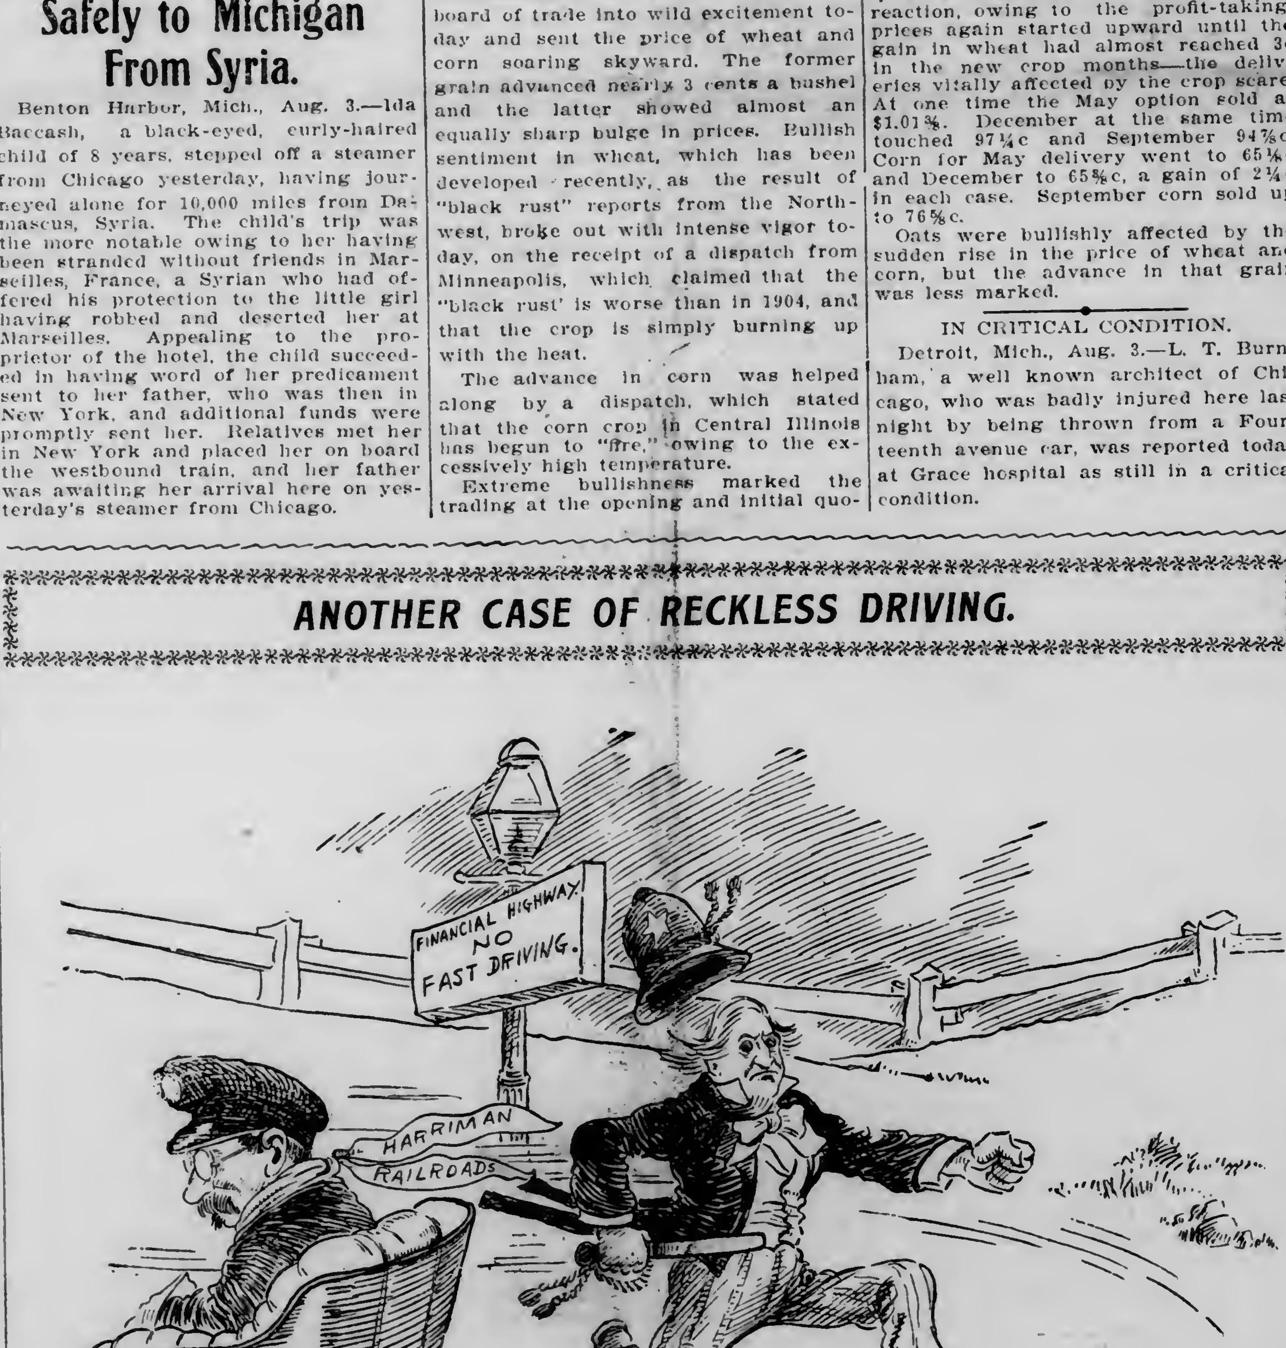
Extreme bullishness marked the trading at the opening and initial quotations on wheat and corn showed wide fluctuations, prices ranging from a trifle below Saturday's close to nearly 2c a bushel above. After a little reaction, owing to the profit-taking, prices again started upward until the gain in wheat had almost reached 3c in the new crop months—the deliveries vitally affected by the crop scare. At one time the May option sold at $1.01⅝. December at the same time touched 97¼c and September 94⅞c. Corn for May delivery went to 65⅛c and December to 65⅝c, a gain of 2¼c in each case. September corn sold up to 76⅝c.

Oats were bullishly affected by the sudden rise in the price of wheat and corn, but the advance in that grain was less marked.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 3.—L. T. Burnham, a well known architect of Chicago, who was badly injured here last night by being thrown from a Fourteenth avenue car, was reported today at Grace hospital as still in a critical condition.

ANOTHER CASE OF RECKLESS DRIVING.



CITY OF FERNIE WIPED OUT IN TWINKLING OF AN EYE

Estimated That From 150 to 200 People Have Lost Their Lives in Fire.

Everything in the Track of the Terrible Flames Has Been Swept Clear.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3.—The most dreadful conflagration in the history of Canada has swept the Elk river valley in East Kootenai. For forty miles a tremendous bush fire has burned everything before it. It has held full and terrible sway since 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Estimates are that perhaps 150 people have met death in the flamse.

The following places have been destroyed: Fernie, with a population of 3,500; Coal Creek, with a population of 1,500; Michel, with fifty inhabitants; Hosmer, with fifty inhabitants. Others at Crow's Nest Pass towns. Fernie is gone, but the dispatch says that Hosmer and Michel are still fighting.

The Homeless will number over 6,000.

The fatalities are growing hourly. In one case five families at Fernie were hemmed in and every soul perished. At least seventy lives were lost in Fernie.

The Crow's Nest Pass Coal company has $1,000,000 in property at Coal Creek, which is reported destroyed.

The disaster is unequalled in the history of Western Canada. In that entire section of the country the railways and bridges are swept away.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3.—The latest estimates of the dead in the Elk river district by bush fires, which have been raging for months from Michel to Fernie is 170 persons. The property loss is $5,000,000 in Fernie and 6,000 persons of that city's inhabitants are homeless. The residents have been taken in train loads to places of safety and are now destitute. Thousands of dollars have been sent by Western Canadian cities this morning to the relief of the destitute. Medical supplies are greatly needed. Fernie with its lumber mills and railway terminals is wiped out. The fire is still raging around Hosmer and Sparwood, but Michel is safe, the wind dying out at midnight. If a gale springs up, that city will again be in danger soon. Seventy men in the camps of the Elk River Lumber company perished.

DEATH LIST LARGE.

Number of Fatalities From the Flames May Reach 200.

Nelson, B. C., Aug. 3.—The number of dead around Fernie alone is from 70 and 100, and many consider this a most conservative estimate. The death list may be double this number. Michel, which has withstood the flames for the past twenty-four hours, is now burning to the ground, with nothing to prevent the ravages of the fire. To this death list of seventy must be added those who have lost their lives in other portions of the country burned over by the fire, for a strip forty miles long and some twenty miles in width has been devastated, and in that strip every bridge, telegraph pole and building has been destroyed, in addition to the valuable timber. In all, Fernie and five smaller towns have been totally destroyed, and the loss to property alone will amount to some five millions of dollars at a conservative estimate. Never before has Western Canada suffered such a holocaust, full details of which will not be in for some days. It was not until late last evening that the Canadian Pacific railroad was able to rig up a temporary station and telegraph office in the vicinity of Fernie, and even now there is great danger of the telegraph line being burned, for the fires are still raging in all directions.

The population of the stricken towns, according to latest figures, is as follows:

Elko, 300; Fernie, 6,000; Michel, 1,800; Hosmer, 1,000; Coal Creek, 1,500; Morrissey, 100.

The Crows Nest Pass country in this vicinity is the richest in the Dominion, being covered with heavy timber and underlined with coal and other minerals. Already the damage to the standing timber by the fire, which has been raging for the past week, is very heavy, and a number of small camps have been burned up, and it is feared a number of people have lost their lives in the woods, but everything possible is being done by the rescuers, who are working against enormous odds.

SEETHING MASS OF FLAMES.

One Hundred Square Miles of Territory Swept by Fire.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3.—As a result of bush fires, the town of Fernie, B. C., is wiped off the map as a child cleans a slate; Michel, fourteen miles distant, is in flames, and the fate of Hosmer, Olsen and Sparwood, intervening towns, is in doubt, they being cut off from all communication. It is believed they are destroyed.

Over 100 lives are known to have been lost, 74 of them in Fernie alone.

A territory of 100 square miles in extent is a seething mass of flames. Through is are scattered hundreds of lumbermen and prospectors, so that the actual loss of life will not be known for days.

The properties of the Canadian Pacific and Great Northern railways are destroyed, their bridges and rolling stock burned, so that it is impossible to either enter or leave the burning area.

The inhabitants of towns have fled to open districts in the vicinity, in the hope of safety. The railway companies have placed all available trains at their disposal ,and unless there is a change of wind within the next twenty-four hours, the whole of the Crows Nest Pass country will be left to the flames.

There is no possibility of estimating the loss of life and property which will result, for the flames are driven by a half gale, making it impossible to put up a fight against their advance.

For the last month, forest fires have been raging in the mountains of the Elk River valley country, but they have not been considered seriously. Saturday morning a heavy wind sprang up from the west, and early in the afternoon the flames appeared over the crest of the mountains to the west of Fernie. They ran down the mountain side, and before a fire guard could be organized, had entered the town. Within an hour the town was doomed and the inhabitants sought safety in flight, leaving their all behind. All night and this morning the exodus continued, the destination being a small prairie in the valley, three miles south of the town.

At present, 3,000 people are camped there in the open, their only protection being shelters built of brush and blankets, while a constant shower of sparks from the burning area keeps falling through the pall of smoke by which they are surrounded. For a time, communication with towns to the east was kept open, but with the burning of the bridges across Elk river, this was closed.

The hills in all directions are a seething mass of flames, cutting off every avenue of escape. The fire spread with unprecedented rapidity, and it is feared that several parties who tried to get through the pass have been cut off. Families have been separated, and there is at present no means of checking the fatalities.

The offices of the Canadian Pacific and Great Northern railroads are gone, together with all of the rolling stock in the yards. One hundred cars of coke, the property of the Great Northern, are gone, and the stock piles of coal and coke, holding about 500,000 tons, are in flames.

DAMAGE $5,000,000.

Canadian Pacific and Trites Lumber Company Heaviest Losers.

Cranbrook, B. C., Aug. 3.—An eyewitness of the fire at Fernie, in an interview, says:

"The damage cannot fall short of $5,000,000, the greater loss falling on the Canadian Pacific railway and the Trites Wood & Lumber company. Fully 25,000,000 feet of manufactured lumber is gone. There remains of what once was Fernie, ten or eleven cottages and five or six residences, all situated near the park. There is not a store, bank, hotel or business concern of any sort left standing, except the offices of the coal company, the Great Northern depot and water tank and the big concrete warehouse of the Trite Wood company. Fernie is wiped off the map and is not, as it remains, of sufficient importance to justify the maintenance of a flag station. Some 3,000 people, mostly women and little children, have to be housed and cared for until they shall have time to look about them. These are being shipped to Cranbrook, where every public and nearly all the private houses are being used as temporary shelters for the homeless, and in many cases naked, refugees."

The relief committee organized by Mayor Frink has sent away two trains filled with provisions, blankets, stoves, flour and requirements.

F. B. LYNCH, MANAGER

Of Elk River Lumber Company, at Whose Plant Many Died.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—E. W. Stees of Caron, B. C., who has extensive interests there and at Fernie, is in this city today and declares that he had received information from Winnipeg to the effect that ninety lumbermen, employed by the Elk River Lumber company of Fernie, had lost their lives. This company is managed by F. B. Lynch of St. Paul, who looked after the interests of Governor John A. Johnson at the recent Democratic convention at Denver.

Mr. Stees said that Peter J. Seippel of Dubuque, Iowa, and H. D. Campbell of Stillwater, Minn., both of whom are actively interested in the lumber trade, were at Fernie with their families for the summer, and he believes, fro the Republican Candidate for Governor Will Speak in Duluth.

JACOBSON IS COMING

Frank B. Kellogg and Senator Clapp Also on Program.

This morning word reached West Duluth Republicans from J. L. Jacobson, candidate for governor of Minnesota, that he will be present to respond to a toast at the West Duluth Republican club's banquet, which is to be held in Wade's hall on Thursday evening.

All the members of the club are greatly elated over Jacobson's acceptance. It will be the first time he has visited Duluth since the Republican convention held here two years ago. The banquet committee had completed its list of speakers, receiving acceptances from them all except the gentleman from Madison, Minn. It was feared that he would not be able to be present on account of conflicting dates. Plans will be made immediately by local Republicans to entertain Mr. Jacobson while he is in the city.

At the meeting of the West Duluth Republican club Saturday evening, George J. Mallory was chosen to act as toastmaster at the banquet. Elaborate plans are being perfected to make the political dinner this year eclipse all those given by the club in the past. The committee on program and speakers has secured a number of Minnesota's prominent men to respond to the toasts of the evening. The following have accepted the club's invitation: Frank B. Kellogg, who is mentioned as United States attorney general should Taft receive the election; Senator Moses E. Clapp, Representative J. Adam Bede, and Clarence B. Miller, candidate for congress.

Site for Hospital.

At the next meeting of the committee, which is investigating all the possible sites for a detention hospital, there will be a report made on the vacant building on the corner of Fifty-third avenue west and Ramsey street.

The building is a large one and fairly well suited to the uses of a hospital, having been used as one about fifteen years ago by Dr. Huntoon. Later it was turned into a hotel, but since the strike on the ore docks, when a number of strike breakers were lodged there it was boycotted by the workingmen, whose trade was its support, and was forced to close up.

There seems to be a great difference of opinion regarding having such a hospital in West Duluth. Several who live in the vicinity of the proposed site say that they have no objections to its being placed there, while still others are quite loud in their protests. One West Duluth man, who lives within a stone's throw of the building that is suggested, said this morning that he could see no reason why people should object, as the building has four walls to keep what contagious diseases are brought there from getting any farther. Another man, whose home is several blocks away, could not countenance the idea of having a contagious hospital in West Duluth anywhere or under any circumstances.

Oak Halls Win.

The Oak Hall baseball team yesterday pulled off another victory by defeating the Cloquet team, on their own grounds, by a score of 16 to 8. Ed Talbert's sacrifice hits were the feature of a hard-hitting game. The battery for the Oak Hall nine was Fredell and Nelson, and for the Cloquet aggregation, Hubert, Bornville and Nickles, pitchers, and Boyer, catcher.

The West Duluth team, accompanied by a good-sized crowd of supporters, left for Cloquet in the morning and returned in the evening. They were well entertained by their Cloquet rivals. While waiting for the game in the afternoon, John Dormedy strolled down to the river, where he tried to jump into a boat from some logs. His jump fell short and he went into the river. His was the only disaster of a very pleasant day, according to Manager Jack Gram of the Oak Halls.

Cornice Falls.

Owing to a recently hun, heavy sign, or perhaps to an unusual outburst from the Dynamite club, whose headquarters are in the same building, the brick cornice above J. A. Scott's office fell to the sidewalk with a heavy crash this morning.

It happened at about 9 o'clock, and fortunately no one was passing in front of the building at the time, or they would likely have met with an untimely burial beneath a mass of brick and mortar. No wind to speak of was blowing to have caused the fall, so it is thought that the heavy sign that had been hung to the cornice a short time ago was too much for the brickwork. It took nearly all the morning to clear up the debris from the sidewalk.

West Duluth Briefs.

Mrs. D. L. Cohen, after visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Abramson of 606 North Fifty-seventh avenue west, has returned to her home in St. Paul.

Mrs. George Crum of Jacksonville, Ill., and her grandson, Byron Hetrick of Chicago, who have been the guests of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Greeley, have returned to their homes.

Mrs. H. Canter is in St. Paul for a short visit.

Tracy Bronson returned this morning from Saunders, Wis., where he spent a week with his family. He leaves tomorrow for Foxhome, Wis., for a week's fishing.

Carl Weaver has returned from a two weeks' visit in Winnipeg.

The Climax club gave a picnic at Fairmount park yesterday.

The West Duluth Juniors were yesterday defeated by a score of 8 to 2 by the New Duluth team at New Duluth.

Mrs. William Dase and son of Grand Marais, Mich., who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Viou, returned last evening to their home.

The funeral of Alex Holma, the 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Holma, 11 South Sixtieth avenue west, was held this morning from the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church, Sixty-fifth avenue west and Gosnold street. Rev. Thomas Grice of the Asbury M. E. church, in the absence of the church's regular pastor, pefrormed the ceremony. The interment was at the Finnish cemetery at Pine Hill. Alex Holma was killed in St. Paul by a switch engine last Thursday.

Mike Cirillo, 74 years old, a picturesque character, and well knownin Duluth, died yesterday on the Pike Lake road, where he has been staying in a humble home owned by Rocco Masi. He had been a resident of Duluth for eighteen years.

Cirillo has been on "his uppers" for several years, but despite this fact he has been very popular with his friends and former associates, who refused to let him go to the poor farm when he suggested such a thing. They have been giving him money, groceries and clothes for some time past, and it is said that none of them ever denied one of his modest requests.

Rather that see him buried in tthe potters' field, these same friends have taken up a collection that is sufficiently large to give the body proper burial in Calvary cemetery.

FIRE IN CHICAGO.

SHOWN TO BE GOOD THING

Success of Public Playground Movement Has Been Proven.

Mayor Haven Says More Grounds Will be Established.

"That the public playground movement in Duluth is a success, and always will be a success, has been fully demonstrated by the playground established in Lincoln park," said Mayor Haven, a strong backer of the movement, this morning. "We are now satisfied that the playgrounds will do all that has been claimed for them, and others will be started in different parts of the city from time to time. They have come to stay."

The next amusement place of the kind will in all probability be established in West Duluth. The one in Lincoln park is being well patronized. The attendants are able to maintain excellent order, and at the same time allow the children enough freedom to have a thoroughly good time. A fence will be erected to mark the boundaries of the playground, and thus assist in keeping off young hoodlums, who occasionally appear on the scene and attempt to spoil the fun of the younger children.

TRUELSEN IS RICH MAN

Former Duluth Mayor is Rated as a Millionaire.

Controls Lignite Industry in the Northern Pacific Territory.

Good evidence has reached Duluth that Former Mayor Henry Truelsen is a millionaire.

It is not claimed that "Oom Heinrich" has a million in actual cash, but it is creditably shown that he is worth a million in actual and tangible assets. These assets are not in the form of iron mines on the Mesaba, nor a huge chest filled with dizzy copper stocks. They embrace real estate and lignite coal beds.

Duluth's knight of good, pure and wholesome water—and plenty of it—now makes his home at Zenith, N. D. In fact, he is one of two men who own the townsite of Zenith, with valuable and extensive lignite coal beds adjacent thereto.

Mr. Truelsen went to North Dakota after the voters of Duluth relieved him of the onerous duties of the mayoralty. With Hansen E. Smith of this city, he acquired some valuable holdings of lignite coal lands. Incidentally, they laid out the townsite of Zenith and permitted the public to buy lots in the possible metropolis.

The lignite coal industry was in its infancy. Mr. Truelsen summoned all of that wonderful energy of his, backed it with his past experience and honorable methods, to make a winning. He has succeeded beyond all expectations.

Mr. Truelsen and associates today practically control the lignite coal industry in the Northern Pacific territory. Their chief competitors have about exhausted their coal beds, while Mr. Truelsen not only has extensive holdings, but is steadily acquiring more. It is stated that he now has not less than 3,000,000 tons of coal available. Last year he mined and marketed 12,000 tons. This year he will put out 25,000 tons. If the market widens, he easily can supply 50,000 tons annually. This coal is mined and marketed at a net profit of 70 cents a ton. A half interest in 3,000,000 tons, with a net value of 70 cents a ton, certainly puts a man reasonably within the millionaire lines. An annual output of 25,000 tons, at a net return of 70 cents a ton, certainly is not to be laughed at. Of that, Mr. Truelsen not only gets half, but a salary besides.

Dame Fortune has been extremely kind to the Truelsen family in the Flickertail state. As stated, "Oom Heinrich" has drawn a salary and secured lignite coal holdings. His daughter has conducted the company boarding house at a profitable figure, Henry Truelsen, Jr., who was private secretary to his father when mayor of Duluth, has secured valuable ranch holdings and developed into a marked success as a rancher.

Today Former Mayor Truelsen, son and daughter own a ranch of 800 acres, Some of this was homesteaded and some purchased. Mr. Truelsen lost his homestead, however, by technically not satisfying Uncle Sam as to residence and improvements, otherwise the family would control a thousand acres. They have several hundred acres under cultivation. A handsome farmhouse stands on the land, a monument to the skill and industry of Henry Truelsen, Jr., for he laid every brick and stone, sawed every board and drove every nail with his own hands. The Truelsens have a steam plow which turns over thirty-four acres of sod every day it runs, and good revenues are made with that by plowing under contract.

Recently some capitalists made Mr. Truelsen and associates an offer for the entire townsite of Zenith and that offer is now under consideration.

While opening up the lignite coal beds and estat"shing a market, Mr. Truelsen has eschewed politics. Some time ago the Democrats of Stark county, N. D., offered him the nomination for state senator on a platter, as it were, but he declined it. Then, before he knew it, he actually was nominated for the legislature. He wished to decline, but his associates told him that since he had been actually nominated, they wished him to accept and then go in to win the election. He lives in a district normally Republican, but the prospects are very good for his election to the state legislature as a Democrat.

"DEAD" MAN IS UNDER ARREST

Charles Brown Supposed to Have Been Killed, Turns Up.

Charles Brown of 408 East Eighth street, believed by his friends and relatives to be dead, was arrested yesterday by Detectives Terry and Walsh on one of the big lake boats. The charge lodged against him was larceny.

Announcement of the young man's supposed death was received by his folks and creditors about a month ago, in the shape of a letter from a man claiming to be a friend of Brown's. He said Brown had been killed in a saloon brawl.

When Brown left town, it is claimed he took with him $29 belonging to M. M. Gasser. While delivering groceries on board the boat yesterday, one of Gasser's men saw and recognized Brown. Mr. Gasser was notified, and he had the police visit the vessel. They made the arrest without difficulty. Brown was asleep in his bunk when the detectives arrived on the scene.

Charles' brother, August, visited him in jail, upon being notified of what had occurred. He was delighted at finding Charles alive, even if under such unfavorable circumstances. In addition to the theft of cash, Brown is accused of having taken some clothing from one of the dressing rooms of the Metropolitan theater last September. The police say he has confessed to both crimes.

He was bound over to the grand jury this morning.

NO ONE SAW BODY.

St. Peter, Minn., Aug. 3.—Since last Monday pedestrians on Third street in this city have been passing within a few feet of the body of Christ Jake, an eirly resident of St. Peter, who hanged himself in a narrow passageway between the two buildings and whose body was not discovered until Friday.

DROPS IN BAY.

Balloon, Man and Monkey Are Rescued by Launches.

The balloon stunt at Joyland was pulled off for the first time yesterday according to schedule. The big balloon went sailing into the air carrying "Prof." Gage and his trained monkey, Bedella, and dropped them into the bay. The dip in the bay was also per schedule, and launches were waiting to rescue balloon, man and monkey.

The incident was witnessed by many people in the city and many feared that it was a serious accident and some one might be drowned. The police were notified by several anxious watchers, but a telephone call to the manager's office at Joyland reassured them.

The second regular meeting of the alliance was held yesterday and the details of organization made permanent.

A committee was appointed yesterday to sound th different county and legislative aspirants as to their feelings on the prohibition question. Regular meetings of the organization will be held every two weeks. The local branch will work in connection with the state organization, which expects to exert a powerful influence over state politics this fall.

CODDING IS PRESIDENT

Again Named to Head the Board of Education.

E. R. Cobb Will be the Treasurer—New Member Takes Seat.

Dr. Charles L. Codding was re-elected president of the board of education at the annual meeting held Saturday evening at the Central high school.

Edwin R. Cobb was elected treasurer of the board, taking the place made vacant by the retirement from the board of J. J. LeTourneau, whose term expired. W. E. Magner, who was elected a member at the recent school elections, took his seat.

L. D. Campbell, F. A. Brewer and W. E. Magner were appointed by the president to the committee on the maintenance of buildings and grounds and J. L. Washburn, J. J. Moe and C. L. Codding was named as members of the committee on schools and teachers. During the next twelve months the finance committee will be composed of D. E. Stevens, L. A. Barnes and E. R. Cobb.

Charles A. Bronson was re-elected clerk of the board and Louis A. Larsen was reappointed chief engineer of the public school system. Miss Edith Pierce, stenographer, and H. J. Joyce, assistant clerk, were reappointed.

The treasurer's annual report showed $23,80.14 cash on hand at the present time. During the year the receipts were $524,006.14 and the disbursements $500,025.17.

The board decided to begin the fall term of school Sept. 7. At the recent election, the voters of the district having shown a preference for a short school year, the school year of 1908-09 will be of nine months duration, the same as last year. There will be the usual holidays.

The committee on the maintainance of buildings and grounds reported that the plans for the new Ensign school, which is to replace the old Horace Mann building at Twenty-third avenue west Tenth street, would be ready in a very short time and that work will he rushed as rapidly as conditions permitted.

The salary of Miss Carey, supervisor of drawing, was raised $200 a year.

Resignations of the following teachers were accepted: W. A. Fergusson, Ethel E. Smith, Lawrence Elmendorf, Sue Chaffin, Jennie Richardson, Harriet Wilbur, Addie E. Maltby and Emma C. Anderson.

The votes in the first precinct of the First ward at the school elections were recounted and an error rectified. The mistake made no difference in the results, however.

SALOON MAN IS ARRESTED

Officer's Shoes Squeak and Lid Tilters Nearly Escape.

Sergeant Toewe and Patrolman Roberg, early Sunday morning, arrested Gust Swanson, proprietor of a saloon on Lower Lake avenue, for keeping his place of business open after the regular closing hours. Three men in the saloon at the time of the arrest were subpoenaed as witnesses.

The two officers suspected something was wrong, and through a crack at one side of the curtain were able to see into the saloon. Three men, they claim, were at the bar drinking. The squeaking of Roberg's shoes is said to have frightened the proprietor of the place, and he and the three men executed a disappearing act towards the rear of the building, but were caught by the officers before they could make their escape. Swanson was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

According to the officials of the labor organization, Henry White, general secretary, today will address a letter to the six or seven hundred contracting tailors in New York city, requesting a conference with a committee of union men on next Saturday afternoon, to discuss the question of an increased wage scale and shorter hours for the coatmakers.

At present the men are working from ten to eleven hours, and are receiving from $14 to $16 a week, while the helpers are paid from $5 to $7 a week.

Sidney Luce, who was third mayor of Duluth, is still alive and in good health. He is now living at Kingsville, Ohio. Dr. S. C. McCormick visited him three weeks ago, while in Ohio. The former mayor is now 89 years of age.

Mr. Luce formerly was a large property owner in Duluth, but at the present time has no real estate here. He came to Duluth in 1856. He was the third man to be honored with the title of mayor of Duluth. He left Duluth for his old home about twenty-five years ago.

OFFICER IS ARRESTED

Patrolman George Drannen Suspected of Robbing a "Drunk."

Will be Given Hearing on Grand Larceny Charge.

Police Officer George Drannen, driver of the patrol wagon, was summarily relieved of duty from the police force yesterday morning by Chief Troyer, pending an investigation of the charge that he had robbed a drunken man of $30. The money is said to have been found on Drannen, although he claims it was his own.

Herman Benson, the man who claims to have been robbed, was arrested by Patrolman Dickman on the Bowery at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning for drunkenness. When taken into custody, the man had $30 in paper money in his hand, and the patrolman is said to have called the attention of Conductor Nels Nelson of the patrol wagon to this fact. Nelson says he saw the money afterwards, while the prisoner was in the wagon.

After the patrol had been backed into the station, the officers say Drannen took Benson by the arm and led him upstairs from the barn, while Nelson took another prisoner. Nelson searched the prisoner and found only $3 in silver and a few cents on Benson.

"Where is the rest of your money?" asked Nelson.

"You got it," replied the prisoner.

Nelson at once called Chief Troyer and demanded that the chief search him. The prisoner, Nelson and Drannen were all searched, but no trace of the bills was found.

Shortly afterwards the officers went down to the barn, thinking the bills might have been dropped on the way, and Chief Troyer decided to search Drannen again. This time the bills were found on him. He denied emphatically having taken the bills, declaring that they belonged to himself. He was immediately suspended, pending a trial before the civil service commission. The bills are said to be of the same denomination as described by Benson after he had sobered up sufficiently to talk clearly.

Drannen has been on the police force for eighteen years. He is married and lives with his family at 1022 East Fourth street.

A grand larceny charge has been placed against him and he will have a hearing Aug. 6.

DULUTH WOMAN'S MOTHER IS DEAD

Parent of Nun in Local Convent Dies Near Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Remi Fortier of Gentilly died Saturday night, after an illness of two months.

Mrs. Fortier was 62, and came to Gentilly from Canada thirty-one years ago, since which time the Fortier family has been one of the most prominent in the French colony of this section. She leaves a husband and eleven children, two other children having died in infancy. All of the sons are married and reside in this vicinity excepting Joseph, who is in Washington. The daughters are all home, excepting Anna, who is a nun in the Sacred Heart convent in Duluth; Mrs. Joseph Amiot of Fairfax, and Mrs. Joseph Le Fave of Forrebonne.

Mr. Fortier is completely prostrated by the shock. He has been very prominent in politics in this section for years, having served as county commissioner, and this year has spent practically all his time as a state ditch viewer in St. Louis and other northern counties. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from St. Anne's Catholic church, of which deceased was a devout member, Father Tapin officiating, and interment will be at Gentilly, where one of her children is at rest, the other one having been buried in Canada.

NEW STYLE OF FOOTBALL.

It Will be Played on Horseback at Wild West Show.

The Wild West, under the direction of Col. William F. Cody, the original and only Buffalo Bill, is introducing a new horseback game this season, for the first time presented in any arena. It is football on horseback, and, while it has been tried successfully as a sport among the country clubs of England, this is the first time it has been seen in any part of America. While it may never take the place of pony polo as an open air sport, it nevertheless has proven an interesting game on the other side of the pond.

The "gridiron" is the vast area of the Wild West, and it is laid out after the fashion of regular football grounds. The horses have their knees padded, and, under the direction of skillful riders, they propel a monster ball from goal to goal. There is nothing tame about the sport, and it is said that the horses enter into the spirit of the fun with as much gusto as do their riders. Certain it is that wherever the Wild West has appeared this season, the public has found the football-on-horseback feature one of the most pleasing exhibits of the show.

There are other interesting feats of horsemanship in the Wild West program, for the horse is the chief factor in the entertainment. Bucking horses and Indian ponies, ridden by cowboys and real red men, will vie with the Arabian steed and army horses in displays of equine abilities. Cossacks, Indians, cowboys, cavalrymen and other expert equestrians will display a variety of riding "styles" as varied as are the customs of the races and nations which they represent. And riding at the head of his delegation of experts, Col. William F. Cody, the most graceful rider of them all, will appear at every performance, directing every detail of the entertainment.

Buffalo Bill will also appear in the big Indian battles and Western scenes, which form such an important factor in the Wild West entertainment. The battle of Summit Springs, the great train hold-up, a holiday at "T-E" ranch, the Emigrant train and other open-air melodramas will introduce over a hundred Indians and scores of riders, soldiers and representatives of the equestrian nations of the world. There is life and action in every moment of the Wild West entertainment, and nowhere else can such a performance be witnessed, for there is no other exhibition of American history and horsemanship extant.

Everything is real and typical of the West, even to the trained Western range horses, which Ray Thompson presents. They are the first horses of their breeding to be subdued to a point where they can be exhibited, and the Thompson horses perform all the feats of the circus horse with as much grace and ease as a thoroughbred.

MORE CHARGES OF GRAFT MADE

Town Clerk of Buyck Accused of Getting $13,000.

The town of Buyck believes that popular government is a failure and that all politics is corrupt. The experience of the newly incorporated range town rather warrant this belief. Some time ago the citizens began an action against Hippolelt Buyck, alias Charles Buyck, their town treasurer, and the man after whom the town was named to recover money which it was claimed he had wrongfully and fraudulently appropriated. This case is still pending.

Today papers were filed against W. A. James, town clerk, who is also charged with certain dealings to willfully defraud the town, and for which they wish to recover a total of $13,500. The National Surety company, which went on James' bond for $500, is made a party in this action.

It is alleged in the amended complaint filed today that James employed himself a a timekeeper on a road job that never was undertaken and collected from the city the sum of $743.75 for his imaginary services in this direction. He did not, the complaint says, submit his bills to the regular auditing committee, but, in his official capacity as town clerk, marked them approved, and entered them. He worked with Buyck, the treasurer, it is claimed.

James also made false and fictitious records of certain meetings of the supervisors in the town, the complaint states, some of which never took place. At these fake meetings, it is claimed, bills were introduced audited and approved, and money paid on them. For these bills the town never received any value whatever, and the total damage is estimated at $13,500.

TWO BOATS DAMAGED

A. B. Wolvin and Scranton Need Temporary Repairs Here.

Scranton and Standard Oil Barge Collide in Portage River.

Two boats which came to grief in the treacherous channels of the Portage lake waterway have arrived in the local harbor and will undergo repairs here before proceeding on their way.

The small A. B. Wolvin of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet arrived in port yesterday and went immediately to the Superior drydock for temporary repairs. The Wolvin went aground at Portage entry with a cargo of coal last week, and was damaged to some extent. She unloaded her coal cargo at Hancock and came to Duluth under her own steam. The damages are slight and she will be able to sail in a few days.

The package freighter Scranton, under charter to the Erie & Western Transportation company, collided with the Standard Oil barge 86 in Portage river Friday night. She arrived in port this morning with two holes in her port bow, where the barge had crashed into her. The holes are above the water line and did not inconvenience the boat any in making the trip.

The oil barge was in tow of the tug Rogers, bound for Marquette with a part cargo of oil, and the Scranton was upbound with merchandise.

One of the boats sheered in the channel as they were passing, and they crashed together with considerable force. Both are steel boats and several plates were broken on each.

Capt. Christie, the local Anchor line agent, had received no instructions this morning as to what would be done with the Scranton. It is probable that temporary repairs will be made here and the boat will be sent out again. The repairs will take but a few days.

N. P. BRIDGE IS OPENED

Trains Are Running Over the New Spans of Structure.

Bridge Entirely Rebuilt and Made Much More Substantial.

Completely rebuilt, with wider channels for the passage of vessels and more substantial spans for the support of trains, the Northern Pacific railroad bridge across St. Louis bay at Rice's point was opened to traffic yesterday. A freight train and the Gopher State Express were the first trains to pass over the bridge.

The bridge has been closed to trains since May 10, when the extensive work just completed was taken up. The old draw spans were torn out and replaced by wider spans, which almost doubled the width of the channels on both the Wisconsin and Minnesota sides. Some necessary changes in the adjustment of the draws after they were swung some weeks ago, has delayed the opening of the bridge longer than was expecteld.

While the bridge has been out of commission, the trains have all been forced to use the Grassy Point bridge, a circuitous route between Duluth and Superior. The opening of the bridge is hailed with joy by railroad men. The Northern Pacific company has spent almost $500,000 on the bridge and it is believed the vexatious petty accidents, which necessitated the closing of the bridge several times last winter, will be averted in the future.

The United States engineer's office called the attention of mariners today to the rules regarding the opening of bridges, which must be strictly observed. One long blast and two short blasts are the signal for the Minnesota draw of the N. P. bridge and two long and two short blasts for the Wisconsin draw. The duration of the long whistle shall not exceed three seconds and a short whistle should not exceed one second. The signal should be given when the vessel is about a half mile away, depending more or less on the vessel's speed. The signal will be answered by an identical signal from the bridge tender, who, in case he is not able to open the bridge at that time, shall give five short blasts of the whistle as a warning to the vessel to check speed or stop.

It was expected the Interstate bridge would also open today, but it was stated at the Great Northern superintendent's office today that the opening will probably not come until Wednesday morning. There are a few minor adjustments yet to be made and it is thought two days more will be necessary for the work.

LIEUT. COL. FITCH.

Chief of Engineers of This District is Given Promotion in Rank.

It is Lieut. Col. Graham D. Fitch, U. S. A., now instead of Maj. Fitch. The chief of the local corps of engineers has been notified of his promotion in rank through the retirement of Col. W. Symons, consulting engineer of the Erie Canal district. Col. Symons was retired by the age limit, July 25, and in the line of promotion, Maj. Fitch became lieutenant colonel.

In the same line of promotion Lieut. Col. W. L. Fisk, division engineer of this district with headquarters at Buffalo, became Col. Fisk.

Col. Fisk arrived in Duluth today and will leave this evening in company with Lieut. Col. Fitch for a tour of inspection of the district in the government yacht Vidette. All the harbors in the district will be visited, the works inspected and proposed improvements investigated. Col. Fisk was in charge of this district in 1892, with headquarters here, and is well known in marine circles here.

Seven Line Boats Make Port With Merchandise Cargoes.

Package freighters held the center of the stage in the local marine trade for the past few days. In forty-eight hours, seven of them have made port and two others, which discharged their freight and loaded cargoes here, left for the lower lakes. The fleet of freighters in the local harbor now will probably have poor pickings for the return trip. The westbound business continues good, but return cargoes are hard to secure in full and the boats, which do not succeed in getting part cargoes of grain, are forced to go down the lakes with slim loads.

The coal trade continues somewhat brisk, but return cargoes of ore are just as scarce as ever, and a number of the big carriers are forced to return down the lakes light. Lumber shipments were heavier than usual during the past two days, but there will be no great rush in that branch of the trade. The outlook now is just as gloomy as at any time during the season and vessel men have no cause to be cheerful.

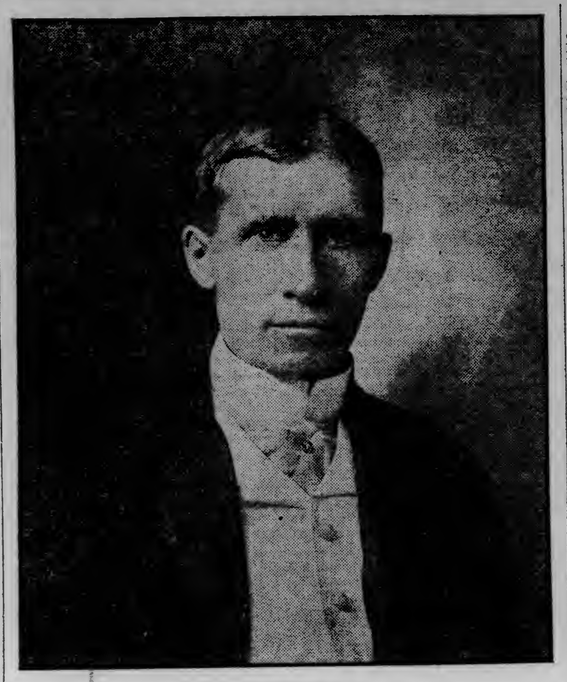
THIS IS THE WAY IT IS!



J. ADAM BEDE.

To accomplish much in congress, one must possess the acquaintance and confidence of his fellow members in both houses, and of many people in the several departments of government. It is also a great aid to him if he knows the leaders of political thought in the country outside of congress. By my newspaper work at Washington before going to congress, my service of five years as a member of the house, and by campaigning in many states, and speaking on various occasions in about half the congressional districts of the country, I have built up a very wide personal acquaintance and possess the confidence of all. I know Mr. Taft as I know a neighbor, and the executive office of the White House during his eight years in the presidency will be just like any other hang-out place to me. So long as the West keeps changing its members every two or three terms, the East will run the government and we shall be looking on. Why not get wise?

A WORD TO THE NEWCOMER.

Duluth and the whole Eighth district of twelve counties, including Anoka, Isanti, Mille Lacs, Pine, Kanabec, Carlton, Aitkin, Itasca, Koochiching, St. Louis, Lake and Cook, has been growing so fast that every biennial election finds many new voters among our people. To these I may say that I was born in Ohio, and could have remained there, but didn't. My boyhood was spent on a farm, and I am now living on a farm in Pine county. For twenty-two years I have lived in this district, in Duluth, on both iron ranges, and in the farming country, and know the wants of all the people. Am also interested in the printing and publishing business in Duluth, newspaper work being my profession. For further particulars, ask the next man you meet.

WORK OF LAST SESSION.

During the session of congress just closed, I secured local legislation as follows:

Dredging for Duluth harbor, $237,000.
For additional grounds, Duluth public building, $95,000.
For home for Supt. Duluth Fish Hatchery, $9,000.
Postoffice building at Virginia, $60,000.
Bill patenting to Episcopal diocese of Duluth, lands used for churches and schools among the Indians of Minnesota.
Bill for revenue cutter for Lake Superior, to headquarter at Duluth, on the calendar ready for passage in December, $200,000.
Bill for bridge over St. Louis river at the Steel plant.
Bill for Bridge over Mississippi at Hill City in Aitkin county.
Bill for bridge over Rainy river at International Falls.
Bill for extension of time to complete dam in Rainy river at International Falls. This was vetoed by the president, but after extended hearings, it was passed over the veto with the consent of the president.
Bill for a lock in the Sand Lake reservoir dam in Aitkin county.
Bill placed on the calendar allowing Mille Lacs Indians to go to the court of claims to recover from the government for removal from their lands.
Bill for the purchase of 2,000 acres of land on the Fond du Lac Indian reservation near Cloquet, for $1.25 an acre, to be used as a forestry experiment station.

Mr. Valstad and myself secured the passage of a bill making the public lands of Minnesota subject to the drainage laws of the state, so they can be assessed like private property for drainage purposes.

I co-operated with others of our state delegation in the passage of a bill opening to settlement about 70,000 acres of land around Cass Lake.

During the session I also secured the passage of eight special pension bills for needy old veterans.

RIVER AND HARBOR MATTERS.

As a member of the Rivers and Harbors committee, I have worked earnestly to do everything needed for the commerce of the Head of the Lakes, and that committee has authorized for the aid of our local commerce more than $5,000 a day for every day I have been in congress.

But I have also traversed the whole country in studying river and harbor matters and equipping myself for congressional work. Through my efforts, the Rivers and Harbors committee has visited this district three times, and two boards of engineers have been sent here to make special reports on the needs of our harbor.

During a trip of the committee down the Ohio river in 1905, I aided in the organization of the Rivers and Harbors congress, and through the public sentiment for waterway improvements developed by that body, congress felt warranted in voting $87,000,000 a year ago for that purpose, which made it possible to include $6,500,000 for another lock and canal at the "Soo," and $6,500,000 for another channel at Detroit, not one dollar of which would have been authorized but for the lumber, grain and ore of Minnesota.

Under authority of an item which I secured in the last Rivers and Harbors' bill, the engineers have recommended that a harbor of refuge be built at Grand Marais, and the appropriation will be forthcoming.

Ever since I can remember there has been a demand for a lighthouse on Rock of Ages, off Isle Royale. On going to Washington, I took this matter up and the lighthouse has been built. I also secured the authorization for a lighthouse at Split Rock, on the north shore, which is now under construction, and a survey was ordered at the last session for a lighthouse on the approach to Ashland.

COMMITTEE WORK.

New members begin at the bottom of committees and work up. In five years I have climbed over half way to the top of the committee on Rivers and Harbors, and am next to the chairman on the less important committee of expenses of the War department. The districts which change their members often, never reach a chairmanship or a commanding position of any kind, and such members receive scant respect at Washington, where everybody knows their transient tenure of office. I was doing newspaper work in Washington when Tom Reed was speaker of the house, and each of the other four members from Maine had an important chairmanship. These five men from a little New England state, because of long service and the positions and experience thus attained, had more influence on national legislation than any hundred members who had blown in from the prairies of the West. Again, why not get wise?

AWAY FROM WASHINGTON.

Interested persons and papers would have the public believe I am much away from Washington to the neglect of business. In reply, I hereby offer $100 to any person in the district who will name anything of a public character, from a rural mail route to a breakwater, that I have neglected. Let them get busy and specify. During the last session of six months, I accepted three engagements outside of Washington, though I received several invitations each day, and it was some times almost impossible to get rid of visiting delegations who came to Washington to make up banquet programs. These are the three: I went to Kalamazoo, Mich., for a Lincoln day banquet with Senators Burrows and Knox. Mr. Burrows acted as chairman, it being his home town, and Mr. Knox and myself were the only speakers to 2,000 people. I need the senate in my business, and this is a way I have of putting its leaders on my staff.

Again, I went to Bridgeport, Conn., with Secretary William H. Taft for a banquet last April. The clans gathered in an immense armory, in which 1,350 covers were laid, and there were perhaps a thousand people in the gallery. Aside from the toastmaster, Mr Taft and myself were the only speakers. Such an acquaintance with the president to be is an asset to any member, and the district he represents. Get wise some more?

Then I also went to Georgia at the invitation of the Virginia Society of Atlanta, as the chief speaker at the annual banquet on the birthday of Robert E. Lee. Such gracious acts warm the hearts of the Southern people and greatly help a member of congress in his work at Washington. I shall be pleased to hear from any one who disapproves of these engagements, all of which were subject to cancellation if any matters demanded my presence in Washington.

SOME OF THE LEGISLATION.

During my five years at Washington, I have sustained the president in all of his reform or uplift legislation. I opposed the leaders on single statehood for New Mexico and Arizona, and the problem is working out my way. I did not believe the veto of the Rainy river dam bill was just, and after a month's work, induced the president to look at it as I did. Loyalty to the president doesn't mean a surrender of the right to think.

The amendment to the employers' liability act, the child labor law for the District of Columbia, the law compelling locomotives to use automatic ash dumps, and the amendment to the Hepburn law permitting railways to carry ex-employes and certain other classes free, are among the legislation of the last session on behalf of labor Personally I favored in caucus a moderate injunction law, such as would make the laziest, meanest and most dyspeptic judge conduct his court as the most conscientious and impartial judge does voluntarily. We failed to get together, but the future will see some action.

In immigration legislation I have been considerate of the oppressed of other lands, believing that health and character are the best assets they can bring, but have not been unmindful of American institutions.

The militia bill was one of the important acts of the last session, placing the National Guards on a better and more dignified basis.

The currency bill consumed much time as it had to be taken out of the hands of the committee and was worked out in Republican caucuses. The bill finally agreed on was probably as good as any body of men of equal members could have framed up under all the circumstances, but the real results are yet to come from the currency commission created under this act. The appropriation bills, aggregating over a billion dollars, took up most of the time, and should have had more time than could be given them.

LISTEN A MINUTE.

Did you never notice that the wholesale houses of Duluth do not change their traveling men and managers every year or two? Probably they have learned that experience and acquaintance are worth something.

Every member of congress votes for the whole country and should therefore visit all parts of it and study the problems of the people from their viewpoint. I have done this in the face of idiotic criticism and shall continue to do so. But wherever I have gone I have kept the name of Duluth at the front.

While attending industriously to all local matters, I am not a mere lobbyist for this district, but am earnestly endeavoring to master the problems which concern our whole people as the greatest nation of earth

Leaving home at the age of 10 years, I came up through every grade in the school of adversity and graduated with honors from the University of Hard Knocks. I am not personally acquainted with all of the alumni of my alma mater, but shall be glad to meet them at any time, and trust that they as well as the output of other reputable schools and character foundries may look with some indulgence upon my humble efforts to serve them.

Auto Ran Away.

A. C. Hubbell's automobile ran away on Superior street late Saturday afternoon. There was no occupant in it at the time. A street cleaner, in trying to move the machine, is said to have started it.

The auto was left standing opposite the St. Louis hotel. When Mr. Hubbell appeared to get into it, it was not where he had left it. He saw the machine skimming lightly down the street towards Third avenue. A Great Northern express wagon, with team attached, was standing in front of the Lonsdale building. The animals swung out of the way of the auto, and it crashed into the wagon. The auto was damaged to the extent of about $30.

TEAM AGAIN RUNS AWAY

Crookston Livery Outfit Furnishes Plenty of Excitement These Days.

Saloonman Thrown Out Breaking His Leg; Driving Fractious Team.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The livery team which ran away, with five waitresses from a local hotel, a week ago, nearly killing two of the occupants, duplicated the performance Sunday, and, as a result, Ole Sundet, a saloonkeeper, is in Bethesda hospital with a compound fracture of the leg, and, if he does not lose his leg, he will be laid up for a long time.

With his wife, Mr. Sundet started on a drive to Climax yesterday morning, and when about four miles out of town, the horses began kicking and rearing. Mr. Sundet, who is a powerful man, laid back with all his might on the reins and, without doubt, would have held them had not one line snapped. This resulted in a violent jerk on the other rein, which pulled the team, which was now going at a good clip, into the ditch.

Seeing that he could not control the team, Mr. Sundet seized his wife and jumped from the rig as the team leaped across a deep ditch by the roadside. He landed in a depression in the ditch, which turned his ankle and the bone snapped just below the knee, the end of the bone protruding through the flesh.

The blood spurted from the ugly wound, and his wife would have been distracted had not a man who was walking down the railroad track seen the accident and rushed to her assistence. He at once ran to a farmhouse and telephoned to Dr. Smith, who jumped into his automobile and was soon at the scene. After stanching the flow of blood, he brought the injured man to the city and the fracture was soon reduced. It is believed the leg can be saved if no complications set in.

Mrs. Sundet escaped with a severe jar and a bad fright. The team, after crossing the ditch, swung back on the road again and started on south at a brisk pace, and were overtaken and brought back to the city with no damage to the rig.

Not hearing from him in any way, Hennessy gave him up as dead. Recently he read in a newspaper that attorneys were looking for the heirs of one Timothy Hennessy. He entered into correspondence with them, and in a short time learned that he was the only heir. His brother had been a well-to-do logger on the St. Croix river.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS.

Two Alleged to Have Bad Records, Taken at Escanaba.

Escanaba, Mich., Aug. 3.—After conducting a series of postoffice robberies in different parts of the peninsula, completely baffling the police officers of the district, Frank Roche and George Ross have been arrested at Escanaba by postoffice inspectors. Both men have long prison records and are now charged with robbing the postoffices at Vulcan, Daggett, Kipling and Koss, all within the last few weeks. It is estimated that in four robberies, $2,000 in cash was secured, in addition to large quantities of stamps. The latest robbery occurred at Koss, Tuesday night, where $500 was the amount of the haul. The two men were traced directly from that station to Escanaba, where they were arrested by Inspectors O. J. Clark and E. E. Fraser of Chicago. When the rooms of the men were searched, over 2,000 feet of fuse, several sticks of dynamite, a quantity of nitro-glycerin and four heavy revolvers were found, in addition to a quantity of stamps.

EXHIBIT IRON SPECIMENS.

Shown at Sandstone and Secured From Land Near Rutledge.

Sandstone, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.—Some very good samples of iron ore were displayed in town recently. These samples were found between here and Rutledge, and certain parties in town have secured an option on the land and expect to put on drills in the near future to see what can be discovered. The man who showed the samples believes that a large bed of the ore can be found, and is very sorry that he sold an option on his farm. One company from Willow River has been prospecting near there for the past year and have recently secured two diamond drills, which they expect to put into service soon. This may prove to be valuable property, and the ore can be easily shipped, as it is near the Northern Pacific railroad.

CROOKSTON HOT SUNDAY.

Ninety-Six in the Shade, But Little Crop Damage.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sunday was the hottest day thus far this summer, the thermometer registering 96 in the shade just before noon. There was a slight breeze, however, and the heat did not last long enough to damage the crops, as a northwest wind sprung up in the afternoon and the evening was cool. It was hail-breeding weather for a spell, and much apprehension was felt over hail or damage from intense heat.

SALOON ROW'S FATAL ENDING

Charles Butler Reported Killed by Two Men He Refused Drink.

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Brief reports have been received here from Pliny, in a remote section of the county, of a fatal row in the saloon of Charles W. Butler at that place. As the story goes, he was assaulted by Julius Wilcowski and J. Kaatka because he refused them more drink unless they paid for it, and so badly injured that he died. They are reported to have attacked him most brutally, Kaatka striking him over the head with a shovel, which cut a great gash in the side of his face and knocked an eye out, as well as felled him to the floor. Both men then jumped on him, it is said, but were prevented from doing further injury to their victim by the interference of Butler's wife and other bystanders.

Kaatka and Wilcowski were arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace Zapouski, who bound them over to the grand jury, but, being permitted their liberty by the constable to secure bondsmen, they fled to parts unknown.

That Being Built by Copper Range Road to be Whopper.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new coaling station of the Copper Range road, being built at Mill Mine Junction, will be the largest structure of the kind in the Copper country, and probably the largest in Upper Michigan. The station, docks and approaches will be approximately a half-mile in length. The approach is to be filled with earth level with the ties, and the material for this will be taken from cuts which the company will make at points where trouble is usually encountered with snow in the winter. A 10,000-ton capacity storage plant is being built and in connection with it a 500-ton bin from which tenders will be loaded. The junction is at the point on the main line, where the branches to Freda and South Range and Painesdale leave it.

CROOKSTON'S MARKET DAY.

Second One Held Last Saturday Was Great Success.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston's second market day Saturday was a more pronounced success than the first one by large odds. Farmers came in with their families by the hundreds from all directions and brought loads of produce with them which they disposed of at very satisfactory prices. They also brought in stock, etc., and machinery which was sold at auction for good prices.

The farmers were greeted upon their arrival by the Crookston band, which played till noon in various parts of the business districts, and after dinner the Burnham Creek band gave a most excellent concert. The people of Crookston as well as the visitors were pleasantly surprised at the splendid showing made by the band from west of Crookston, of which their community may well be proud.

ROBBERY AT MOORHEAD.

Woman Loses Valuable Earrings and Suspect is Arrested.

Moorhead, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. J. Valentine, a former employe of Lundgren's cafe here, is under arrest in Fargo and will be brought back to be prosecuted on the charge of stealing two valuable earrings belonging to a woman named Lulu Williams, who claimed to have been robbed while sleeping in the rooms over the cafe.

When she arose Friday morning she found that a pair of ear rings, valued at $100, had been stolen. She notified the proprietor and he engaged the services of the police. Suspicion pointed to J. J. Valentine, a former employe, who had been discharged a few days ago. He had been seen in the locality during the night. He was hunted up by the police, and found in Fargo, one of the Fargo officials making the arrest. A search for the earrings resulted in finding them in one of the Front street, Fargo, pawn shops, where they had been "soaked" for $25.

WESTERN MINNESOTA CROPS.

Col. Westerman of St. Cloud Says They Are All Right.

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 3.—Col. William Westerman has returned from a flying trip of inspection of the wheat fields of the western part of the state. He reports that the wheat crop is the finest since 1903.

"In my opinion," he said, "wheat is safe and will be the best crop since the big yield of 1903. The hot weather has not been severe enough to cause any damage. Barley is a big crop and is being safely harvested. Oats, however, is a very light crop. Oats are white, weak and mushy, and the crop is being harvested green in many places, because it is prematurely ripening. Corn is not a big crop."

GRAND FORKS PAIR ARE SAID TO HAVE ELOPED.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Matt Hartman, employed in the Great Northern round house here, has eloped with Flora Jund, aged 15 years, and relatives of the girl have notified the police all over the West to look out for them. The girl had been working in a laundry. She is tall and looks older than her years. They mailed a letter on a train stating that they had gone to Seattle, and he would have a marriage ceremony performed just as soon as the girl is 16 years old. The letter was signed by the girl, although written by Hartman. A warrant for the arrest of Hartman, on a charge of abduction, has been sworn out by State's Attorney Wineman.

The pair made their get-away on Thursday morning. Relatives were not certain that they had eloped until Saturday morning, when the letter was received from Hartman. This letter had been posted on the Oriental Limited, westbound, and whoever mailed it must have been somewhere between Grand Forks and St. Paul. Either Hartman went East or he had some one mail the letter for him.

THE ALCOHOL in beer is a trifle—only 3½ per cent. The effective ingredients are barley and hops—a food and a tonic. Pure beer is both good and good for you.

In Germany, Holland, Sweden, Denmark and Austria beer is the national beverage. Nearly all people, of all ages, drink it.

And all the world envies their sturdy strength.

Every doctor knows how beer benefits. If you need more strength or vitality he will prescribe it.

But be careful to choose a pure beer, else you get harm with the good. And select a beer well aged to avoid biliousness.

The way to be sure is to order Schlitz. We go to extremes in cleanliness. We even filter the air that cools it. We age it for months. We sterilize every bottle.

Schlitz has no after effects.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
Common beer is sometimes substituted for Schlitz.
To avoid being imposed upon, see that the cork or crown is branded Schlitz.

MILLS AND JACOBSON.

A very large number of Republican newspapers in Minnesota have revolted against the renomination of Judge Mills as a Republican candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner, and the burden of their complaint seems to be that he was nominated against the wishes of the people, in spite of his alleged friendliness to corporate interests, and because of the influence of an active and aggressive combination of those interests.

As to this, there is no need of further comment on The Herald's part at this time; but it does seem time for somebody to arise to inquire how these newspapers can reject Mills and accept Jacobson, when both were nominated by exactly the same convention under exactly the same control. If there was a combination of interests strong enough to nominate Mills against the wishes of the people, surely that combination must have been strong enough to defeat Jacobson if it had wished to do so. The inevitable conclusion from this is that it didn't wish to do so.

R. C. Dunn's Princeton Union remarks that those who are opposing Judge Mills and protesting against his nomination are venomous curs and addle-brained political demagogues. This friendly comment from the man who was as largely responsible as anybody for the nomination of both Mills and Jacobson is respectfully referred to the "venomous curs" in question, with the request that they outline, if possible, the exact reasons why one of these men is more acceptable than the other, when both were nominated by the same men and the same methods.

The Albert Lea Times-Enterprise, examining the Dunn statement with mingled curiosity and amazement, pauses to remark mildly: "'Venomous curs' strikes us as a rather severe characteristic of the many estimable gentlemen who made it their business to keep in touch with public affairs and to give to the people the knowledge which results from their observations of the labors of public officials. If we accept as true the statement of the Preston Times that two-thirds of the Republican papers throughout the state are opposed to the election of Mills, the preponderance of 'curs' engaged in the business of advancing the fortunes of the press becomes rather alarming."

The Albert Lea paper, though it is probably not really very much alarmed about it, is hereby assured that there is nothing to the Dunn inference that a majority of the Republican editors of Minnesota are "venomous curs" or "addle-brained political demagogues." Their protests against the nomination of Mills are not due to inborn obliquities of mental vision, to madly fanatic hatred of everybody and everything, or to an insane desire to stir up trouble, as Mr. Dunn apparently believes. These protests are due to an honest belief that, to put it mildly, this particular nomination could have been improved upon and would have been improved upon if it hadn't been that Mr. Dunn and others were able to control the convention to suit their own ends.

But unless some of these editors immediately make satisfactory showing as to why Jacobson, nominated and kept tongue-tied by the same forces, is better than Mills, somebody is certain to demand a more conclusive defense to the charge of addle-patedness.

REDUCING REALTY VALUATIONS.

The decision of the city board of review, as related in The Herald Saturday evening, to make a sweeping reduction in the assessed valuation of real estate in this city, is an encouraging response to the pointed protests that have been made against the arbitrary increases made by the assessor.

Confessedly, these increases were the result of a policy of reducing the tax rate in Duluth by increasing the valuations. As The Herald has often said, that is the wrong way to go about it. If the tax rate is too high—and it undoubtedly is too high—it should be reduced by cutting the city's expenditures. That is the only just and honest way to reduce the tax rate. It can be reduced by increasing the assessed valuations, but that involves no real economy unless the increase in valuation comes from property that has been overlooked or undervalued.

In this case, property that is already paying its just share of the expenses of government was arbitrarily raised. For instance, Superior street business property was increased all along the line, apparently because a single lot, exceptionally desirable for the purpose for which it was purchased, brought a fancy price. The immense increase in the assessed valuation of Duluth would have reduced the tax rate, but it wouldn't have saved a penny to the taxpayers, and it would have made Duluth pay about $60,000 more than its share of state and county taxes.

BREAKING THE "SOLID SOUTH."

There have been recent remarks from various sources about the probability that the Republican presidential ticket would break into the Solid South this year, and wrest from the Democracy states that it has owned exclusively since the war-time. Mention has been made in this connection of Georgia; apparently because of the recent reaction of the voters of that state toward conservatism and because of the problematical effect upon the Democratic vote of the candidacies of Tom Watson and John Temple Graves.

The probability—if it is a probability—is so interesting as to be worth analyzing.

Tom Watson, a respected, admired but not necessarily a largely followed son of Georgia, is the Populist candidate for president, and he is making a serious fight for the electoral vote of Georgia. John Temple Graves, another Georgian, is the Independence party's candidate for vice president, and as he is beloved and admired by many Georgians he will unquestionably attract many votes to the Hearst ticket. On the other hand the popularity of Roosevelt in the South, coupled strangely enough with the new conservatism of the South which may lead some to prefer the conservative atmosphere of the Republican party to the more radical atmosphere of the Democratic party, is very likely to bring to the Taft ticket the votes of many who have hitherto voted the Democratic ticket.

The question is how many votes will be drawn from Democracy to Republicanism, to Populism and to Hearstism, and whether the Democracy of Georgia can stand the strain.

On the whole, it seems very probable that it can stand it very comfortably. Sherman broke the Solid South in 1864 by marching through Georgia, but it is very doubtful if Taft can repeat the feat in 1908 by a similar plan of campaign. The election returns, in spite of the menace to the Democratic majority from Watson and Graves and the spirit of Rooseveltism, offer no encouragement to hopeful Republicans who figure on the disintegration of the Solid South through the capture of Georgia.

In 1904, though Tom Watson as the Populist candidate got 22,635 votes in Georgia, Roosevelt got but 24,003 and Parker received 83,472, doing better than Bryan did against McKinley in 1900, when the vote was 81,700 for Bryan and 35,035 for McKinley. Bryan can hardly do as well this year as Parker did four years ago, but he will most assuredly get the electoral vote of Georgia. In 1904 Roosevelt lost every county but one in the total of 137 counties in Georgia. He carried that one by 572 to 520, but lost most of the others by majorities truly overwhelming. In 1906 the Republicans ran only one candidate for congress in Georgia, and he was beaten, 4,964 to 429; so he must have run merely for the exercise.

If the Solid South is to be broken up, it will have to be piecemeal, from the edges, and not by attacking its center. Maryland is to be classed with the East now, and not the South; Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri are border states, and Republicanism there is not entirely hopeless; but the Republican estimator who is truly conservative will start by crediting Bryan with the 158 electoral votes of the South, including the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

THE CITY'S TAX LEVIES.

The series of local articles in The Herald indicating the demands of the various city departments for money in next year's tax levy are interesting and instructive, and should attract widespread local interest; for it is upon these several items that the city's total tax levy for next year depends. If, as indicated by the requests of the departments, next year's levy is largely increased, involving additions to a tax rate already too large, a problem will be presented that is of great importance to the future of Duluth.

Right now is the time for the public to scrutinize these items, and to complain if it thinks the city authorities are calling upon it for more money than it should pay in taxes. There isn't a particle of use, as The Herald has repeatedly pointed out, of complaining after the levies have been made and the tax rate fixed. Now is the time when the rate which Duluth property-owners will pay in taxes next year is being fixed, and after it is fixed there is nothing to do but to pay it.

The city authorities who will make these levies should —and doubtless will—distinguish very clearly between the things that the city must have and the things that the city would like to have. This year's levies will have to include practically nothing but items in the first class, and will have to omit practically everything in the second class; because above all, one of the first essentials in Duluth right now is a lower tax rate. Last year's levies made a tax rate of more than 3½ per cent, which is too high; though it should be remembered in this connection that the school board's levy was also high, and that it formed a larger proportion of the total levy than ever before in the history of the city.

EUROPEAN LABOR RETURNING.

Nothing reflected the depression that began with last fall's panic more quickly than the ebb and flow of European immigration and emigration. Almost before the American people generally realized that they were in for a period of depression of more or less length, the volume of immigration from Europe was suddenly checked, and in its place came a sudden growth of emigration to Europe, as the laborers who foresaw a period of labor surplus returned to their native countries.

Therefore it is interesting, and at the same time encouraging, to note that the tide of immigration from Europe shows signs of speedy resumption. Europeans who saw the let-up in activity last fall now see the return of industry, and they are coming over to participate in it. This includes not only many of those who went home last fall and winter, but many immigrants who will make their first voyage.

An agent of the department of commerce and labor who has just returned from a transatlantic trip states that a new rush of steerage passengers may be expected very soon. Already prospective immigrants are laying their plans for the trip to America, and many of the more courageous ones are already on their way.

This agent reports, also, that the government of Italy, Austria-Hungary, Sweden and Norway are promoting plans to offset the lure of America. The king of Italy, who appears to take a clearer view of the subject than many of his fellow rulers, deprecates the drain upon his country, but is devoting his attention in part to guiding the emigrants to farming communities on this side, rather than allowing them to drift into the congested cities. He doesn't wish his subjects to leave, but if they must go he wishes them to have the best possible chance in this country. In working thus the Italian government is acting wisely, and its efforts will benefit this country not less than it will its former subjects who are about to become Americans.

Upon the whole, the European vision of American conditions and prospects ought to be a little clearer than the American outlook. Europe has the advantage of perspective and of a bird's eye view of the whole set of conditions. The American's viewpoint determines his view. If he is surrounded by rosy conditions, he sees the future through rose glasses. If he happens to be surrounded by conditions not so promising, his outlook is certain to be gloomy. But the European, seeing all conditions and all sections at once and forming his judgment upon the net advantage one view may have over another, sees a hopeful outlook, and he is preparing to come over here and go to work again.

The conditions that prevail just now lean very strongly toward the creation of optimistic views. Nobody expects to see the abnormal activity of early 1907 repeated right away; yet the tendency is most certainly upward, and the tide of returning prosperity grows stronger day by day.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Some traveling men were talking about hunger, at the St. Louis last night. Hunger isn't such a bad subject just after one has tucked away a big meal. In fact, the subject of bygone yearning for food, is not a theme calculated to cause any exceedingly painful memories.

"I shall never forget the time I traveled from Detroit to St. Paul upon 55 cents," began one of the group. "I was young and inexperienced in those days. I had my transportation but was very short on funds. I really did not know how to secure any more money, so I started for St. Paul with this 55 cents as the only thing between me and starvation.

"I ate just two square meals before we got to Elroy, Wis. Both of these meals were enjoyed through the courtesy and kindness of a man, who sized me up and figured that I was traveling short. Between the eating of these two meals, which I tried to make large enough to extend over an indefinite period, my time of dining was extremely irregular. In fact, I don't believe that I dined, except on the occasions when the good Samaritan came through with the kind offer.

"When we got to Elroy my hunger was something fierce. It could no longer be combatted. I had saved the 55 cents against some possible emergency, and here was the time to spend it. Every cent of it went, in the attempt to drive away the hunger that attacked me.

"We all alighted at Elroy and even before I got inside the depot I could scent food. It acted as a spur to my wasted strength and I hastened into the dining room. I was desperate and I would attempt any expedient to gain food, thought I. Already visions of steaming viands leaped before my imagination.

"Then there appeared the clammy hand of adversity into my scheme. Over the door of the dining room there appeared a sign stating that meals were 75 cents. And the worst part of it was that you were obliged to secure your tickets before you went into the dining room.

"I watched my fellow passengers devour the food, the door of which floated over to me, and its savory fragrance drove me to despair. There were only twenty minutes more to remain at Elroy and I was getting desperate.

"Finally I walked up to the husky individual at the gate and told him of my nearness to death's door. I told him that I had not eaten for two and a half days and that I was literally starving to death. I informed him that I was 20 cents shy of breakfast, but that I had a new pair of shoes that had only been worn once, and that if he would let me eat for that 55 cents I would go back to the car and get the shoes for him. He sized me up and finally told me that I could eat for the 55 cents.

"I sat down at a table over in the corner where no one would be liable to observe me, and began to eat. I remember distinctly, though it is years ago, that they brought some tea biscuits and some buttered potato chips in the first thing. I was out of the range of observation and while the waitress was waiting for the cooking of my order I got busy with those tea biscuits and the buttered potato chips. It was the industrious boy, all right. Before the waitress returned with a steaming tray load of good things to eat, I had made ten sandwiches and placed them in my pockets. Then I went at the breakfast. I ate enough to last me a day and then I had the tea biscuits. I reached St. Paul in good condition and I still had my shoes that had hardly been worn.

"Years after that I happened to be in Elroy. I searched in vain for the man who permitted me to eat breakfast on a marked down price. I wanted to slip him that other 20 cents and to tell him that to my dying day I would never forget the breakfast that I ate that morning. I also wanted to tell him about the ten tea biscuits that I stowed away in the pockets of my clothes. But I could not find the charitable person who had listened with sympathy to my hunger tale.

"I have eaten many more sumptuous meals than the one I got at Elroy that morning, but I shall never taste food that tasted so good to me as that meal did."

George M. Russell, at the Lenox hotel, has received word that John Jackson, known in this city, has become lost in the fog that has been hanging over the water in the vicinity of Tobin's harbor, Isle Royale, for the past week. No trace of Jackson has been seen since last Tuesday.

Jackson started to take a boat load of provisions and utensils from Tobin's harbor across to the Nipigon river. It is only a short trip across to the river, but nothing has been seen or heard of Jackson since he left the harbor. It is believed that he became lost in the heavy fog.

Jackson was taking the provisions over to the Nipigon river for E. H. Moulton of Minneapolis, president of the Interstate Telephone company.

THE WEATHER.

Though a northeast wind and lowering clouds made ineffective threats yesterday morning, it was a pleasant day for all purposes, and it was not until evening that showers came. This morning it was clear, bright and charming, and the weather man looks for good weather tomorrow, though he says there may be showers or thunderstorms, with cooler weather, tonight. Last night's lowest temperature was 56 degs. and yesterday's highest was 72 degs.

A year ago today it was cool and fine.

The sun rose this morning at 4:50 and sets tonight at 7:38, making 14 hours and 48 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Light to copious showers or thunder storms occurred during Sunday or last night in the Gulf states, Arizona, New Mexico, Western Ontario, Manitoba and Northern Minnesota as a result of the barometric depressions central over Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Southwestern districts. Temperatures varying from 90 degs. to 100 degs. prevailed Sunday throughout the central valley states, Minnesota and the Dakotas, attending an increase in pressure there. The easterly movement of the Manitoba low pressure favors local showers or thunderstorm in this vicinity tonight, followed by fair weather Tuesday."

Bryan and Patronage.

Washington Star: Mr. Bryan disposes of some gossip about appointments in case of his election by saying that he has made no promises about offices and will make none. A wise course.

It was said of Mr. Clay that had he been elected president he would have been overwhelmed by the multiplicity of the promises that had been made by him, and for him by friends, in matter of patronage. Unselfish personal devotion did not explain the whole of the Clay following. Some of it was canny and wanted assurances. Many men so disposed got assurances. Mr. Clay was approachable in a deliberate way on such scores. If a little dictatorial at times, he was warmhearted, and he desired very much to be president. In the White House therefore, he would have been besieged by Clay men from all quarters, clamoring either for what had been promised them, or for what they thought they had deserved as laborers in his vineyard. And there would have been patronage enough by a hundred per cent to go round.

This was equally true probably of Mr. Blaine— another leader who had the knack of attracting men to him with bonds of extraordinary strength, but who at the same time found it necessary to talk "business" to some of his followers. He too, had a good deal of "paper" out which would have taxed him as president to redeem.

Mr. Bryan's leadership has been short as compared with the length either of Mr. Clay's or of Mr. Blaine's, but it has been long enough to bring many men under his spell, and thousands have associated themselves with his rise and the establishment of his power. Fully a regiment may be mustered who "found him first." As many more are known in their respective communities as men who stand "particularly close" to him, and with whom he always confers before taking any important step. Then we have the army of shouters, hoarse all through campaign years from use of his name, and convinced of their right to recognition at his hands.

Is it difficult to draw the picture of Mr. Bryan in the White House, with the original Bryan men, the men who stand "particularly close" to him, and the noble army of general shouters, all moving on him for remembrance in his hour of triumph? He might not wish himself in Hongkong, or his besiegers in Hades, but his condition, even without a single promise out, would move all sympathetic persons to genuine pity.

Lovers, Take Time.

New York Tribune: In the amiable way of English villagers they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' these hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other; they'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter o' seven years."

"Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener.

"Long ano'! Bah, ye're wrong! When a body's cortin' he canna be too careful. Why, my coortship lasted a matter o' nineteen years."

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. "And did you find your plan successful when you married?

"Ye jump to conclusions!" said the old man, impatiently. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1888.

•••The Duluth, Rainy Lake & Southwestern road, which was incorporated last winter, is getting matters into shape for an early beginning of activity. J. H. A. Ginder, a stockholder of and attorney for the road, has recently opened an office in Duluth. He states that the company has lately been making arrangements for the right-of-way through Indian lands. Already preliminary surveys have been made along the northern line of the state as far as the Red river, where the right to build a bridge has been obtained, and a general route marked out. Arrangements are being made to enable the company to enter Duluth with its trains without building a line directly. It is proposed to form a connection south of the Lake of the Woods with a Canadian road, and give a direct line from Winnipeg to Duluth.

•••The Northern Pacific has made arrangements with the Manitoba government to take hold of the new line southward from Winnipeg and extend it westward to Brandon, and to give freight rates on grain to Duluth considerably lower than via the Canadian Pacific to Port Arthur.

•••Hon. C. L. Black, a former law partner of Governor Foraker of Ohio, is in the city visiting friends.

•••Charlie Winkler, "Uncle Sam," as he used to be called in the young days of Duluth, when he kept a little cigar store on Superior street, near Third avenue east, is in the city. He and his family arrived from Milwaukee yesterday on a visit to friends they have not seen for fifteen years.

•••Mrs. James Roberts and daughter, Nellie, of Bay City, Mich., are in Duluth for a few days' visit.

•••On Aug. 8, ordination services will be held at the Endion Baptist church, when Rev. George F. Hilton, who has been preaching there for a month, will be ordained as a regular pastor. On the next day a second ordination will take place, at the Second Baptist church, at the West end, Rev. A. H. Bellard being the subject. The First Baptist church has called to its pastorate, Rev. G. H. Clelland, now of Chester, Pa.

•••Col. A. L. Conger of Ohio, who has been spending several weeks in Minnesota, predicts that the state will go Republican in November by the usual majority.

•••Messrs. Anderson and Tanner of the Minnesota Car company, which is to build large works at West Duluth, left for the South last night. This morning, Tazewell Eliott, B. Rauel Welford and Dr. A. L. Welford, all of Richmond, Va., and in the company, arrived to look over the situation.

•••Wages of laborers have been raised by several city contractors to $1.75 a day.

IN THE EIGHTH DISTRICT.

Eveleth News: Now we have had J. Adam in our midst and he has told us just how things stand down at Washington and with the Republican party. it was a fair, nice talk, made in all sincerity and sounds plausible, but looks on second inspection to be a little thin. The best we can make of it is that the party is superior to the man. It takes politics to get into office and more politics to hold office. If you are in congress don't have any fixed ideas on what ought to be done and if you do have them don't try to put them in force. Get on good terms with the leaders and then when the machine is all oiled and greased with its manifold wheels geared right, the party will move and accomplish things for the benefit of humanity and for your district. That is the policy Mr. Bede is committed to. It may look all right at Washington, but we doubt if the people will endorse it.

Virginia Virginian: Mr. Bede made a fairly good record in the matter of securing appropriations for his district —but that is all. He was on the side of Speaker Cannon and his do-nothing policy whenever any legislation in the interests of the people was proposed. He doesn't say anything about that, however, in his Budget.

Biwabik Times: It always pays to repeat a good thing. We continue to be pleased with reports from Duluth that Clarence B. Miller, candidate for the Republican nomination for congress, has never affiliated with the Duluth gang. We fear this fact will not help Mr. Miller in Duluth but it should do him good in the ranges.

Pine City Pine Knot: The friends of Hon. J. Adam Bede are confident that his re-election is assured this year. His record in congress cannot be assailed with any weighty argument, and there are but few who will not concede that his work has been that of a painstaking and conscientious representative. His re-election at this time is important as he has work to complete which no other man in the district can do. He should be returned to Washington with a majority exceeding that of two years ago.

Floodwood Broadaxe: Aside from a few office holding brethren, the press seems to be almost a unit in favor of Clarence B. Miller for congress.

Aurora News: Clarence B. Miller's chances to be our next congressman improve every day. He is wide awake to the fact that the people have had enough of the Joseph Cannon way of doing business and has come out flatfooted on the question.

Pine County Courier: In his own paper, the Budget, Congressman Bede enumerates the accomplishments in behalf of his district for which he claims credit. There are twenty-seven in number, and those who read the list thoughtfully will agree that it bears out his reputation as a humorist. If it had been accompanied by a list of things he failed to do, that reputation might have been increased very materially, though many interested constituents would have trouble in seeing the joke.

Hibbing Tribune: J. Adam Bede warned us at Eveleth that if we don't watch out we will be sending a Democratic house to Washington this fall. Mr. Bede and others do nothing. Cannon Republicans in congress should have thought about that before congress adjourned.

Playmates of the Long Ago.

Playmates of the Long Ago,
When the shades of night fall low,
Once again to you I come,
Barefoot boy with broken drum,
Once again I seem to stray,
Blithely down the paths of May;
Laughing, chatting with you there,
Playing baseball on the square;
Wandering with line and pole
To our favorite fishing hole;
Now, where are you, I would know,
Playmates of the Long Ago?

Where's the boy that used to come
Calling nightly for his chum?
Long before I'd finished tea
I would hear him calling me;
Never dared to ring the bell,
Always stood and gave a yell;
Seems tonight I'm hearing you
Calling, calling loud: "Yu-hoo."
Back through all the misty past,
O'er the space of time so vast,
Come, like tropers in a show,
Playmates of the Long Ago.

Where's the little girl I knew,
Cherry lips and eyes of blue?
Picture that no brush can paint,
In sunbonnet old and quaint;
Dainty little maid, and shy.
Has Time gently passed you by?
Here a bearded man and gray
Still remembers you as May;
In his heart you're living yet,
As a child he can't forget.
Years shall never crown with snow,
Playmates of the Long Ago.

Back again they come in dreams,
Playmates by the running streams;
Boys I romped with, girls I kissed
Swarm about me from the mist
Of the years that quick have flown,
Still I claim them for my own;
Some are sleeping 'neath the hill,
But in day-dreams living still.
Some perhaps are trouble-worn
Just as I am—but I scorn
Thoughts that wrong has laid one low,
Playmates of the Long Ago.

War on Loan Sharks.

New York Tribune: It is an interesting experiment which the Baltimore & Ohio railroad is about to make in its endeavor to better the condition of its employes. The corporation has forbidden each and every man on its payrolls to assign his wages to anybody, under penalty of immediate suspension or dismissal. It is hoped that this will drive away from the preserves that familiar animal, the loan shark, whose ravagess, at one time or another, have disturbed almost every large employer in the land. The move gains in significance by the report that the Pennsylvania and the Reading will adopt the same policy. If vigorously conducted the test will affect, directly and indirectly, nearly a stateful of people; and, if results are good, it will bring into general use an equitable loan system which has already been tried out on a small scale and found highly profitable to all concerned.

POINTED PLEASANTRIES.

Philadelphia Ledger: The chairman called his personally conducted convention to order.

"Understand, gentlemen," he said, briefly, "you are here to carry out the will of the people (applause), and any member refusing to do so will be carried out himself."

Chicago Tribune: The Young Man—Yes, I shall be away a month or more, Miss Skimmerhorn. May—may I write occasionally?

The Young Woman—We are scarcely well enough acquainted for that, Mr. Goovius. But you may send me a picture postcard every day, if you like.

Kansas City Times: The unappreciated poet was feeling much aggrieved.

"No matter how careful I am to take pains," he complained, "the editor always gives me one more."

Washington Star: "Remember," said the earnest inventor, "it isn't so very many years since the telephone caused laughter."

"That's true," answered the man who has trouble with central. "At first it caused laughter; now it causes profanity."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Tell us about the letter you are preparing."

"Certainly, gentlemen," replied the candidate, sweeping with genial eye the circle of reporters. "You may say that on the paramount issue I express myself with utmost frankness.

"But what is this paramount issue?"

"The question as to whether I accept or not."

Chicago Tribune: "I fine you," said the police justice, "$30 and costs."

"Yr honor," protested Tuffold Knutt, who had been hauled up for vagrancy, "all the propty I've got in the world is a plugged nickel an' me clo'es, an' they hain't wuth more'n two bits. That fine's onreasonable. It's confiscation, an' it won't never stand the test o' the federal courts. I shall take an appeal, y'r honor!"

Chicago News: The smaller man bristled up.

"See here," he growled, "you have applied two unpleasant terms to me." Then he paused and scowled and came a little closer. "I just want you to understand that a third term doesn't go in this country."

Whereupon the big man drew back a little and said no more.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: An honest thing about a girl with red hair is when it's natural.

A very neat trick a woman has is never to cry when she means it.

It appears like most married people spent their lives wondering why they did it.

The more times a man swears off in a week the more will power he thinks he has got.

The Old Love Song.

Play is slowly, sing it lowly,
Old familiar tune!
Once it ran in dance and dimple,
Like a brook in June;
Now it sobs along the measures
With a sound of tears,
Dear old voices echo through it,
Vanished with the years.

Play is slowly—it is holy
As an evening hymn;
Morning gladness hushed to sadness
Fills it to the brim.
Memories home with the music
Stealing through the bars,
Thoughts within its quiet spaces
Rise and set like stars.

Ripple, ripple, goes the love-song
Till in slowing time,
Early sweetness grows completeness
Floods its every rhyme;
Who together learn the music
Life and death unfold,
Know that love is but beginning
Until love is old.

Singing, singing through the roses
Went our lovers twain—
Was there ever such a rose time,
Could there be again?
Now they tell us "Five-and-twenty
Junes we've seen them blow;
Every June's completer, sweeter—
Well we lovers know!"

A Testimonial Concert

Will be Tendered to

Miss Laurette Rietz,

On August 12, at the Congregational Church.

Miss Rietz is the daughter of Mrs. S. J. Rietz, and, the late Rev. Lewis Rietz, pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal church, and druggist and proprietor of White Swan Drug store.

Her voice is new to us. A remarkable dramatic mezzo-soprano voice of unusual sweetness.

Mr. George L. Tyler, our well known instructor of vocal art, was the first one to discover Miss Reitz's voice. He noticed her talent, her great determination and ambition for vocal music. "She always was an enthusiastic scholar, always willing to learn, and eager to get "ahead," is one of Mr. Tyler's frequent statements.

He offered her the part of Martha in "Faust."

Miss Reitz possesses everything to become a singer.

"I have always desired to study nearly since a mere child. The heighth of my ambition is to become a singer."

Miss Rietz will study with the Chicago Musical college, under Herman Do Vries.

Among the assisting artists are: Miss Gladys Reynolds, soprano; Mr. Fred G. Bradbury, violinist; Mrs. George L. Tyler, tenor, and Mrs. Fred G. Bradbury, accompanist.

SAME MONEY TO SUFFICE

Park Board Will Get Along With $16,000 in 1909.

Same Amount Was Allowed for Expenses This Year.

The park board will ask the conference committee for about the same amount of money for operating expenses next year as was allowed for this year. The amount allowed for 1908 was $16,000.

This sum will leave little room for new improvements. It will be used for the most part for maintenance. The park land bought under the Culluni administration obligates the city to pay $12,000, in annual amounts of $5,000. The second installment will be paid next year. The park board does not aim to make any big improvements next season, for the condition of the city's finances would not stand it. There will be enough money, however, to maintain the present parks in good shape. Some additional land for park purposes may be picked up during the year.

It is said that Duluth has secured better results from money spent in park improvements than 95 per cent of the cities of the country. This is largely due to the fact that sites chosen for parks have been naturally adapted to the purpose intended, and they could be put in first-class shape with a comparatively small expenditure of cash. The water, trees, rocks, etc., have been already on the ground. The fact that the parks are natural make them all the more beautiful, for, as has been demonstrated time and time again, man at his best can never equal nature. Of course, there are some of the smaller parks of the city that are largely artificial, but the more important ones are almost as they were before Duluth even became a city.

Superfluous hair removed. Knauf Sisters.

DOCTORS WILL EAT IN BARN

Medical Men to be Guests J. Uno Sebenius.

To demonstrate to members of the St. Louis County Medical society just what can be done in the way of cleanliness at a dairy, J. Uno Sebenius will serve dinner to the doctors in his barn Aug. 15. The tables will be set between two long rows of cows, and plates will be laid for between fifty and sixty people.

Mr. Sebenius has what is probably the finest, most modern and most complete diary in the state. So far as claenliness is concerned, it is perfection. An arrangement in Mr. Sebenius' stable which differs from that in most dairies, will allow the cows to watch the physicians at their meal. The animals have their back towards the sides of the barn, instead of towards the center of the building, as is usually the case, and therefore their heads point towards the long aisles between the two rows of clean and sanitary stalls.

A good deal of interest has been shown in Mr. Sebenius' dairy at Lakeside since the agitation against impure milk was started, and he has had many visitors. The physicians will attend in a body, by special invitation. The feature of the visit, of course, will be the dinner.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

"John," said his wife, "do you like this dress?" and she stood patiently beside his chair, with her hair newly coiffed and too much powder on her nose.

"Um-hum," said John, without glancing up from his paper.

"Because if you don't like it, John, I can just as easy put on another dress."

"It's all right," mumbled John through his cigar and some tobacco smoke and the paper.

"It seems to be I remember your saying that you liked this dress especially well," said John's wife, "and so, of course——"

John's skeptical glance was at last dragged from the paper, and the same glance silenced his wife for a moment.

"Do you really like it, John?"

"Yes," said John again. "It's all right."

"If there's some other one you'd rather I'd put on, I will," said John's wife.

"No," said John. "I like that one."

"Well, you won't mind hooking it up for me then, will you?" asked John's wife.

John wriggled his many wrappings of enfolding avoirdupois from the comfortable chair. He cast his paper on the floor and he clutched his cigar between his teeth, setting it at an acute angle to his face. The cigar thus came in close proximity to his right eye, so he closed that eye to keep the ashes out of it, and valiantly went to work at the hooking of the waist.

He said nothing.

"I'm awfully sorry to disturb you when you're reading," said John's wife, "but you can understand yourself that it's perfectly impossible to reach into the middle of one's back. Never mind the collar, John; I'll attend to that a little later all by myself. Of course, I could easily put on another dress, but when I know that you especially like this one, I like to wear it. I don't care for it particularly myself——don't hook the hooks into all the lace on the waist, John——yes you are, too; I can feel it. As I said, I don't care especially for it, but I like——no, there isn't, either, a hook off. You look carefully and you'll find it. Well, I know that it isn't off, because just this afternoon I went over the whole waist, just to see. If you wouldn't try to hook your hands inside the waist, I think you might get along better. Put your hands on the outside, John. Nobody can hook a waist that way. Why, the only reason I get my clothes made this way is because it's fashionable. I'm sure I don't know why I want to be fashionable, but I do. Of course, John, if you're going to swear, I can put on a kimono for the evening. I can't have my dresses made to fasten in the front, because nobody does. Well, I think I'd be rather ashamed to give up in despair over one simple little waist. No, there isn't a hook off, I know there isn't. It doesn't make any difference what it seems like to you, I know the hooks are all on. Anyway, you always say that: It may be hard on you, but I can tell you it isn't easy on me to stand here and feel that you have a fearful mad on at me. If you cuss any more, John, I shall take it off and never put it on again, and I'll get a directoire gown and insist upon wearing it down Superior street. They fasten in the front. Maybe you would like to see me, and so would plenty of other people. John, don't hook the hooks into all the lace. The reason I don't have some one else hook it is because there is no one else. I'd love to have a French maid to hook me into my clothes and to take care of them, but there is a perfectly obvious reason why I haven't one. Oh, John, dear, cheer up; you're almost at the end. It won't take but a minute more, and then think how nice I'll look. Cool and—well, maybe you're not cool, but if you'd go at it without so much nervous energy wasted, you'd be cooler. Anyhow, there's nothing to get hot over. Oh, thank you ever so much. I'm sorry to have to bother you." (Feeling around cautiously in the back.) "You've hooked it all crooked, John. Isn't that too provoking! No, if that's the way you feel about it, you needn't hook it up again. I'll put on a kimono. If you want people to come in and find your wife sitting around in a kimono just because you're too unkind to hook her dresses, I can stand it if you can. No, you needn't hook my dress. I prefer not to have you. No, I don't want you to talk all the time, but you might at least say something beside such words as will imperil your immortal soul. We can agree on that, at least. Well, if you're sure you can do it without swearing, you may try once more. Never mind the collar, John. I'll attend to that. No, there isn't a hook off. I know there isn't. It fastens right there under that cluster of tucks. Oh, you know what a cluster is. There, that's fine. John, you're a perfect dear. Oh, yes you are, too. Most men would get mad if they were even asked to button a dress. Now, don't I look nice? Oh, John! You old silly!"

New Pavilion.

The new dancing pavilion which has been built over the St. Louis river in connection with the Spirit lake branch of the Boat club has been pronounced "perfection." There seems to be lacking no infinitesimal detail in the joy which the new dance hall can produce. The first dance to be held there was enjoyed Saturday evening by the week-end crowd of the members and their friends, but the formal opening of the hall will be held Wednesday evening of this week. The room is built out over the river and the lower story is used as a boathouse. The room is open on all sides, being screened in, and the beauty of the scenery both up and down the river to be seen by the dancers is not the least of its charms.

The members who go up to the club for the Wednesday evening dance may return on the large cabin launch, which will bring them back to the city.

Although the grocer denies it with emphasis, the present is not a very good year for vegetables. The only thing which seems to be plentiful and finely developed is onions. You can get a bunch large enough to last the week, if you are fond of onions, and large enough to last the season, if you are not enthusiastic about them, for 15 cents. The tomatoes are very poor, the peas are too large, the corn is small, the sweet potatoes are as yet too expensive for general consumption and summer squash is, at best, a rather watery vegetable. The cauliflower is good, and the small egg plants that are to be had are not bad. But the quality of the marketable vegetables is not such as to make the housekeeper very enthusiastic.

ALWAYS THE BEST

Advised by Mrs. Osborne for Young Girls' Gowns.

It is my belief that nothing is "good enough" for anything. There should be but one standard—the best, and only the best, and always the best, says Mrs. Osborne in the Delineator, in writing of the gowning of young girls. How else can you expect a child to grow up into a fastidious, exquisite woman?

I think the "good enough" system is responsible for the badly dressed English woman. She lets herself go in the daytime and only puts herself really well together for dinner at night.

Of course, I don't mean that a child should be sent to school in her party frocks, or that at any time she should be elaborately dressed. The little girl in an untrimmed white dimity with a pretty, fresh hair ribbon of exactly the right color is a well dressed child. The little girl in the seat next her, who is proudly conscious of the fact that her school dress and underclothing are trimmed with real lace is a badly dressed child. She has been started off with extravagant ideas, and as she grows older she will pile on and pile on, to keep up with that early standard.

The two children are working out the theory of completion in dress from totally different standpoints. The first little girl understands that her dress is suitable, fresh, dainty and pretty. The other little girl thinks that she must be well dressed because it has been impresed upon her that a great deal of money has been spent on her. Consequently, to continue well dressed, she must continue to spend a great deal of money.

And as for frills and furbelows, sashes and fallals, away with them! Take everything that you can off a dress, and then look again. Possibly you will find something else that is superfluous. My own preference is decidedly toward the simple and girlish, unadorned. I like little straight skirts with fine, dainty tucking. When lace or embroidery is used it should be very, very fine and exquisite in design; better none at all than of the order that arrests the attention, by its obvious value or its equally obvious cheapness.

Many mothers who make a sincere effort to dress their children let themselves go when it comes to hats. They can't resist the temptation of putting on an extra feather, a heavier bow, and send their children out in hats that a woman of 30 might wear. It is so unnecessary, too, for hats can be picturesque without losing an atom of their simplicity.

To Keep Cool.

The girl who wants to keep cool and pretty will observe this hair rule. She will comb her hair with a big comb, whose teeth are dull—a comb which will not rasp the scalp.

There is no economy in using a cheap, sharp comb. It will ruin the hair in the end. It also heats the head and makes one feel hot all day.

Hurry and worry are both fatal to the beauty of the hot weather girl, and she will have none of either of them. Hurry is a thing which she can banish by planning properly, while worry is a thing she has long since outgrown. There is no need of hurrying and no sense in worrying.

The clothing should be as light as possible in summer. The pretty girl inclines to white because it makes her feel cooler. Blue is also a cool color, but pink is exciting to the nerves. Green is tranquilizing,, and violet soothes the eyes, but it is white that acts best upon the temperament; its sight makes one cool.

Learn Good Habits.

Not every one can learn to play, or sing, or paint well enough to give pleasure to her friends, says the Style Magazine, but the following good habits may be acquired and poor ones be avoided by any one:

Never fuss or fidget.

Close the door, and close it softly.

Have an hour of rising, and rise.

Always know where your belongings are.

Learn to make bread as well as cake.

Keep your own room in tasteful order.

Never appear at breakfast without a collar.

Never go about with shoes unbuttoned.

Never let a button stay off twenty-four hours.

Speak clearly enough for all to understand.

Never let a day pass without doing something to make somebody comfortable.

This is a low price for a day's pleasure at one of the beauty spots of America. Chamber's grove will be open to excursionists, and nowhere in this part of the country is there a more delightful place for a picnic. If you have relatives or friends visiting you take them to Fond du Lac on a Herald excursion—you could not choose any better form of entertainment than the trip up the picturesque St. Louis river, with a picnic at the beautiful old Indian trading post.

At 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the steamer America will make a trip to Two Harbors, fare for the round trip 50 cents. A stop of one hour will be made at Two Harbors, to afford an opportunity for supper to those who do not take their lunches on the boat. Most people prefer to carry their lunches. The return trip will be by moonlight. It would be hard to imagine a more delightful trip than this one. Hundreds of people have already made the trip and are enthusiastic about it. Saturday afternoon 325 people made the Two Harbors trip. The America will leave Booth's dock at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will return at 9 o'clock.

The steamer Newsboy and Mascotte will leave the dock at foot of Fifth avenue west.

HIBBING ANXIOUS ABOUT THAT ROAD

Commercial Club Desires Something Definite From Traction Co.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—There will be a meeting of the Commercial club this evening in the municipal court room, at which will be taken up the proposition to organize the schools into an independent district, and also to discuss the street railway matter. The sentiment here at present seems to be that the Northern Traction company has had ample time to do something with its franchise, and the people want to be "shown."

Work on the new city hall began today. D. A. McKenzie, who has the contract for moving the frame residence now occupying one of the lots, promises to have it off this evening. The excavation will be started about the middle of the week.

Virginia won over Hibbing in Sunday's ball game, through the numerous errors of the home team. Hibbing had a couple of chances to score, but failed to do so. Both Graham and Olmquist pitched fine ball; the final score being 3 to 0.

The new public library which was opened to the public on Saturday, was packed with visitors during the entire day. So far, about half the books have been received. The others are expected in the near future. Miss Margaret Palmer, formerly located at Superior, is the librarian in charge.

CLAIM CHAIRMAN DREW SOME PAY

School District No. 1 of Itasca Discussing Absorbing Topic.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—An absorbing topic in this school district, No. 1, is the claim that F. T. Ruesswig, a local undertaker, who has been chairman of the board for the past two years, has been drawing $600 per year, it is stated, is contrary to law. The matter was widely and freely discussed at the school meeting held Saturday night when a new set of officials was elected, and it is reported a demand will be made upon Ruesswig for the return of the money. Ruesswig and his friends claim that if there is any mistake the error has been largely technical. As the district is a large one, embracing over ten towns, the chairman has often been put to considerable expense and no one disposed to be fair believes he should be expected to bear the expense himself. Acting in accordance with a ruling from the attorney general's office relative to the method of electing the school officers in entire new set of officers was elected Saturday night as follows:

Henry Hughes, chairman; James Doran, clerk, and Charles E. Aiken, treasurer.

At a former meeting it was voted to pay the treasurer the sum of $1,200 as his annual compensation.

At the meeting Saturday evening the motion allowing $1,200 to the treasurer was reconsidered after a spirited contest, and his pay fixed at $600.

For the last two years Chairman Ruesswig is said to have received $600 per year for his services, and a motion was passed that he be required to restore this amount to the district treasury. Motions were also passed with reference to the manner in which the district finances shall be handled during the year to come, and the publication of the proceedings of the school board.

Chairman Ruesswig was not a candidate for re-election, and it is rumored that he may refuse to yield his office, and may resist any legal proceedings which may be undertaken by his newly elected successor. The meeting Saturday evening aroused great interest, the attendance being more than 200.

EVELETH WANTS PARK.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is considerable talk of securing a park near town which will compare favorably with those farther east. The town allows the use of $1,000 for park purposes, but at the present time this is not being used for that purpose. From the sentiment expressed by prominent people of the town, some kind of a park ought to be built to which people can go on their holidays and evenings.

MAN LOSES LIFE UNLOADING TIES

Iver Ferguson Fatally Crushed at Ball Club, Itasca County.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—While unloading birch bridge ties at Ball Club, in the northwestern part of Itasca county, a few days ago, Iver Ferguson, aged 35, married and the father of two children living in Iowa, was instantly killed, and Jens Bakken, single, 25, seriously injured.

The men were cutting away the posts of a flat car loaded with ties, when suddenly a post or more broke, precipitating the load upon Ferguson, killing him instantly. Bakken ran down the grade to escape, but some of the ties hitting him, bruised his body considerably. He was brought to a hospital at Grand Rapids and is still in a critical condition. The foreman, who was also cutting the side stakes, saw the load was falling off and he stepped under the car and escaped uninjured.

Ferguson's remains were shipped to Iowa.

EVELETH ORE SHIPPING SAID TO HAVE LESSENED.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—It has been reported that some miners at the Fayal, on the night shift, had been laid off, and that a few had also been laid off at the Adams. This as yet has not been confirmed, but it is known that the shipping now is less than it has been, and that the demand for ore is not very great. Some shipping is still being carried on, but not to any great extent.

BOYS LEAVE FOR SUMMER CAMP

Fifty Members of the Y. M. C. A. Go to Deerwood.

Norman D. McLeod, secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., having in charge about fifty boys, left this morning for Deerwood, Minn., where the boys' department summer camp will be held for the next ten days.

The number of boys taking the trip this year is smaller than for some years past, but the low rate of $1, which was formerly secured, does not prevail this year, and the added expense has cut down the number of campers.

The site of the camp is one of the prettiest in Northern Minnesota, with ample facilities for fishing, boating, swimming and aquatic sports.

ENTERING A NEW ERA

elected for the new Constitutional term of six years, and will be formally inaugurated July 1. President Caceres is a man of the people. He comes from the most prosperous agricultural district of the republic, and is well liked and apparently enjoys the respect of all classes.

"The Dominican Republic starts upon a new governmental era with the inauguration of President Caceres. By provisions of the new constitution, adopted in February, the term of the president was extended from four to six yearss. This fact alone will operate to remove even remote excusess for disturbances, formerly always contemporaneous with presidential elections.

Financial Statement Good.

In his financial statement, Receiver Pulliam shows a condition far more satisfactory than had been expected—a statement which reflects distinct credit upon the American receivership. Mr. Pulliam writes:

"The new budget for the coming fiscal year to commence July 1, 1908, estimates the aggregate federal income at $3,348,300, which is the largest in the history of the Republic. Of the gross amount, $3,316,000 is the expectation from customs receipts to be derived from the three principal sources, imports, exports and port charges—the latter item including a few incidental miscellaneous collections. As the preceding budget reckoned on customs receipts $3,150,000, which sum will be surpassed in actual returns for the fiscal year, the estimmakers were warranted in basing the approaching year's returns at a higher figure; and it is pleasing to note, in passing, that each succeeding budget enacted since the American receivership of customs affairs was for an increased aggregate amount.

"Comparing fiscal year 1904-05 with 1908-09 the latter estimate is an increase of 60 per cent, of which gain 68 per cent, is expected from customs receipts and 32 per cent from all other sources.

"Taking the estimate $3,316,000 as a working basis for determining proper percentage to represent cost of collection, 5 per cent of such amount would be $165,000. However, a total sum of but $127,256 was appropriated to meet the entire customs expense, which will include salaries and expenses at the eight equipped entry ports, a separate item for the expenses of the receivership, and outlay for maintaining three interior ports along the Haitian frontier. The aggregate amount appropriated for the combined customs service is less than 4 per cent of the estimated gross customss collections, and it will be ample for the purpose indicated."

WONDERED WHY.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

printed accounts of the disaster, that they must have lost their lives.

Mr. Stees declares that the Eastern British Columbia Lumber company, with which he is connected, has lost its plant and about 50,000,000 feet of lumber at Fernie.

GREAT NORTHERN LOSS.

Many Carloads of Coke and Several Bridges Already Destroyed.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 3.—The Great Northern officials have received word from their division superintendent at White Fish, Mont., that sixty-five carloads of coke and coal and three bridges belonging to the company have been destroyed by the forest fires at Fernie. The big bridges just west of the depot at Fernie and Number 3 and Number 4 bridges, across the Elk river, between Hosmer and Michel, have been destroyed. The Canadian Pacific railroad has lost two depots, a water tank and all its cars at Fernie.

The women and children have been sent to Cranbrook, and refuge trains have been asked for from near-by towns.

The Cedar Valley Lumber company's plant has been totally destroyed, and there are only a few residences left standing in the town, according to the dispatch. Six are known to have perished, and probably many more have met death in the flames. A hurricane is blowing, and it is impossible to head off the flames.

CHICAGOANS LOSE.

Had Much Money Invested by Fred Lynch Near Fernie.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Destruction by forest fire in the Crows Nest district, British Columbia, directly affects a number of Chicagoans. Frederick B. Lynch, who was manager of the presidential campaign for Governor Johnson of St. Paul, who lives in St. Paul, and O. W. Robertson, also of St. Paul, were in charge of an investment of more than $2,000,000 in the coal fields and lands of the district. It is feared that all of this may be lost. Several Chicagoans are concerned in the investment.

BUT LITTLE REMAINS.

The City of Fernie Practically Completely Burned Up.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3.—Ten cottages, two coal offices, the Western Canada grocery, the coal company's new warehouse, are all that remains of Fernie. Within fifteen minutes of the time the fire broke into the city the place was a mass of swirling flames. A special from Fernie says:

As early as 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Fort Steele brewery, the first large building to catch, was burned. Houses in the immediate neighborhood soon caught and, though the people turned out to fight the fire immediately the flames spread rapidly and the whole place was soon on fire. Old town, where most of the miners resided, soon burned, and then the business portion caught. The large residential portion came last, after the fine mills of the Elk River Lumber company had been destroyed.

Lost Lives on Bridges.

The West Fernie bridges, across Elk river, could not be saved. Several people lost their lives in trying to escape over the burning bridges. The fire spread with such rapidity that hardly anything was saved. Numbers of people fled to the river banks and sought refuge by wading in the water; others ran to the Canadian Pacific tracks, where special trains were waiting to convey the people to Michel, but this trip could not be made, because the bridge, it was learned, between Hosmer and Michel, had gone out.

During the night the coal company's office was used as a distributing point for food. Saturday night was a frightful one of excitement, and many heartrending scenes were witnessed. It was spent in getting many of the women and children on the trains and starting them for Cranbrook. During the night the wind went down and Sunday morning many of the men and their stouthearted wives came in from the hills to which they had fled to view the smoking remains of the city. Many harrowing tales were told. One woman of West Fernie had just emerged from her home, which was on fire. She dropped dead of heart disease. The neighbors buried her in her garden and then ran for their lives.

Number of Dead Unknown.

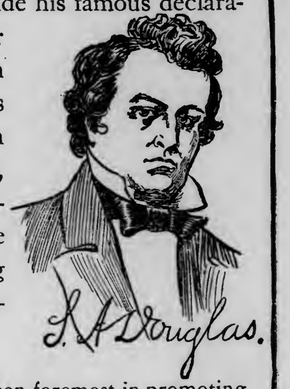
Spokane, Wash., Aug. 3—A dispatch to the Spokesman Review from Fernie, B. C., says: It is feared that the loss of life from the forest fires will reach beyond the one hundred mark, but there are so many living people without homes or shelter or food to be looked after, that up to the present time no effort has been made to ascertain the number of dead. In the district swept by the flames, there is estimated to have been some 7,000 people. Two thousand have been sent west to Cranbrook and Elko; some 1,500 fled from flames to the northward and reached Hosmer and other places along the line. A Great Northern train took all the people it could carry up the line, fighting its way through sheets of flames before reaching a place of safety. Scores of families were separated, husbands not knowing where their wives and children were, and in some instances members of the same family were in Cranbrook, Fernie and Hosmer.

The lowest estimate of the amount of the property loss is placed at $2,500,000, and as nearly as can be ascertained, the insurance carried will amount to $1,500,000.

It is estimated by the relief committee that 3,500 persons will have to be furnished with temporary shelter and food.

GREAT MEN & BEER BREWING

The brewers of beer have always been encouraged and often even subsidized by state and colonial governments of this country in the endeavor to curtail the evil effects of real dissipation. The best men of their times were engaged in the business, such as Wm. Penn, who caused the first brewery to be erected in Pennsylvania. Samuel Adams, acknowledged father of the American Revolution, conducted his father's brewery in Boston, Patrick Henry was a jovial host at Williamsburg, in Virginia, the year before he made his famous declaration, "Give me liberty or give me death." Abraham Lincoln even, in his famous debate, turned the table on Douglas with his ready wit, that he had paid his government tax for the purpose of furnishing the flowing bowl to his illustrious opponent.



Surely the brewers and their friends have always been foremost in promoting the public welfare, but never before has such a healthful and enjoyable brew been given the American people as

CASS LAKERS AGAIN WIN.

Ball Nine Easily Trims Team From Deer River.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cass Lake nine again demonstrated its superiority Sunday by trimming the People's Brewery team from Deer River, by the score of 9 to 5.

Lyons was in the box for Deer River, but was unable to keep the ball from the Cass Lake batsmen. He struck out but four men, and allowed eight hits. His support was very weak at times. Grady was in the box for Cass Lake the first seven innings, and struck out twelve men and allowed only two hits. Codrell twirled the other two, fanning four men and not allowing a fair hit.

Treat's equilibristic and musical seals and sea lions; Prof. Burton Fink's boxing and pag-punching mules; Mme. Marie Sunlin and her beautiful high school horse, "Alizpah;" Prof. Lou Sunlin and his marvelously trained bull, "Bill," and many others who contribute, to a program lasting two hours. This horse show and hippodrome will be given each evening only.

PROVISION FOR AIRSHIPS

Must be Made in the Tariff Law for Imported Machinery.

New York, Aug. 3.—The progress now being made in the development of the airship will probably result in the incorporation in the next tariff act of a special provision covering the new engine of aerial navigation, customs officials say. The present tariff law contains no provision for airships, although balloons are specified and pay duty at the rate of 30 per cent ad valorem. When the Dingley bill was drawn, in 1897, airships were at such a low stage of evolution that the framers of the law ignored their existence. Customs officials have, therefore, fallen back to the section of the present revenue act which specifies that imported articles not enumerated in the law shall pay duty according to the component material of chief value.

It thus happens that this "catch all" provision has had the effect of bringing airships for purposes of duty under the metal schedule, with a duty of 45 per cent. The metal classification accrues, owing to the fact that the motors and other metal parts of the ship exceed in value any other given component.

So far the importation of airships at the port of New York has probably not exceeded half a dozen.

Lumber Prices Higher.

D. F. Brooks of St. Paul, with the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company, was at the Spalding hotel yesterday.

Mr. Brooks declared that the prices on white pine were advancing. According to Mr. Brooks, the price of yellow pine has advanced from $1 to $1.25 a thousand. Mr. Brooks further stated that the lumber outlook was very encouraging and that business was steadily improving. The Brooks-Scanlon mill at Scanlon is operating at full capacity at the present time.

TO WELCOME RIFLE TEAM

Men Fresh From Olympic Contests to Arrive Aug. 8.

Will be Met in New York by Revenue Cutter Mohawk.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Next Saturday America will welcome home her victorious rifle team from the Olympic games. With the limited funds at the disposal of the committee on reception, it has been impossible to prepare and handle the demonstration which should be accorded the victors over teams from all shooting countries, but this is more than offset by the courtesies which will be extended by the government. What the demonstration may lack in splendor will be made up in heartiness, and in the unusual character of the welcome. Representatives of the federal government, in the persons of military and naval ocers, of the state and city of New York, of the various militia organizations interested, and of the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice and the National Rifle Association of America, together with a number of distinguished civilians interested in rifle practice, team the congratulations which they so thoroughly deserve. The treasury department has placed at the disposal of the reception committee the revenue cutter Mohawk, the largest in the service.

On the morning of Aug. 8, the reception committee and invited guests will embark and proceed to quarantine, where the team will be taken from the New York. On the way up the bay speeches of welcome and felicitation will be made by distinguished officers and civilians and a luncheon will be served. As soon as the baggage can be cleared the team, with a number of others, will leave for Camp Perry, Ohio, to attend the annual rifle matches. A large party will go from Washington to New York to attend the ceremonies and many of them will proceed to Comp Perry with the team. Gen. Fred D. Grant, commanding the department of the East, with his staff, will be on board the Mohawk, with other representatives of the army and navy, and a military band will add to the enjoyment of the occasion. A 10-pounder on the Mohawk will be utilized to give the proper salutes, and the steamer will be lavishly decorated with flags and bunting.

Headed by Gen. Drain.

The Olympic rifle team is headed by Gen. James A. Drain, one of the most prominent figures in rifle practice and National Guard work. Although a comparatively young man, he is president of the National Rifle association and a member of the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice; chief of ordnance of the state of Wahington; member of the new militia board, and editor of Arms and the Man, the shooting publication. The adjutant of the team is Capt. Frank E. Evans, U. S. Marine corps, retired, formerly connected with the New York Sun and now secretary to Senator Briggs of is Sergeant W. F. Leuschner of the Seventy-fourth N. Y., Buffalo. He tied with Capt. Martin of New Jersey, but had the highest score at the 1,000-yard range. Leuchner is an old-time shot and has attended the national matches as an individual. He was in poor form last year and failed to make the Palma trophy team, but was among the prize winners in the President's match. Capt. William B. Martin of New Jersey His most notable achieevment was the winning of the Wimbledon cup in 1901, with 18 points handicap for shooting a magazine rifle. Maj. C. B. Winder, divisional inspector of small arms practeam from 1901 to 1907. Won the Leech cup in 1903, the gold medal national individual rifle in 1905, and the silver medal in the national pistol match, 1905, in addition to many other national and state matches. Corporal I. L. Eastman, Second Ohio infantry, was a member of the Ohio team from 1903 to 1907, and a substitute on the Palma team of 1907. Capt. C. S. Benedict of the Seventh Ohio, was a member of the Ohio state team, 1903 to 1907, won the silver medal in the national individual rifle match, 1905, and has won a number of state matches. Capt. K. K. V. Casey of Delaware is a Spanish war veteran, and one of the test known shots in the country. He was a member of the Palma team of 1902, 1903 and 1907; of the New York state team, 1901-1904; won the Wimbledon cup, 1902 and 1907; the president's match in 1903, and the gold medal national individual match, 1904, besides many other prizes and medals. The team is accompanied by Mrs. Drain, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Casey and Mrs. Lenschner, and Sergeant Jeffers of Massachusetts, Capt. J. C. Semon of Ohio, who acted as substitutes.

Mary Breolo, the 14-year-old West end girl, who eloped with Ferantl Casomer and was arrested in Superior Thursday, after spending the interval in jail, was arraigned before Judge Ensign in juvenile court Saturday afternoon. The court continued the case for two weeks, allowing the girl to go free in the mean time.

There was considerable excitement around the police station Saturday afternoon owing to the case. The Italians in the city have been unusually interested in the juvenile romance and they crowded the station and the vicinity all day.

A BLOW TO THE FARMER

Higher Transportation Will Affect Tiller of the Soil.

Withdrawal of Big Cargo Boats a Significant Move.

New York, Aug. 3.—The high freight charges of the railroad lines, operating east of Buffalo, it will be recalled, so far diverted wheat from the New York and Boston routes to the St. Lawrence routes that five large White Star cargo boats were withdrawn from service at New York, and two Leyland Line boats were laid up from the Boston route. In addition to foreing American wheat through a Canadian outlet the relatively lower Canadian wheat rates are a distinct handicap in favor of the Canadian cereals, which is something that appeals very strongly.

A transportation expert, thoroughly in touch with foreign conditions, said yesterday when questioned regarding the effect of higher freight rates on the farmers' foreign markets:

Briefly, the farmer will have to pay more for what he has to buy and get less for what he has to sell. However, if justice favored a rate advance, the farmer should bear his share of it. But facts, so far uncontroverted, show that the railroads have not been sincere in saying they have not advanced rates already amply sufficient to cover increased costs of operation, and it looks as if they can only be answered by admitting them.

The Farmer's Output.

"The farmer's output may be divided into two classes—one, the product consumed in America; the other, the products exported. What we consume here makes us neither richer nor poorer; we simply swap things with each other, be those things produce or money. Our exports are different—they make our whole country richer, bringing into the country money for something we did not have to send money out of the country for.

"Now, it is in respect to exports of our farm products that farmers must look first. In the European markets grain, for illustration, is offered from Russia, Southern Europe, South America, Australia, Canada and many other points in competition with ours. It matters not to the buyer what it costs to put it there. He buys it, quality considered, when he can get it cheapest. Therefore, an increase in freight rates of, say, about 2 cents a bushel (10 per cent on the freight paid from the farm to the elevator and from the elevator to the seaboard) does not fall on him nor on the steamship company nor on the railroad company or elevator owners. Who stands it, then? The farmer. On him the full burden falls.

Will Get Uniform Price.

"Will the farmer sell one part of his grain for home use and another for export at 2 cents per bushel less? No; he will get a uniform price. Then what will this uniform price be? We have a surplus that must be exported, that will force itself low enough to be exported, else it would make a disastrous glut here. Exports will not cease—grain prices will come to the export level and pull the price of all that sold at home down to that level. Therefore the farmer will lose approximately the entire freight increase both on home and foreign sold, so far as it falls on grain and other crops produced with a surplus for export. The farmer cannot do as some manufacturers, fix his price at home and take a lower price for surplus for export. One price is his unfortunate predicament, and that price is the foreign price less the cost of moving it from the farm to the foreign mill. As the cost of moving it increases, just so much does he get less for his grain. "A freight advance will, therefore, make the farmer suffer double, getting less for what he sells, while paying more for what he buys.

In Direct Competition.

"Our exports, the bulwark of our commercial supremacy, are, barring a small proportion of exclusively American articles, in direct competition with like articles from all the other exporting countries of the world. Quality equal they must meet the price. Therefore it can be seen at a glance that neither the foreign merchant nor consumer pays a freight advance. It therefore falls flatly on the farmer or manufacturer according to the character of the goods, or upon the steamship companies, who may, to get the haul, unite at a cut price to make the total price low enough to sell the goods. Steamships, however, will not bear much of it, for they have the world to roam over and lowering rates send them to other ports, except the liners. The freight ship—the chartered ship—plays the important part in regulating our ocean rates, relieving our liners of their presence when rates are low, thus letting the liners get full rates again.

"For this reason, with only occasional exceptions, the full burden of any freight increase falls upon the farmer or manufacturer.

"If an advance is necessary they will have to bear it. But if the railroads are trying to make a 'killing,' to gather in $180,000,000 more a year without justification and only to swell interest and dividends on inflated bond issues and watered stock, then the farmer and the merchant should resist it.

"If the railroads will make a clear showing down public opinion will decide whether they are entitled to an advance or not. But they must not forget that this same public opinion will listen to the farmer and the manufacturer, the merchant and the consumer, as well."

Fight for Interest in Iron Lands Comes to Close.

The hot fight for the Chesebrough sixth interest in iron lands valued at about $3,000,000 adjoining the Syracuse mine, was brought to a close Saturday afternoon after an all-day session. The arguments will now be submitted to Judge Dibell in briefs and a decision is expected within a few days.

Bennett and Longyear, Minneapolis mining men, purchased a two-thirds interest in the property for $35,000. They agreed to hold a quarter interest in this two-thirds for George L. Chesebrough on consideration of his services in completing the deal. After the deal was completed, however, they claim to have learned that he received commission from the other side, and so refused to live up to their agreement with him. In the meantime William Harrison of this city had purchased half of the Chesebrough interest, so that he is fighting jointly with Chesebrough for their interest.

We Have Planted Tomatoes On 1,200 More Acres

This year we've added 1,200 acres to our tomato patch. Just to raise the tomatoes for making the sauce that goes on Van Camp's Beans.

The demand for Van Camp's Beans is growing by leaps and bounds. It is now larger, by several times over, than for any other brand in the world.

Yet it is only beginning. There are millions of housewives still baking their own beans. They will all let us bake for them when they know Van Camp's.

And thousands are still buying other brands—simply because they don't know. Some time they will get a can of Van Camp's. Then they'll be our customers, too.

So we have planted 1,200 more acres to tomatoes, to supply your demands next year.

We have told you about our tomato sauce.

We make it solely from whole, ripe tomatoes, grown close to our kitchens, and ripened on the vines.

We pick these tomatoes just at the crest of their ripeness—when the juice fairly sparkles. That's how we get that superlative zest in the sauce that's baked into our beans.

Some sauce is made from tomatoes picked green and ripened in shipment. Some is made of scraps from a canning factory. Such sauce is not rich; it lacks flavor.

But such sauce costs only one-fifth what we spend to make ours. That's why it is often used. And that is one reason why other beans cannot compare with Van Camp's.

Another reason lies in the beans themselves.

We buy only the choicest Michigan beans, grown on a soil rich in nitrogen. They are picked over by hand, so we get only the whitest, the plumpest, the fullest-grown.

We often pay for such beans seven or eight times what other beans can be bought for. But you can see the result if you compare other beans with Van Camp's.

Our beans are baked in live steam, heated to 245 degrees. We bake in small parcels, so that the full heat goes through.

The result is, the particles are separated, by the fierce heat, so that the digestive juices can get to them.

That is not so with home-baked beans. Not half so much heat gets to the center of your baking dish. The result is, your beans don't digest. They ferment and form gas.

Then we bake the beans, the tomato sauce and the pork all together and get a delicious blend.

In these ways we prepare, after 47 years of experience, the finest beans ever baked. The millions of people who know these beans never will use any other.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

Have you begun to use Van Camp's? If not, ask your neighbor about them. Learn—for your own sake—what you are missing. Millions are now enjoying this delicious, economical, ready-cooked dish.

We don't need to argue about other brands of beans. If somebody claims that his beans equal ours, simply try them and see. We are willing to abide by your judgment.

But we do wish to argue about home-baked beans. Beans to be good for you must be digestible. And, to be digestible, they must be factory cooked.

You don't want to eat beans that ferment and form gas—that don't digest, don't nourish.

You don't want some beans crisped, and others less than half baked. You want them all baked alike.

You don't want them mushy and broken. You do want them nutty, mealy and whole.

You can't bake beans as they should be baked. You lack the facilities—lack sufficient heat.

And think of the trouble you save by having them ready-baked. Each can in the house means a meal all cooked. A meal that is more nutritious than meat—more appetizing than anything else that you know.

Sit out in the breeze these hot afternoons and let us cook the supper for you.

Ends Fiscal Year.

W. R. Stone was re-elected president, A. L. Orden vice president, C. R. Rust treasurer and manager, and J. E. Granger secretary of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company at the annual election of officers held Friday.

The fiscal year ending July 31 was declared to be a most prosperous one, according to the statements of the officers of the company. The branch houses at Minot, N. D., and Billings, Mont., are in a very flourishing condition, this being especially true of the house at Billings.

The Stone-Ordean-Wells company was one of the first of the Middle West jobbing houses to develop the Montana trade. The result of their initiative in this regard is that many Duluth houses have a flourishing business in that state.

URGES REMOVAL OF TENDERLOIN

Rev. Wurtele Voices a Strong Appeal From Park Point Pulpit.

Rev. Arthur H. Wurtele last night delivered a stirring appeal for the removal of the red light district from its present location on St. Croix avenue. He was speaking before the congregation of the Park Point mission and he had a decidedly sympathetic audience.

Mr. Wurtele declared that no other city in the country flaunted the shame of its vice-ridden districts as brazenly as did Duluth. In no other city, he claimed, are the dens of evil houses in such luxurious style.

He pointed out the danger to a woman's reputation if at any time she is forced to use lower Lake avenue alone. He pointed out how such a trip might be often a necessity, to see a doctor or visit a dying friend. The danger to a lone woman from the patrons of the St. Croix avenue resorts was emphasized during the talk.

Mr. Wurtele alluded to the awful irony of the location of these dens of vice on the only street in the city which bears the name of a saint. He predicted that ultimately, when men became sufficiently cultured and educated to see the value of morality, these districts would be done away with, but for the present he urged in the strongest terms that the district should be removed farther from the main streets of the city and farther from the vicinity of the schools and streets which must be used by women and children.

INCREASE HOURS AT SHOPS.

Great Northern Employes at St. Cloud Working Ten Hours.

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The ten-hour schedule was put in effect at the Great Northern car shops Saturday. The men have been working nine hours since the first of the year. Owing to the increased business it has been found necessary to extend the working day.

The new order will be in effect through the winter. The officials at the car shops are making preparations for the fall rush, which is expected to come soon. Lots of repair work is now on hand, which the company wants to complete so as to have a clear board for the fall work. On or about Sept. 1 the working force will be increased by fifty men. Later in the fall it is expected that more men will be added. At the present time only 237 men are employed at the institution. This will be increased to 300.

The work of making grain doors will be commenced in earnest within a week or so.

NEW YORK BROKER LOST.

Dropped $500 Betting Time Did Not Change at Williston.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 3.—E. S. Lewis, a New York broker, who was on his way to Seattle, Wash., over the Great Northern, lost $500 from his lack of knowledge of the change of time at Williston. E. S. Corey, a Montana ranchman, won the money.

The two men were talking in the observation car and Mr. Lewis inquired as to the time the train reached Williston. "We get in at 6:30," replied Corey. "And leave at 5:30." Thinking that Corey had misspoken himself, and with him, Lewis offered to bet that he was wrong. Corey saw the game, and the bet finally reached $500, when it was decided to abide by the conductor's watch.

Eagerly the men awaited their arrival at Williston, Lewis keeping close by the conductor's side. The moment they arrived Lewis snapped out his request for the time, and was told that it was 6:30 to the dot. In ten minutes the train rolled out and again the request for the time was issued by Mr. Lewis. "Just 5:30," replied the conductor, as he passed through the car notifying the passengers to set their watches back one hour.

AGAIN TRIES SUICIDE.

Boncsteel, S. D., Aug. 3.—Mrs. Frank Pinkham who attempted to murder her two children and kill herself made a second attemp at self-destruction. She took out the tracheotomy tube which had been inserted in her throat by a doctor and then attempted to swallow a spool of thread. It is thought the woman is insane, as insanity exists in the family. There is little hope for the recovery of the woman or the 14-months-old babe, but the oldest child will recover.

FARGO GETS ONE GAME

Eighteen-Inning Contest Saturday Goes to the Brown Wanderers.

Sox Win Two Games Sunday in Easy Fashion.

An eighteen-inning battle Saturday, the longest of the Northern league this year, which went to Fargo by a score of 7 to 5, and two easy victories for the Sox by scores of 8 to 4 and 6 to 1 Sunday, wound up the Fargo series and left the Sox with a .500 percentage to face Brandon.

Saturday's game was the big event of the year on the local lot. It was filled with sensational pitching and fielding. Walter Murray went the entire route for the Sox and was strong until about the sixteenth inning, when he began to go. He was hit a little harder in the seventeenth and gave way altogether in the eighteenth, when three two-baggers came in succession, scoring two runs and cinching the game for the Browns.

Cook opened for Fargo, but after the Sox tied the score in the tenth, he was derricked and Perce succeeded him. The Notre Dame man pitched fine ball for the remainder of the game and he and Murray fought it out to the finish. Despite Murray's weakness in the final round, his performance was a great one. He was hit hard, but pulled himself out of the pinches. He gave but one base on balls and hit but one man through the entire eighteen innings.

The tenth inning was a sensational one. Cook hit a ball along the first base line and it was lost in the grass, Cook scoring. The Browns worked another man around and it was thought to be all off. The Sox came back, however, scored two runs and tied it up again.

After the Browns had made an effort to take the first game Sunday and failed, they fell back to tail enders and gave a very indifferent exhibition. Cook and Thompson worked in a lot of cheap comedy that was lost on most of the crowd. The pitchers worked hard, but the team played indifferently and the Sox didn't have much trouble taking both contests.

The first game was a wild contest. Twenty-one men were given free transportation to first base by bases on balls or being hit by the ball. Brandt opened for Duluth and was derricked in the fourth inning, after his wildness had almost lost the game for him. Dick Thorsen was little better, but the Browns couldn't hit him in the pinches. Waldorf opened for Fargo and lasted just four innings. He was even wilder than Brandt and the contest seemed to be as to who could get the most men on bases.

Fargo's failure to hit lost the game. The Browns left fifteen men reposing on the sacks at the finish of the innings, while Duluth had a record of twelve. Up t othe fourth inning, the Browns had a lead, but the Sox came up strong, pounded Cook and took the big end of the score easily.

Thorsen went back for the Sox in the second game, pitched nice ball all the way through and received the benefit of his team mates' work. Waldorf opened again for Fargo, got away for five innings and fell down in the sixth, the Sox chasing five runs over the plate. The game was called at the end of the seventh to allow the Browns to catch their train to Winnipeg.

The only run Fargo scored came in the third inning, when Thompsen hit one to center field and made the entire circuit of the bases before it was returned. He should only have gone three bases, but slow fielding sent him home safely.

Millers Drop Two.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 3.—Columbus took two games from Minneapolis, 10 to 5 and 7 to 1. Distance hitting, with drives good for a clean homer in each contest, was responsible. Wilson, who was driven out of the first game, came back in the second, but was out-pitched by Goodwin. Running catches by Kruger and Killen were fielding features. Scores:

EASY FOR AMERICANS.

Visiting Athletes Take Most of the Prizes at Paris.

Paris, Aug. 3.—The last day of the special athletic games brought great success to the visiting Americans, who captured a majority of the events. William F. Hamilton, Chicago A. A., won the 100-meter dash from scratch. His time was 11 seconds. H. T. Trube, New York A. C., took the 1,500-meter run in 4 minutes 12 seconds. E. T. Cook, Cornell, won the pole vault. The 400-meter flat race went to J. C. Carpenter, Cornell, who negotiated the distance in 50 seconds flat. H. A. Gidney, Boston A. A. C., captured the high jump. The attendance at the games was large.

FAST TIME EXPECTED

Motor Boats Will Race for the International Cup.

Time Made in Trials Gives Promise of Great Contest.

New York, Aug. 3.—Indications are bright at Huntington, L. I., for the successful running today for the international motor boat cup race. The water in the bay all day yesterday was calm, and with a light southwest wind in the evening, everything pointed to ideal conditions this afternoon. The prediction was freely made that the fastest time ever made in the world by high power motor craft would be witnessed in the 30-mile cup race, scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

The reason for this enthusiasm was the remarkable trial run made by Daikler II, Lord Howard de Walden's English boat, over the racing circuit. While it was impossible to secure her accurate time, it was conservatively estimated that she was going close to thirty nautical miles an hour.

Capt. Noel Robbins did not take out Wolseley-Siddeley, which is owned by the duke of Westminster. She is in perfect condition.

Dixie II, which is admitted to be America's best defender, was hauled out during the day and two or three of her seams tightened. Commodore Hoadley's Den was the only one of the three American defending boats out during the day, but while she is a good boat of her type, she is likely to be a negligible quantity in the race. It is expected that the other American boat, Capt. Sheppard's "U. S. A.," formerly the Irene, of the Riverton Yacht club, New Jersey, may develop fast speed. She has two 100-horse-power engines, and is reputed to have done in the neighborhood of thirty or thirty-five statute miles an hour.

COLERAINE AND EVELETH DIVIDE

Kennelley's Men Win Saturday and Lose Sunday Game.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eveleth and Coleraine broke even on the Saturday and Sunday games here. Saturday, Coleraine enlisted Pitcher Krick of Duluth, but he failed to hold the Eveleth men in check and the home team won 5 to 3. Yesterday Gebeau was wild at critical stages and Coleraine won 8 to 7 in eleven innings. Voss scored a home run in the eleventh inning, but Eveleth needed two runs to tie.

FRENCH JEWELER APPEALS

From Judgment of Lower Court in the Leeds Necklace Case.

New York, Aug. 3.—A new phase to the legal fight over Mrs. William B. Leed's celebrated pearl necklace has developed. Bernard Citron, a Paris jeweler, through his counsel, has filed notice of an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals from the judgment of the lower court. In June the lower court refused to order the return of the duties of $110,000 paid by Citeron on the necklace consigned to Mrs. Leeds. This necklace was seized by the government two yars ago. The pearls were invoiced at $220,000, and duty was assessed at 60 per cent of the invoiced price. Citeron paid $132,000. He conceded that $22,000 of the amount was a lawful duty, but contended that as the pearls were not in necklace form, they should have been classified as loose pearls.

Since the seizure of the Leed's necklace, importers have ceased taking chances on shipping pearls in necklace form, and now, jewelers say, when an importer wishes to bring a necklace into this country he has the jewels taken apart and shipped in different packages, thereby making the shipment subject to a duty of only 10 per cent of the invoice value.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT BLOOD HUMORS

The skin is not simply an outer covering of the body, but through its thousands of pores and glands it performs the great and necessary work of regulating our temperatures, and also assists in disposing of the refuse and waste matters of the system by the constant evaporation that goes on through these little tubes. To perform these duties the tissues and fibres which connect and surround the pores and glands must be continually nourished by pure blood. When from any cause the circulation becomes infected with impurities and humors, it loses its strengthening powers and begins to disease and irritate the delicate tissues, and produces Eczema, Acne, Tetter, or some other itching, disfiguring skin trouble. S. S. S. cures skin diseases of every kind by going down into the circulation and neutralizing and removing the impurities and humors. It changes the quality of the blood to a cooling, health-producing stream, which, instead of irritating and inflaming the skin, cures and nourishes it by its soothing, healthful qualities. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., may be used for any temporary comfort they afford, but skin diseases cannot be cured until S. S. S. has purified the blood. YOUNG DULUTH DENTIST DRINKS CARBOLIC ACID

Dr. William T. Niemi Ends His Life at St. Louis Hotel.

Friends at a Loss to Account for His Act.

Dr. William T. Niemi, 23 years of age, a practicing dentist of this city, ended his life by drinking the contents of a two-ounce phial of carbolic acid, shortly before noon today in his room at the St. Louis hotel.

Death followed within half an hour after the drinking of the poison, despite the deperate efforts of Dr. John Jackola and Dr. Samuel W. Johnston to save the life of the young dentist.

A love affair is believed to have been the motive of the suicide. Dr. Niemi had been despondent for the past four days. During that time he had scarcely been in his office at all, but he appeared to be in the best of spirits last evening.

Shortly after 11:30 this morning Dr. John Jackola, who shared his reception room in the New Jersey building with Dr. Niemi, called up the doctor's room with the house telephone from the lobby of the hotel. Dr. Niemi answered the telephone and told the doctor to come up to his room. Dr. Jackola stopped in the lobby a few minutes and then went up to Dr. Niemi's room on the fourth floor of the hotel. When he entered the room he found Dr. Niemi writhing on the floor.

Dr. Jackola asked what was the matter, and in a voice that was scarcely above a whisper, Dr. Niemi replied:

"Good-bye, doctor. You will forgive me, won't you? I have taken two ounces of carbolic acid."

These were the last words spoken by the dying man. Dr. Jackola rushed down stairs and secured a stomach pump, emetics and strong stimulants. Dr. Samuel W. Johnston of Seattle, who is stopping at the hotel, was hastily summoned, and the two doctors worked over the young dentist in a desperate effort to counteract the effect of the poison. Dr. Horace J. Davis was also summoned, but despite the heroic remedies of the three physicians, Dr. Niemi expired shortly after 12 o'clock.

Coroner McCuen reached the room just as the young dentist breathed his last. Dr. McCuen pronounced it a plain case of suicide, and decided that a post-mortem was unnecessary.

The young man was a graduate of the University of Minnesota, graduating with the class of 1907. Since completing his course he has been practicing in this city. Dr. John Jackola came to the city at the same time as Dr. Niemi and they opened adjoining offices in the New Jersey building. Dr. Jackola was his firm friend, as well as his professional associate, and he is at a loss to account for the suicide unless it was that Dr. Niemi was disappointed in a love affair.

The father and mother, three sisters, who live in Superior, and a brother, who is an engineer in the United States navy, stationed in New York city, survive the deceased. Dr. Jackola informed the parents of the suicide.

Dr. Niemi was one of the most jovial and companionable of young men. To his friends, as far as it is known, he never hinted of any trouble. He was successful in his profession and no business or financial troubles are known of.

Dr. Niemi's home was in Superior. He graduated from the Superior high school, taught school for a while in Michigan and then entered the university. He had a wide circle of friends and was very popular.

ASSAULTED WIFE; HEAVILY FINED

William Blanchard Given Alternative of a Jail Sentence.

William Blanchard, charged with beating his wife, and with the theft of her watch, appeared before Judge Cutting in police court this morning and was sentenced to sixty days in jail, with an alternative of $75 fine. He wasn't able to raise the money this morning.

According to the story told by Mrs. Blanchard, who lives on Fourth street near Lake avenue, her husband came home Friday night and, not finding her there, proceeded to an open air medicine show on upper Lake avenue and had it announced from the platform that if Mrs. Blanchard was in the audience she should return home immediately, as she was wanted there.

She left the show, and hadn't gone far when Blanchard accosted her. She says he used harsh language towards her, finally striking her and then making off with her watch. In court Blanchard admitted some domestic difficulties, but denied emphatically that he had taken the watch.

SALOON LICENSES.

Tangle for the City Council to Straighten Out.

There may be something of a tangle in saloon license matters before the council this evening. The proprietor of a saloon at 5602 Raleigh street has applied to have his license transferred to 5629 Grand, where Ted Epper formerly had his place of business.

Charles Strand, who recently was granted a license to conduct a saloon in New Duluth, has applied for a transfer to 5627, Grand, next door to Epper's old place, and another man has applied for a saloon license in New Duluth. There has been some protest against allowing another saloon at 5629 Grand avenue, and it is altogether likely that the whole matter will be laid over for one week for investigation.

IS SUSPENDED FOR FOUR DAYS

Frank Summers Cannot Play With Brandon Until Friday.

Artie O'Dea and his league leaders arrived in Duluth this morning, and this afternoon they are doing the first of seven battles with Al Kuehnow's White Sox at Athletic park. Artie is just brimming over with pennant aspirations, mixed with anxiety that is but poorly concealed. To tell the truth, Artie lives in wholesome fear of President John Lamb of the Northern league and Lamb's Winnipeg Maroons, runners up for the pennant at this stage.

O'Dea has a grouch that can be felt a mile away. It burns the brightest summer day into chill, damp darkness. When the Brandon team arrived this morning, the found a telegram from President Lamb, suspending Frank Summers for five days.

Artie was raving in a gentlemanly manner about noon.

"It's a bally outrage, y'know," he said, as he waved the telegram about (Artie got the "bally" thing from a remittance man at Brandon). "Lamb has slipped one over good and hard on me," he continued, failing back to his native American. "He knows that Summers' suspension will cripple me. McGraw is out of it for the remainder of the season with water on the knee. Both catchers are suffering from numerous injuries. I must now play a pitcher in the outfield, which doesn't help any. Lamb is determined to get that pennant for his team, if he has to suspend every man I've got. But we'll see."

Summers is said to have told Lamb about three weeks ago that Lamb ought to be either president of the league or manager of the Winnipeg club, but not both. The suspension is a result. Summers will be able to get in the game Friday.

McGUIRE MAY RUN.

Grand Rapids Man May be Candidate for the Legislature.

Advices from Grand Rapids state that efforts are being made to induce A. J. McGuire, superintendent of the Grand Rapids Experimental farm, to become a candidate for the state legislature. The great work that has been done for the farmers by Mr. McGuire has made him very strong among the rural class of the district, and should he consent to become a candidate there seems little doubt but that he would be elected.

Perhaps no young man in the state today is doing more for the farmers of Minnesota than this young educator. He is a graduate of the State Agricultural college and the University of Minnesota, and since going to the Grand Rapids Experimental farm has conducted an effective plan of education along practical lines.

Mr. McGuire has often been heard in this city, before the Commercial club, and has many friends among the farmers of St. Louis county. The news that he is considering the requests of his friends in the Grand Rapids district will be of interest to his many friends of this city and county.

IS NEPHEW OF W. H. TAFT

Walbridge S. Taft Spending a Few Days in Duluth.

Other Prominent Eastern People Are in the Party.

Walbridge S. Taft of New York, nephew of William H. Taft, Republican nominee for the presidency and son of Henry W. Taft, a member of the New York firm of Strong & Cadwalader, and who is mentioned as a probable candidate for judge of the supreme court, is in Duluth with a patry of young people awaiting the return of the freighter Wainwright of Erie, on which they arrived in Duluth on Saturday.

Mr. Taft's party is an interesting one aside from the fact that he is a nephew of the Republican nominee, as Miss Dorothy Taylor of Erie, Pa., and Mrs. Archibald B. Hubard of Philadelphia, are among its members. Miss Taylor is the youngest daughter of Mathew H. Taylor, president of the Pittsburg Coal & Coke company, and is considered one of the most popular and attractive young women of Erie. Mrs. Hubard was formerly Miss Cooke, grand daughter of the late Jay Cooke of Philadelphia, the famous financier of the Civil war, who was the original owner of the water rights on the St. Louis river, at Thompson, now owned and operated by the Great Northern Power company. The other members of the party are Miss Margaret Metcalf of Erie, Mr. Irving Olds, also of Erie, and C. E. Wales of the Pittsburg Coal & Coke company. The party was joined at Duluth by Richie Cowan of Colraine, formerly of Washington, D. C., who came to be with the young people, who are all old friends of his, while they are in the city.

Mr. Taft is a tall, athletic young man, a Yale graduate, who rowed for his university in its winning race against Harvard in 1907. He was a rival of John Peyton of Duluth for a seat in the Yale crew that year, and succeeded in displacing him. Mr. Peyton rowed on the crew this spring against Harvard.

Though an ardent admirer of his uncle, young Mr. Taft does not aspire to be a politician. He is at present a student of law at Harvard university. He states that the managers of the Republican campaign are confident of success, and says that he fully expects to see his uncle the next president of the United States.

Though the party was somewhat disappointed that Duluth has no wild Indians and black bears roving its streets, they seem to be having a very jolly time. Miss Metcalf said she had heard so many stories about the bears and deer that inhabit the Zenith City that she fully expected to see at least one on the main street while here They are stopping at the Spalding hotel and will probably be in the city until tomorrow, at least, as there are several boats to be loaded ahead of the Wainwright.

SUPERIOR NEWS

Railroad is Sued.

Two personal injury suits, amounting to $12,000, were started Saturday against the Great Northern road. For injuries sustained while working on a bridge near Ball Club on Aug. 1, 1907, Thomas Stolson is suing for $2,000. He claims that his right knee was fractured by the timber piling falling on it. In the other case, John Anker, administrator, seeks to recover $10,000 for the death of his father, whom the plaintiff claims was killed by a Great Northern train, Feb. 22, 1908. The accident occurred at the South side and the plaintiff claims that the train was running at an excessive rate of speed, when it happened.

Bridge is Replaced.

The Lamborn avenue bridge, which was condemned by the city and traction company officials as being unsafe for double truck cars, has been temporily repaired, and is now in shape to carry the double truck cars with safety. The work was done by the traction company. It was for a time feared that passengers between Superior and Duluth would have to ride in small cars as the officials were in a dispute as to who would bear the expense.

Service for Newsboys.

At the Cumming Avenue Methodist church, a special invitation was extended to the newsboys to attend the service. Rev. R. W. Court preached on "The Privileges of Youth." It was the first time that any of the pastors had invited tthe newsboys to attend their church. The newsboys attended in great numbers and the service was such a success that it is probable that other pastors about the city will repeat the newsboy service at their churches.

S. GOODFRIEND IN TOWN.

Robert Mantell's Representative Says Tragedian Had Good Season.

S. Goodfriend, representing the tragedian, Robert Mantell, is in Duluth today. He says Mr. Mantell closed a very successful season in Winnipeg last week.

Mr. Mantell's scenery will be left in Duluth, and he and his company will come here in September, to play Shakesperian repertoire at the Lyceum for a week.

Coming to Duluth.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 3.—J. H. Lee, formerly of Omaha, who has been chief probation officer in Spokane, is going to Duluth, Minn., as an officer in the department of agriculture, whence he came in May, 1907. He will leave here Aug. 7, going first to his former home, and afterward to the Zenith City. Mr. Lee has been identified with the work for boys since coming to Spokane, and served on several important committees. He was the originator and organizer of the Newsboys' club, in connection with the Young Men's Christian association, and did much to aid the boys. The judges of the superior and city courts and the police officers speak highly of his work and regret that he is leaving a work that is now organized. Mr. Lee says the fact that he will be nearer his home city was the chief inducement for the acceptance of the new position.

HARRIMAN IN CONFERENCE

Railroad Magnate Slips Into Chicago to See Subordinates.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—E. H. Harriman, who arrived here last night, held conferences with various heads of railroads in which he is interested.

The conferences, which were held at the Chicago headquarters of the Harriman lines in the Merchants Loan & Trust building, was attended by J. C. Stubbs, traffic directors, Julius Krutteschnett, director of maintenenance and others.

In the hope of avoiding publicity, Mr. Harriman's train of five Pullman cars was switched off at Evanston, a suburb, last night, but information of his whereabouts leaked out and he later submitted to an interview.

This morning the railroad magnate, by orderlig the conductor to delay his departure for a few minutes, caught a suburban train to Chicago.

"Nothing to add to what I said last night," he declared as he stepped from the train when it reached the city and attempted to dodge the cameras levelled at him. He entered a cab and was driven to the Merchants Loan & Trust building.

TWO PRISONERS FROM RANGE

Wife Beater Got Light Sentence—Petty Thief Gets Long Term.

Deputy Sheriff Owen Gately brought down two culprits from the ranges this morning. Their sentences were inflicted by different range courts.

Mat Arrenson appropriated a check valued at $1 from a companion last Saturday morning. He neglected to mention the appropriation to his companion and was arraigned and found guilty before Judge J. P. Carey of petit larceny. Judge Carey gave him ninety days in which to repent of his sins at hard labor in the county jail.

At McKinley, Friday, Mike Perkavich attacked his wife, Rose Perkavich, and, according to the court's findings, choked, bruised, abused and injured her, and threatened her with a loaded revolver, for which offense Justice L. N. Keeler gave him only thirty days.

Work on Trading Room.
The last week of August will probably see members of the Duluth board of trade occupying the new trading room on the eighth and ninth stories of the building. McLeod & Smith, the contractors, are rushing the work to completion. The new trading room towers two stories above the rest of the building, affording plenty of light for the examination of cash grain samples. It will be handsomely decorated.

Getting Ideas.
H. A. Starkey, superintendent of the Consolidated Elevator company, is inspecting a number of large elevator plants in different parts of the country, gathering ideas, which may prove of value in the construction of the new Elevator E, on Rice's point, to replace the one destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. The contract for building the new warehouse will probably be let soon.

Fine Crop at Poor Farm.
Duluth's poor farm is now prepared to submit evidence that the grain crop is due to be a big one this year. All the crops at the farm are doing finely and the weather of the last few days has done wonders for all kinds of grain. Samples of the wheat, flax and barley raised on the poor farm were brought to The Herald office this morning, and they show full well developed kernels that should mean a big yield.

Files For Office.
W. C. Wright filed this afternoon for the office of county commissioner from the First district. There are already two candidates, Hugh Fawcett and Alex Fraser.

News From Globe.
J. U Sebenius received word yesterday from Supt. McCarthy of Globe Consolidated to the effect that the second crosscut in the west drift from the future copper vein driven north for twenty-five feet, was still carrying sulphides for the full distance and the face was still in ore. Diorite in back of the crosscut has disappeared, says Mr. McCarthy, indicating that the drift is again in the main ore body.

Landlady Holds Trunk.
Because she was about to leave without giving a week's notice, Miss Anna Weston's trunk, containing all her clothes except those she wore, was held by her landlady, in a house at Sixteenth avenue east and Fourth street. Miss Weston did not even have that to wear when she made a complaint to the police. When the landlady learned where Miss Weston had gone, she called up the police and said she was willing to give up the trunk without further trouble.

McGaughey Is Back.
Rev. J. A. McGaughey, director of religious work in the local Y. M. C. A., has returned from the association's summer school at Lake Geneva, Wis., and is preparing for an active year of work here. The Y. M. C. A. religious work will be carried on in a much more extended fashion than formerly. Bible classes will be organized among the workers of the different large factories and other establishments, and clubs for evening Bible study will be formed later on. Rev. Mr. McGaughey resigned as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Two Harbors to take up this work.

Missabe's New Building.

LAKE HAS ITS EFFECT.

People in Other Parts of the State Are Sweltering.

People living within sight of Lake Superior are fortunate today.

"They're getting it down in the Twin Cities and up on the ranges," said the weather man today "The hottest it has been here was 82 degs. at 1 o'clock this afternoon, but much higher temperatures are reported from the southern and northern parts of the state, where they don't feel the effect of the lake"

The weather man promises cooler weather for tomorrow.

GOVERNOR HUGHES HAS SOMETHING UP HIS SLEEVE.

New York, Aug. 3.—The race track interests are about to experience one of the most severe shocks in their history, if the present plans of Governor Hughes are carried out, according to information which was received in this city today. Just what form the proposed action the governor will take could not be learned, but it was said that "something which will shock Saratoga from end to end will take place within the next day or two."

ASSURED SULTAN OF LOVE AND LOYALTY.

Constantinople, Aug. 3.—A deputation of 300 men and a few officers of the Second army corps arrived here today from Adrianople to assure the sultan of their love and of the loyalty of the troops. Omer Ruchdi Pasha, the minister of war, and Shekii Pasha, chief of staff, met the soldiers and, headed by a band, the column marched to the Yilditz palace. After the soldiers had assembled in front of the palace, the sultan appeared at a window and said:

"I am very pleased to have seen you all. I salute the soldiers, my children, and I order you to convey these salutations to your comrades in the army."

CELLAR DIGGING WAYS.

Work Done Handily With a Steam Engine.

At Broadway and Fourth street, the southwest corner, they are digging a deep cellar for a new building, and the cellar dirt from the excavation, as it is loaded into wagons, they are hauling up in the modern way, by means of a wire cable and a steam engine, says the New York Sun

In this sort of hauling when the situation and surroundings are such as to permit of it the engine is so placed that a straight haul can be made, the cable running direct from the wagon to the engine; but in many cases this is impossible, and then they rig pulley blocks at one point and another on the ground and run the cable through those blocks and so haul the load up out of the cellar by a more or less zigzag course from block to block until they get it up to the street. As many as four blocks have been laid down on a job of this sort, the haul in this case requiring a cable of great length, about 1,000 feet. On this Broadway and Fourth street job they are using two blocks and the greatest length of cable paid out is 165 feet.

The engine stands in Fourth street, at the extreme rear of the lot, and of course it is set close to the curb so as to make as little obstruction as possible to traffic in the street. But standing there, close in, the engine couldn't heave all the load up quite far enough to get it where the horses could handle it, so they have driven down in the street, within the building material permit line, an iron stake stout enough to hold the load, and to this stake has been attached one of the blocks, through which the hauling cable runs. By means of this stake and block the load can be hauled out on the sidewalk.

There are two slopes down into the cellar, one straight down from Fourth street along the rear end of the lot to its southwest corner, and another running at an angle from that corner down to the Broadway front. At the top of the slope up from Broadway they attached to stout timbers another block, running the cable through that; and in operation they haul the load up the slope from Broadway to the block in the corner of the lot, and then they cast the cable loose from that block and haul the load up the other slope to the street. There is always a fringe of interested people standing around the edge of the excavation looking on.

The shovellers are loading a wagon, say down at the deepest part of the excavation, at the foot of the second slope near Broadway, and when the loading is finished the driver mounts to his seat and gathers up the reins, the men handling the cable having meanwhile made it fast to the running part of the wagon and leading forward between the two horses; and everything being ready they give the signal and the engineer up in the street starts the engine and the cable begins to pull.

Many city horses are now tolerably well used to being helped in this way and are not surprised by it, but sometimes when he feels the wagon being started up on him a horse will hang back on it a little at first. But in a moment the horse discovers that the power moving the wagon is irristible, and then he goes ahead.

Commonly the team will pull some going up the slope, but not to the extent of their power. The horses let the cable do most of the pulling, and it looks as if such pulling as they did they were doing for appearance sake, so that it wouldn't look as if they were lying down on the job.

The load pulled by the cable they keep moving steadily up that slope until they come pretty near to the first block. When they get close to it the horses are likely to brace their feet forward and hold back good and hard, for it looks to them as if they were being hauled right up into the corner against the walls of the buildings adjoining the lot.

But the engine keeps right on pulling horses, wagon, load and all right along until it has got the outfit clean to the top of the lower slope, and so opposite the foot of the upper one, and the men lift the engineer stops the engine, and the men lift the snatchblock in the corner and clear the cable from its sheave, and the engineer takes up the cable's slack, while the driver now leads the horses around from the corner to face up the second slope, to the street, and the men straighten out the cable and keep it clear of the horses until the engineer has drawn it taut. And then all ready for the second part of the haul up, the engineer starts the engine again and pulls the load up that second slope and out of the excavation onto the sidewalk to where the horse scum get away with it.

And then they rig the cable again and haul up another load, and so keep on indefinitely; work that here might be almost if not quite impossible with the help of even the stoutest of towing teams being done by the engine handily.

STARTING IN.

Chicago News: The coal merchant folded the check neatly and put it in his waistcoat pocket. "I'm much obliged," he said.

"I hear you say so," returned the householder. "I know, though, that it's a mere figure of speech. If you knew how I've worked and schemed and sacrificed to get enough together to pay you off you might well be grateful. Grateful and ashamed. I can almost see you pulling that slip of paper from your pocket and tearing it up."

The coal merchant laughed.

"I suppose you think that's a joke," said the householder. "Perhaps you think it's funny to deny yourself all but the bare necessities of life just to keep that flamed furnace going all winter. Well, thank heaven, it's over with now!"

"Are you going to let me make you a figure on your next winter's supply?"

"I'll talk with you later about that," said the householder.

"You'd better not make it much later," said the coal dealer. "Prices will advance. You'll make a considerable saving by buying now. Don't put off till tomorrow what you can do today and then live to regret it."

"Now isn't that enough to disturb the equanimity of your temperament!" exclaimed the householder. "Why should prices advance?"

"I'm not controlling prices, you know," said the coal dealer. "You mustn't hold me responsible. And I'm not forcing you. But I'll bet you a ton on the side that the prices won't go down. I haven't noticed them decreasing at an alarming rate in the past few years. It was just a suggestion I was making."

"How much would I be likely to save?" asked the householder.

"From 50 to 75 cents a ton," replied the coal merchant. "It depends on when you buy. There's no risk about it today, anyway. Think it over."

"How about an option? If I paid you 5 cents a ton for the option of buying this time next week at the current prices would that satisfy you?"

"I'll take the risk for a week and won't charge you a cent," said the coal dealer.

"But seriously, if you like to lay in ten or twelve tons I can make it worth your while."

"I wish you hadn't mentioned it," said the householder, gloomily. "I don't want to buy coal now. I'm sick and tired of buying coal. At the same time if I don't buy it I shall be worrying about that advance. I've got to go to work now figuring interests to see how much I'll have to deduct from that 50 or 75 cents. If I do buy I'll be mad every time I go down into the basement and see the coal there. And then suppose the price doesn't advance?"

"It won't fall anyway," said the coal dealer.

"I don't know," said the householder, musingly. "Suppose we have a revolution and confiscate the coal mines to the use of the state and sell to consumers for a mere 25 or 50 per cent over and above the actual cost of producing? Did you ever picture to yourself a mob of frenzied city and suburban householders stung past the limits of endurance carrying the heads of the trust on pikes?"

"I don't think I ever did, now that you ask me," replied the coal dealer.

"It might come," said the householder, warningly. "But in the meantime, what will you deliver me twelve tons for? Let's see what sort of figuring you can do."

HOT WAVE GIVES BULL MOVEMENT NEW IMPETUS

September Option Closes 2 1-2 Cents Higher in Duluth.

Warm Weather and Rumors of Rust the Cause.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 3.—The continued hot weather in the Northwest, supplemented by further reports of damage to the crop by rust, scared the wheat trade during the session today. At the opening, prices soared rapidly and although there was some reaction before the end of the session, closing prices were much stronger than Saturday in all the American markets.

Very warm weather was reported throughout Minnesota, the Dakotas and Manitoba, yesterday and today brought forth fresh rumors of damage by rust. Snow was out with another bullish report on conditions in the Dakotas. He also said the Red River valley crop was showing deterioration.

World's shipments were larger than last week and the visible supply showed an increase. The Northwestern situation was the only factor in the market, however.

It was a holiday in Liverpool today. Berlin closed 1¾c lower and Budapest unchanged.

The September option closed 2½c higher in Duluth, 1⅞-2c higher in Chicago and St. Louis, 2⅝c higher in Minneapolis and New York and 2c higher in Kansas City. The October option closed 2c higher in Winnipeg. The December option closed 1½c higher in Duluth, 2⅛c higher in Chicago and Winnipeg, 2¼c higher in Minneapolis, 2⅞c higher in New York and 1⅞-2c higher in St. Louis and Kansas City.

September corn closed 1¼c higher in Chicago and September oats closed ⅝-¾c higher.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week a year ago, are shown as follows:

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Wildly Excited on Heavy Buying Orders and Bad News.

Minneapolis, Aug. 3.—Wheat opened wildly excited and on a range of a cent for opening trades, September, $1.03 and $1.04 simultaneously. The weather yesterday showed a range of 103 above at one time at Comstock and the thermometer was high at Fargo, Devils Lake, Rugby and North Dakota stations. The country sent in buying orders and bad news. Black rust was reported at Kerkhoven, Minn., and Hankinson, N. D. Trade ran heavy, orders for 50,000 and 100,000-bushel lots were expected and the market fluctuated rapidly. The Minneapolis trade is at sea as to actual damage, but is very anxious. The Minneapolis elevator stocks decreased 175,000 bushels for two days. Receipts today 291 cars against 184, and in Duluth 54 instead of 75. September opened at $1.03 @1.04; high, $1.04; low, $1.01½; close, $1.02⅞. Old September, high, $1.04⅛; close, $1.03⅝@1.03¾. December opened at $1.00½; high, $1.02; low, $1.00⅛; close, $1.01. Old December closed at $1.01½.

Cash wheat was salable at $1.14 for No. 1 northern and $1.12 for No. 2. Buyers held off early, but came in later and bought. Close: No. 1 northern, $1.14½ spot; 1.13 to arrive; No. 2 northern, $1.12@1.12½ spot; $1.10 to arrive; No. 3 wheat, $1.06@1.10.

No. 3 yellow corn, 72¾c.

No. 3 white oats, 49⅞@50⅞c.

No. 2 red, old, 73¾c; new, 71¼@72¼c.

Barley receipts, 16 cars. There were many samples of new barley, but no business in new crop. Old barley sold about even with Saturday's prices. Close, 48@56c.

Flax receipts, 6 cars. Steady demand at 1c under Duluth September. Close, $1.26⅛.

Millstuffs unchanged, but firm in tone on the light production. Bran in bulk quotable at $18.50@19.

Patents were advanced 10c. The effect was to check demand and all the millers reported business slow today. There is no foreign inquiry and domestic buyers seem to be afraid of the market. Shipments, 39,301 barrels. First patents, $6@6.10; second patents, $5.85@6; first clears, $4.35@4.45; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

Grain Gossip.

Snow back today from the Northwest, says: The wheat crop in Minnesota and Dakotas is much smaller than generally estimated. July was extremely hot and dry with nothing in the shape of rain except local showers. The crop in North Dakota suffered most, and west of and including the Jim River valley is also showing damage and the crop of the state can hardly exceed 60,000,000 bu. This is taking only drouth damage already experienced and makes no account of black rust possibilities. Rust is not to be apprehended in western part of state, but much wheat in valley is in a stage where it could be injured. In Minnesota, there has been some crop deterioration but there seems still a prospect for an average yield. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan, the extraordinary promise has been lowered by lack of sufficient rain in critical periods and a crop in the three provinces of 100,000,000 would seem an outside probability. Harvest is under way in South Dakota and the yield will prove disappointing on account of great heat at time of bloom.

KISSING DAY AT HUNGERFORD.

London Standard: The little town of Hungerford was yesterday the scene of the quaint celebration of Hocktide.

The property of the Manor, which comprises a valuable trout fishery, has lately come within the purview of the charity commissioners, who have established a scheme for the future administration by popular trustees, but with the proviso that the holding of the manorial court, with its picturesque and old world customs, should be allowed to continue.

Yesterday's functions began with a series of blasts on the historic horn, and then the tutti men armed with staves, set forth on their perambulations, their duty being to demand a penny from every male householder and a kiss from each lady who crossed their path. As a rule the humor and husbands look on with equanimity.

Meanwhile the Hocktide jury were sitting in solemn conclave, appointing the constable and coroner and other ancient officers whose duties are more or less obselete.

Walker's copper letter in Saturday's Boston Commercial says:

"Copper is stronger and fractionally higher. Lake is selling at 13¼c and electrolytic at 13⅛c per pound. Domestic consumers are buying quite freely and some of them are engaging copper for as far ahead as September and October delivery. The foreign demand continues very good, notwithstanding the advance, and the prospect is that the small existing surplus supplies will soon be exhausted.

"Business conditions are improving slowly. Recent political developments will reassure business men and investors considerably, and hasten a return of prosperous times. Some uncertainty still attaches to the presidential campaign. It is to be expected that other factors, such as a tariff reform, financial legislation, etc., may tend to retard the complete return of confidence and general resumption of business activity in this country. Copper has a worldwide market, however, and there is every prospect that from now on the demand will equal or exceed the output of all the mines. It should sell at 14c and possibly at 15c before the end of this year."

Buy Ballaklava for big advances, for it has got to come. It stands to be another such a producer as the North Butte mine, for it is working those very same veins. I told you to buy Shattuck; it has now started. I advised the purchase of North Butte. Some of these stocks have only started. Ballaklava should sell at $30 by Christmas, for the 1,000-foot level will deliver the goods.

Shattuck is good for $30 also, but is now $16 a share, against Ballaklava, which is $8. Butte & Superior is $1 1-16 bid for any amount and should sell at $3 or better this fall. Buy this one, for it is safe and you may get $10 a share for it later. It is a mine of great possibilities. Copper Queen strong at $1.50. Carman at $3 and Red Warrior at $3.25.

The copper share market is very active. North Butte should easily sell at $100; Greene-Cananea at $20, and Superior & Pittsburg at $22. We will have the greatest boom this fall that this country has ever seen.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Fire starting from the explosion of a barrel of chemicals in the Burlington dock transfer warehouse at Canal and Sixteenth streets this afternoon destroyed the warehouse, 100 boxcars, and elevators E and F, owned by the Burlington company. There was over half a million bushels of grain owned by Armour & Co. in the elevators. The loss will be heavy.

SCHOOL GARDENS IN TEXAS.

Kansas City Star: The school garden system of San Antonio, Tex., is on an established practical basis. It is said that this city has more gardens attached to its schools than any place of its size in the world. There are 919 of these cultivated plots attached to the twenty-nine public schools. The gardens are in charge of school superintendents, but the work of planting, cultivating and harvesting the products of each is carried on by the pupils of the school to which the garden belongs. The gardens vary from onetenth to one-quarter of an acre. It is estimated than 100, or equal to that of a good sized farm.

The boys of the schools take a great pride in their gardens. The teachers declare that since the gardens were establishd the boys are much more industrious in their studies, that they learn more readily and that they show evidence of material improvement in their health and physical condition.

The climate of San Antonio is peculiarly adapted to the operation of the school garden system. The work can be carried on during practically the whole school term. Certain vegetables can be grown successfully during the fall and winter. The spring gardens are planted early in February and the product are matured and harvested by the time the school term ends in June. An enormous quantity of vegetables is grown. The boys take such a keen interest in the work that they give little time to playing the games that usually consume a good part of the time of young students. There is much rivalry among the different schools over the gardens.

Text books on agriculture now are used in the public schools of San Antonio. The youths are given a basic training in farming and gardening and are enabled to put their knowledge to practical use in the gardens that are provided for them. Energetic boys who become interested in the work do not confine their labors to the school garden but many of them have converted unsightly back yards and vacant lots at their homes into cultivated plots.

The Gentleman: The bottom button of the waistcoat of an Eton boy must on no account be buttoned and the trousers, on the other hand, must always be turned up.

Then again a made up tie, however artful, is "anathema." Another point too often neglected by parents is in the cut of the Eton jacket. It is the fashion among some tailors to cut this garment with a point at the back. This is a fearful solecism. It should always be cut straight round with no more point than the custom that commands it.

Should an overcoat be worn the collar must always be turned up; but overcoats, I may add, are not encouraged even in the coldest weather, except, by order of the head master.

If an umbrella is carried it must never be rolled up but gathered in, after the manner of a Nonconformist minister's, by an India rubber band.

RAILROADS

TRAFFIC WAR THREATENED

Pennsylvania Road May Cut Rates East of Chicago.

Disagreement of Differentials Cause of Trouble.

News that reached this city from Chicago today is to the effect that a speed and rate war, the greatest that the West has seen for years, is in prospect between the lines east of Chicago, by reason of the threat of the Pennsylvania railroad to break away from a rate agreement with the standard lines east of Chicago, because of a difference of opinion over the granting of differentials to the so-called weaker lines.

If the Pennsylvania puts the threat into execution it would involve every standard line east of Chicago and would cause a passenger rate war that would result in the wholesale cutting of rates and the attemtp to get passenger business by increased speed in the operation of already fast trains.

The fight may even extend to every standard line between the Mississippi and Atlantic.

The Pittsburg & Lake Erie railway holds a differential of $1 between Chicago and Pittsburg. The Panhandle and the Baltimore & Ohio enjoy the same differential, while the Wabash has a differential of $1.50 on the $10.50 rate from Chicago to Pittsburg. The Pennsylvania claims that it is placed at a disadvantage in getting passenger business under these conditions, and states that unless the differential is abolished it will go after business in its own way.

Railroad men in the West are today discussing the threat of the Pennsylvania, which, if carried into execution, would mean a passenger upheaval such as the West has not witnessed for some years.

READY TO HELP.

Duluth Shippers Will Join Movement Against Higher Freight Rates.

Local shippers will join any state movement that may be organized to combat the increased freight tariffs by the Western roads. Various shipping organizations in the state are at the present time preparing to take up the movement to oppose the stand taken by the roads.

As stated in Saturday's Herald, the National Dry Goods association is prepared to take up the fight. They have local members, as well as members in the Twin Cities, and they will do everything in their power to protest against the movement for rate increases.

The various grain shippers' associations will enter the fight and an effort will be made to organize the small individual shippers so that their influence may be used to better advantage. There is a general cry against the enforcement of the increase in general freight rates, the Illinois Manufacturers' association and the Chicago Jobbers' association leading the fight in the West.

Should the railroads actually enforce the proposed rates it is probable that the shippers will ask for the interstate commerce commission to seek means to prevent their continuance. The sentiment here is typical of that in other parts of the country. Any state movement that may be organized will receive the encouragement of Duluth shippers.

HARRIMAN TALKS.

Discusses Action on Wheeling Notes and the Oriental Trade.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—"There is to be no abandonment of railroads, nor is there to be any combination of railroads over night.

"What has been done has been undertaken solely with the purpose of saving a bad financial situation."

Edward H. Harriman said this last night while discussing the deal whereby a syndicate of bankers recently took up $8,000,000 in short term notes of the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad stock.

"What I have done has not been for the purpose of making money," he said, "but simply because matters were becoming tangled, and it had become necessary for some one to try to make a bad situation better. Some of us do not believe that it would be a good thing for the country generally if more railroads should go into the hands of receivers, and so we are doing what we have done to prevent this in the interests of self-preservation. That is all there is to it.

"In fact things have become so complicated that I scarcely know where I am. So I am going out to the Sikiyou Moutains to think over the situation, and when I come back I may be able to talk intelligently concerning the future.

"But in the meantime I should like to have it understood that there is no deep-laid plot back of it, but that the deal regarding the Wheeling & Lake Erie notes was simply a transaction made necessary to save a railroad, and thereby benefit all other roads alike."

"What effect will be the change in conditions upon the proposed Gould outlet to the sea?"

"Oh, I fancy that there is a good deal of moonshine in that, but I do not know. There is no telign what the effect will be, but we hope that it will be for the general good."

Mr. Harriman was asked why the trans-continental roads had decided to go out of the Oriental trade.

"The Oriental business is largely sentimental," he replied. "The hope of building up a large Asiatic trade through the Pacific ports of the United States has been largely a dream and it has turned out to be, to a great extent, a fake. It was not my dream, for I have been familiar with conditions in this regard from the very first. The interstate commerce commission has ruled that the roads must do certain things in connection with that trade, such as publishing inland proportions of their export rates and their dealings with tramp steamers. We believe that there is not enough of the business to warrant our taking any chances of injury to our inland or domestic business."

"What will be done with your ships that have been engaged in the Oriental trade?"

"Well, we have been carrying mostly air in those boats, and I suppose that we can continue to do so. The Japanese would like to control the Pacific trade and eventually they may."

Mr. Harriman declined to discuss politics. "They don't interest me at all," he said. He predicted an improvement.

"The outcome depends largely upon what the farmers are producing," he said. "Financially, the agricultural interests are in excellent condition. The labor market is also favorable for them and they ought to produce great results.

"We have had eighteen months of very unnatural times. But we have lost only the froth created by speculation, and that we don't want back. Now we are absorbing more wealth than we have ever had. We are producing more and we have good prices."

He concluded the interview with a declaration that he had no intention of retiring.

Mr. Harriman's party consists of his wife, two daughters and two sons and Fred D. Underwood, president of the Erie. Today he consulted with J. C. Stubbs, traffic director of his system; Julius Kruttchnitt, director of maintenance and operation, and other officials. Mr. Harriman expects to consume two weks on arriving at "Pelican Lodge," his new retreat in the Siskiyou mountains.

Payment Deferred.

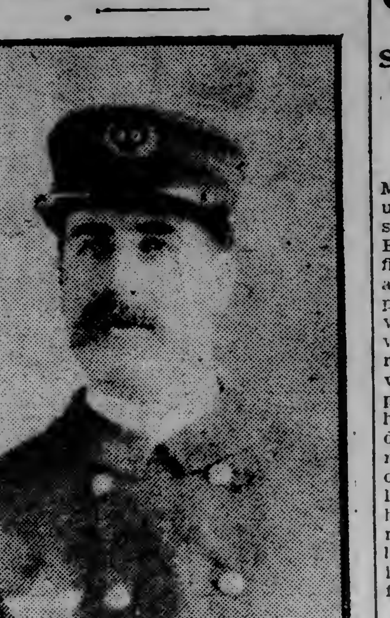
Chicago, Aug. 3.—Payment of interest due Saturday on the first mortgage bonds of the Southern Indiana railway has been deferred. The amount needed to meet this obligation is $150,560. The notices of the default in the interest payment state:

"Owing to the general depression in railroad business during the last six months, which has been especially severe on coal carrying roads, the Southern Indiana Railway company is compelled to defer payment of the interest due Aug. 1, 1908, on its first mortgage bonds.

"It is expected that arrangements will be made at an early date for the payment of the interest in question and in default of such an arrangement, the earnings of the company, with the amount now available, will, we feel sure, be sufficient even under present conditions to pay the coupons due Aug. 1, within ninety days.

"J. W. WALSH,
"Assistant Treasurer."

OFFICER UNDER ARREST.



GEORGE DRANNEN,
Patrolman, Who Is Charged With Stealing From Prisoner.

Prepare Schedules.

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads have begun the printing of their trans-continental freight rates as ordered and will have them ready to go in force Nov. 1. Officials of the roads explain that these rates will make the charge on hauling goods consigned to the Orient the same for the trip to the coast as that on goods consigned to Pacific coast points. Goods inbound from the Orient, however, will go east from the coast at a lower rate than that paid by domestic shippers using the railroads only, as there can be no question of discrimination of rates raised.

Steamship company officials say that in order to hold the Asiatic trade they must have the power to work with the railroads in cutting rates. Without this, and with the railrods taking a fixed charge on all freight from the Orient, they declare that they cannot meet the competition of foreign steamers.

NOT GUILTY.

Chicago News: "Well, I congratulate you," said the lawyer to his client as they waited in the corridor for the elevator. "Here you are without a stain or grease spot on your character. You can hold up your head once more and look your fellow man in the eye and hit him in the eye if you want to. You have passed through the ordeal unscathed. The acid test of question and cross-question has indisputably shown the true gold of your character. Yes, indeed, you certainly are to be congratulated."

"That's all right about that," said the client, morosely, "but if there's any gold in my character there ain't none anywheres else about me. I guess I'll have to touch you for a little. You did soak it to me good and hard."

"I merely mentioned what my fee would be for undertaking your case," said the lawyer. "You did the rest. Do you think I charged you too much?"

"I think about half what I paid you would have been plenty," replied the client, frankly. "It wasn't much of a case. There wasn't nothin' to it. Say, it was a pipe."

"It was, eh?"

"Sure. I'd have bet my kit o' tools against your law liberry that the verdict would be 'not guilty' afore the jury went out."

"How much do you suppose my library is worth?" asked the lawyer. "Do you think that you'd be giving odds?"

"I know I would," said the client. "It wouldn't be worth nothin' to me an' I wouldn't know where to sell it. No, I wouldn't have no use for your books an' I do know how to use my tools, if I do say it."

"That's what the police seemed to think," observed the lawyer.

"The muts!" growled the client. "If I'd have known!"

"If you'd have known what?"

"If I'd have known what they was goin' to testify to. Why, say! There wasn't nothin' against me. Not a thing. Anybody could see that they was just tryin' to put up a job on a innercent man."

"Is that your ground for asking a rebate?"

"I oughtn't to have to ask it," said the client. "I ain't goin' to, either. I just leave it to you whether you oughtn't to hand me half what I give you. Why, them fellows didn't know what they was talkin' about. Just as soon as you began to ask 'em questions they got all tangled up. They wasn't dead sure of nothin'. They wouldn't have swore to their own names."

"They were rather confused when I got through with them, weren't they?" said the lawyer, with a gratified smile.

"As for that prosecutin' attorney, he didn't know his business either," urged the client. "He started in to wipe up the earth with us. I thought I was in for ten years anyway. I don't mind sayin' that he had me bluffed. But he was easy. Easy! It was a shame the way you handled him. He hadn't got no business bringin' in the kind of everdence he did, nor yet in askin' the questions he did."

"I think I pointed that out to the court."

"Course you did. That was your business. An' the judge seen it the way you did, too. I don't know nothin' about law, but I knew you was in the right about it. It was a walkaway. He was dead wrong all the time. Say, I've a notion to sue 'em for damages an' false imprisonment. I believe I could make it stick."

"I think if I were you I'd leave well enough alone," advised the lawyer. "I'm sorry that I can't see my way to return you any part of my fee. Next time perhaps you had better just defend yourself—if it's an easy case like this one."

"Not me," said the client. "I ain't takin' no more chances than I have to in the way of business. Could I borrow $10 and pay it back the first money I earn?"

"I'd have to wait too long."

"The first money I get, then?"

"On that understanding I might spare you $5," said the lawyer.

USE MY NAME

Said Mrs. Menadur of Biwabik After 400 Gall Stones Were Removed Without the Knife.

A letter was received today from Mrs. D. Menadur, who was about to undergo the surgeon's knife for gall stones, but being advised by Mrs. D. J. Eyer of Biwabik, who was cured, to first try the Wittman Medical Experts, at Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street, she consented to do so, with the above result, and now she voluntarily states that she is ready to recommend this treatment to any one who cares to write her. Many cures performed by these great scientists have raised them upon an enviable pedestal, and given them a reputation next to none for the sure cure of chronic diseases. Many cases in Duluth have been brought back to good health, and the experts are receiving new ones every day. In fact, they bear the great reputation of not failing in a single case, where it was faithfully taken.

At Kugler's Drug store the big sale is now on the Medical Compound—3 bottles, $2.50.

Tonight, at Fourth street and Lake avenue, another big show will hold forth.

THE REAL COWBOY.

It is quite true that the cowboy of today is not a college man, nor one at all familiar with the manners and customs of polite society, says Out West. Neither does he go about his daily task with a brace of six-shooters slung at his hips and a repeating rifle held in the crook of his arm.

Barbed wire fences, steam railroads, police courts and penitentiaries have rendered such appurtenances superfluous. And immediately after pay day he does not swoop down upon the nearest town, shoot out the lights and take part in a gun fight or two.

For the $30 or $40 a month which he receives a strict attention to the duties of his job is expected, and in these days of strenuous competition, a job is a precious thing. The life of the modern cowboy is as full of hard and monotonous work as that of an Eastern farmhand, and there is very little difference in the intellectual and social standing of the two.

Though thousands of cattle are grazed upon the plains of the Southwest, very few are shipped direct from the range to the market. The places of individual cattle kings have been taken by great stock companies which own numerous tracts of range land in various parts of the West.

A few years ago a dry season in Southern Arizona meant the death of many cattle and very frequently the financial ruin of their owners. The old-timers still tell stories of having walked for incredible distances on the carcasses of dead steers.

But all that is past—they do things differenly now. Let a dry year come upon the Southwestern ranges, and the cattle are hustled aboard a train and transported to the cattle companies' ranger in Colorado or Montana or Dakota, where the season is good and the feed abundant.

No long drives of hundreds of miles in search of new range, as in the old days. Simply a day or two of rounding up, then a few hours' drive to the nearest shipping point on the railroad. Then perhaps a day in town for the cowboys and back again to the home ranch and the regular grind.

Though the cowboy is not a college graduate, he is by no means an ignoramus. Usually he is American born and fairly well read, taking the same active interest in current topics and politics that other American citizens do. As a general rule he has been raised in the section in which he is employed and is of youthful appearance. He differs very little from the average American working youth, Western dialect stories to the contrary notwithstanding.

In all cowboy bunkhouses there is a pile of current magazines, the contents of which are devoured with avidity. And one is not infrequently treated to the amusing spectacle of a youthful cowboy becoming so enamored of the kind of punchers pictured in modern fiction that he purchases a pair of utterly useless six-shooters, commences to walk with a swagger and to imitate the dialect of Red Saunders.

But if marksmanship is no longer a qualification of the cowpuncher, horsemanship is. The modern cattleman is as proud of his ability to ride anything on four legs as was ever the bronco-buster of bygone days, and this is the first fact impressed upon a tenderfoot.

PANAMA'S FUNNY MAN.

The Jamaican is at once the most amusing and the most aggravating individual [illegible] time the peacock, and at another he would put [illegible]

In language he oscillates between "Rasselas" and "Mother Goose," and in his speech he mixes the accent of a London cockney and an almost unintelligible jargon peculiarly his own. Bombastically standing upon his rights as a "British sobject," he has, on the other hand, says the Bohemian, the stamina and endurance of a jellyfish, and when he "gets 'um fevah" he literally wilts.

He uses "require" for "need," says "back ahead," and if vigorously and profanely reproved querulously objects with "Now, mon, you ah not privileged to talk to me like that."

He comes in hordes to the postoffice for mail as often as he sees a boat in the offing, and as he seems to go through the world with a multiplicity of names he is not discouraged if informed that there is no letter for "John Whiteside," but, irrepressible, asks if there is anything for "James Allen."

He is generally peaceable, and his most violent combats, like those of our professional pugilists, are generally vocal. Like all negroes, he is fond of music, and his speciality is hymns, which he sings lustily, together with such favorites of the hour as "After the Ball," "Two Little Girls in Blue" and other favorites of the Northern music halls of twenty years ago.

He delights in accordions of doleful sound, which he plays, followed by his admiring compatriots, walking down the street. The following copy of an advertisement couched in typically elaborate Jamaican English would seem to indicate that he does not entirely despise the cup that cheers and inebriates:

> Come to a hole in the wall just opened by Peter Knight on Bolivar street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, where you can get at conventional prices Milk and Bean to start the days with and cool drinks for hot heads during the day with night caps and mosquito bars at night.

DANCED ON GOLD DUST.

Pearson's Weekly: The great dancing expert, My Fancy, who is doing the Moss & Stoll tour, has danced on gold dust.

"When starring with Charles Godfrey's company in Western Australia," she told me, "no sand was procurable for my dance, so the people in the place said they would get me some gold dust, and accordingly they brought quite a quantity of the precious stuff along, and I found that it answered the purpose very well. I reckon that was about the queerest use gold has ever been put to. Of course it was mixed with quartz, but when I put it in water I could see the gold grains shining ever so prettily."

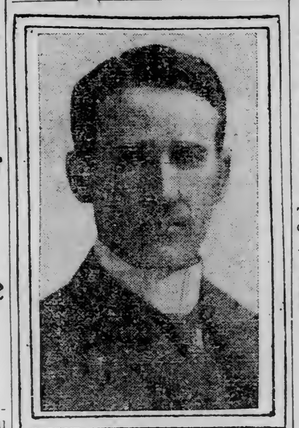
SOUTHWESTERN STATES TEST PRIMARY ELECTION LAW FOR THE FIRST TIME

Voters of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma at the Polls.

Will Select Candidates for General Election in November.

All Political Parties Are Participating in the Voting.



HERBERT S. HADLEY, Attorney General of Missouri, Who Is the only Candidate for Governor on the Republican Ticket at the Primaries.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 4. — Primary elections are being held by all political parties in every voting precinct in Missouri today, for the purpose of selecting party candidates for the general election in November. Candidates are being selected for every state, county and township office with exception of school officers from governor down to constable.

The primary is the first to be held in the state under the new law. No candidates for United States senator will be chosen, but the party candidates will be voted on for the ballot at the general election. The Republicans have but one candidate for governor, Herbert S. Hadley, the present attorney general of Missouri, whose fight on the Standard Oil company and other corporations for alleged violations of the anti-trust laws of the state, has brought him into prominence. There are two candidates for the Republican nomination for attorney general, three for railroad and warehouse commissioner and three for judge of the supreme court.

Four Democratic Candidates.

On the Democratic ticket there are four candidates for governor David A. Ball, for years prominent in the Democratic party in this state is asking for the nomination. Wm. S. Cowherd, former congressman and also former chairman of the Democratic congressional committee is another candidate. A third Democratic candidate is Judge William H. Wallace, who became prominent through his conduct of a Sunday law observance crusade in Kansas City, causing the arrest of hundreds of actors and others who were alleged to have violated the Sunday law. He is receiving the support of the Prohibition element.

Henry F Staple, the fourth Democratic candidate is making the race on a more liberal platform and will receive a large share of the vote of

ADVOCATES OF FREE TRADE

From Many Countries Begin a Conference in London.

London, Aug. 4.—The International Free Trade congress was opened in this city today, with Lord Welby in the chair. Delegates were present from the United States, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Italy. In his address of welcome, Lord Welby said the prospects for free trade were somewhat gloomy, and that the idea of protection was advancing in an aggressive manner, but in spite of this the policy of free trade ultimately must prevail.

"Free trade and its bearings on international relations," the subject for discussion at the first session of the congress, was introduced by Winston Churchill, president of the board of trade, who argued that Great Britain was an object lesson. She had pursued the free trade policy, yet she remained prosperous and powerful, and it had been found that British goods entered all other countries on as good terms as were secured by any nation by the most elaborate use of fiscal weapons. Without customs duties, except on a few articles the country raised an enormous revenue and conducted business on a gigantic scale.

A. M. Sheppard, one of the American delegates, took part in the discussion which followed the minister's speech. Mr. Churchill was frequently interrupted by the suffragists, who finally had to be ejected.

CUTTING WHEAT NEAR CROOKSTON

Yield Per Acre Promises to be Better Than the Average.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ed Lanctot started cutting 180 acres of wheat near here today. It will yield from twenty-five to thirty bushels per acre, better than the average.

Kernels are plump, clear and perfect. Barley cutting is in full blast. Considerable wheat will be cut this week. The weather is perfect. Harvest hands are badly needed.

F. C. Hanson, living two miles west of Crookston did some threshing in the valley today. His rye yielded 27½ bushels per acre, barley averaged about 65 bushels per acre and oats 22 bushels. The rye was sold before it was threshed at 80 cents per bushel. This is the earliest threshing in many years. The returns from the rye are over $22 per acre.

PRAIRIE IS BLAZING UP

Unexpected Danger Menaces Farmers in Red River Valley.

Great Northern Locomotives Have Started Two Fires Already.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prairie fires raging in the first week of August is a new experience for the people of this section, but nevertheless several of them have sprung up, and if no rains fall, there will be more of them and considerable damage may be done, as at this season of the year no precautions are taken to meet such contingencies.

Sunday, in the town of Fairfax, a spark from a passing Great Northern train started a fire, and in a few minutes a forty-acre hay meadow was swept clean. A field of grain too green to burn was all that prevented the further spread of the fire.

Monday afternoon, south of Shirley, midway between this city and Euclid, a prairie fire was raging and has already burned over a 320-acre tract and the fire could be plainly seen from this city last evening, lighting up the heavens to the north. This fire also started from the engine of a passing Great Northern freight train.

In the territory near this fire there are hundreds of hay stacks which have not yet been plowed around, and unless rain falls at once there is grave danger of heavy losses in this direction. The hot weather, coupled with drying winds, has made the grass like tinder, and wherever there is a little dead grass from last year to give the fire a start it will burn readily and travels with the speed of the wind.

This is the earliest that prairie fires have been recorded in the history of this section, according to the pioneers.

JAPS REACH OUT AFTER ALL TRADE

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 4.—The Nippon Yusen Kaisha, a Japanese Steamship company, will establish a new service commencing in November to carry Japanese merchandise to Atlantic ports of the United States by way of the Suez canal according to advices received by the steamer Montenagle which reached port last night.

Japanese newspapers received by the Montenagle comment at length regarding the action of the interstate commerce commission and United States railways. Some of the vernacular papers take the ground that the action is to be construed as unfriendly to Japan.

BIDS FOR SUPPLIES.

Honolulu, Aug. 4.—Bids for the furnishing of supplies to the Pacific fleet when it arrives here on its cruise to the south seas were opened last night and proved satisfactory. Among the supplies for which the government contracted were meats, $37,000; eggs, $1,100; fish, $4,000. The total amount involved is $47,000. Among the successful bidders on the contracts were two Chinese firms.

JAPAN TO SEATTLE.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 4.—Japan is about to dispatch a report to St. Petersburg, according to advices received by the steamer Monteagle, to take up sealing claims brought by owners of Japan sealing schooners seized by Russian patrol cruisers.

MAP OF CROW'S NEST PASS DISTRICT, SWEPT BY FIRE

The above map gives a good idea of the location of the disastrous conflagration still raging in British Columbia. The area is not far north of the United States boundary and a great portion of its business is done with the adjacent states.

Twenty Bodies Recovered.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 4. — Search in the ruins at Fernie yesterday resulted in finding twenty bodies. They are:

Engineer Anderson, of the Hosmer mines; eight unidentified bodies; Ford family, mother, father, two children; Lena Bell, a negress; two unidentified women in her house; two unidentified lumberjacks; Mrs. Werner, and an unidentified child. This morning the towns of Hosmer and Michel are still safe. Cash donations for relief amounting to $25,000 have been received. The railway lines into Fernie have been repaired and relief trains are being rushed in. Fires are still raging in the bush but in opposite direction from the centers of population. If the fires do not shift the towns are safe. Men from the lumber camps continue to arrive at places of safety and from their reports the loss of life has been not more than a hundred and fifty. The police will investigate the report that friends of five alleged Black Hand suspects lodged in the Fernie jail started the fires in the bush.

MAIN STREET OF THE DESTROYED CITY OF FERNIE.

PRISONERS RELEASED.

All Turned Loose at Fernie Excepting Black Hand Suspects.

Nelson, B. C., Aug. 4.—The latest news from the Crows Nest Pass disaster shows a death list of sixty-two, which will probably be increased to seventy or eighty; a property loss exceeding $5,000,000, and about 7,000 homeless people.

The five Black Hand suspects who were in Fernie jail were brought in irons to Cranbrook and will be brought on here. The other prisoners were given their liberty. Nelson raised $2,000 yesterday, and two carloads of food and clothing were sent to the scene. Vancouver wired $5,000, and Spokane rushed in a carload of provisions.

The Daily News published an extra with the following account of the disaster from its correspondent at Fernie:

Fernie is in ruins today, only thirty-two houses having survived the disaster. It is not definitely known as yet whether any lives were lost in the city proper, but the finding of several corpses in the neighborhood of the city is reported, and it is feared many have perished.

Bush Fire Jumped River.

The bush fire which was raging in West Fernie in the morning jumped the river about 4 o'clock in the afternoon striking the south end of the town. The Fort Steele brewery was the first to go and from there the sparks carried the fire into the old town, which was soon a pall of smok-

MAKING HER WALK THE PLANK.

COUNT ZEPPELIN MAKING WONDERFUL FLIGHT IN HIS AIRSHIP OVER GERMANY

COUNT ZEPPELIN, German Nobleman, Who Is Making Wonderful Flight in Airship.

Starts Early in Morning on Twenty-Four-Hour Trip.

Machine Rises Like a Bird and Sails Majestically Away.

Passes Over Cities Going From 29 to 40 Miles an Hour.

Constance, Germany, Aug. 4.—The weather was excellent this morning when, at 6:30 o'clock, Count Zeppelin's airship emerged from the floating dock at Friedrichshafen. The airship arose immediately from the waters of the lake to a height of about 400 feet and, after describing one magnificent circle over the lake, proceeded in a bee line for this city, arriving here at 6:55 o'clock. The ship continued on its way and within another hour had covered forty-five kilometers and was over Schaffhausen. From that point it continued along the Rhine to Basle.

Count Zeppelin's plan is to continue to Mayence aleng the Rhine and from there return to Metz, cross over to Stuttgart and return, if the weather continues favorable, to Friedrichshafen at about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The day and the hour when ascent was to be made were kept secret until late last night, and not even the imperial commissioners appointed to accompany Count Zeppelin on the voyage were present. The only official taking part in the night is Major Gradnitz.

Although the day and the hour of the ascent of the airship had been kept strictly secret, long before daylight today the streets of Friedrichshafen presented a lively scene, for long experience with the doings of the men who sail the air had taught the natives that certain happenings were evidence of a forthcoming ascension. Consequently the local inhabitants and their summer boarders were out in great numbers when the sun appeared.

Count Arrives Early.

Count Zeppelin arrived at the floating dock at 4 o'clock, accompanied by his nephew, Dr. Eckner, a well-known yachtsman of Hamburg, and Maj. Gradnitz, the only official representative. Neither the imperial commissioners nor the count's usual official suite, nor the military motorists who intended to follow the flight, had been notified or invited. It was said that the count wished to make his great flight quietly and without interference.

Not the faintest cloud marred the beauty of the day. The surface of the lake was like a mirror, and the distant Alpine giants stood out strong and mighty in the clear atmosphere. At 6:15 the colossal body of the airship

RAILROAD BUILDING

Will be Resumed as Soon as Revenues Warrant.

Harriman Says Roads Are Ready and Anxious to Build.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 4.—"What we want is co-operation and rationalism," said E. H. Harriman as he sat in his private car this morning eating a bowl of rice and milk for breakfast.

Chicago was too much for Mr. Harriman yesterday and his stomach has gone back on him. The big railroad magnate was half way sick this morning and spent a restless night. "However, I will be all right in a couple of days," he said as his train pulled out at 8:30 for the West.

"When will you resume building operations in the West?" was asked.

"Whenever the revenue warrants it. We are ready and anxious just as soon as the returns from our present lines warrant the building of new ones. Although revenue has shown an increase in the last two or three months, it is not to compare with two or three years ago. We are doing some building in Nebraska and Wyoming as well as on the Pacific coast."

"How is business in your territory?" Mr. Harriman was asked.

"Don't call it my territory," peevishly answered Harriman. "Its all my territory, just as it's any other man's teritory. It's all interdepartment."

Mr. Harriman was joined at Omaha by General Counsel Lovett of the Harriman lines and departed West with the magnate.

FORCIBLY TAKEN FROM VATICAN

Irresponsible Priest Creates Excitement in Sacred Precincts.

Rome, Aug. 4.—The doings of an irresponsible priest named Felix Savigny of the diocese of Trebizond, Asiatic Turkey, caused considerable excitement at the Vatican today and resulted finally in his expulsion from its precincts.

For some time past this priest, who is 33 years old, has insisted on an audience of the pope, claiming that he desired the redress of certain wrongs which he declared he had suffered at the hands of the Vatican. An audience was denied, the authorities considering that the man's claim did not justify a personal hearing. Today Savigny placed himself at Rafael's Lodge, a point where the pope was expected to pass. When the pontiff approached, the gendarmes asked the priest to move on. This the man refused to do, and he began to shout and gesticulate in a threatening manner, causing considerable alarm among some pilgrims who had just been received by the pope. The gendarmes were obliged to use force in order to get Savigny from the spot. He was turned over to the police.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Open Their Twenty-Sixth Annual Convention at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—With more than 1,000 visitors and delegates present, the twenty-sixth annual national convention of the Knights of Columbus opened here today in Glennon hall, after a parade from Forest park to Archbishop Glennon's residence. The principal event of the day's program is the banquet in the evening in Glennon hall.

According to Edward L. Hearn, supreme knight, the plan submitted by Arhbishop Glennon, at the last national convention, to raise $500,000 as an endowment fund for the Catholic university at Washington, D. C., will be reported favorably today.

REPUBLICANS ARE IMITATORS

Bryan Comments on Taft's Use of Phonograph for Speeches.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 4.—The use of the phonograph by Candidate Taft as a means for the dissemination of his speeches, as reported in the dispatches from Hot Springs, Va., today, excited the liveliest interest of William J. Bryan, so much so, that he gave out the following statement in regard to it:

"The Republican papers have been making fun of me for using the phonograph as a means of reaching the public, but since the Republican candidate has followed the example I presume that the criticism will cease and that this will now be regarded as a dignified method of discussing public questions. It looks as if the Democrats were going to have a hard time this year protecting their patents from infringement.

Bent on Imitating.

"The Republicans seem bent on imitating not only our platform but our campaign methods. There is, however, some advantage in the fact that we are setting the pattern this year."

Among Mr. Bryan's early callers was Edgar C. Schmidt, Dayton, Ohio, who called in reference to a plan to reach the voters in the doubtful states with a series of typewritten letters. Mr. Bryan thought well of the proposition and Mr. Schmidt left today for Chicago where he will meet Norman Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee and talk the matter over with him.

Mr. Bryan was very much pleased over the decision of Secretary of State Junkin confirming the fusion arranged last spring by the Democrats and the Peoples party. This will have the effect of throwing a large number of Populist votes to the Democratic electors of Nebraska.

THE VIRGINIA BAR ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 4.—The Virginia Bar association met in the twentieth annual session at the Homestead hotel here today. The program contemplates day and evening sessions, to end with a banquet Thursday evening. Judge William H. Taft will address the association Thursday, on what he regards as the most important question now before the American people—the more prompt and economic administration of justice, both criminal and civil.

The first meeting of the session was largely attended.

WEATHER—Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday; cooler tonight.

SAVE MY CHILD!

Cried a Mother—Baby Eaten Alive With Worms Saved From Horrible Death.

Yesterday a young woman, carrying her 2-year-old child, pushed her way through the crowded reception room of the Wittman Medical Experts, at Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street, and surprised every one present with the above dramatic exclamation. The child was having a convulsion, and lay in its mother's arms in a state of terrible agony. Wittman applied his Lyarthgll, a light more powerful than the X-ray, and in less than five minutes every worm was annihilated and the child completely recovered. Wittman, after being thanked time and again by the young mother, said: "I am only too happy to think that my invention worked so nice in this case, as it was one whose nothing else in the way of medicine could be depended upon, or a terrible chance would have been taken. This invention paralyzed the parasites as soon as it struck them, and it was only necessary to remove them." This instrument will do the same thing to germs of appendicitis, ulcers, cancer, stomach and kidney trouble, as well as diseases of men and women of a private character.

WILL SELECT NEW OFFICIAL

Officers of First National Bank Will Elect Vice President.

Officers of the First National bank are at the present time negotiating with David Williams, president of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank of Webster, S. D., with a view of offering Mr. Williams the position of vice president of the First National bank.

No meeting of the directors of the First National bank has acted upon the matter as yet, but it is understood that as soon as the negotiations reach a definite stage a meeting of the board of directors of the bank will be called to act upon the matter.

At the present time there is no vice president of the First National bank. The position will be created. It is said that the officials of the bank feel that another official is needed in the direction of the affairs of the bank, and that the directors are inclined to agree with this view.

Mr. Williams has long been a prominent figure in the business and political life of South Dakota. He is a shrewd, keen business man of broad gauge, which, it is said, recommended him to the notice of the officials of the First National bank.

SENSATIONAL STORY.

Alleged That Fernie Fire Was Started to Free Prisoners.

Nelson, B. C., Aug. 4.—The most sensational story in connection with the Fernie fire comes from Cranbrook, where it is asserted that proof is forthcoming that three bush fires were started at Fernie which eventually burned all the town, with the object of freeing five "Black Hand" suspects, confined in the Fernie jail. It is a matter of fact that while most of the prisoners were given their liberty the five suspects, heavily ironed were taken to Cranbrook and will be brought to the principal jail here later.

THE CRITICS.

Christian Brinton, the editor and critic, said of the critical faculty one night at the University club in Philadelphia:

"The critical faculty is rare. It must be impersonal. But most of us incline to be wholly personal in our criticism. The fact was brought home to me at one of the recent exhibitions at the Academy of Fine Arts. Passing from picture to picture, I overheard many criticisms. Thus a lady in a rich gown said:

"'What a superb portrait of a young girl! It should certainly win the Carnegie prize. It is easy to see that the gown was made by Paquin.'

"A fat, red-nosed man in a fur-lined overcoat halted before a picture entitled The Luncheon'

"'This still life,' he exclaimed, 'is the most admirable I have ever seen. Terrapin, canvasback, champagne, lobster, even Perigord pie—ah, what a genius!'

"'In this historical painting,' I heard an antiquary say, 'the costumes are accurate in every detail. The painter is a second Raphael.'

"'That horse there,' said a young polo player, 'is exactly like my Podasokus. It's the best picture in the exhibition.'

"An athlete uttered a cry of delight before a daub called 'The Gladiator.'

"'What shoulders! What arms,' he said. 'I bet anything the jury gives this painting the highest award.'

"And half the throng, departing, said:

"'The picture in the last room is the best. No, we didnt see it—couldn't get to it, in fact—but it draws far and away the biggest crowd.'"

To advertise your real estate twice as much as another man advertises his does not indicate that you are twice as anxious to sell as he is—but that you know twice as much as he does about how to sell.

MORE MONEY FROM CIRCUSES

Commercial Club Committee Also Reports Against Tolls.

The sub-committee of the Commercial club has recommended to the general committee that the city circus license be increased from the present fee, $350, to $500.

It is said that the members of the committee were of the opinion that big circuses were paying a license that was entirely out of proportion to the amount of money they took away from the city, and that if the general committee concurs in the action of the sub-committee the city council will be asked by the club to increase the license fee to the amount recommended by the sub-committee.

Action, it is said, has also been taken upon the request of the Zenith Telephone company that it be allowed to charge a toll rate of ten cents for calls between this city and Superior. The sub-committee recommended that the city council refuse the request of the telephone company.

The Zenith Telephone company has been allowed a general increase in rates by the city council. A further increase in certain rates is allowed when a certain number of telephones are installed. The members of the sub-committee making the recommendation that the council turn down the request of the telephone company are of the opinion that the present rates should cover calls to Superior, and will ask the general committee of the club to ask the city council to refuse the request of the company.

More Lights Needed.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As lower Fifth avenue is one of the most traveled avenues of our city during the summer months on account of the crowds of excursionists that leave and arrive there each evening on the boats, it seems to me that it should be far better lighted than it is.

The people who go and come on lower Fifth avenue to and from the boats in the evening have to stumble and grope their way through the darkness at the risk of breaking their necks. There are only a few small lights at the lower end of the avenue and these do not begin to give enough light to guide a person with safety over the rough dock and street. There should be arc lights along the way, and I can not see any reason why they should not be installed immediately, before some bad accident occurs.

WALL STREET IS STRONG FOR TAFT

Gamblers Willing to Give Big Odds on Republican Ticket.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—A special dispatch to the Record-Herald from New York by Walter Wellman says:

Down in Wall street they are living in a fool's paradise so far as the election is concerned. They think Bryan has unto himself now to win. They can't see even a possibility of his success. They talk about odds of 10 to 1, and 8 to 1, and 6 to 1, against him, and even at that no one has the courage to take the Bryan end of it.

If there are any men in the West who think Bryan's chances are as good as one out of three they can get a nice mathematical equation in their favor by sending their money down to New York to be placed. Betting on election or anything else, is, of course, a foolish business, especially the way they do it here, that is, without any sense or knowledge.

New Yorkers As a Child.

The betting odds illustrate the utter, the wellnigh inexplicable inability of the average New Yorker to gain even a small glimmer of the true values in the national game of politics. Every other sort of game he understands and plays a pretty good game at, but in national politics he is a child, a foreigner, an outsider, a tenderfoot, a chump, a rube, a jay, a soft one, an easy mark, a lobster. He gets his general ideas from the New York papers and the people he talks with are his own kind, the men who believe just the way he does. Every Wall street man tells every other Wall street man, "Bryan has no show," and that convinces them all, that settles it. For them "down town" is the country. All the information and wisdom in the world center there. How can they all be mistaken? Such an idea never enters their heads.

These Wall street odd makers know nothing whatever about the rest of the country. The West to them is a sort of terra incognita which they indicate, if they deign to consider it at all, with a vague sweep of the hand in the direction of Hoboken. They know and care nothing about some of the peculiar things going on in the minds of the people in that region, "out West."

Take no Account of Labor Vote.

They take no account of the labor vote. They know nothing whatever of the possible political effect of the dull times and scant employment, of the church and religious discussion, which in its quiet way is sure to be a factor in the campaign.

They do not even know their own city and state. They have no conception of what the people are thinking over on the east and west sides of town. They have not discovered that among all the millions who work for wages there is a tendency to lift the party in power at Washington and make an experiment with a new broom at Washington.

Artists and Beauty.

The beauty of women appeals to all men, but not to all men alike; and artists, particularly figure-painters, are supposed to have strongly-pronounced preferences of their own. Nothing is so helpful to preserve health and beauty as a good malt tonic such as Golden Grain Belt beer. Serve this delicious beverage at mealtime and enjoy its benefits.

FAINTING ACT.

Duluth Pastor Is "Worked" By Woman.

A Duluth pastor was resting Sunday evening from the labors of the day when a ring at the parsonage door was answered by himself. A panting woman confronted him, inarticulate but clutching at her chest in an effort to get breath and leaning weakly against the door jamb. The minister drew the suffering creature into an easy chair and ordered water to be brought. Visions of an expiring female, unknown and mysterious was the vision in his mind and he ordered water to be brought more quickly.

"Liquor," gurgled the victim of the heart attack, the first coherent word she had uttered.

The minister and his family scurried around. Probably liquor was the only heart stimulant that would bring the poor creature out of the threatened attack. There was no brandy, there was no wine, nor any of the other brands that might help, but some whisky was discovered.

A glass was brought and the minister himself officiated at the pouring out. "Say when" he ordered as he turned the liquid into the glass. He kept on pouring.

He stopped pouring. "What?" he asked, but the woman had said nothing. So he began to pour the whisky for another little while. When two good sized ordinary drinks had found their way into the glass he quit of his own accord but without his unknown visitor saying a word in protest. He began to dilute with some water when she spoke again.

"I would prefer the water after," she said.

The minister shot a keen glance at her and silently handed her the overdose of whisky. It was gulped down and the gasping which had preceded was discontinued. She lived on Fourth street, so she said, and she suffered from heart trouble and the hills were very bad. There was no telling but that the attack might come on again and perhaps while she was at it she might just as well finish what was left of the whisky in order to reach home in safety. It was given her and after a short rest she passed into the night.

And now it follows that the same gasping lady has appeared at numerous doors in the same vicinity and her methods of procedure are identical in all cases. In some recently reported visits she had even climbed to the fourth floor of a flat building to ask for aid from the threatened attack of heart failure from walking up the hill. The case is one of an especially unpleasant imposition for in every instance her unwilling hosts were deeply concerned for fear of consequence to one suffering from heart trouble. Sunday evening in one neighborhood the woman succeeded in getting five large drinks of liquor. From recent reports the same woman is working the trick on manp unsuspecting familes, but in at least this neighborhood the article is now well known and her fainting act is received with little sympathy from her audience.

THE EVENING STORY

THE CLOAK OF FRIENDSHIP

By Inez H. Whitfield.

(Copyrighted. All rights reserved.)

It was a golden day in October—her favorite month. Thinking of the autumn beauty reminded her that a man had once expressed one of her own half thoughts in the words:

"Autumn is nature's holiday, and all her lovers should frolic with her, gathering rosemary for the winter."

A letter was handed to her. It read:

"Here, Today.

"Dear You: Does rosemary grow there? I am on my way to gather it, and beg that you will learn its hiding places and be my guide. Nature's lover and yours, A. MAN."

With the open letter in her hand she walked through the garden between rows of hollyhocks, past beds of asters and fall daisies, stopping to pluck a long-stemmed, gold-banded lily, and on through the rustic gate into the waving meadows beyond.

The slender, white figure drew the rays of the sun upon a crown of yellow-gold hair, which rippled merrily into a loose, low coil.

The gurgling sound of running water guided her footsteps to the rocky bank of a brook in the shade of ancient trees. On a flat topped boulder she seated herself to reread the letter.

Out of the past came memories—memories of the bitter-sweet days of youth, of experiences that brought delight, pain, joy and sadness. The bounding, rushing stream at her feet symbolized many, for she remembered that she once was gay. That patch of yellow sunshine, glinting through the brilliantly colored foliage, and defying the nearby shadows, was a picture of her school days; these freely swaying branches, frolic mad, testing the strength of the winds, beckoning to birds and butterflies, they were college days; over there in that pile of stones she caught glimpses of a scarlet lizard lapping insects in the sun, beautiful in color, but still a crawling thing, suggestive of the illusive pleasures whose true nature lay hidden under a flash of beauty.

Slowly particular events took form against the background of generalities. Her mind grew keen in retrospection. Her eyes became accustomed to the perspective, and one by one she knew the meaning of all those thoughtless days when beauty, wealth and youth were hers by right of natural possession, and happiness might have been had for the taking.

But what part of it all was the man? Now that the mysterious shadows were lifting, there glided into her heart a delicious sense that he was all. That he had been the center of every picture, the spirit of each hope and aspiration, and the object of all anticipation.

Familiar intercourse from childhood had wrapped around emotions its dull-veiling mist, smoldering like fire under passion and stunning the sense of appreciation. She caught her breath as the remembered the first rent in the covering. He came to say good-bye on the day he first left home to enter college—the interview was short and unpleasant, filled with the embarrassment of both. And the second? Yes, that was the day when she went to college, and she had laugned at him for asking her not to forget nim—laughed at him and made him the butt of the jests of the others who had come to see her off at the station. The third was the time he came to see her take her degree, and unable to keep to himself the desire of his heart, and asked for her love, and she had laughed again; but now she saw the hurt in his eyes and the sudden straightening of his big body as he said goodbye.

There was yet another time when he rudely tore away the familiarity of friendship and demanded what he called his own, and she? ah, yes, she had sent him angry away and turned back to the friends of the gayest winter she had ever known. And next? She recalled it vividly—it was only a tiny note handed to her as she dressed for a ball; he was to be married, should live abroad and desired her good wishes—that was all. She remembered with a bitter curve on her lips that the ball had been a success, that she had been the belle, and that other men had asked for her love.

Then the cloak of friendship served her well, and even her own heart was deluded by the warmth of its folds. Nevertheless such constant use had worn the garments thin and when later she met the man and his wife in London, it fell into pieces too small to grasp, as the realization came to her that he had found relief from the pain of her.

It was October, years later, a day like this, when they met again among the English lakes. He told her that his wife had died. She now recalled only his last remark:

"Autumn is nature's holiday, and all lovers should frolic with her, gathering rosemary for the winter."

They were saying goodbye, and her hand was in his. Compelled by his look she had raised her eyes to his for an instant only.

The sun had found a way through the leaves and was glorifying the gold of her hair, but she shivered as with cold, and covered her face with her hands in an anguish of dread.

"Could he have read my heart then?"

Burning waves of color swept across her face and her throbbing pulses deadened all sound.

Something happened—all sight, sound, feeling, the trees, the brook—everything melted into one huge drop of love, leaving no trace behind, opening no way before, shutting in by two strong, manly arms all thought, all life, all love.

"You at last!" His voice was dearer than she knew. "I think, sweetheart, I have lived my life for this moment."

"And I, dear heart," she whispered, "think it is my life."

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM — Mack-Leone Players in "Strongheart." (See notice below.)
BIJOU—Vaudeville. (See notice below.)

"STRONGHEART."

College Play is the Best Production Yet Given by Stock Company.

If you want to see the best play that the Mack-Leones have produced since their stay in this city, you want to go and witness the production of "Strongheart."

It requires a good deal of courage for a stock company to attempt the production of a play like the DeMille play. It is a play that depends to a great extent upon the perfection of every detail, and is a play that the average manager would not feel like attempting until after more time is given to rehearsal than is permitted in stock work. Despite the handicaps imposed on the actors, the production of the Mack-Leone players was as good as the Ralph Stuart production seen in this city, and the first night's production had all the smoothness and finish of a road show.

Willard Mack has done nothing better than his delineation of the Indian Soangataha, known as Strongheart. In voice, gesture and accent the actor carries out the mannerisms of an Indian, who, though educated to the civilization of the white man, was still the aborigine. That Mr. Mack was able to give such an excellent character performance, upon such a short acquaintance with the part, is convincing testimony of ability as an actor. The gutteral sound of the Indian when excited, the measured, lithe tread, the look of the eye—in fact all the details that went to make the performance a finished one, were contributed by the actor in a most realistic manner.

"Strongheart" is not a ply that provides much opportunity for the women of the cast. It is essentially a man's play. Miss Helen Holmes has had much better roles than the one of Dorothy Nelson in "Strongheart." The part is only a feeder at the best, but what opportunities there are in it, are taken advantage of by Miss Holmes.

About the most exacting thing that was required by Miss Meade was to look pretty. Let it be said in this regard, Miss Meade gave a most adequate performance of her part. Maude Cleveland had little to do, but did this little well.

The men of the company were all good. Percival Lennon looked and acted like a good-looking college man, not over-fond of grining, but the kind of college man that makes the best kind of an American. Mr. Lennon is an athletic-looking chap, one whom you would hate to see given the ball when the opponents had the pigskin on your five-yard line, and when he came in at the intermission of the imaginary football game, his suit covered with the lime of ten-yard lines, he brought to the imagination the spirit of the game that is American and looked the college football man. Mr. Lennon did one of the best piece sof work he has done since he has been with the company.

Marshall Farnum did not have the opportunity for any charcter work, but in a somewhat colorless role made the most of what opportunity was offered him. That Mr. Farnum has the ability to appear somewhat different in each role he is given is perhaps the best test of his ability.

As Thorne, a special, William Chapman was given the usual unpleasant role. Thorne is a particularly disagreeable character, and Mr. Chapman makes the part thoroughly convincing. Frank Joyner was given a role differing from his usual line of work, but as the captain of the football team Mr. Joyner gave an adequate performance.

In the roles of college students Stanley Lamb, Frank Patton and Wayne Ross were very good. Mr. Ross and Mr. Lamb were particularly good.

Jay Quigley was called upon to play a triple role, and that the actor should be convincing in each part is praise sufficient for his work. As the coach who gives the members of the team "hell" between the halves, Mr. Quigley was at his best. I fanyone has ever been in the dressing room of a football team during the intermission of a big game, he can appreciate the realism Mr. Quigley put into his work.

The trainers, rubbers and members of the football team carried out the spirit of the play.

"Strongheart" is a story of Columbia college. It is a story of an educated Indian, who finds after all that the hand of the white man is turned against him when he oversteps the narrow confines that civilization and society has placed around him. The Indian loves a white girl—the sister of his best friend. He is the equal of his white companions, is respected by them, but when he speaks his love he finds the prejudice of centuries a bar to his happiness. He is rejected by friends. Then he discovers that the Indian is but a savage, though he be educated, though his thoughts and feelings be those of the white brother. In the end Strongheart goes back to his tribe.

The mounting of the play is as good as either of the road productions that have been seen in this city. Special credit should be given for the settings of the first two acts. In fact, the production of "Strongheart" is a distinct credit to the members of the company and those who are responsible for the scenic production.

BIJOU REOPENS.

Redecorated Home of Vaudeville Has Snappy Bill for Week.

After being closed for two weeks or so, during which time decorators and scenic artists have been plying their trade industriously on the interior of the house, the Bijou theater reopened its doors last evening to two large interested audiences.

The theater has been very prettily decorated, and people entering the place last night gave little sighs and gasps of surprise and pleasure when they viewed the changes that had been wrought on the walls of the popular amusement place.

The walls have been decorated with a number of large pastoral scenes, and the proscenium arch and boxes have been redecorated and embellished. Four little cherubs hold sway over the boxes, which have been completely refurnished. Back of the curtain line many improvements can also be noted. Several new sets of scenery were placed in commission last night.

The bill for the week is a lively and entertaining one. There is not a dull act on the list. No act could possibly be livlier than that of the Abdulla troupe of six Arabian acrobats. Their feats of strength and marvelous leaping and tumbling won the admiration of the audience from the start.

There is no lack of dash or go, either, in the act presented by Rube Welch, Kitty Francis and company, five people in all. They have a sketch called "The Flip Mr. Flop," which concerns the efforts of a conversational gentleman of that name to secure a wife. He makes the home of a widow with three daughters his hunting ground and finally lands the widow. Rube Welch is Flop and Kitty Francis the widow, and the daughters are played by Irene Byrne, Kate Coyle and Mae Beatrice. There are several songs during the act.

Doc Rice, who calls himself "the grand master of blackface comedy," makes a demonstration of his ability alone. The samples he distributed last night were favorably received. Ethel Hammond also gives a monologue. She has a number of amusing stories about children which she gives with all the effects.

Arnold and Ethyl Grazer give a sketch called "Going Into Vaudeville." Arnold Grazer's toe dancing is the feature which creates the most interest.

Isadore Silver's song for the week is called "If I Should Fall In Love With You," and the moving pictures are novel and interesting.

FLAMES DESTROY BAUDETTE MILL

Shevlin-Mathieu Plant Sustains Loss of About $200,000.

Baudette, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed the sawmill here of the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company entailing a loss of about $260,000 upon which there is about $113,000 insurance. Sparks from the burner are blamed for the fire. The flames were first seen about 3 o'clock at the northwest part of the mill, near the log slip. A fierce wind was blowing from the northwest and the firemen were unable to check the progress of the flames before the major part of the mill was destroyed. Fortunately the fire was under control before the lumber piles caught and hard fighting saved the planer mill office and the company house near the mill.

RAILROADS

SURPLUS IS INCREASING

Stock and Wheat Movement Will Greatly Increase Traffic.

Movement of Empties to North Dakota Has Begun.

Every day is witnessing a decrease in the number of surplus cars. Though there are about 200,000 surplus cars in the country at the present time, Western railroad officials state that by the first of October this surplus will have been reduced to a state where traffic managers will be wondering whether there will be a car shortage this year.

Within the next ten days the stock movement from North and South Dakota, Montana, Washington and other Western states will begin. Western roads are at the present time placing stock cars on the road preparatory to hauling the live stock to the markets at Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha. It is anticipated that the livestock movement this year will be the heaviest in years.

But the grain movement is what will tax the carrying capacity of the Western roads.

The movement of cars toward the wheat centers has already commenced. The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific are sending cars into North Dakota, while the Soo and other lines are also following the same policy.

While there are many cars in Duluth at the present time, as the coal movement is very slow this year, freight men state that the demand for cars this fall will be the heaviest for years, if the crops come up to expectations, and that the roads will have all the business they can possibly handle.

RECONSIDER RATES.

Japanese Shippers Protest Against Proposed Increase in Freight Rates.

Tokio, July 16, via San Francisco, Aug. 4.—It appears that the strenuous exertion made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Steamship company and others to induce the American railway companies to reconsider the proposed schedule of rates have been attended with some measure of success. The railway companies are now said to have cabled the directors of the Nippon Yusen company in the sense that rates will be kept down to the San Francisco level.

The Japanese Boyeki Kyoikai also has received from the railway control bureau at Chicago an assurance that as this question of rates closely concerns the trade between the two countries every effort will be made to arrange between the two countries every effort will be made to arrange a mutually satisfactory schedule. Nayoga and Seto have also cabled to the same bureau in Chicago and have urged that the projected increase of rates would be fatal. These two places are the great centers of Japan porcelain manufacture. They export five million yen worth of Keramic ware annually to America and they have hitherto paid twenty yen a ton for transportation. Under the new schedule, however, they would have to pay thirty yen and this would mean that the Suez route must be chosen in preference to the American.

RAKOWSKY WILL SOON BE ON JOB

Real Estate Man Will Become Assessor Sept. 1.

C. L. Rakowsky will assume the duties of city assessor Sept. 1. In appointing Mr. Rakowsky to the position, Mayor Haven has followed out his announced policy of putting an experienced real estate man, with a good knowledge of actual values, where he will be able to exert some influence on affixing the tax valuations of the city.

The board of review is still in session, but it is expected that its work will be completed within a day or two, possibly tomorrow. Members of the board have been working ten and twelve hours a day, in trying to adjust the assessment. The county board of equalization is waiting for the books. The board of review has really overrun its time limit by about two weeks, but this was absolutely necessary, in view of the amount of important work that was to be done.

BLACKLIST FOR UNION SHOP MEN

Real Estate Exchange Will Boycott Some Local Contractors.

The real estate exchange is out after the closed shop contractors and builders. At the meeting this noon the placing of a boycott on the closed shop firms was the principal subject under discussion. Secretary Cobb of the builders' exchange reported the names of several contractors who had gone back on the open shop policy, and were showing preference to union men. The list was submitted to the exchange with the understanding that none of the firms on the list were to be employed.

The meeting was held in the Spalding Cafe. Between thirty and forty members were present.

Besides blacklisting the closed shop contractors, little of importance came up. The committee which was to report on the question of the unconstitutionality of the gross earnings tax deferred its report until the next meeting.

Revolting Atrocities.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 4.—The recapture of the city Hohokow from the rebels in Annam was marked with astounding atrocities, according to advices by the steamer Mt. Eagle last night. Prisoners were horribly mutilated, being tied to stakes and their abdomens cut open, and many other horrible atrocities committed upon the living men until death saved them from their barbaric executors.

LEAP YEAR IS OFFSET

Marriage Rate Steady in Spite of Recent Hard Times.

Duluth Maids Take Advantage of Mystic Year's Privileges.

Duluth's marriage rate seems to hold fairly steady in spite of financial stringencies and other influences which might deter the popping of the all important question.

The depression in the money market has doubtless been bad for the marriage rate. With bills piling up higher than ever and jobs getting fewer and farthere between, the temptation for the young man to yield to the thoughts of love that traditionally come with the spring time becomes less and less pressing. With these very good reasons in view it was expected that a search of the marriage records for Duluth up to this date would show a considerable falling off over last year.

But this is leap year and the depressing effect of last fall's stringency and the uncertainty of the summer before election are offset. By actual figures the year is averaging up very favorably with last year. Just 500 licenses have been issued to date to parties in Duluth and vicinity, and with but seven months of the year passed, the chance that last year's mark of 1,013 for the entire year will be equalled by December seems to be very good. Seventy-five licenses were issued during July as compared with eighty-two for the same month last year.

Ten Years in Bed.

"For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys," writes R. A. Gray, J. P. of Oakville, Ind. "It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me." Sold by all druggists.

TWO STRIKES AT SAME PLACE

Strike-Breaking Crew Refused to Work at Stone Crusher.

The rock crusher operated by George R. King, on Kenwood road, was the scene of a miniature strike riot this morning.

Mr. King has had a crew of twenty-five men at work on the crusher. They were doing a rush job, and during the time they were at work on it, Mr. King claims he agreed to pay them $2 a day on the understanding that the regular wage was $1.75. This morning the rush work was completed and Mr. King attempted to cut the wages of the men to $1.75. There was a strike, and a crew of twenty-five Austrians was sent out to the work. When they arrived they found the regular employes lined up, prepared for trouble. Capt. Fisket and Officer Hannot were called, but when they arrived they found that the Austrians, when they learned of the trouble the old crew had had, refused to go to work.

The Red Light District.

To the Public: The papers conveyed the idea that the West end committee, which called on the mayor, protested only against the removal of the district to the Glen. That is a part truth only. The committee protested, and protests now, against the open disregard of the law. In a city of Duluth's size there is no need of such a place. It can be, and should be, abolished.

Why should a saloon be forced to close at 11 p. m. and these houses be allowed to sell without a license all night long? Every month these madams of the disorderly homes pay their fines—and are permitted to run another month. This blood money is the price paid for the privilege of breaking the law.

What are the interests in favor of such a district? First, owners of real estate, who draw big rentals from the property; second, dry goods houses, which sell fashionable goods, at fabulous prices to the inmates; third, brewers and liquor dealers, whose beer and wine are sold at $1 per bottle or more. Part or all of these interests will say that the law cannot be enforced; that these people cannot be driven from the city; that women won't be safe on the streets. All of which is untrue.

I trust that the Park Point people will join with the West end people, and with the good people of the entire city, to smother this sore spot, blot out this shameless vice and compel those in authority to enforce the law without fear or favor.

BEHIND ON WORK.

J. A. Johnson Criticised for Methods of Paving Second Street.

J. A. Johnson, who has the contract for paving Second street between Seventh and Thirteenth avenues east, is having a hard time keeping a crew of men. The fact that so few men are working for him is making the city authorities afraid that he will be unable to finish his contract within the time limit, despite the fact the present weather is very favorable for this sort of work. He has room for about 100 men, and is said to have only twelve or fifteen employed. It is doubtful if he will be granted another extension of time.

ON FOREIGN JUNKET.

Sub-Committee of Monetary Commission Off on Nice Trip.

New York, Aug. 4.—Legislation establishing a comprehensive monetary system will, in time, undoubtedly supersede the Vreeland-Aldrich bill, is the opinion of Senator Aldrich. The senator made this announcement in a statement given to the Associated Press before he sailed for Europe with his fellow members of the sub-committee of the monetary commission which goes abroad to study financial conditions in foreign countries.

"The active work of the commission this summer will be carried on by the sub-committee who are going abroad and by another sub-committee of which Representative Weeks is the acting chairman, who are now engaged in considering amendments to the administrative features of the national banking laws," said Senator Aldrich. "This work is but preliminary to the report which the commission are required to make to congress of a complete monetary and banking system for country."

The sub-committee which sailed today is composed of United States Senators Aldrich of Rhode Island; Hale of Maine and Daniel of Virginia and Representative Vreeland of Virginia; Overstreet of Indiana and Padgett of Tennessee, Prof. A. P. Andrews and Arthur P. Shelton, secretary.

ALMA LUND'S DEATH

Is Being Investigated by Authorities at Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another adjournment until Thursday has been taken in the Alma Lund inquest. Some witnesses have been heard before the coroner's jury, but there are some more important ones to appear. The girl came here from Hillsboro, N. D., July 4, and soon afterwards submitted to an operation, which proved fatal. After her interment her uncle demanded an investigation, which led to the exhumation of the body and a post-mortem examination, which indicated a criminal operation had been performed. The authorities are endeavoring to discover the man in the case, as well as the operating surgeon.

BAD FOREST FIRE IS RAGING IN WASHINGTON.

Aberdeen, Wash., Aug. 4.—A careless traveler who threw a lighted match into the underbrush started a forest fire twelve miles from Hoquiam on the Hump Tullips-Hoquiam road yesterday that quickly getting beyond control has already swept over 10,000 acres of slashings on which were piled 15,000,000 feet of cut timber, and now threatens to destroy the logging camps of the Polson Logging company, Shaw and Nelson and the Stocksell Logging company. Fourteen thousand acres of green timber lie directly in the path of the flames and there is no hope of saving any of it unless the wind, which is now blowing a gale, dies down. One thousand men are fighting the fire, but at this time they seem unable to check its progress. The property loss will exceed $250,000.

SOUTH AMERICANS ARE ON EVE OF OUTBREAK.

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—According to passengers who arrived from Central American ports yesterday on the Pacific Mail liner San Jose from Panama, relations between the various South American republics are strained almost to the breaking point, and Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala are near an open rupture, though it is declared that it will be hard to make a reasonably certain guess as to where the trouble will start if it does come.

CHICAGO FIRE LOSS ABOUT $1,000,000.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Fire, which was so hot that the firemen could not get nearer than a block of it, and which made it necessary to play streams on buildings three and four squares away, yesterday afternoon destroyed the Burlington elevators, "E" and "F." The dock transfer, warehouse of that road and 100 cars were either burned or rendered useless. The loss on the grain in the two elevators is placed by Armour & Co., who owned it, at $700,000. The total loss is placed at $1,000,000.

GIANT HAIL STONES FELL.

Sauk Center, Minn., Aug. 4.—A fierce electrical storm, accompanied by rain, struck this vicinity Sunday night. At Spring Park, a resort on the Sauk lake four miles north, hail fell in great quantities, many stones being as large as eggs. The trees were stripped of foliage and crops laid waste over a large area.

ing ruins. At the same time the Elk Lumber company's mill and the Cedar Valley mills caught fire and in an incredibly short time West Fernie was a seething mass of flames, the people fleeing for their lives. The conflagration jumped the river near the wagon bridge and set fire to the west end of the town and fanned by the hurricane that was blowing, the city was at the mercy of the fire.

The crowds rushed to the railway stations in hope of getting a train, and in this manner numbers reached Hosmer in safety, though the trains had to run through sheets of flame which repeatedly set fire to the coaches. The prisoners in the jail were liberated and the patients in the hospital were hurried to nearby buildings and were made as comfortable as possible. Today cook stoves have arrived from Cranbrook and the people are being fed upon the lawns. Everything is running as smoothly as can be expected and hundreds of homeless people are being sent to neighboring towns. The scene during the conflagration defies description. It was simply a fight for every life.

ACTS OF HEROISM

Reported During the Time Fernie Was a Blazing Furnace.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 4.—Many acts of heroism are reported during the two and a half hours when Fernie was like a blazing furnace. W. T. Healy of West Fernie while crossing the traffic bridge over the Elk river, came on a little girl lying face downward in the dust and picking her up riscovered that she was alive and putting her on his back, retraced his steps to the brick plant at the south end of West Fernie. Charles Ericson of West Fernie, a carpenter found a young girl who had just risen from a sick bed, sitting in the door of a cabin holding a baby in her arms. The girl did not know what had become of her parents and the fire was fast coming on the cabin. Ericson seized the girl who was clothed only in a night gown, and carried them to the Great Northern tracks below the fire. Two other little girls who had lost their parents were found by Ericson and carried to safety, after which he returned and found two old women in a cabin. One of the women refused to leave the house and Ericson was compelled to take her out by force to save her life.

An old woman, 90 years of age was carried by John Volume on his back from the Fort Steel brewery below town to the Crow's Nest Coal company's office over a mile. The old woman pleaded to be left to the mercy of the flames, telling her rescuer to devote his time to saving more useful people.

COMPANY GIVEN ANOTHER SHOW

Hibbing Commercial Club Favors More Time for Traction Concern.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—After an explanation by Max Rogalsky, a local business man, who is heavily interested in the Northern Traction company, which owns a street railway franchise here, in explanation of the apparently small amount of work being done toward building the line at this time, the Commercial club last night decided not to ask the village council to revoke the charter held by the company. He said that he had recently made a trip to Chicago in the interest of the company and he believed if the concern was allowed a little more time it would be in a position to make good its intentions of putting in a traction line. The company also has a right-of-way to Buhl, but very little work has been done, the late money panic being generally blamed for the inability to proceed.

It was decided to appoint a committee to circulate a petition asking the board to call a special election to decide about making this an independent school district, it being the opinion that on account of the size of the district, twenty-four miles by twelve miles, and the large amount of taxable property therein, the duties were too onerous for a board of three.

Chairman R. E. McEachin of the committee delegated to interview the Missabe railroad and the Western Union Telegraph company relative to having a chair car on the road out of here and the establishment of a night telegraph service, reported progress. J. J. Cox reported on the progress of the movement to secure a county agricultural and industrial school.

BIWABIK WILL PAVE.

Range Town Will Improve Main Street.

Biwabik, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Main street in Biwabik will be paved, the village council having decided upon that improvement last night. C. M. Dorway of Virginia will look after the engineering part of the job, while J. P. Murray will superintend the work.

The big road roller and the rock crusher were formally accepted, and work of installing the rock crusher will be started at once.

With Trustee Thomas voting in the negative and all others in the affirmative it was decided that the village will pay one-half of the cost of constructing a road to connect with the county road leading into the Pike river settlement. This is one of the thoroughfares that it was agreed should be constructed jointly by the county, the township and the village, but some opposition developed.

TO START EXCAVATING.

Work on Foundation for Hibbing City Hall to Start Thursday.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug.4—(Special to The Herald.)—The Hooker residence has been moved off the lots to be occupied by the new city hall and the frame barns torn down. Excavation will be started as soon as the jail can be moved, which, in all probability, will be not later than Thursday. Tonight the common council will consider and decide upon the bids submitted by the various contractors for the plumbing, heating and lighting of the new city hall.

The excavating for the new Cox building and M. & M. State bank is going on rapidly. The brick masons will be started to work before the end of the week.

JOHN KANE ARRESTED.

Charged With "Shooting Up" Hibbing Boarding House.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug.4—(Special to The Herald.)—John Karic was arrested Sunday night by Chief Wring at the Letoma mine, where he had been "shooting up" a boarding house owned by Frank Similich. Judge Brady called his preliminary hearing last evening, but owing to some of the witnesses not being present, the case was postponed until today.

Harry McKeown, the tailor, left this morning for Minneapolis. Mr. McKeown will be gone for a week's trip.

HIBBING NINE CRIPPLED.

Sickness is Playing Havoc With Brady's Colts.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Hibbing team suffered another defeat yesterday at the hands of Virginia in a 7 to 3 game. Curry worked for Virginia, while Freeman pitched for the home club. The Hibbing team at present is badly broken up. Head is laid up with a badly sprained ankle, Gilligan is in the hospital with appendicitis and Gilchrist, who was forced to quit early in yesterday's game, has all the early symptoms of typhoid fever. The Eveleth team plays here today.

NIGHT CREW LAID OFF.

Many Open Pit Men at Fayal Mine Not Working.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The night crew at the Fayal open pit has been laid off. This action will affect over 100 men. At the Adams the drill gang has also been laid off and about fifty men have been thrown out of work. Something of this nature has been expected, for a short time past and it seems that some more men will also be laid off about the 20th of the month, pay day. The laying off of the men is attributed here to the strike of the lake men near Cleveland and to the slow sales in ore.

AMATEUR BASEBALL IS POPULAR IN EVELETH.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Amateur baseball in town is on the boom on account of the good success of the regular Eveleth team. Today at the ball park the business men's team, known as McCarter's Colts, are playing a fast game of ball with Cass Jenkins' Company F militia baseball team. Dr. Ranney of the More hospital is on the hill for the colts and is doing almost as good work as Dr. Barrett did in the last game. On Thursday of this week the business men's team of this city will play a game with the business men's team of Virginia.

The regular Eveleth team is playing today at Hibbing. Tomorrow the two teams will play here while on Thursday they will play again at Hibbing.

LAWBREAKERS PUNISHED.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Paul Kurk was fined $25 and costs by Judgge Prince, for keeping a disorderly house. The three men who were arrested Saturday for shooting off weapons on the Adams location will be heard Thursday. Nacarene Balanth was arrested Sunday morning on a charge of indecent exposure, and was yesterday sent to the county jail for sixty days on failure to pay a fine of $31.50.

BURNING BRIDGE STOPS SHIPPING

Of Logs on Duluth & Northern Minnesota Railroad.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth & Northern Minnesota railway has been compelled to cease log shipments for a few days on acount of a bridge on the line, about four miles from Knife River, burning yesterday. It will take about a week to make repairs, and during that time the passenger trains will use the Iron Range tracks betwen Knife River and Britton transfer, and from the latter place to North Shore points over its own tracks.

The Duluth & Northern Minnesota railway has some gravel trains hauling gravel from Britton pit for ballasting of some of its new extensions and repairs to old track.

DULUTH BEER POPULAR.

Want It So Bad in Two Harbors, They Steal It.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The popularity of the brew of the Duluth Brewing company was advanced several pegs here yesterday when it became known that seven cases of the amber fluid from the Zenith City concern had been stolen from the company's warehouse during Sunday night. There is said to be a clue that may lead to the arrest of the thieves.

W. H. GUINN CHAIRMAN OF AURORA SCHOOL BOARD.

Aurora, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new school board was to have held its first session last night, but owing to the illness of Olaf Hellstrom, the clerk, nothing was done beside electing W. H. Guinn chairman and Charles Olson treasurer.

The board will endeavor to have a meeting tonight to complete the business.

DOCK WORKER INJURED.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—While riveting on the new steel dock here James Smith, employed by the American Bridge company, lost his footing and fell forty-two feet, sustaining a broken arm and a bruised hip. As he descended he struck some insulated wires which broke his fall, otherwise he might have been killed, as he landed upon the concrete base. He is being cared for at the Budd hospital, and will probably recover.

NEW COLERAINE INDUSTRY.

Coleraine, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—A cement factory is the latest industry to be established here. The factory is being constructed west of the oleraine Lumber company yards. The first building on the range to be built of cement blocks will be a double block for Minter & Hendrickson, now in course of construction on Roosevelt avenue.

LOSE LIQUOR LICENSE FOR SELLING TO MINORS.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—It cost the liquor firm of Donnelly & Howe the license held in the name of M. J. Donnelly for selling liquor to minors. The city council took this action last night by revoking the license, after an extended hearing.

YAWN DISLOCATES JAW.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Handy, who works for the Alger-Smith Lumber company at Beaver Crossing, is being treated at the Budd hospital here for an unusual ailment. He yawned and dislocated his jaw. The surgeons after considerable effort managed to replace the jaw, and the patient will have to subsist on liquid food for a few days.

COLERAINE CHEMIST WILL MARRY GIRL IN NEGAUNEE.

Coleraine, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.) — Herbert T. Rogers, chemist for the Oliver Iron Mining company at Coleraine and well known throughout the range, left yesterday for Hay, Ont., where on Aug. 12 he will be united in marriage to Miss Blanche Jeckell. Miss Jeckell has been a kindergarten teacher in the schools of Negaunee, Mich., and is well known to many former Michigan people now residing in Coleraine. The young people will be at home at Coleraine after Sept. 1.

CANDIDATES ARE BUSY.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The range people are now getting an early taste of the political campaign. The fight for sheriff seems to be the talk just at present. The candidates are in town visiting amongst their friends and are distributing their campaign cards already.

MILITIAMEN SHOOT.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—About twenty militia men were out to the rifle range Sunday and made some good scores. The firing was done from the 200, 300 and 500 yard range and the average of the men was all above 60, which is considered a very good showing for a new company, some of whose members have never before handled a gun. A number of 21 out of 25 scores were made.

COLERAINE STORE DEAL.

Coleraine, Minn., Aug. 4.—A. E. Wright, who with A. M. Murnik of Eveleth formed the Coleraine Dry Goods company, has disposed of his interest in the company to Charles J. Gates of Minneapolis, and will shortly open up a new business alone. Mr. Gates has until recently been salesman for the Marshall Field company of Chicago, but will assume the active management of the Coleraine Dry Goods company.

COUNT ZEPPELIN MAKING A WONDERFUL FLIGHT

emerged slowly from the floating shed, towed by three launches. Under the direction of Dr. Eckner the pontoons were towed out from underneath it, and the airship hovered low over the surface of the lake. Then slowly the nose of the ship was raised to a higher level. Above the noise of the propellors, which sounded like the beating of giant drums, arose the voice of the count, giving the command to "cast off," and the airship rose horizontally to a height of about 400 feet and then swept off in the direction of Constance. She turned shortly, however, in a graceful circle and came back over the lake. So light and agile were her movements that the count seemed justified in starting his long journey of twenty-four hours without any previous trial trip, and he started in the direction of Schauffhauson. His departure was the signal for prolonged cheering by the spectators on land and afloat in various small craft, who wished him a good voyage and safe return.

Passes Strassburg.

Strassburg, Aug. 4.—Count Zeppelin's airship was sighted from Strassburg at 1:14. It appeared to be going at the rate of forty miles an hour. It circled the great church tower, moving slowly, at an elevation of a little above the tower.

The city is decorated with flags, and as the ship of the air passed over the crowds which filled the streets and squares shouted their approval and encouragement. The airship then laid its course straight down the Rhine.

A card fluttered down before the ship got away. Upon it was written: "Out of the heights above Strassburg. We are having a splendid excursion. We are laying our course to Mannheim.

"ZEPPELIN."

Population Cheers.

Mannheim, Aug. 4.—The Zeppelin airship passed over this city at 2:40 this afternoon. The entire population came out into the streets and cheered vociferously. A card was dropped down reading:

"We are driving smoothly in the direction of Worms.

"ZEPPELIN."

Traveling 29 Miles an Hour.

Mayenz, Aug. 4.—Count Zeppelin's airship was sighted from here at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. The distance from Friedrichshafen to Mayenz is 261 miles. Having left the former place at half past 6 this morning, the aerial navigators have consequently averaged twenty-nine miles an hour, including maneuverings.

SOUTHWESTERN STATES TEST PRIMARY ELECTION LAW

those who oppose the views of Judge Wallace.

For lieutenant governor there are six Democratic candidates; two for secretary of state; five for state auditor, six for railroad and warehouse commissioner and two for judge of the supreme court, while James Cowgill for state treasurer and Elliott W. Major for attorney general have no opposition.

In Kansas.

Topeka Kan., Aug. 4.—For the first time in the history of the state the voters of Kansas are today selecting their candidates at a state wide primary and each political party will nominate its ticket from United States senator down to constable.

Four state tickets are in the field—Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Prohibitionist. There is no ticket for the Populists to vote and this is the first time since 1890 that they have not put a ticket in the field

The Socialists have a full list of presidential electors, a full state ticket, including United States senator and a full congressional ticket except in the Sixth district.

The Prohibitionists have a full list of presidential electors, a full state ticket, including United States senators, have congressional candidates only in the Second, Fourth and Fifth districts.

The law provides that candidates for United States senator receiving a plurality of the votes in the greatest number of legislative districts shall be the caucus nominee of his party. Joseph L. Bristow, formerly fourth assistant postmaster general, is in the race for United States senator against Senator Chester I. Long, and the campaign has been most exciting, including joint debates between the candidates.

In Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 4.—Oklahoma today is choosing candidates for political offices by the primary system.

Nominees for the lower house of the legislature, one-half of the state senate, all members of congress, two members of the supreme court, one member of the state corporation commission, one member of the United States senate and members of precinct, county and state committees will be chosen.

The four Democratic members of congress, the Democratic United States senator, Thomas P. Gore, and the two members of the supreme court have no opposition within their party for the nominations. In the First congressional district Bird S. McGuire, the present incumbent, and Bayard T. Hainer, both Republicans, are candidates. R. L. Williams, chief justice, is without opposition. Associate Justice W. Hayes, Democrat, has against him J. T. Dickerson, Republican, and A. W. Bennett, Socialist. The Socialist party has candidates for all the higher offices except United States senator.

Ex-Delegate Dennis T. Flynn will be the nominee of the Republicans for the United States senate against Gore. The nomination will be of little value to the Republicans, however, unless the state election board permits the names of the rival senatorial candidates to be printed on the general election ballot. This would give the voters, regardless of party, a chance to express their preference, the primary being merely a party choice.

HORSE MEDICINE USED FOR POISON

Barn Boss Makes an Unsuccessful Attempt at Suicide.

Mike Hanley, the barn boss for Gray Brothers, bakers, attempted to commit suicide last evening between 8 and 9 o'clock, by drinking a bottle of horse medicine, in the barn on First alley, between First and Second avenues east.

A little girl who happened to be passing saw the act and notified several men who live in the vicinity. They prepared a drink of mustard and milk which proved an effective emetic and Hanley recovered.

RUNS AMUCK ON FIRST STREET

Unknown Man Wounds Three With Knife and Escapes.

An unknown Italian created great excitement early last evening by running amuck with a knife at the corner of First avenue east and First street. He inflicted wounds on three persons, Louis Finkenstein, Peter N. Dahl and Edward Dahl, but none of the injuries are serious enough to cause alarm. The Italian escaped.

Finkelstein, 18 years old, of 212 East Fourth street, was the first one to be attacked. According to the police, he spoke to the Italian, who was standing beside a pop corn wagon, thinking he knew him. The man made cordial response, and extended his sack of corn, but the youth refused to take any, telling him to give it to the other boys, whereupon the man is said to have hit him with his fist. The Italian then pulled his knife and inflicted a deep wound on Finkelstein's arm. The other boys interfered, and their cries for help brought several men running to the scene

The man with the knife made a mad rush through the crowd, waving his knife. Edward Dahl of 28 East Fourth street was first to feel the blade. Peter N. Dahl, his father, then got a slash across the arm. The younger man was struck across the head with the blade.

A howling mob of men and boys chased the Italian for several blocks, but he escaped in the dusk. The police were notified, and several men were sent to the scene, but no arrests were made. They have not a very good description of the Italian, but hope to be able to apprehend him.

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

Supervisors Decide to Erect Seven New Buildings This Year.

Plans for the erection of seven new school buildings in the county during the summer year, the approval of the levy of $18,000 for school purposes, and the submission of reports on the year just passed were among the matters which came up for discussion at the annual meeting of the St. Louis county board of school directors which was held in Supt. S. W. Gilpin's office yesterday afternoon.

According to the reports submitted there is still $4,700 of last year's appropriation on hand. During the year two new buildings were erected in the county, one near Gheen and one near Birch Lake, nearly. One was donated to the county, at Sucker river.

State examinations for first grade teachers' certificates are in progress Monday and Tuesday of this week at Duluth, Virginia and Tower, the examinations being held in the respective high schools. There are about 100 candidates taking the tests.

Mr. Pettibone had been ill practically ever since his confinement in the Idaho penitentiary which began more than a year previous to the famous trials at Boise. Pettibone was tried and acquitted at Boise.

THE KNIFE ISSUE AGAIN.

There had been reasonable ground for the comforting belief that the knife issue had been eliminated from the Minnesota governorship campaign, and because of the advertising the state received from this unworthy claim for popular support, patriotic citizens of the North Star state were glad.

But here it comes again, raising its unlovely yet absurdly ludicrous and pathetically well-meaning visage over the state in a hopeful attempt to attract popular attention.

Says the Walker Pilot: "The Jacobson pastry story has been punctured. Jake doesn't eat pie with a knife at all—it's peas."

It must be admitted that this is a much better story than the pie story that Frank Eddy told when, in nominating Mr. Jacobson as the Republican candidate for governor of Minnesota, he declared that the statesman from Lac Qui Parle county ate his pie with a knife.

Very much more dexterity, agility and skill are required to eat peas with a knife than to eat pie in that manner, as anybody who has tried both will readily concede; and those who have witnessed both feats are in nearly as good a position to judge of the relative merits of the two accomplishments. It is comparatively a simple feat to eat pie with a knife, and Frank Eddy ought to have thought of that when he made the speech that attracted the attention of the world to Minnesota. You just put your left elbow on the table, square the pie around with the sharpest angle of the isosceles triangle toward you, take your trusty knife in your right hand, cut off from the large triangle a smaller one, insert under it the point of your knife, and delicately convey the tempting morsel to your waiting mouth. Unless, perchance, the interior of the pie be made of uncommonly juicy and elusive materials, this is as easy as falling off a log; and if the contents of the pie be of that nature, you have only to slip a large napkin under your collar, spread it over your bosom and lap, and happily let the drippings drip.

But with peas, it's different. Peas, as you know, are "round and "rolly." It takes long practice, a steady nerve and unerring skill to keep them upon the flat and unfenced surface of your knife. "Pigs in clover" is nothing compared with eating peas with a knife, and the theory of the Walker newspaper furnishes a campaign argument that cannot help proving very attractive to all who admire exhibits of skill in juggling.

There is nothing in this new phase of the knife issue that is inconsistent with Mr. Jacobson's denial of the Eddy story. It will be remembered that his defense to this story—though it is sad indeed when a candidate has to defend himself from his admiring friends—was that he does not eat pie at all. If he does not eat pie, obviously he cannot eat it with a knife. It is to be noticed that he did not say that he does not eat peas, hence the Walker Pilot's new campaign issue has a fair field for its operations.

There have been candidates for governor who ate their peas with a spoon, many of them; but if Minnesota has a candidate who juggles his peas with a knife, it can triumphantly demand the attention of the country once more.

WHAT DOLLAR WHEAT MEANS.

A combination of conditions and circumstances has produced in the Duluth grain market lately that consummation so delightful to the farmer and so full of the potentialities of prosperity—dollar wheat. September wheat reached the dollar mark several days ago, and after slipping a peg or two under it temporarily, regained that level Saturday and again Monday.

A dollar is a good price for wheat. It means good profits to the farmer, and when the farmer prospers everybody in his neighborhood shares in his prosperity. That means that the Northwest is going to market a lot of wheat at high prices this fall, and that as a result Duluth and the Northwest will receive an invigorating bath of good times.

While on the face of the market reports it might seem as though this high price of wheat was at the expense of considerable crop damage in the Northwest, that does not truly represent the case. Underlying it all is the fact that the world faces a wheat shortage, and that even if the United States should produce bumper crops, it will be able to place all its surplus in the world's markets at profitable prices. The current export demand for wheat is unprecedented, and bids fair to continue. The alarms of the hopeful gentlemen who had sold wheat "short" have had something to do with the advance, and the gentlemen from whom they have had to buy in their wheat have made the most of the hot weater and the reports of rust. Their estimates must not be accepted without salting. Even though the Northwestern crop may be injured in spots, in general it will be large and will bring a flood of new money into this section from which general business will imbibe new life and energy.

TUBERCULOSIS AND MILK.

The chief reason why the cities of this country are giving attention to the quality of their milk supply is that unclean milk and milk from diseased cows are dangerous to human health; and the statement that inspected milk will be more expensive than uninspected milk is not a satisfactory defense against proper milk inspection, since safety is more important than economy.

In Duluth, beyond any question, a good deal of misunderstanding and injustice has crept into the campaign, and while the milk dealers have been partly successful in their opposition to proposed improvements in the milk inspection ordinance, many of the conscientious milk dealers have been injured by indiscriminate attacks upon the entire industry. This is not necessary, and like any other injustice, it is to be deplored. If some milk dealers are careless, the attack should be upon them and it should not take a form that injures the good along with the bad.

Impure milk is a fertile source of typhoid fever and other diseases, and according to many scientists it is also the source of much tuberculosis. This theory is disputed, and Dr. Koch, one of the world's greatest students, declared in 1901 that bovine tuberculosis cannot be transmitted to human beings. Yet many others are positive that it is conveyed to human beings through the milk from consumptive cows, and so long as there is the slightest doubt remaining, the safety of the public requires that milk from tuberculous cows be kept away from the public.

Those who believe that the cow can give consumption to human beings bring considerable evidence to support their belief. Several instances are reported where veterinarians have become infected from examinations of tuberculous animals. The case is cited of a child 6 years old who treated ivy poison with cream from a cow which afterward proved to be tuberculous, and the result was tuberculosis of the skin at the point treated. In a French boarding school for young women twelve girls contracted tuberculosis and five died, the cases showing evidence of intestinal tuberculosis. The cow which had furnished milk for the school was examined, and found to be tuberculous.

In none of these cases, it is true, is the possibility of infection from other sources entirely excluded; so the proof is not conclusive. It is strong enough, however, to prevent anybody from knowingly buying milk from a tuberculous cow; and it is strong enough to warrant the greatest care in excluding such milk from the market. As to the spreading of typhoid fever through milk, that is so well established as to require no argument, and thousands of cases of infantile sickness are known to be due to impure milk.

There is apparent need of getting together those who are interested in the public health and those who are interested in the milk business. It would be found, if such a thing could be brought about, that the difference between them is not so great as it seems; for surely there is no milkman entitled to any consideration whatever who would not vastly prefer selling pure milk to selling bad milk.

SENSELESS ANTAGONISM.

It is a little hard to understand why two or three newspapers on the iron range are laboring so venomously and so persistently to make it appear that the interests of Duluth are antagonistic to those of the range communities, and that therefore Duluth must be hated and belabored and reviled on the slightest occasion or without any occasion at all.

One of these newspapers has even gone to the extent of counseling a boycott. That particular newspaper fills its editorial columns weekly with abuse of Duluth, apparently on the ground that this city spends its entire time "hogging all of the offices." This is absurd, of course; the average citizen of Duluth doesn't care a picayune whether the county officers are elected from Duluth or the iron ranges, so long as they attend to their duties and give proper service.

Another instance is furnished by the Hibbing Mesaba Ore, which in this week's issue says that "Duluth hit the iron ranges and the northern part of St. Louis county a dirty slap last week. On the face of it the turn-down looks very much like a studied effort, and in view of Duluth's past attitude toward the ranges and the upper part of the country it is reasonable to suppose that Duluth's narrowness got the better of its good judgment." The occasion for this abuse is that the Minnesota editorial excursion went through St. Louis county in the night, when it would obviously have been much better if it could have seen it in the daytime. Duluth, however, had nothing whatever to do with arranging its itinerary, and the Hibbing newspaper knows that as well as anybody could. Duluth was not consulted, and simply did its duty as a host when the editors came.

This style of bitter and unreasonable attack will not hurt Duluth, and it will do the ranges no good. Whether it comes from chronic disagreeableness or from some definite purpose, it gets St. Louis county nowhere.

DECREASING IRON CONTENT IN ORE.

In its current issue the Iron Trade Review calls attention to the fact that the average iron content of the ores that are being smelted is decreasing. This is not surprising, nor is it exactly news; for similar statements have been made in the past and they accord with what is known in the iron-producing sections. Naturally the cream of the deposits is skimmed off in the earlier stages of mining operations, and it is unfortunate that in many cases this has involved more or less destruction, through mixing with earth, of the inferior grades of ore that are now in demand, though they were not considered of much account a few years ago.

The Iron Trade Review says: "One of the interesting bits of statistical information gathered annually by the American Iron and Steel association is the quantity of limestone used in making pig iron. The total thus ascertained is, of course, not indicative of practice under given conditions, but the figures are instructive, nevertheless. They give further confirmation to the statement that the average iron content of the ores being smelted is decreasing. The statistics gathered separate coke and anthracite pig iron from charcoal pig iron, a necessary distinction since the amount of limestone used in making charcoal pig iron is very small.

"A scrutiny of the published analyses of Lake Superior ores shows directly a decrease in the average iron content of the ores listed. For the season of 1898, giving chiefly the average cargo analyses shown in 1897, there were thirty-six ores listed from the Mesaba range. These ores showed an average iron content, natural state, of 56.36 per cent. The present analysis book lists seventy-four ores from the Mesaba range, and their average iron content, in the natural state, is 51.73 per cent, showing a decrease of 4.63 units in ten years. A decrease of some four or five units in the average content of Lake Superior ores used in making merchantable pig iron means a large increase in limestone consumption, which the statistics just given indicate has occurred; but more important than that, it necessitates a large increase in the quantity of coke used. This is a physical, not a commercial, condition, and makes it impossible that the low furnace costs of 1897 can ever be duplicated."

This change is due not alone to the exhaustion of the richer ores in the older mines, but to the development of the new mines of lower grades of ore; and as the mining operations of the Mesaba range progress westward into the region of still lower grades of ore, the average iron content will continue to decrease, and the cost of producing pig iron must consistently increase.

The automobile campaigner is a sign of the progress of the time. A few years ago he would have alienated the farmer vote beyond hope of recall.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

A. T. Atkins of Winnipeg, who has business interests at Fernie, B. C., the town that was literally wiped out of existence by fire, was at the St. Louis hotel yesterday. Mr. Atkins left for Winnipeg on the afternoon train.

Before he left for Winnipeg Mr. Atkins stated that many Americans were interested in the lumber business in Fernie and the other districts that were destroyed by the fire. He also stated that much of the property owned in the burned district was controlled by Winnipeg capital. The Great Northern railroad was heavily interested in the district, while the Canadian Northern railroad also owned some lumber interests there, according to Mr. Atkins. The loss of the Canadian Pacific will be the heaviest of any corporation, according to Mr. Atkins, that company holding extensive interests throughout the destroyed district.

The suggestion that an inebriated man with no mechanical knowledge of an auto be allowed to attempt to run a car is only less foolish than the attempt to carry out this experiment. Yet that is just what happened in front of the Lonox hotel last nigth.

Some one left an auto out in front of the hotel. Two persons, who were somewhat the worse for the packages they were carrying, ambled along. They spied the machine and immediately were possessed with a desire to take a ride. They climbed into the machine and began experimenting with the levers and things. It was fortunate that the machine wasn't cranked up. The nose of the auto was pointed straight at a brick wall, and it is very probable that had the two men succeeded in starting the machine it would have attempted to butt its way through the obstruction. The owners of the auto came out before the muddled ones had an opportunity to blow up the machine, or something equally bad, and they were sent on their way with a few words of harsh advice and a stern look through the goggles of the driver.

Judge David H. Lawrence of Two Harbors, a candidate for the legislature, has got out a campaign button, with a big picture of himself adorning it. The first buttons to reach Duluth were sent to the St. Louis hotel yesterday. The buttons are larger than the ordinary campaign button, and have a generally prosperous loog about them.

J. A. Devere, at the Lenox hotel, says that Wisconsin is liable to give Bryan the heaviest Democratic vote in years, simply for the fact that the voters of the Badger state are incensed at the way New York is treating the campaign of Mr. Bryan. The methods of Wall street, in attempting to dictate the man who shall be president of the United States has roused the voters of Wisconsin, and, according to Mr. Devere, though the state will probably not go Democratic, it will unquestionably give the Democratic party a heavy vote.

Mr. Devere says they are thoroughly aroused over politics in Wisconsin, the state Democratic convention having just been held. Mr. Devere says that because of the radicalism of La Follette, the state is favorably inclined to the platform adopted by the Democratic convention. This and the fact that the methods of Wall street are heartily hated, is liable to cut down the Republican vote until the majority ordinarily expected by the Republican leaders, may be reduced to only slight proportions.

All of the hotel managers of Duluth look forward to the present month as one that will be the best in the year, as far as tourists and visitors to the city are concerned. Last year, up to the month of August, the tourist travel was not anything remarkable, but after the opening of August most of the hotels were comfortably filled with lake travelers.

Up to the present time the tourist travel has been light. Indications point to a heavy travel during the present month. The hotel managers expect to reap the advantage of the increased travel and are preparing for full houses until the lake travel ceases this fall.

THE WEATHER.

It got a little warm yesterday afternoon — warm for Duluth, that is, though it would have been delicious coolness almost anywhere else—but last night was cool and charming, and today a refreshing breeze abated the enthusiasm of the mercury. Yesterday's highest temperature in Duluth was 82 degs. and last night's lowest was 62 degs The weather man expects fair and cooler weather tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today it was cool and damp, an unseasonable northeaster being in progress.

The sun rose this morning at 4:51 and sets tonight at 7:37, making 14 hours and 36 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Slight barometric depressions continue about stationary over Western Ontario and Arizona. Pressures have not changed much during the past twenty-four hours but the disturbances referred to are largely responsible for the light local showers or thunderstorms that occurred throughout the Western Lake region, Mississippi and Missouri valleys, New England and the Southwestern states. Temperatures remain high in the Lake region, Central valleys, Eastern and Southern states. High pressure areas overlie the Atlantic and Northwestern states. Continued fair weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Wednesday."

The Salaried Man.

He gets his "twenty per" each week, enough to pay his way,
He doesn't own a country home, a yacht out in the bay;
Three children romp about his door, that self-same door is rented;
But still he smiles his way along, with all the world contented.
He means his bills as they fall due, at night sleeps like a top,
And resting sweetly never fears that copper stock will drop.

He plods along right faithfully and when his work is done,
He calls his children round him for the evening hour of fun;
His weary wife looks through the door and smiles to see them there,
And in heart there's gentle peace, her soul is free from care.
She hums a little song of love and kisses one and all;
She fears no market crash to drive her husband to the wall.

Great wealth has never seared their souls or spoiled their simple lives,
And on their hearth rank envy's weed seldom, ayel never thrives;
Modest their dress and plain their food, the greatest of their joys
The love they bear each other and the love they bear their boys.
Theirs is a struggle, sometimes hard, but all the odds they face
With calmness, for they have no fear of ruin or disgrace.

Go forth today and tread your way along the city street,
Who is the happiest man of all that you may chance to meet?
Not he whose wealth uncounted is, not he of splendid fame,
Not he who boasts a world of power, not he of public name;
But he, the unassuming man, whose face is homeward turned
To greet his wife and little ones, his daily wage well earned.

Things to be Explained.

Fairmont Daily Sentinel: The people of the state will not permit themselves to be deceived. They will insist that Jacobson break the silence that has distinguished him since entering on the campaign. They will force him to throw off the muzzle that has been put upon him by the Interests. If the trades have been made by which he can be induced to desert the cause that commended him to the people they will demand that he admit the fact and stand before them in the colors that rightfully belong to him. They will ask him why it was in the last campaign that he traveled about the state on a railroad pass, while Governor Johnson was paying his fare as did other Democratic speakers. They will ask a whole lot of embarrassing questions, and when convincing answers are not made—as in the nature of things they cannot be made— they will turn their backs on the man who has deserted them and vote for the Democratic nominee who will be guilty of no embarrassing entanglements and for whom no apologies will be necessary.

In the meanwhile let us reserve the pie-knife issue to the sideboard.

Those Evening Smells!

Those evening smells! Those evening smells!
How fragrantly each odor tells
The secret of the evening meal.
The likelihood of pork or veal,
The probability of stew,
The chances of a rich ragout,
About the hour of seven one meets
All kinds of perfumes on the streets;
Of fowl a scent, of duck a whiff,
Of cabbage and corned beef a sniff;
One tracks the pea soup to the spot
Where it is steaming, piping hot,
Or, if 'tis Friday, one inhales
Still greater sweetness—fish prevails,
Although we cannot see, we feel
The presence of the shad, the eel,
The haddock, salmon, cod or trout,
We know they're there without a doubt,
And smack our lips in expectation,
Of what we'll get for our collation,
For naught our appetite compels
Like evening smells, those evening smells.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1888.

•••The contract has been let to James Pierce for the Pastoret & Stenson building, at the corner of Superior street and First avenue east, for $64,000. The entire cost of the structure will be about $80,000. It will be six stories in height, 65 feet front and 140 feet deep.

•••A. C. Kasburg of Dakota, who has purchased Mr. Knobloch's interest in the hardware store at 2004 West Superior street, took possession of the business yesterday.

•••Doctors McNulty and Magie are in receipt of two fine English fox hounds from Dr. McNulty's brother in Ohio.

•••A general strike has been inaugurated in Duluth among the laborers, a demand being made for an increase of wages from $1.50 to $1.75 a day, which some contractors were paying. The strike started with forty-five men at work for Wolf & Truax on the Michigan street rock cut, near Thirteenth avenue west, and they were soon joined by nearly the entire force of 480 men employed by this firm. The strikers marched to each place where other men were at work, and soon nearly all quit, the total being about 1,200. Chief Doran at once ordered all the saloons closed, and they will not be reopened until the affair is settled. Mayor Sutphin addressed the strikers from a carriage at the corner of Sixth avenue west and Fourth street, requesting them to be orderly and considerate of private and public property. The leaders said the men had no intention of creating any disturbance, but would stick out for higher wages.

•••Ten days ago occurred what was, until then, the most severe rainstorm ever known in Duluth. About 6 o'clock on the night of Aug. 2, however, came a rain that discounted any ever known in the history of Duluth. For three hours rain fell in torrents, accompanied by thunder and lightning. A total fall of 2.80 inches of rain was recorded in a little less than three hours, an average of an inch per hour, something never before experienced here. The total damage was about $10,000, about equally divided between merchants and street contractors. Fred Bayha's furniture store suffered to the extent of $2,000. M. M. Gasser will lose about $1,000 in grocery stock. Boyce & Totman, druggists, suffered a loss of $400. Van Baaler Bros.'s stock was considerably damaged. The News office was drowned out. The house of Louis Meining in East First street was struck and two children were temporarily knocked out.

•••Misses Anna and Barbara Gwinner, of St. Catharine, Ont., are in Duluth on a visit to their cousin, John R. Meining.

•••Mrs. N. M. Reynolds, of Chicago, has arrived on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Levi Barker, at New London.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Wabasha Herald: John A. Johnson was not nominated at Denver, and he did not expect that he would be. His own delegation stayed loyally by him, and this was but right and proper. That Bryan will be elected there now seems but little question. If elected, the indicatons are that he will not stand for a second term. In that case Governor Johnson would be the logical candidate. Red Lake Falls Gazette: Jacobson is not proving the popular idol the Republican leaders had confidently hoped. Somehow there is a demand for a governor with better recommendations than the ability to eat pie with a knife.

Ortonville Herald Star: About the only valid reason yet unannounced for the nomination of either Sherman or Kern is the desire of the party managers to definitely ascertain exactly what the straight party vote is in the United States.

Rochester Bulletin: The talk of John Lind for governor is welcome news, not only to Democrats, but to many Republicans all over the state. Mr. Lind has been approached in regard to the nomination, and as we understand it has not positively refused to consider the matter. Voters are not so particular about their party affiliations as in the past and the nomination of Mr. Lind would again afford the bosses of the dominant party a valuable lesson.

Wabasha Herald: Bryan stands on a platform that endorses more of the principles of human rights than any national platform ever unfolded before the American people. Bryan is the popular idol of the American people today, and it is very doubtful, indeed, whether the corporate interests can summon power enough to defeat him.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: The necessity for defeating old Joe Cannon for re-election is just as great today as it was the day congress adjourned.

R. C. Dunn's Princeton Union: Now that J. F. Jacobson has smooth sailing there are a whole lot of fellows who are willing to extend a helping hand. Some of those who are loudest in their professions of loyalty to him were scheming and plotting against him up until twenty-four hours of the time he was nominated.

Rochester Bulletin: They don't like it a bit. One of our Republican exchanges, the Perham Bulletin, says: "Jacobson's nomination for governor and the defeat of John H. Grass for railroad and warehouse commissioner shows that the corporations had the complete control of the Republican state convention."

North Branch Review: Both the presidential candidates are receiving the usual assurances from the disgruntled ones on the other side that each is to receive a large number of votes from the party opposing him. It is safe to say that neither takes much stock in these assurances.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Baltimore American: "Why do they talk of the rudeness of nature?"

"I don't know. To my idea nature is very polite. Look at the dip of the waves, the bend of the river, the boughs of the trees."

Cleveland Leader: "Morally courageous, isn't he?"

"I should say so. I've seen him refuse to take the short end of a bad bet at long odds!"

Judge: Landlady's Son (addicted to nickel literature)—Say, pardner, what's meant by "stand by to repel boarders?"

Mr. Newcome (sadly eyeing his dessert)—Stewed prunes.

Chicago Tribune: Driven to it by stern necessity, the old sailor had taken the job of running an elevator.

"Vast there, my hearty!" he said to the fat man who was moving toward the side of the car. "I'll have to ask ye to stand saildships. This craft has a heavy list to port."

Philadelphia Press: "It's really distressing to think," said the wealthy Mr. Kern today, "that many very common and ignorant people will be admitted to heaven."

"Well," replied Mr. Cutting, "that needn't worry you."

Washington Star: "I admire patience an' self-control," said Uncle Eben, "but when I see a man dat kin keep on smilin' after he done bruise his thumb with a hammer, I can't help bein' s'picious of his capacity foh deceit."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Come," said the strong-minded woman, "I'm sure there's burglars downstairs. We will go down and scare them away."

"Well, Maria," stammered her husband, "you go first; they wouldn't hit a woman."

New York Sun: Kicker—How does that church take up such a large collection?

Rocker—Was it taken up by a waiter?

Puck: "What's in here?" asked the tourist.

"Remains to be seen," responded the guide, as he led the way into the mummy room.

Syracuse Herald: Dinks—Did you notice the flour on the crown of Rev. Mr. Sailer's hat this morning?

Winks—Yes. He must be getting pretty close to the bottom of the barrel.

Newspapers and Politics.

Lincoln State Journal: Mr. Hearst's appointment of John Temple Graves, one of his own editors, to run for vice president on the ticket of Mr. Hearst's party suggests that editors are destined to play an exceptional personal part in the present campaign. First, there is the editor of the Commoner, with a fighting chance actually to be elected president. Mr. Bryan's campaign is, moreover, to be managed by Mr. Mack, a New York editor. The Independence party is in the last analysis purely a newspaper party, his newspaper being a chief means by which Mr. Hearst makes his money, speculate and nourish his private political party.

This is contrary to the general trend of journalism, and, it is to be hoped, is only a temporary reaction. The older voters can remember when Greeley and Raymond and the elder Bennett used their splendid journalistic talents to further their diverse personal political ambitions, and keen historians of today understand how greatly the power of these men for public good was hindered by the extent to which they subjected the duties of journalism to the demands of personal ambition. In a large part of Europe the press is commonly the property and personal organ of political clans. Wherever this is the case it is in no just sense a newspaper press, but rather a personal brief. Subscribers to such a paper are mere contributers to the campaign fund of its proprietor. They no more reflect the news and actual political conditions of the time and place than the bulletins of the Standard Oil press bureau reflect the actual issues affecting that lucky octopus.

There is no doubt a place for the publication whose prime function is to serve the political ambition of its owner, but its place is not in the list of newspapers any more than an advocate's plea at the bar can have place as a text book on law. The intelligent citizen will not rely on such a publication for accurate and unbiased news and opinion any more than he would rely for a just decision in a case in court upon a judge who had a personal interest in the outcome. While Mr. Mack runs the Democratic campaign, his paper is an advocate, not a newspaper. The contents of Mr. Hearst's papers will be, as before, not so much the things that are true as the things Mr. Hearst believes it to his personal interest to have his readers believe to be true. Dependence upon such sources of information is not conducive to public intelligence.

No More Looting.

Springfield Republican: Life insurance policyholders may be excused for trembling a little when they read that the republican campaign fund collector has taken offices in one of the insurance company buildings in New York. But there is apparently no danger this year that the past looting of trust funds for political uses will be repeated.

MARINE NEWS

SITUATION UNCHANGED

Wild Ore Cargoes Are Just as Scarce as Ever.

Many Boats Will Remain in Port for Entire Season.

The first few days of August have shown no change in the marine situation and, as far as the present outlook is concerned, the boats that have been in port since winter and those that were laid up during July, bid fair to last the remainder of the season in port to wait for brighter and better things next year.

Wild cargoes of ore are just as scarce now as they have ever been. The spectacle of big carriers unloading their coal cargoes here and starting down the lakes light has been practically unknown to the Duluth harbor before this year. Now it is an every day occurrence, with no prospect of any change in the situation. Owners sending coal to the Head of the Lakes count themselves fortunate when they secure ore cargoes for the return trip and the condition promises to continue unless there should be a sudden change in the attitude of the shippers, which would produce a rush.

Little chartering for the season has been done at the lower lakes during the past week. What has been done has been at the continued low rate of 65 cents from the Head of the Lakes, a cut of 10 cents in the rate from last year. The big block of ore, which was reported to have been sold last week for 1908 delivery, is said to be divided over several seasons and will produce no furore in the ore trade this year.

Shipments from Duluth to the interior are said to be light in the coal trade, and there is a possibility that the shipments from the lower lakes will be cut, throwing a number of carriers on the market, which are at present engaged in that trade. The result will be more pronounced depression. The moving of the new grain crop and a rush in the ore trade at the close of the season appears to be the only hope and the latter is more hoped for than expected.

SCHOONER IS WRECKED.

Sails Carried Away by Squall, But Boat Makes Port.

Manitowoc, Aug. 4.—The schooner Cora White of Cleveland, twelve miles south of here, was struck by a squall yesterday morning and her foremast, mainstopmast, jibboom and entire forward works were wrecked. Although the most of her sails were wrecked, enough remained to enable the captain to get the boat into the bay, where the crew of the tug Arctic saw her signals of distress and towed the boat here. She will be repaired. None of the cargo of lumber was lost.

Outlook is Gloomy.

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—The freight market is as dead as ever and indications are that there will not be much chartering done this week. Boats are waiting at both ends for cargoes. Little business is in sight.

WEST END

NO BOYS AT THIS PICNIC.

Sewing School Girls Will be Entertained at Chester Park.

"De gang" is pretty angry.

The west end sewing school is going to have a picnic tomorrow, at which luncheon and carfare will be provided free — but the function is only for girls. That is why "de gang" is so wrought up.

"Wat's de use,' said one of the kids, "Every good ting dat comes off, de golls get de best of and they fall into a lot of snaps like dis, dat us guys never get a bid to, at all."

It is true that the picnic tomorrow is only for the pupils of the sewing school, which is held in St. Luke's Episcopal church, and of course there are no boys in a sewing school.

The picnickers wil start from the church at 11 o'clock, tomorrow morning. A special car will take them from the West end to Chester park, where the jollification is to be held. The party will return about 3 in the afternoon.

The club ladies who are sponsors for the sewing school will provide all of the catables and the carfare.

WANTS ANOTHER TERM AS CLERK

J. P. Johnson Files for Re-election to His Present Office.

J. P. Johnson clerk of the district court, this morning filed for the Republican nomination for re-election. He will be opposed by Judge J. M. Martin of Virginia.

While the range man has a large following of friends, Mr. Johnson has during his long tenure of the office made a good record and his work has been satisfactory to judges, attorneys, and to all doing business in the office. The fight for the county clerkship promises to be one of the best at the fall elections.

There has been some uncertainty as to whether Mr. Johnson's term has expired yet. He was elected to fill an uncompleted term, presumably for four years. At the next election the Democrats put up a man, however, and he was forced to file. This raised the question and he has filed every two years since to make certain.

FOUND CUTICURA INDISPENSABLE

For Her Children—Little Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema Which Simply Covered Back of Heads—Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too.

ALL PROMPTLY CURED BY "WONDERFUL OINTMENT"

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. Before I heard of Cuticura, I used to try almost everything, but they failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. I am using the Cuticura Remedies yet whenever any of my family have any sores. I can never recommend Cuticura sufficiently; it is indispensable in every home. I cannot find its equal. Mme. Napoleen Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

PAINFUL ULCER

MEN WANTED FOR HARVESTING

First Call for Laborers is Received From the Dakotas.

The laborer who is "broke" this year and wishes to get to the harvest fields will have to beat his way, for the railroads will make no cut rates over their lines for the harvesters.

Already, in anticipation of the rush for the Dakotas, scores of men are counting the ties or riding the bumpers across Minnesota, so as to be on hand to get the full season.

From advices received from North Dakota points by the National Employment agency the harvest has started there or is about to start. From Cando, N. D., they received the following message: "Barley harvest now in progress; wheat harvest will start by Aug. 15. Wages will be from $2 to $2.50, and higher for threshing. Prospect of good harvest. We will need a great many men in this section."

From Melfort, N. D.: "Harvest will start very soon."

From Wahpeton, N. D.: "Harvest will start in next few days. Good wages."

From Cooperstown, N. D.: "Barley harvest just commencing. General harvest in two weeks. Lots of work for harvest hands. Big crop."

And from Blanchard, N. D.: "Harvest will begin this week. Wages from $2 to $2.50."

FOUR PAPER MILLS IN NEW YORK SHUT DOWN.

Watertown, N. J., Aug. 4.—Four mills of the International Paper company in Watertown division are shut down and 400 papermakers are out of work for the time being at least. Saturday a strike was ordered by President Carey of the Brotherhood of Papermakers, but before it was officially announced, the International closed down five mills in this vicinity, due to over-production. Supt. Mayo of the International Paper company said today that to his knowledge no steps had been taken toward adjusting matters with the papermakers. The strike was declared as the result of an announced 10 per cent cut in wages.

WORK WEAKENS THE KIDNEYS

Doan's Kidney Pills Have Done Great Service for People Who Work in Duluth.

Most Duluth people work every day in some strained, unnatural position—bending constantly over a desk—riding on jolting wagons or cars—doing laborious housework; lifting, reaching or pulling, or trying the back in a hundred and one other ways. All these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs. Duluth cures prove it.

W. W. Scott, operator on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, and living at 126 Sixty-sixth Ave., west, Duluth, Minn., says: "I have already recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I told in the statement made in 1898 how I had suffered with dull aching pains through the loins and kidneys. From the constant sitting position required in my work my back became so lame and sore that I could scarcely straighten. The kidney secretions were irregular and annoying. At times severe headaches would strike me and I was feeling worse than ever when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice. I began using them, and as I have stated, in my previous testimonial, they so thoroughly regulated the kidneys, removed the backaches, headaches, pains and weakness that I have felt like a different man. I have never had a return of any of these symptoms and have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills again and again."

PUBLICITY IN OCTOBER

Milkmen Allowed Two Months to Clean Their Dairies.

Standing of Outsiders and Local Men Will be Published.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Adopted amendment to milk ordinance providing further protection to consumer and directed that two additional inspectors be employed to inspect all dairies supplying Duluth. Result of inspection will be published Oct. 1.

Adopted carbolic acid ordinance, making it compulsory upon druggists to sell the poison only in a 5 per cent solution, except where prescribed by a regular practicing physician.

Ordered sale of site purchased for West end police station.

Directed that a public meeting be held Friday afternoon in the council chamber to consider the proposed amendment of the Zenith Telephone company's franchise, permitting charging a toll between Duluth and Superior.

"Publicity after Oct. 1."

This will be the rule of the health department in regard to the milk supply. The council last night, on recommendation of Health Commissioner Patton, ordered the employment of two additional dairy inspectors. One will assist in making a complete inspection of all the dairies in the city, and the other will inspect all dairies outside the city that supply Duluth with milk. They are to have a detailed report of their findings ready not later than Oct. 1, giving the standings of all the dairies, and these standings will be published, showing the consumer just what he may expect from any milkman on the list. The inspectors' terms of office will run two months only.

Steps were also taken to compel outside shippers to submit to the same tests as the local men, and the milk they send in will be submitted to the bacteriological test.

Dr. Patton said that in view of the fact that all the dairies had not yet been inspected, and because of the further fact that the proprietors were rapidly making improvements and putting their respective places within the law, he did not think it wise to publish the standings of any of the dairies just now. He thought it would impose an undeserved hardship on some of the local dealers, for if their standings were shown to be low, the consumer might be expected to switch his patronage to an outside dealer whose standings was as yet unknown. By making a complete list and publishing the whole thing early in October, everybody will be treated alike, and have an equal show.

"It is our desire to help local men and to show them the way to cleanliness," said Dr. Patton in a communication. "Stating in detail what benefits are to be derived from such a procedure, and in order to arrive at this, I propose to bring scientific men on this subject to lecture in Duluth publicly from time to time."

The Women's International Union Label league presented a communication asking that the council start an investigation of local bakeries. They declared that many of the bakeries were not as clean as they should be, and that methods of handling the product were very careless. They spoke of loaves of bread being delivered in open baskets and open rigs, leaving them exposed to the dust and dirt of the streets. They figured this practice as dangerous as an unclean milk supply. The matter was referred to the health inspector.

An ordinance was adopted regulating the sale of carbolic acid in crude form. Carbolic acid will be sold only in a 5 per cent solution, except when otherwise prescribed by a doctor. The ordinance requires druggists to file the prescription and keep it for a period of three years. A heavy fine is provided for violation of the measure.

It was recommended to the conference committee that an additional $1,200 be added to the health department fund for next year, and also for an appropriation of $700 for the maintenance of a team and wagon for carting away garbage in extreme cases.

The lot on Nineteenth avenue, purchased as a site for the West end police station, was ordered sold for $3,400. The city has an option on another lot on Twentieth avenue that probably will be purchased for $3,800.

* * *

Alderman McKnight asked that the city clerk be instructed to advertise the fact that a public meeting will be held in the council chamber Friday afternoon to consider the proposed amendment permitting the Zenith Telephone company to charge toll on its lines between Duluth and Superior, as a means of gaining revenue for new improvements. Everybody interested is invited to attend.

FIVE KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

Huge Touring Car Plunges Down Steep Embankment at Frisco.

San Francisco, Aug 4.—The second disastrous automobile accident within 48 hours, involving prominent San Francisco people, occurred yesterday afternoon near Burlingame, when a huge touring car occupied by five women and two children, plunged down a steep embankment and caused the death of five of the occupants and injuring of two others.

The dead: Mrs. Thomas A. McCormick, Miss Clara McCormick, aged 18; Robert T. O'Brien, son of Mrs. Ira G. O'Brien; Ira G. O'Brien, Jr., aged 3 years; Mrs. Ira G. O'Brien.

The injured: Mrs. F. G. McAuley, both arms broken; Miss Ethel McCormick, shoulders sprained.

Coming down a steep grade near Crystal Lake, Miss Ethel McCormick, who was at the wheel, endeavored to check the speed of the car by applying the foot brake. It failed to hold the automobile, which was rapidly gaining a dangerous headway down the hill and Miss McCormick hastily threw on the emergency brakes. They snapped almost instantly.

Fearing that she could not guide the huge car in safety to the bottom, the young woman endeavored to steer it against the high bank on the right, believing that the friction on the wheels would bring it to a stop. The front wheel, however, struck a large rock, swerved sharply to the left and the next moment the car plunged down the steep embankment, striking head-on 35 feet below against a large tree The ocupants were shot out of the car as from a catapult, landing on another road 20 feet further down.

Mrs. McCormick, her daughter Clara, and infant son of Mrs. O'Brien, struck on their heads and were instantly killed. Mrs. Ira O'Brien and her 3-year-old son died three hours later.

Mrs. Thomas A. McCormick was the wife of Thomas A. McCormick, president of the McCormick Iron works of San Francisco, and Mrs O'Brien's husband is the proprietor of the Keystone Manufacturing works. Both families are prominent in society circles of this city.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Frederick Marrott, the wife of a prominent publisher of this city, and James D. Gilbert were killed in a similar accident, sixty miles south of San Francisco, and three others were injured.

Chronic Diarrhoea Relieved.

Mr. Edward E. Henry, with the United States Express company, Chicago, writes: "Our general superintendent, Mr. Quick, handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some time ago to check an attack of the old chronic diarrhoea. I have used it since that time and cured many on our trains who have been sick. I am an old soldier, who served with Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley four years in the Twenty-third Ohio regiment, and have no ailment except chronic diarrhoea, which this remedy stops at once." For sale by all druggists.

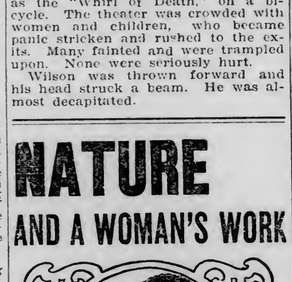
NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK



LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

PROF. VANDYKE LAUDS COUNTRY

Coleraine Superintendent Praises Northern Part of This State.

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the notable addresses delivered here during the summer school was made by Supt. J. A. Vandyke of the Coleraine Coleraine schools, the conductor of the summer school.

Superintendent Vandyke spoke of the vast wealth of Northern Minnesota, leading up to the iron mines of this section, the different methods of mining, the part played by the rich mining companies in the development of this part of the state, and finally to the building of the city of Coleraine, how by the magic touch of energy and wealth, a wilderness of pine stumps is being transformed into a beautiful city with all modern conveniences and educational facilities. He paid a fine tribute to John C. Greenway, the guiding spirit of who accepted a "job" with the Duquesne Iron Works at the munificent compensation of $1.35 per day, became a rough rider comrade of President Roosevelt, went into the Michigan iron mines to learn things, and while there was selected by the steel trust as the instrument for opening up the western Mesaba range. How he has "made good." How he "sits tight" when other allüring propositions are being put up to him, such as an important position on the Panama canal, for instance, preferring to carry to a successful issue the work inaugurated under his direction, and Mr. Vandyke held him up as a model for all young men with the admonition to "make good."

In conclusion he spoke of the opening of the new Cuyuna range and of its possible effect on the prosperity of Aitkin. He advised our people to give all possible encouragement to the mining companies who are willing to spend their money in development work, and also to throw no obstacles in the way of any railway company which might seek a right of way through here to the new mines. There is no reason, he said, why Aitkin should not be the center of the new mining district, the home of thousands of miners if adequate and cheap transportation facilities be provided them.

A Faithful Friend.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1872, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. I have been a commercial traveler for eighteen years, and never start out on a trip without this, my faithful friend," says H. S. Nichols of Oakland, Ind. T. When a man has used a remedy for thirty-five years he knows its value and is competent to speak of it. For sale by all drugists.

PATENTS SPINNING DEVICE.

Stillwater Man Invents Something Attracting Attention.

Stillwater, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Manufacturers of binder twine in this country and Canada and even those further away, are intensely interested in the spinning device patented by Eugene C. Williams, superintendent of the prison factory. It is an appliance for gathering into the spinner the loose ends of fibre before they collect under the old system and cause lumps or thin places in the twine.

Experts in binder twine making and skilled machinists from many parts of the country, have been visiting the prison factory to inspect the device. Representatives of trade papers have also made examinations and commented on the invention in their periodicals. The patent papers and model in the patent office have been examined and the device is being generally discussed by interested people.

The merits of the machine are not questioned. Its work has been discussed with a view as to its ability to make better twine. Tensile strength, freedom from rough places, the avoidance of thin places, the elimination of the necessity for stopping spindles to resplice twine, as is common in using the old funnel shaped device, and the cost of manufacturing the new apparatus are points that have all received consideration

TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Attains Speed of Eighty Miles an Hour, Then Finally Stops.

Medore, N. D., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—An exciting incident occurred on the Northern Pacific the day before yesterday, when a gravel train at Scoria, five miles east of here, broke in two. The caboose and eight loaded cars started down the grade toward Medora, which place was passed at the rate of about eighty miles per hour, and continued across the Little Missouri bridge and on down toward Andrews creek, which bwas also crossed, and then on the up grade along that creek for some three miles to a point called Windy Gap, where the train finally stopped.

The section men followed the train from Little Missouri to this latter point on a hand car, when flagmen were sent out until the engine came. When the train passed the station here the speed was so great that gravel from the loaded cars was thrown with such violence that it broke the windows in the station. It was most fortunate that the track was clear, for had this happened one hour earlier, No. 2 would have been wrecked, and the loss of life would have been great.

FARMER IS SWINDLED.

Smooth Lightning Rod Man Finds Stearns County Victim.

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The swindler is making his annual trip through Stearns county. A little over a week ago a smooth-looking individual drove up to the farm house of Louis Rindahl, in the town of Kandota, in Western Stearns county. He had lightning rods of a superior quality, and asked the farmer to have some placed on his barn on trial. After this had been done, the agent asked the farmer to sign a receipt for the rod, so that the company would know where to find the sample. He then asked him to sign another receipt, and the agent took possession of the first. It was later discovered that the farmer had signed a note for $100. The first paper signed was the promissory note, and the second simply a receipt for the note which the agent took with him. When Mr. Rindahl discovered that he had been swindled he sought the advice of a lawyer at Sauk Center, and was advised that the best thing he could do was to let the note run until maturity and then let the agent bring suit. He could then bring defense that the note was signed under false pretenses.

The supposedly high-priced rod turned out to be made of the cheapest kind of material and absolutely worthless. It is stated that the smooth agent worked that section of the county, but it has not been learned whether others were swindled.

BUCKING BRONCHOS.

Real Article Will be Seen With Buffalo Bill's Wild West.

Let no one fear that they will not see plenty of real excitement with Buffalo Bill's Wild West when it exhibits in this city. There will be plenty of excitement, of the genuine sort, and not the least will be furnished by the Rough Rider delegation which constitutes a part of the entertainment. These horsemen, drawn from the equestrian nations of the world, will furnish a wide variety of daring feats, ranging from the fearless Cossacks from Russia to the American cowboy from the Western plains.

The cowboys will introduce the realism of life in the boundless West; an existence which is led in the free, open air of the prairies. They will show the sports with which they while away the hours of leisure which fall to their lot in pursuit of their calling as herdsmen and watchers over the cattle which graze upon the plains. The most interesting features of their life naturally center around their horses, their care and management.

It must be remembered that most of the animals run loose during the winter, and when spring comes and they are called into requisition for the active work of the roundup their sprits have largely reverted to the wild state from which the bronco of today originally sprung. The work of taming them is the most important feature of a cowboy's existence. To be a successful herdsman he must be a "broncho buster" of unfailing expertness.

One of the most diverting features of Buffalo Bill's exhibition will be a truthful representation of "broncho busting" by real cowboys and real "broncbos." Their antics may be described as pure devilishness on the part of the horse and pure recklessness on the part of the riders. No one seems to know just why a broncho makes himself so disagreeable; it seems to be born in him. No attempt is made to train them; it is not even correct to say they are broken. They are simply "busted." It is not a gentle process for the horse, nor is it anything short of violent for the rider.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

EX-CONVICT TURNS TRICK

Negro Who Served Four Years for Killing is Arrested.

Taken in St. Paul on the Charge of Highway Robbery.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another term in the state penitentiary stares David Parker, colored, in the face. He recently finished a term of four years for killing Fred Watson during a quarrel in a livery barn in the Midway district, in 1904, by striking his victim over the head with an iron pipe. Now he confronts a charge of highway robbery on which he has been arrested, complaint having been made against him today.

Arrested along with Parker is Eugene Cary, aged 17 years, a white boy, charged with being implicated in the same crime. Cary was recently in police court on the charge of petit larceny and was placed on probation.

The robbery occurred Saturday night at the corner of Charles and Marion streets. The victim was John Manley of New Richmond, Wis. Manley last Saturday night was seeking the home of his brother at 185 Aurora avenue, when he was accosted by Parker and Cary, and invited to take a drink at the saloon at Rice and University. He accepted the invitation, and after the three had been in the saloon a while Manley told his new friends of the trouble he was having in finding the number and street he sought.

Negro Uses His Revolver.

The two promptly volunteered to guide him to the brother's home. Just as they reached Charles and Marion streets Parker and Cary suddenly turned upon Manley and demanded his money. Manley started back in astonishment. After waiting a moment for him to comply the negro struck Manley over the head with the butt end of his revolver and felled him to the ground.

When Manley recovered his senses he found all his money, $11.50, had been taken from his pockets. He sought a policeman, and after a time met Patrolman Riley and told him what had happened. The patrolman reported the matter to the Central station, and Detectives Collins and Schmitz were set to work on the case.

Less than half an hour afterwards, the detectives found Parker and Cary sleeping in a shed in the neighborhood. The two were arrested and Manley identified by Manley as his assailants.

After being questioned both prisoners admitted substantially the story that Manley related, but each accused the other of having struck Manley. When searched they were found to have only $1.50 between them. A revolver was found in Parker's pocket.

FARGO ROASTED SUNDAY.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo and Fargoans, who were unfortunate enough not to be able to enjoy the lake breezes Sunday, passed one of the hottest days which Fargo has experienced this year. Even in the shade the mercury jumped as high as 100 degs., and not until 6 o'clock did the temperature change for the better, and then the temperature dropped almost 30 degs., owing to the rains which are reported to have fallen to the north.

MINER DROPS 200 FEET.

Adolph Bjork Falls to His Death in Michigan Iron Mine.

Ishpeming, Mich., Aug. 4.—Adolph J. Bjork, 37 years of age, a miner employed at the Cliffs Shaft property, fell from the cage in "B" shaft on his way to surface for his supper Friday at midnight 200 feet from the sixth level to the tenth, the bottom of the mine. Bjork and his partners started from the tenth level, taking with them a number of drills.

The other men in the cage did not miss Bjork until they had reached the fifth level, where the cage was again brought to a halt. His partner, who stood alongside of him, received a slight blow on the shoulder from the drill, but the light was so dim that he did not see or hear Bjork falling. As soon as the unfortunate man's fellow workmen discovered that he had fallen from the cage they returned to the bottom of the mine, where they found him lifeless. His hat and candle were found in the opening at the sixth level and marks were seen on the timber, where the projecting end of the drill caught it.

The death of Mr. Bjork is particularly distressing on account of his leaving five children, the youngest 5 years of age and the oldest 13, orphans, their mother having died about four years ago. Besides the children he is survived by one brother, Charles Bjork, residing on Cleveland avenue.

GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE.

Little Rising Sun's Youth Saved Him From Gallows.

Bottineau, N. D., Aug. 4.—Little Rising Sun pleaded guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree for the slaying of little 16-year-old Alexandra Siedel. He struck her with a shot gun across the forehead, knocking her brains out. Then they dragged her to the bed and broke a lamp on the bedding, setting the house on fire, and escaping to the woods. He also saw Joe Peltier kill old man Seidel.

On account of Little Rising Sun being 16 years old, he was given life sentence.

Both the Peltiers, older men, were sentenced to be hanged at the state pen at Bismarck, Feb. 6, next.

Kodol

For Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

If you suffer from Indigestion or Dyspepsia; if you are annoyed with gas on the stomach, fulness after eating, belching, sour stomach, heartburn, etc.,

Go to your druggist, get a dollar bottle of Kodol, and if you can honestly say that you did not receive any benefit from it after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay and we will pay the druggist the price of the first bottle purchased by you.

If you knew as well as we do how good a preparation Kodol is it would be unnecessary for us to guarantee a single bottle.

But to get you to know how good it is as well as we know, we practically will purchase the first bottle for you.

You wonder, perhaps, how we can afford to make such an offer.

It is because we have absolute confidence in the honesty and fairness of the public.

We know there are thousands of persons who suffer from indigestion and dyspepsia who would be grateful to us for putting them in touch with Kodol.

That is why.

Furthermore, we know that after you have used Kodol your faith in the preparation will be equal to ours.

This proposition we make is not altogether unselfish, but it is actuated by the knowledge that the use of Kodol by you will benefit you as well as ourselves.

How could we afford to make such an offer to the public, and how could we afford to spend thousands of dollars to tell you about it unless we positively knew and were sure of the merits of Kodol.

We couldn't—it would bankrupt us.

But we know the merits of Kodol and we want you to know.

A perfect digester must contain many ingredients, each in proper proportion.

It must be a liquid, because all those ingredients cannot be put into dry form.

It must be able to digest any food, or any mixture of foods, and completely.

Kodol does that, even in a glass test tube.

No other digester can.

Kodol alone does all of the work. It stops all irritation, and gives the stomach complete rest.

It has taken us years t get a perfect digester, but we certainly have it now.

Please try it today at our risk.

It means more than relief. It means that the stomach will do its own work far sooner than you'll expect.

Kodol digests all the food you eat.

Eat what you need and let Kodol digest it.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. O. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. The $1.00 bottle contains 2½ times as much as the 50c bottle.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

HAND FIRST GAME OVER

Sox Bungle in Eighth and Ninth and Leaders Win.

Krick Has Better of Smith, But Fails to Beat Teammates.

Filled with compassion for the duke of Manitoba, who, with an almost insurmountable lead in the Northern league race, is leading a lot of cripples around, the Sox handed the first game of the series over and put themselves under a handicap in the battle for the big end of this home series. They had the unsolicited and unwelcome assistance of Ollie Anderson, and O'Dea stood by and took it without cracking a smile. Score, 4 to 2.

His dukelets had no more right to win the game than a 4-year-old has to kick the Torrey building over. In fact, the Angels have only won about one game on their merits on the local lot this year. They have lost more than they have won, for while fact all may be thankful, but the few victories they picked off were handed over in a spirit of hospitality, which is decidedly out of place in baseball.

Ollie Anderson's particular trampling upon the feelings of the bugs cost a run and brought a more severe arraignment from the stands than it has been the misfortune of the auburn haired one to receive this year. Be it said for Ollie that, as a rule, he gets away pretty well. Yesterday he certainly had the turn called on him. He called Menefee safe at third in the fourth inning, when Big Sam looked to be down from the stand. When he called a ball on Custer, when Krick had almost split the plate in two right after the third base decision, with two strikes already on him, it was too much. There were two down already and the strike-out would have retired the side. Instead, Custer singled and Menefee scored.

Ollie's transgression from the narrow highway of accuracy would have counted if something else hadn't broken loose and gone hurling through space. In the fifth inning the Sox scored the only earned run of the game on Williams' single, Pratt's sacrifice and Hopkins' single, tying up the score. For the next two innings it was an even break, but in the eighth the presentation ceremonies began. Krick walked Mills, who went down to second on a wild throw to first by Pratt. Leighty popped out and O'Dea went down on a grounder to Krick. Krick walked Menefee, apparently with malice aforethought, and Wagner singled to right, scoring Mills. He tried to go to second on Williams' throw to the plate and was caught.

The horrible finish came in the ninth, when Koepping kicked over the traces. He first let Livingston's grounder get away, and followed it up by missing Ness' throw on Custer's attempted sacrifice, putting men on second and third and nobody down. Nelson went out on a grounder to Koepping. Smith hit to Ness, who tried to get Livingston at the plate, threw the ball away, and both runners scored. The next two men were easy outs.

The Sox pulled off a feeble rally in the ninth, but it was like looking for water after pumping the well dry. Monroe and Ness were both easy outs, but Leighty opened up a little something by booting O'Brien's grounder. Williams drew a walk and it was up to Pratt. Hitting in pinches is Pratt's strong point. The fans looked for some sort of a wallop and got it, with interest. He started one for the left field fence and the fans howled in glee as it went through the air. It fell a few feet short, struck the fence and counted for but two bags. O'Brien scoring. Hopkins started another one in the same direction, but Mills gathered it in and checked the rally.

Josie Krick shouldn't have lost the game. He had Smith beaten to a small quantity, and with any kind of a square deal from his teammates would have come away with a victory. The Angels scored all four runs on two hits, and every one of the Soxs' five errors helped Brandon to runs. On the other hand, Smith was touched for three hits that counted in the run-getting and had the support of his teammates in the pinches.

Up to the ninth inning the game was good enough to watch. The Angels play with a determination and dash they didn't have on the last series. The Maroons are crawling up on them; they need every game they can get by any means possible, and they aren't throwing away any opportunities. The Sox would rather beat nobody better than O'Dea's men, and the remainder of the week promises to bring out much to delight the heart of the true fan.

Dublin, Aug. 4.—Seven members of the American Olympic team competed yesterday in the games of the Dublin police at Balls Bridge. The feature of the contest was the throwing of the hammer by John Flanagan, who made 173 feet 10 inches, beating his own Olympic record. Ralph Rose, the Californian, put the shot 49 feet 5 inches, breaking the record (British) of 48 feet 2 inches, made by Denis Horgan, at Queenstown in 1872.

DIXIE II IS CUP WINNER

American Boat Defends Harmsworth Cup Against Challenger.

Engineer Collapses Near Finish But Boat Crosses Line First.

New York, Aug. 4.—The United States won another international contest yesterday when the motor boat, Dixie II, defeated the British challenger, the Wolseley-Siddeley, in a thirty-mile race for the Harmsworth cup on Long Island sound, off Huntington, L. I. This cup was captured in English waters a year ago by the American boat, Dixie. There was an exciting incident near the finish, which might have cost the Dixie II the race. The engineer fell senseless as a result of inhaling gasoline fumes and the helmsman himself was almost overcome. He pluckily stuck to his task and brought the boat home a winner.

The Dixie II beat her fast rival by forty-nine seconds, covering the thirty-mile course at an average speed of 27.75 knots, or 31.9 statute miles, an hour. The Dixie II was entered by the Motor Boat Club of America and is owned by E. J. Schroeder. The Wolseley-Siddeley is owned by the duke of Westminster and represented the Motor Yacht Club of England. The American craft is of 200-horse power, with a single screw, whereas the English boat is of 400-horse power and has twin screws. The course consisted of three stretches of ten miles each.

The Daimler II, the other British competitor, broke her connecting rod after she had covered about six miles and when she was second in the race, having just passed the Wolseley-Siddeley. Both the other two American boats in the race, the U. S. A. and the Den, completed the course and made fairly fast time. The U. S. A. was defeated by the Dixie II by 10 minutes, 14 seconds, and the Den by 15 minutes, 50 seconds.

It was when the Dixie II was four miles from the finish on the last round of the course that Albert Rappuhn, her engineer, became unconscious. Capt. Bartley Pierce, likewise suffering from gasoline fumes, directed the boat with one hand, while he slapped the unconscious engineer and threw water on him in a fruitless effort to bring him to. Rappuhn revived only after doctor had been brought aboard after the race. Later he was taken ashore.

The Wolseley-Siddley was steered by Noel M. Robbins, the owner's representatives. His engineers were Arthur Stapleton and George Swingler.

The start of the race was made at 3:05 p. m., the Dixie II getting away well in the lead, fourteen seconds after the signal from the tug lying at anchor at the apex of the triangular course, and opposite the Chateau des Bous at Glen Island bay, the terraces and piers of which were thronged with spectators. The Den was second to dash across the line at 3:05:17. The Daimler II crossed at 3:05:23; the Wolseley-Siddeley at 3:05:25, and the U. S. A. at 3:05:41.

The Dixie beat the Walseley-Siddley thirty-seven seconds on the first round of ten miles. The English boat beat the Dixie twenty-one seconds on the second round, and the Dixie II traveled twenty-three seconds faster than the English boat on the third. Smooth water and no tide to speak of made the course an ideal one for the race. Hundreds of steam and sailing craft lined the course. The summary follows:

Boat—Dixie II; E. J. Schroeder, owner; finish, 4:09:57; elapsed time, 1:04:57.

Boat—Wolseley-Siddeley; duke of Westminister, owner; finish, 4:10:46; elapsed time, 1:05:46.

Boat—U. S. A.; John Sheppard, owner; finish, 4:20:11; elapsed time, 1:15:11.

Boat—Den; J. H. Hoadley, owner; finish, 4:25:47; elapsed time, 1:20:47.

Boat—Daimler II; Lord Howard de Walden, owner; disabled.

If Artie O'Dea can beat the Maroons to the dog this year, he will be the happiest baseball player on earth. Incidentally, he will heave a bundle of joy joy into the Wheat City that will keep the town shaking until the next season opens.

Artie's one aim in life now is to beat the Maroons this year. Every game the Browns or Sox take from Lamb's own will be a source of joy for Artie, for he doesn't fear either Duluth or Fargo. Every game he loses to the second division teams will mean an anxious night until he gets it back.

O'Dea's usually cheerful face has lost its smile. He isn't the kidding Artie of old. He doesn't josh Livingston when the much maligned second baseman boots one all over the lot. Baseball isn't play for Artie O'Dea now. It's work—good hard work. He has a contract to deliver the pennant to Brandon and he is all wrapped up in the job. Every minute on the ball field is filled with anxiety and every minute off is given over to study and figuring. O'Dea wants that pennant and wants it badly.

The Sox have still a chance to win. It's a long one, but while it exists, no loyal fan will admit that it has vanished. Nevertheless, Brandon is the favorite in the betting now and rightly so. O'Dea's men have a good lead, which may be pulled down and is very likely not to be.

A strong pitching staff and good hitting in right spots have been O'Dea's assets this year. In fielding, either the Sox or Maroons have it on Brandon, man for man. There isn't a sensational fielder on the entire Brandon outfit. They plod along, however, get nearly everything in sight and then go in and swat the ball for further orders and many runs.

Then, too, they have had a good break in the luck. There is such a thing in baseball and every ball player will admit it. Brandon has won more games this year by one score than any team in the league. The mistake of the umpire or slip of the opposing players seems always to come Brandon's way. When all things are figured in, it isn't at all surprising that the Angels lead and, if their pitchers don't lose their pace and the batters hit the ball as they have since the season opened, it is Brandon for a pennant.

Yesterday the Sox gave their first flash of on-the-road baseball since they returned home. They didn't loose by a very large margin; the pitching was good and the batting fair, but a few errors were chucked into the show at just the stages where they would do the most damage, and the game fluttered away.

Certainly no fan has any complaint on the work of the Sox since they returned home. They trimmed Fargo by good, consistent ball playing. The fielding and batting have been fine, and every pitcher, with the possible exception of Brandt, has been working well. If they continue the pace, Brandons will not get away with many games. They can't slip as they did yesterday, however, and win. The Angels take advantage of everything. Men placed on bases by errors have a fair chance of scoring with Brandon's slugging behind them. If O'Dea's men are to be checked, it will only be by the very best kind of baseball, and, under ordinary conditions, the Sox can deliver it.

The big league scout is abroad, and star players in every league have their cars to the ground, waiting for the call to higher and better things. Many of them will get the call only to be chased back again next spring. Old big leaguers, who have been burning up the minor organizations, will be taken back to the majors, some of them to make good and others to be set upon the toboggan again. Youngsters, crude and green, will be picked up by the scouts, decorated with strings and sent out next year to be seasoned. Many are called to the baseball player's land of promise, but few are chosen, and there will always be plenty for the minors.

EMERSON WINS TITLE AGAIN

Western Tennis Champion Defends Title Against Chicago Man.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Nat Emerson of Cincinnati successfully defended his title of Western tennis champion against L. Harry Waidner of Chicago at the courts of the Kenwood Country club yesterday. The contest was one of the hardest fought and most stubbornly contested in the history of these tournaments, requiring five sets and fifty-two games. The score was 8-10, 6-0, 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Every game in the first set was marked by rapid-fire rallies and brilliant exchanges, both players displaying speed and skill that kept the large crowd of spectators cheering steadily. Wiedner was the favorite with the crowd and when he finally managed to win the seventeenth and eighteenth games and take the set, the applause was general.

Waidner's supporters received a shock in the second act, however. The local man came on the court with much of his skill missing. He was wild and was passed continually at the net, Emerson taking straight games. Then it was the champion's turn to let down. He slowed up so much that Waidner's early lead in the third set proved too great to overcome and Emerson lost the vantage on sets.

The next engagement was the closely contested than the score indicates. Game after game went to deuce, but every critical point was Emerson's and the latter won only one of the seven games. The last set was equally stubbornly contested. Waldner tried hard and when the score was at five all, he seemed to have a good chance to win. But here Emerson took a decided brace and by some brilliant cross-court shots, won two games, the set, match and title.

Miss Carrie B. Neeley of Chicago retained the Western women's championship by defeating Miss Miriam Steever, also of Chicago. The score in this match was 8-6, 6-4, 6-2. The match was one-sided after the first set. Miss Neeley displaying far better tennis than her opponent.

JACK LEYBURN LOSES.

Geers Drives Sterling McKinney to Victory at Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 4.—The defeat of Jack Leyburn by Sterling McKinney yesterday afternoon in the 2:09 trot was the feature of the opening day of the Kalamazoo's first meeting as a member of the Grand Trotting circuit.

The 2:09 trot and the 2:16 pacing events were the features of the afternoon. Jack Leyburn won the first heat of the 2:09 trot with Sterling McKinney finishing fifth. The veteran driver, Geers, then proceeded to drive McKinney to victory in the next three straight heats, breaking the track record at Recreation park in the first and third heats, which he won in 2:03 and 2:04¼.

The hardest fought race of the day was the 2:24 trot, which went the full five heats. After showing strong in the first and second heats, Nancy Hoyce went to second and fifth in the next two heats, but took first money when Loyal, driven by Geers, broke in the last heat just before reaching the wire and finished second.

EASY FOR FAVORITE.

Dandelion Makes Fast Time in Mile Handicap at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Dandelion, the favorite, easily won the mile handicap at Saratoga yesterday, and he also stepped the distance in 1:39 1-5, the fastest time of the present meeting. Mohawk II, from the Sanford stable, was making his first appearance of the year and was forcing a terrific pace to the stretch turn; when he was suddenly seen to stop, having broken down very badly. He probably will not race again this year. Mohawk II went out to make the pace, leading by one and a half lengths to the stretch turn, when Dandelion moved up and, taking command, won by three lengths, with Far West second and Dorante third.

MANY POSTMASTERS ACCEPT.

Meeting of Wisconsin Stamp-Sellers at Oshkosh to Draw Well.

Oshkosh, Wis., Aug. 4.—The convention of the Wisconsinn Postmasters' association which is to be held in Oshkosh Aug. 19, 20, and 21, will be one of the most popular state gatherings ever held in this city. Already about 150 Wisconsin postmasters have written their acceptances. Since the postmasters have not been asked to file their acceptances before Aug. 10, this early and favorable flow of replies is an excellent indication that the convention will be unusually well attended.

The convention will be given over conclusively to an educational exchange of ideas in the construction and application of postal laws and regulations.

Postmaster Crane has received a letter from the postmaster general, who designated R. B. Mundelle and Guy T. Gould of Washington, D. C., to attend the convention to deliver addresses. Mr. Mundelle is from the registry and money order division. Mr. Gould is from the salaries and allowances department. The postmaster general also writes he will make further designation of officials to attend the convention, and it is probable that one of these designations will be Gen. James E. Stuart, inspector in charge of the Chicago department. He is prominent in the service and was born in Oshkosh and lived here many years.

HAAS KNOCKED GUT.

Moorhead Council Refuses to Renew His License.

Moorhead, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fight between the city administration and John Haas, a veteran saloonkeeper, reached a decisive end last night after a long drawn out contest when the council refused to renew his saloon license. This action, it is believed, will effectually put him out of business.

MAKING THINGS FLY

Farman's machine is slow compared with The Columbia's "Bargonplane," which gives High-flyers the chance of their life.

No hot air in our announcements.

Real $25, $30 and $35 Stein-Bloch Smart Suits can be easily landed now for $16.85.

Every Columbia article gives the wearer the air of a gentleman.

Yet, the prices are below the lowest level.

Summer goods have orders to fly, to get, to move on—that's all.

Just when real summer begins in Duluth, we need money for early fall shipments.

Last year we had to worry about getting the goods—this year these Easterners are less independent and more anxious to ship early.

Many new Fall Hats are here—especially our Knapp-Felt soft hats.

Good-bye, Straw Hats and Panamas — Half Price is clearing the Hat case they occupy.

Same with shoes.

Hanan low shoes now $3.85, Columbias $2.85.

And there is August apparel galore which goes at full prices — comfortable Night Robes and Pajamas, light flannel shirts, Dusters for automobilers, Bathing Suits for campers, Valises for travelers, Socks for walkers, and Collars and Ties for every man.

Of all these things The Columbia selections are biggest, The Columbia qualities beyond reproach, and the regular Columbia prices lower than on Broadway and State street.

TRAVELING MAN LOSES PURSE DURING CRUSH.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Taking a purse containing $175 and mileage books from the coat of Frank Plumb, a local traveling man, a pickpocket made his escape Monday morning. Mr. Plumb was a passenger on a train which arrived early in the morning, and because of the heat he did not put on his coat, carrying it out over his shoulder. The thief got in his work when the crush was on at the vestibule of the coach.

MEDFORD CROPS SHORT.

Farmers at Some Places Said to be Already Plowing Fields.

Medford, N. D., Aug. 4.—The outlook for the grain crop in this ection is not very encouraging. A local farmer, who has looked over the situation, says that after driving around for about twelve miles, he does not believe there will be over half a crop. He says the straw is short and in many places he found the grain shriveled. He says he saw very little grain that he would call over half a crop. In some places, he claimed, the farmers were plowing some of their field, evidently not intending to cut them because of the poor growth.

Will be Used as Soon as Fixtures Are in Place.

Some of the fixtures for the new West Duluth postoffice arrived this morning from Indianapolis, and the others are expected tomorrow. They are being installed today and it is expected that by Thursday the rooms will be ready for the postoffice to move in.

The room that is to be occupied by the postoffice has been in readiness for some time, but the required fixtures were slow in arriving, though they were ordered over a month ago from a firm in Chicago. A special effort was made by the contractor to have the lower floor which is to be used for the postoffice, completed, vault in, hardwood floors down, and everything ready by Aug. 1. All work for a time was stopped on the other parts of the building so as to reach this end.

At the first possible moment, probably before this week is over, the mail will be distributed to West Duluthians from the new building on Bristol street, just off Central avenue.

ENJOYS LAKE SUPERIOR TRIP

Henry Booth Says It is Finest in the Country.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Booth of Columbus, Ohio, returned this morning from a several days' outing at Isle Royale. Mr. Booth, who is a member of the prominent law firm of Booth, Keating & Peters, is quite enthusiastic over the Lake Superior trip and his visit to Isle Royale, declaring that it was one of the finest trips that he has had in the country.

Mr. Booth is general counsel for the Columbus Street Railway & Light company, and is considered an authority on matters pertaining to street railways. He is, in fact, the author of a book on that subject.

Speaking of Duluth's street railway system, Mr. Booth says:

"This city has an excellent street railway system. It is a much better system than is found in the smaller cities throughout the country, and is superior to the systems in many of the large cities. In the Eastern street railway circles Duluth is generally recognized as having a splendid, up-to-date system, and good service. The cars used here are the best made for the purpose and, taking into consideration the distance that passengers are carried in this city for 5 cents, I should say that the fare is a very reasonable one."

Before taking this remedy he was a constant sufferer. He is now sound and well, and, although 60 years old, can do as much work as a young man." Sold by all druggists.

During the meeting the board expressed an opinion that gas and water pipes should be laid on Belknap street between Oaks and Bruce avenues, with a view of paving Belknap next year.

He is ill with meningitis and his condition is very grave. Some medical authorities place six breaths per minute as the minimum, but the young patient is still alive on half that number. The case is attracting the attention of many physicians.

THE TIDE HAS TURNED

Immigrants Once More Coming in to Northern Minnesota.

Foreigners Who Left Last Year Are Coming Back.

With the revival in business conditions in the United States and the prospect for greater prosperity during the coming fall and winter than existed during the period of financial depression last fall and winter, the tide of immigration from Europe is carrying with it a number of aliens, who were formerly residents of Minnesota and who left when the hard times hit the ranges during the strike and later during the financial depression last year

During the strike on the iron ranges last fall and later when the financial depression came about and threatened business conditions in every line, there was a rush of people to Europe. Men, who had been saving their money for just such emergencies, left for the old country to allow the storm to blow over They had sufficient funds to last them a year or even more and were not worried over anything that might come about in this country.

Now that every fear of a panic has vanished, they are ready to come back and receive tha comparatively big wages they can earn in this country. Foreigners, who have once been here, cannot rest content in their native lands. They know that their manual efforts will receive more financial appreciation here than there and while they can get work, they are anxious to live here.

"Every boat arriving in Duluth brings men, who say that they have formerly worked at Hibbing, Virginia, Chisholm, Ely or one of the other range town," said Inspector in Charge W. H. Dean of the local United States immigration district today. "They all seem to realize that the prospects of financial money trouble and money tightness in this country have passed and big wages are to be earned on the range. Some of them have been in their native lands for a year and some for less, but they are all headed for their former places of employment and are anxious to return to work."

Press reports from New York indicate that the rush of foreigners, who formerly lived in the United States, to that port this year is entirely unprecedented. It is estimated that 2,000,000 people returned to Europe last year on account of the conditions here, and all except a very few are returning this year and bringing others with them. The tide of immigration is greater and stronger than ever and employers of foreign labor will have no trouble securing men during the coming year in any part of the country.

OLDEST CHURCH ORGAN.

From the Youth's Companion: In the Baltic sea, forty miles from the mainland, lies the Swedish island Gothland, a Mecca for students of early Gothic architecture. In Wisby alone, the chief town of the island, with its population of 8,000 souls, may be studied what remains of no less than ten churches, some of which date from the eleventh and twelfth centuries. The oldest of them is the Church of the Holy Ghost, completed about 1046.

Prof. Hemmerberg, director in a German music school, and especially interested in the study of mediaeval organs, visited fifty-nine churches in Gothland, and in a little village called Sundre came upon the remnant of what is unquestionably the oldest known organ in existence. The case alone has survived the fret of seven centuries, the holes for pedals and manuals are placed as in modern instruments, and inside one can see the chamber for the bellows and judge of their action; the exterior is adorned with paintings dating from about 1240.

When this ancient instrument could no longer serve its original purpose it was used as a sacristy, and for the safeguard of holy vessels and vestments was kept in careful repair, hence its excellent preservation to our day.

Pleasant Reading for the Fat

What a simple and inexpensive (least expensive solution your druggist has) solving of the fat woman's problem the Marmola Prescription Tablets provide. She takes one of these harmless, pleasant little tablets after each meal and at bedtime, and loses from 12 to 16 ounces of fat each day, and yet suffers no harm, creates no disturbances inwardly, produces no wrinkles and is put to practically no expense, and for an effective quantity can be obtained for only 75 cents.

This harmlessness combined with the extreme effectiveness which distinguishes these tablets is due, on the authority of the Marmola Co., Detroit, Mich., to the fact that they are made in strict accordance with the famous prescription: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Sirup Simplex, which, as everybody knows, has long been put up and recommended by our best druggists.

THE BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATOR

There is None Made Half So Good.

TAKE TWO WET TOWELS, hang one in your Refrigerator and the other in a warm room. The one in the Refrigerator will dry out first if your Refrigerator is working properly.

Cold discourages the germ life that sours milk—But moisture encourages it, counteracting the cold. It's easy to prove that the

Bohn Syphon Refrigerator

Is much drier and 10 degrees colder than any other. The thermometer and wet towel tell the story.

The Syphons pass the air through the ice chamber oftener, and don't let it stay with the ice long enough to absorb moisture. That's why the Bohn is colder and drier than any other. That's why milk will keep longer in a Bohn.

But you must see the Bohn to appreciate its beauty. Finest cabinet construction and finish, opalite or enamel lined. Will you not let us show you this Refrigerator—this "life preserver"—tomorrow? We Are Exclusive Agents for Duluth.

RUNAWAY HORSE BREAKS ITS NECK

Lively Time in Eveleth When Baker's Animal Took Fright.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—About 11 o'clock this morning at the corner of Pierce and Adams streets a runaway horse owned by Alleges, a baker, ran into the curbing, the wagon turned over on the horse and the horse fell to the ground, breaking its neck and knocking out its brains. Luckily, no one was in the wagon at the time of the accident, the horse having been left standing without a weight in front of a grocery store, into which the baker had gone. Part of the wagon was broken off. The horse was worth about $100.

ELEVATOR FALLS ON TUG, SINKING BOAT.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The fire tug, Illinois, which has been working all night on the smouldering ruins of elevators E and F, which burned yesterday, was sunk in the river today by the falling of a wall of elevator F. It will cost $150,000 to raise and repair her.

The Woodland Dairy

Wish to announce to their patrons and the public that they have been in the dairy business in Duluth for the past twenty years, and it has always been their aim to furnish their patrons with good, pure, clean and wholesome milk and cream. For the past two months we have been using the Gusler covered milk pails, a pail that is largely used by some of the most modern and up-to-date sanitary and certified dairies in the country, dairies that command as high as 20 cents per quart for their milk. We are the only dairymen in Duluth that are not using the open milk pail. We are also building a new milk house, which, when completed, will be second to none in the state from a sanitary point of view. We do not make this announcement to advertise our business, for we have always been able to sell all the milk and cream our cows can produce, and would never have made this announcement were it not for the fact that there has been so much said about the dairy conditions of Duluth—and that we feel it a duty we owe our patrons. We cordially invite our patrons and others to make us a personal visit, and refer them to the Board of Health for further information. Yours respectfully,

FLAX PRICES SOAR IN NORTHWEST MARKETS

Shorts Run for Cover on Receipt of Bullish News.

Wheat Is Indifferent, the Rust Reports Being Discounted.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 4.—Flax took the center of the stage in the Duluth market today and went straight up five points over yesterday's close. The session ended with prices at the top level of the day.

The strength began during the early hours, and was caused by light offerings of September flax, the old crop, by reports of damage to the new crop in North Dakota, and the news that there was a considerable decrease in acreage from last year. The distant options became very firm in sympathy with September, and the bulge was on.

Offerings continued light and the demand became very firm, shorts being heavy buyers. While the volume of trading here was not extraordinarily large, the buying demand was very strong and the market climbed with rapid strides. The three active options closed 5 cents over yesterday.

Wheat was rather indifferent. There was more crop damage news during the day, but it had been discounted by what had already been heard and the general feeling regarding conditions in the Northwest was more bearish than it has been for several days. All of the American markets closed weaker than yesterday.

Berlin closed ⅝c higher and Budapest 1¼c higher.

The September option closed ⅞c lower in Duluth, ⅝c lower in Chicago, 1c lower for new September in Minneapolis, ⅝c lower in New York, St. Louis and Kansas City and 1⅞c lower for October wheat in Winnipeg. The December option closed 1c lower in Duluth, ⅞c off in Chicago and Minneapolis, ⅝c lower in New York and St. Louis, ½c to ⅝c lower in Kansas City and 2c lower in Winnipeg.

September corn closed ¾c to ⅞c lower in Chicago, and September oats closed ⅜c off from yesterday.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"Wheat—There was a firm undertone to the speculative wheat market at the opening, at which time offerings were light and shorts nervous and values showed an advance of 1⅝c to 1¾c from Friday's close. This advance was attributed to manipulation in Chicago owing to the unfavorable spring wheat outlook, which caused heavy covering among shorts. Further strength was imparted to the market by the expectation of smaller world's shipments. At midday the market was firm with values 1⅜c to 1⅝c higher than Friday. A slight reaction took place in the December option of ⅜c, due to the profit-taking⅝.

"Corn was firm at the opening with values ½c higher and at 1:30 p. m. was unchanged from the opening. Strength was the result of the firm American cables and in sympathy with the strength in wheat."

Car receipts at Duluth were 110 against 139 last year, and at Minneapolis 86 against 103 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 196 against 242 last year. Chicago received 538 against 508 last year. Winnipeg received 54 against 123 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,111,000 bus, last year 1,156,000 bus. Shipments 660,000 bus, last year 350,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 230,000 bus.

Bradstreet's reported an increase of 2,210,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. In the United States and Canada, there was an increase of 3,510,000 bus, and afloat and in Europe, a decrease of 1,400,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 411,000 bus, last year 482,000 bus. Shipments 157,000 bus, last year 252,000 bus.

The visible supply of corn decreased 404,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet and easier during the session in Duluth. September wheat opened ⅛c lower at $1.02¾, declined to $1.01½, rallied to $1.02 and closed there, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. December wheat opened unchanged at $1, declined to 9c and closed there, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

Durum wheat was unchanged and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 15 cents over September for No. 1 northern.

The fireworks in flax began after the first hour and continued right up to the close, which was at the day's top level. September flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.27½ asked, declined to $1.26¾ and went straight up after that to $1.32¾, closing there, a gain of 5c over yesterday. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.26 asked, declined to $1.25½, rallied to $1.31¼ and closed there, a gain of 5c over yesterday. November flax opened late at $1.25¾, went to $1.31 and closed there, a gain of 5c over yesterday. December flax was inactive and closed 3½c higher than yesterday at $1.28½ bid.

Oats to arrive closed ⅜c lower and other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Active, But Weak Following Realizing Sales of Monday.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The wheat market opened active and weak on realizing sales followed out by yesterday's advance. New crop months dropped 1c. September opened ⅛c to ⅝c lower at 93¾c to 94¼c and dropped to 93½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 734 cars against 746 last week and 750 a year ago.

September late touched 93⅛c on reports that black rust damage claims had been exaggerated. The close was easy, September was off ⅝@¾c at 93⅝@¾c.

Heavy profit-taking also depressed corn prices, distant futures declining 1c. September opened ⅛c to ½c lower at 75¾c to 76¼c and sold to 76⅛c. Local receipts were 285 cars, with 36 of contract grade.

September dropped later to 75c and closed ¾@⅞c down, at 75⅝@½c.

The oats market was fairly active and the tone sympathetically weak. September opened ⅝c lower at 45⅝c, touched 45½c and then declined to 45c. Local receipts were 289 cars.

The provisions market was easy with September delivery unchanged to 12½c lower. September pork opened at $15.75, lard at $9.60@9.62½ and ribs at $9.02½.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat on the Down Turn Through Nearly Whole Session.

Minneapolis, Aug. 4.—With Liverpool cables 1⅝@1¾d higher the grain trade was disappointing. Since the English market closed on Friday last the American markets have advanced sharply, and the Liverpool rise was only responsive. Crop news was not so bad, and the weather was favorable. Selling began and the market was on the down turn through nearly the whole of the session. Bradstreet's increase of 2,111,000 bushels and liberal winter wheat receipts at Chicago and Kansas City had some depressing effect. The primary receipts of 1,111,000 bushels, while a little under last year, were still heavy enough to cause pressure from hedging sales. There were rumors of export business pending, but to the noon hour no sales were reported. Local elevator stocks decreased 250,000 bushels for three days. Minneapolis got only 86 cars against 103, and Duluth 110 against 139. September opened $1.02; high, $1.02½@⅝; low, $1.01⅜; close, $1.01⅞. Old September high, $1.00⅜@½; close, $1.02⅝@¾. December opened $1.00⅞; high, $1.00⅞; low, 99⅞c; close, $1.00⅛. Old December closed $1.00⅝.

Cash demand improved and in the early part of the day millers bid $1.16 for No. 1 northern and $1.13@1.14 for No. 2 northern. Close No. 1 northern $1.16 spot; $1.15¼ to arrive; No. 2 northern $1.12½@1.13 spot; $1.12¼ to arrive; No. 3 wheat $1.08@1.10. No. 3 yellow corn, 73¾@74¾c. No. 3 white oats, 49¾@50⅜c. No. 2 rye, old, 73¾; new 71¾@72¾. Barley receipts 7 cars. All barley was firmer and 1@2c higher. New barley was 50@56c for lots on sale here and about the same values to arrive. Old barley was 2c higher for choice. Close 48@57.

Flax receipts, 6 cars. The discount was greater, as cash buyers would not follow the option on the strong spots and sales were at 1c to 1½c under Duluth September. Close, $1.30⅛.

Millstuffs firm; millers quote at $18.50@19 for bulk bran.

Flour shipments were the lightest for some time, reflecting poor general demand. There seems no likelihood of any increase in shipments in the immediate future, as flour demand in general is very light. Shipments, 29,970 barrels. First patents, $5.95@6.10; second patents, $5.85@6; first clears, $4.35@4.45; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

THE STOCKS IRREGULAR

Majority of the Issues Opened Lower With Some Gains.

Profit-Taking Sales on Extensive Scale During Last Hour.

New York, Aug. 4.—First prices of stocks were lower than last night for the most prominent issues, but there were gains amongst some of the less important stocks. Business was in only moderate volume.

Indications of a good absorption of the United States Steel and Hill stocks caused the traders to purchase other stocks, although the rise was very uneven.

The demand shifted to new quarters, including the high priced dividend-paying railroad stocks. Absorption of the United States Steel stocks continued on a large scale, the preferred touching 111⅛. A few of the prominent trading stocks still lagged, notably Amalgamated Copper. Reading rose 1⅝ and Union Pacific touched 156. Advances of a point were numerous in active stocks. Bonds were firm.

The rise in prices was carried slightly further before the realizations became heavy enough to stop the advance. The reactions, however, were very slight and trading became dull on the setback. United States sold at 46⅛. Reading and American Locomotive preferred got up 2.

The market closed irregular after a reaction. Profit-taking sales were on an extensive scale during the final hour, but advances at fresh points served to restrain their effect. Southern Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were important examples of belated strength, the former rising 1½ and the latter 1. American Smelting and International Pump gained 26 and National Lead 2. The recession in some of the active stocks ran to a point or more.

GRAIN LETTER IS CONSERVATIVE

Minneapolis Firm Does Not Think Damage is Extensive.

The Van Dusen-Harrington company has issued a rather bearish crop letter to the trade, under date of Aug. 3. It follows:

"The wheat crop of South Dakota has suffered some damage from black rust. In the southern counties, the plant was too far advanced to admit of much damage, but the late crop in the middle and northern counties of the state has probably been damaged from 10 to 20 per cent, and the late crop would probably be about one-half the crop in those counties.

"Black rust is also to be found in almost any locality in North Dakota, but the conditions have not been favorable to its spread and the damage to the North Dakota crop from this source has been confined to the edges of swales or other damp places favorable to the growth of the parasite.

"Wheat harvest is now pretty well under way through South Dakota and the southern half of Minnesota. It will be general by the end of this week.

"Some durum wheat and a few fields of winter wheat have been cut in North Dakota. The regular spring wheat harvest will commence there in ten days.

"We are maturing a wheat crop which is spotted and difficult to estimate, but in our opinion we will harvest a larger crop than last year and of better quality.

"The oats crop has not promised well at any time this season, and is coming to harvest in very unsatisfactory shape. It appears to be hurt by rust and blight; though this crop, too, is spotted it will probably yield a better quality and, perhaps, a somewhat larger amount than last season, but will be far from the satisfactory crop we anticipated in June.

"The barley crop is now practically harvested and considerable of it has been threshed. The yield and quality are about the average for the last ten years, which means rather better than last season.

"Flax still promises to make an excellent crop. Corn, though of smaller acreage than last year, because of high water during the spring, will probably mature better."

HEARD ON THE FLOOR.

Wheat Gossip Heard Among the Duluth Grain Dealers.

Walter Turle has just returned from North Dakota, and in a conversation on the floor this morning said he was not disposed to share the views contained in the many bullish reports of rust sent out from that state during the past week.

"I do not claim to be a wheat expert, and I was merely around with others who were inspecting the fields, but it is my opinion that the North Dakota wheat crop will turn out much better than many people would have us believe," said Mr. Turle. "The fields looked pretty good. Some damage has probably been done, but not as much as these bullish reports would make it seem."

McKindley & Nichols received word from Hankinson, N. D., that cutting was in progress in that section, and that the indications were pretty fair.

The Atwood-Larson company received word today from Crookston to the effect that the early sown wheat in that section was looking very good, but that late-sown grains were not in as good condition.

Two cars of new rye were received at Duluth late yesterday. It comes from a point near the Dalrymple farm in North Dakota. Part of a car of new barley was also received. This is considered very early for receipts of coarse grains from that section.

CURE FOR HEADACHE.

Philadelphia Record: "The best cure I know of for a headache is to wash your face," said a bright looking man. "Yes, I believe to suddenly cleanse your face with cold water will open up the pores and probably start the blood in circulation, and I know it will relieve you of a headache in a jiffy. I have tried it myself a great many times and have always been successful. There is something in the nature of a stimulant in the cold water treatment that braces me right up. My head when it aches gets hot and throbs, and the water makes it cool and fresh. I have a theory, too, that people don't wash their faces nearly enough, anyhow, in these days of dusty asphalt streets and soft coal smoke.

If seven-tenths of the people who are looking for a place to live should read your ad. in The Herald would it not "help some?"

Buy the local curbs for big money this fall. Duluth is to the curb market what Boston is to the listed, and down East they are taking our local curbs fast. Ballaklava, Shattuck, Denn, Copper Queen, Calumet & Sonora and many of the others are very strong. Calumet & Montana is a heavy trader. Butte & Superior is again getting on much steam, and we have taken everything offered in this line today at $1.06. Butte & Superior should develop into a big producer, and when they tap the copper ore on the 1,200 or 1,400-foot levels there will be something to talk about. Greene and Superior & Pittsburg are acting fine. I look for a very strong market from now on until March. G. A. Fraser is our correspondent at Hibbing. TOWN OF MICHEL IS STILL SAFE

But If the Wind Shifts the Village is Doomed.

Fernie, B. C., Aug. 4.—No person who has not seen can imagine the awful devastation which in the short space of two hours transferred what was a busy center of industry into a desolate waste and left 6,000 people homeless. The scene during the progress of the fire is described as appalling, men, women and children fleeing for their lives, leaving everything they possessed to the mercy of the flames. Michel, where the scene begins on the east for twenty miles west, is yet a sea of fire, with miles and miles of blazing mountain sides.

Michel is yet safe, but the whole valley of the river is on fire, and if the wind starts up the town is doomed. All the women and children have been sent to Blairmore, Frank and Coleman for safety. All mines are shut down and the men are fighting the fires in relays, plowing, back-firing, clearing underbrush or soaking the roofs of houses with water ,of which, fortunately, there is a good supply.

Only about a dozen houses have been burned in Hosmer so far, but the fire is all around it.

Many from Fernie have taken refuge in the coke ovens being built by the Canadian Pacific, where they are safe, even if the town does burn. They are being cared for and fed as well as conditions permit. At Fernie, however, the greatest scene of desolation exists. By actual count, only twenty-five houses are left standing. Not a business house remains except the Western Canada company's wholesale warehouse and the office of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company which stood in the center of a square and in which a number of people took refuge from the fire raging around them. The whole city of Fernie, West Fernie, the Annex, the old town, Frenchtown and all the lumber mills in and around Fernie are wiped out, with the exception of the buildings named.

THE SNAP.

Hackenschmidt, the Russian wrestler, when in Chicago, praised the beauty of the American girl.

"Nowhere, not even in Russia, are the girls so pretty," he said. "It seems wrong and stingy that a man can marry only one of them. Every American, surrounded by all this beauty, must envy the snap that a friend of mine in Russia had.

"'So you are engaged,' a man said to my friend, 'to one of the beautiful Vronsky triplets, eh?'

"'Yes,' my friend replied.

"'But how can you tell them apart?' the man asked.

"'I don't try to,' said my friend."

THE BUSY HOTEL RUNNER.

The Amalgamated Union of Tourist Persuaders, otherwise and also unofficially known as the Grand Order of Hotel Runners, will resume active operations in a few days on the St. Lawrence river. The hotel runner exists all over the world, but his peculiar habitat is in the vicinity of Montreal.

Every hotel of consequence in Montreal maintains two or more hotel runners in the tourist season. One band of these peace disturbers haunts the boats coming from Quebec, another seeks its prey on the boats from Toronto and the Thousand Islands, while still others guard the other traveled ways into the city, says the New York Sun.

Hotel running has got to be a profession in the principal city across the northern border. The job requires smooth address, a persuasive tongue and adaptability to persons and circumstances.

Suppose you are enjoying a trip down the river from the Thousand Islands. You are having an after dinner cigar on deck and taking in the scenery at your leisure, when a well dressed stranger next to you engages you in conversation.

Maybe you are in the mood to talk and welcome the intrusion. You find he is well informed on things to be seen along the river and is just as willing to talk on any other subject. It may well be that you adjourn to the bar.

There is nothing ragged in his work. He will learn quite easily and naturally that you are going to stop in Montreal, and how long a stay you expect to make. You might expect that he would then spring an argument on you in favor of some particular hotel, but he won't. As he starts to leave you he will say something about like this: "Well, I'll see you tonight, I suppose. Of course you stop at the Blank."

Now it may be that you do stop at the Blank, and tell him so. If so his work is done. But if you name another hotel or seem in doubt as to where you are going he will up and at you.

All very kindly done, of course, but you are persuaded very soon that the Blank is the only place there is. He will offer to look after your baggage and attend to any other little matters.

When he has landed you he passes on to another traveler, and another member of the Hotel Runners' society tackles you. If you have already decided he will let you alone, but if you haven't you are in for another period of persuasion. The best thing to do is to decide definitely early in the game; if you don't you will have no peace until the boat has passed through the last of the rapids and docked.

But these hotel runners stick to their promises. They will help you through the customs lines, get a carriage for you, arrange for rooms at the hotel, and if you like, help you to do the town in the evening. And the next day they take an early train up the river and meet the next boat.

ENTERED IN NATIONAL

Winnipeg Oarsmen Visit Duluth En Route to Regatta.

Two Crews Entered From Winnipeg—St. Paul is Represented.

Ten members of the Winnipeg Rowing club, who are to represent that organization at the national regatta at Springfield, Mass., arrived in Duluth this morning over the Duluth, Winnipeg & Rainy Lake, enroute to the Atlantic seaboard.

The Duluth oarsmen, who were at Winnipeg at the recent Northwestern regatta, are entertaining the Winnipeg men today. The visitors took lunch at the Duluth Boat club on Park Point today and had a workout on the bay in the Duluth club's shells. They will continue their trip tonight.

The Minnesota and Western Canada Rowing association will be represented at Springfield by the Winnipeg club and the Minnesota Boat club of St. Paul. Winnipeg will have entries in the senior eights and senior fours, while St. Paul will be represented in every event. The great showing of oarsmen this year gives them a good chance of figuring among winners at the St. Paul crews at the Winnipeg the Springfield regatta, in which all of the best crews of the United States and Canada are entered.

BALDWIN IS WORKING HARD TO MAKE FLIGHT.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Disappointed because he could not make the flight in his airship at Fort Myer yesterday, as he had planned, Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin is today making every effort to have his machine in perfect condition, so that he can make a flight late this afternoon. He worked incessantly from early morning until after sundown yesterday, getting neither breakfast nor luncheon before he was prevailed on by Glenn H. Curtiss, his assistant during the trials, and Lieut. Frank P. Lahm of the signal corps to postpone his initial flight until today.

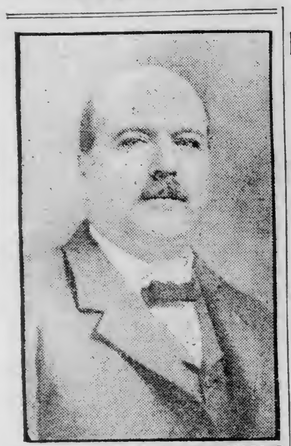
HUNDREDS OF MEN IN THE CANADIAN PACIFIC SHOPS WALK OUT AT THE SIGNAL



CONGRESSMAN W. S. HAMMOND
Of St. James, the Likeliest Probability for the Democratic Nomination for Governor of Minnesota.

Indications Are That the Strike Will be a Long One.

Men Send Away Their Tools From the Winnipeg Shops.

Most of the Men Go Out All Along the Line.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 5.—Without any demonstration 800 employes of the Canadian Pacific railroad shops here walked out this morning, the signal to lay down the tools being the blowing of the shop's whistle. Outside a large number of draymen waited to carry away boxes of tools, the men evidently believing that the strike would be prolonged. One hundred men, mostly foremen and apprentices, remained in the shops.

Second Vice President Whyte who has been to Skagway is hurrying home He will be at Vancouver today. The management of the company's side of the strike is now in the hands of General Manager Bury, who claims he can pull out successfully. Eighty men went out at Kenora, and forty at Ignace. At Moosejaw sixty men are out and at Calgary forty. Four hundred men went out of the Canadian Pacific shops in British Columbia at 10 o'clock this morning, seventy-five in Vancouver and others went out at Laggan, Revelstoke, Nelson and Cranbrook. All of the men are shop hands, such as machinists, boiler makers and the allied trades.

OUT AT TORONTO.

Toronto, Aug. 5.—In response to the call for a strike over 100 mechanics of the Canadian Pacific Railway company struck here this morning.

CENTERING ON HAMMOND

Now Leading Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Governor.

Thought to be Strongest Man That Could be Named.

St. Paul, Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.) — Democratic governorship lightning, which has been playing tentatively about the conspicuous heads of John Lind, T. D. O'Brien, J. G. Armson and Congressman Winfield Scott Hammond of St. James, ever since it became clear that Governor Johnson would not accept a third nomination, seems to be centering now over Congressman Hammond, and beyond any question he is today the leading probability for the Democratic nomination.

The convention meets Aug. 19, and it now seems probable that by the time the delegates get together in Minneapolis on that date, the sentiment of the party will have crystallized upon Mr. Hammond.

This is not by any means a new probability. One of the first men mentioned for the honor, when Governor Johnson declared that he would not

W. S. COWHERD FOR GOVERNOR

Nominated at Missouri Primaries by Majority of Some 24,000.

Kansas City, Aug. 5.—Late returns from yesterday's primaries in Missouri indicate that William S. Cowherd of Kansas City, formerly chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, was nominated by the Democrats for governor, over David A. Ball and Criminal Judge William H. Wallace of Kansas City. Cowherds nomination is claimed by close to 25,000, but returns are coming in so slowly that definite figures will not be obtainable until late today.

Herbert S. Hadley of Kansas City, the attorney general of Missouri, was the only candidate for governnor on the Republican ticket.

Cowherd's strength ay principally in the cities and in St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph he received goodly pluralities. Wallace and Ball showed their greatest strength in the farming districts.

WRECKED BY A DYNAMITE BOMB

Chicago Saloonkeeper is the Victim of Persecution.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—A dynamite bomb was exploded early today in the doorway of the saloon of Jacob Telser, 170 Larrabee street, wrecking the interior and frightening Telser, who, with his wife and five children, occupies an apartment above the saloon.

The police searched the allies and yards in the immediate neighborhood, but no trace of the dynamiter could be found.

Saloonkeeper Telser believes that the explosion is the work of persons who have been seeking to force him to leave the neighborhood. He told the police that recently he had received a number of threatening letters, because he had refused to dispose of his saloon to an Italian. The saloon is situated in the center of the Italian colony, on the North side.

TWENTIETH DAY OF INTENSE HEAT

Lumber Yards Being Wet in Chicago to Prevent Fires.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Chicago today entered upon its twentieth day of continuous intense heat and its fifteenth day without rain. Four deaths over night were reported. The temperature at 11 a. m. was 84 degs., and the humidity which intensified suffering, 74 per cent. Owing to the continued drought, Fire Marshal Horan has ordered that all lumber yards and similar places be kept wet until there is a fall of rain.

BRAINERD WILL CONDEMN PLANT

Council Votes to Acquire Waterworks by Court Proceedings.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council took the first definite steps toward acquiring the waterworks plant of the Minnesota Waterworks company Monday evening, when it voted to instruct the city attorney and special counsel to commence condemnation proceedings. The movement to acquire the plant was bitterly fought by the Socialist members of the city council, who demanded that the city parallel the existing mains and make no effort to acquire the present plan. The action followed a spirited debate, every business man but one on the council voting for condemnation. The council also voted to issue $120,000 in 5 per cent bonds to erect a power plant to run the waterworks and electric light plants and also to improve the electric light and water plants if the latter is acquired. The question of accepting the plant at the appraised figures will have to be submitted to the people after the appraisement. The council also asked for bids on various plants, including steam, producer, gas and oil burner plants. These bids are to be opened at 2:30 p. m., Aug. 27.

CANAL EXCAVATING PROCEEDS RAPIDLY.

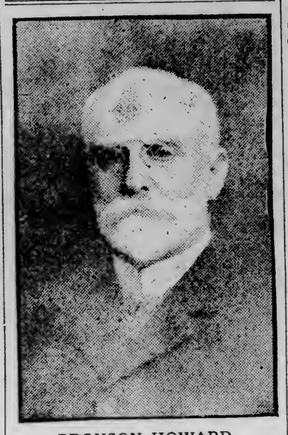
Washington, Aug. 5.—Month by month the total excavation on the Isthmian canal is increasing. A cablegram received today from Col. Goethals, chief engineer on the isthmus, shows that the excavation for July was considerable larger than for June, although the latter was 3,168,640 cubic yards, against 1,056,976 cubic yards for June and 1,077,498 cubic yards for July a year ago. In the corresponding months this shows an increase of 2,091,432 cubic yards. The average daily output for July, 1908, was 121,494 cubic yards against 41,442 cubic yards in July, 1907. In July of this year 1,847,173 cubic yards of material were removed by steam shovels.

WANT BRAINERD BRANCHES.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. P. Stacy & Co. of Minneapolis and B. Pressley & Co. of St. Paul are looking up sites for branches in Brainerd. Brainerd is the logical distributing point for Western fruit for the country north of here.

The Northwestern hospital has opened for business under the charge of Dr. Nicholson, the proprietor. Miss Freda Wall, formerly of the Swedish hospital in Minnesota, is to be superintendent.

COAT OF MAIL SAVES LIFE OF TURKEY'S RULER FROM THE KNIFE OF AN ASSASSIN



BRONSON HOWARD,
Dramatist and Author, Who Is Dead at the Age of 68.

Stabbed in the Breast by a Minor Palace Official.

He Had Evidently Been Bribed to Kill Country's Ruler.

Had Large Sum of Gold and His Baggage Was Packed.

London, Aug. 5.—A special dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Geneva says:

"The sultan of Turkey was stabbed in the breast on Monday night by a minor palace official. The coat of mail which the sultan always wears deflected the blow. The would-be assassin was arrested. Apparently he had been bribed to commit the act, as he had a large sum of gold in his pockets and his baggage was packed ready for flight.

"The news was received in Geneva in a telegram from Constantinople to a Young Turk here."

BRISTOW IS THE NOMINEE

For United States Senator to Succeed Long of Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 5.—While the results of the primaries held Tuesday in Kansas cannot be stated positively, the returns up to this morning tended to confirm the reports of last night, showing the probable nomination of Walter R. Stubbs, the Lawrence railway contractor, for governor on the Republican ticket, over Cyrus Leland, Jr., and the naming of Joseph L. Bristow, editor of the Salina Journal and formerly fourth assistant postmaster general for United States senator, to succeed Chester I. Long of Medicine Lodge, whose term expired in March, 1909.

The returns are slow in coming in, but those received so far indicate that it has been a landslide for Bristow, and that Stubbs is the nominee by a safe majority.

Few Democratic votes were cast, but returns received indicate that W. H. Ryan of Girard will be that party's nominee for governor, and Hugh E. Farrelly of Chanutel the senatorial nominee.

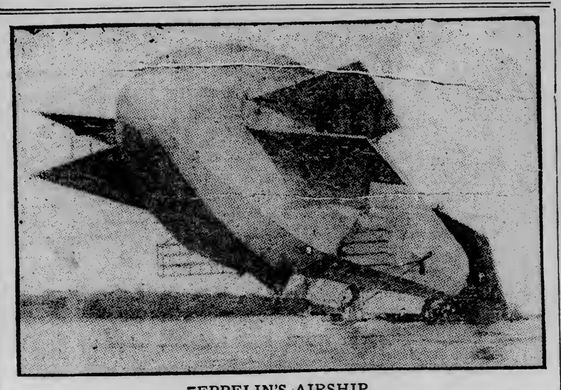
TO TOLERATE FALLIERES

Will be Allowed to Attend Wedding, But Not Participate.

Paris, Aug. 5.—The marriage of Mlle. Anne Fallieres, daughter of the president of the republic, to J. J. E. Leans, the president's secretary, which is to take place in the Church of the Madelaine, Aug. 10, has raised the question whether or not the president can participate in the ceremony, owing to the fact that all French officials who were concerned in the adoption of the law providing for the separation of church and state have been excommunicated. According to the church organ, the Gaulois, the archbishop of Paris, bearing his conclusion on one of the acts of the council of Trent, has decided that inasmuch as the ban of excommunication was not published by Rome in the churches, and not given great prominence in the religious world, the presence of President Fallieres at the church would be "tolerated." The president will not be allowed to participate in the prescribed prayers and sacred rites, but he may pray individually. The Gaulois says further, the privacy of the function, because of the mourning of M. Lanes, will be accepted as a pretext by the members of the cabinet and other officials for not attending the church ceremony.

COUNT ZEPPELIN'S GREAT AIRSHIP TAKES FIRE AND IS COMPLETELY RUINED



ZEPPELIN'S AIRSHIP,
Which Made Such a Remarkable Flight, Emerging From Floating Dock.

Is Supposed to Have Been Struck by Lightning.

Broke Away From Mooring and Sailed Into the Air.

Caught Fire and Exploded and Fell to the Earth.

Stuttgart, Aug. 5.—During a storm today the Zeppelin airship broke away from its moorings, took fire and disappeared in the air.

Several persons were injured. Count Zeppelin, however, is safe.

It now appears that the airship exploded during a thunder storm at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Previous to exploding it burst into flames. It is supposed to have been struck by lightning. The latest report from Echterdingen says it is completely ruined.

The storm blew up unexpectedly. A fierce gust of wind tore the balloon from its anchorage and drove it in a southwesterly direction for some fifty yards. Here the rear end of the great fabric dropped and smoke and flames were seen to burst out from one end to the other. Then in a few seconds came the explosion and a great column of flames shot upward into the air.

This was followed by a crashing down to earth of the motors and frames that had been attached to the under side of the airship. Several bystanders were knocked down.

Two causes had conspired to make it necessary to land the airship at Echerdingen, the overheating of the piston box of the forward motor and the escape of considerable gas, owing to the fact that the count took the airship to a height of about 6,000 feet.

Descended for Repairs.

Stuttgart, Aug. 5.—Count Zeppelin's airship descended on a plateau near the village of Echterdingen, five miles south of this city, shortly before 8 o'clock this morning, owing to a defect in one of the motors. After an examination of the machinery, Count Zeppelin decided to send to Friedrichshafen for mechanics to make the necessary repairs, and for that reason the craft probably will be delayed here until 6 o'clock tonight. Two companies of grenadiers have been sent to picket a space around the airship to keep off the crowding villagers and country people, anxious to obtain a close view of the novel craft.

King Disappointed.

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 5.—The thousands of people who had waited since daybreak for the return of Count Zeppelin's airship from its record-breaking voyage were greatly disappointed when it became known, shortly after 10 o'clock, that the airship had been compelled to come down at Echterdingen. The king of Wurtemburg, who was one of those who had come out to the floating shed to which the balloon was expected to return, announced personally to the people in the launches and boats swarming around the shed that the balloon could not be expected back before tonight or tomorrow morning. A special will take three carloads of gas to Echterdingen. Twenty carloads are required to fill the giant balloon. From a reliable source the information was obtained that a defective motor was really responsible for the landing.

VETERAN OF G. A. R.

Count Zeppelin Served in Union Army During Civil War.

New York, Aug. 5.—It is not generally known that Count Zeppelin, whose mammoth airship is breaking all flying records in Germany, is a veteran

THE WIND DIES DOWN AND MICHEL IS AGAIN SAVED FROM THE FIRE FIEND

Flames Had Begun Sweeping Village Fanned by Fierce Gale.

One Hundred Thousand Feet of Timber Had Been Burned.

Train Starting Out Strikes Wall of Fire and Returns.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 5.—A special from Michel says that the wind, which was blowing from the west, driving the fire before it into the town, and threatening it with destruction, died away early this morning and the town is again safe for a time. Over 100,000 feet of mine timber, owned by the coal company, burned on the cars, and the fire spread rapidly throughout the rail-

RAN THROUGH THE FLAMES

Terrible Experience of Women in Getting Out of Fire.

Worst Not Yet Told of the Terrible Catastrophe.

Calgary, N. W. T., Aug. 5.—Mrs. George S. Crossman with her sister, Miss Maud Holman came in from Michel last night. On Saturday afternoon Mr. Crossman came in to say that the fire which has been raging in the bush for the last few days was threatening the city itself. Hastily they collected a few things, Mrs. Crossman carrying her little baby and took refuge in a fireproof warehouse where it was thought that they would be safe from the flames which were then rising from every part of the doomed town. Soon, however, an awful shower of sparks and burning pieces of wood began to have effect on the building and it was decided to remove all of the women to freight sheds where a train was being made to carry them to some unknown place of safety. Mrs. Crossman, however, waited until the very last, as her husband thought they would be safer where they were than anywhere else. At last the outlook became so threatening that it was imperative for them to seek another place of safety.

They therefore determined to cross to the sheds which were a mass of flames and board a train. Mrs. Crossman and her sister both soaked with water and a baby wrapped up in a wet

WELLMAN IS TO TRY AGAIN

Will Attempt to Reach the North Pole in a Balloon.

New York, Aug. 5.—Walter Wellman, who planned recently about going to the north pole in a dirigible balloon, said last night that he was planning to make the attempt next year. He said his airship, the America, built for polar atmospheric conditions, could easily travel from New York to Buffalo, Detroit, or even Chicago. It is, Mr. Wellman said, the second largest airship ever built, its 260,000 cubic feet being exceeded only by the Zeppelin.

"But in fuel-conveying capacity and radius of action the America exceeds the Zeppelin," continued Mr. Wellman. "The total lifting power of my ship is 19,500 pounds. I see no reason why the American should not remain fifty to sixty hours in the air and make a voyage of a thousand miles, carrying five tons of crew, fuel, etc., providing the wind conditions were not too unfavorable."

Mr. Wellman said he expected to bring the America to this country in the fall. It is now being put in order in Paris by his chief engineer.

GORE AND FLYNN ARE THE OKLAHOMA CANDIDATES.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 5.—United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, Democratic, of Lawton, and Dennis T. Flynn, Republican, of Oklahoma City, had no opposition in their parties for the nomination for United States senator in yesterday's primaries in this state to succeed Gore for the short term.

The principal interest centered in the race between Congressman Bird S. McGuire of Pawnee and Judge Bayard T. Hainer of Perry for the Republican congressional nomination in the First district. The indications this morning were that McGuire had received an overwhelming majority.

TO SPEAK IN LARGE CITIES

Bryan's Campaign Tour to Take in All the States.

Buffalo, Aug. 5.—William J. Bryan will make several campaign tours which will embrace nearly all parts of the country, speaking in most of the principal cities between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The candidate's itinerary is now under preparation by Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, who made known today the general plan of the tours. John W. Kern, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, will likely accompany Mr. Bryan on part of the trip and Chairman Mack hopes to arrange to have Mr. Kern speak with Mr. Bryan when he makes his visit to New York state. Mr. Mack said:

"While the present plans are tentative and subject to change, Mr. Bryan will make several tours, which will take in practically the whole United States. He will speak only in large cities and will not attempt to do the exhaustive work that he has done in other of his campaigns. Soon after the notification of Mr. Bryan in Lincoln he will speak in the middle section of the country, visiting Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and other cities.

"Later Mr. Bryan will go East, and on this trip I am planning to have Mr. Kern make a joint speaking tour with him.

"The Pacific coast states will also be visited by Mr. Bryan, probably after the trip in the East. No definite date for any of the cities have been set and will not be for some little time.

"Mr. Kern will be actively engaged during the campaign with speech-making trips through the principal parts of the country."

Chairman Mack is still engaged with the selection of the sub-committee of the national committee, which will have the direction of the Democratic campaign in Atlantic cities.

SUPERIOR NEWS

NEW COAL DOCK.

Monongahela River Coal Company May Build in Superior.

Alexander D. Dempster, president of the Monongahela River Coal company, and C. E. Wales, vice president of the Pittsburg Coal company spent yesterday, viewing the harbor and from remarks made by them it is believed Superior will have a new coal dock before another year has passed.

The Monongahela people are among the largest shipper of coal from the Pennsylvania mines, and it is believed that they intend to build at Superior soon, as they have no docks at the Head of the Lakes. Mr. Dempster seemed quite favorably impressed with several of the sites on the water front. It is said that on his return to his home, he will communicate with the parties owning the various sites, with a view to purchasing them to erect one of the most modern coal docks at the Head of the Lakes, if the company can secure the land it wishes. While on his trip about the harbor Mr. Dempster studied carefully the map of the harbor, so as to be well informed with the most suitable locations.

Postpone Building.

It was recommended last night at a meeting of the city council, that the erection of the new high school building be postponed until next year, unless the board of education can get a building for $225,000, the amount that has been appropriated. An additional $75,000 is needed to meet the lowest bid made by any contractor. It was proposed by the board to accept the bids submitted and have the contractors take bonds instead of cash for part payment. The contractors who submitted the lowest bids refused to do this, so rather than cut down the cost of the building, it may be deferred for a year.

Youths Must Not Buy.

Last evening at the meeting of the city council, an ordinance was passed making it an offense for a person under 18 years to misrepresent his age to a saloonkeeper, to get liquor. A fine of from $5 to $10 will be imposed upon any saloonkeeper who sells to persons under 18 years of age. This ordinance is in accordance with the state law.

Crushed by Cars.

Ole Leum of 2119 Wyoming avenue, Billings Park, superior, a car inspector employed by the Great Northern railroad, died last night at St. Mary's hospital from injuries received in the Superior yards at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was repairing some cars on what is known as the interstate track, when a locomotive moved them. He was caught beneath the car, his right leg being crushed close to the hip, and his right arm crushed at the shoulder. He also received internal injuries.

The Lie is Passed.

Trouble started last evening at the meeting of the city council after the clerk had finished reading the report from the board of public works, recommending the city council to authorize the buying of a gasoline road roller from the Austin Western company. One of the aldermen moved that the report be adopted. Alderman Shafer took the floor and explained at length what objections he had to gasoline engines. He was asked by Alderman McGinnis if he were talking for amusement. "During my years in the council, Shafer has been giving us pointers on his ideas of mechanism. He told us that in order for the speed of the cars to be reduced on Connor's Point, the motormen would have to readjust the motor," said Alderman McGinnis. Whereupon Alderman Shafer jumped to his feet and cried, "You are telling an infernal lie." The chairman then called for order.

CHILDREN KIDNAPED

Mother Flees From City With Two Daughters and Son.

Carrying out her oft-repeated threat that she would kidnap her three children, Mrs. Mary Ellen Campbell this morning placed her children on the 8:35 Northwestern train and took them to St. Paul. At the present time Mrs. Campbell is awaiting the departure of the evening train for Omaha, Neb., intending to take her children to Mont Rose, Colo.

It is not probable that the intention of Mrs. Campbell will be carried out. The authorities at St. Paul have been informed of the kidnaping of the three children, and a deputy sheriff will be prepared to arrest the woman as she attempts to leave the city.

Mrs. Campbell is the divorced wife of J. J. Campbell, formerly of this city, but at the present time living in Fargo, N. D. The decree granting the divorce ordered that the children should be in the custody of the parents for alternate periods. Each parent was to have the custody of the children at stated periods. At the present time the children are said to have been in the legal custody of the mother.

However, the court decreed that the children should not be taken from the state unless a written order to that effect was secured from the court. It is the violation of this order that will cause the arrest of Mrs. Campbell.

It is said that last night some rumor of the contemplated action of Mrs. Campbell was learned by Mrs. M. Sullivan, 109 West Fifth street, who is a sister of Mr. Campbell. She placed her information in the hands of Thomas Maguire, local manager of the Employers' Detective service, but it is said requested that he take no action until this morning. As a consequence Mrs. Campbell succeeded in leaving the city with her three children.

The utmost secrecy was observed by the woman in securing her tickets. The tickets were purchased under the name of Cannon it is said. Three full tickets and one half fare ticket were purchased by the woman, her destination being Mont Rose, Colo., where it is believed she has some relatives. The ages of the two girls are 15 and 6 years, while the boy is 12 years of age.

Some time last week it is said that the boy expressed a wish to go to his father. The mother refused to permit the boy to leave her. It is believed at that time she was planning flight with her children. The oldest girl was employed at William H. Sansam's butcher shop, 503 West Third street.

Mrs. Campbell had been staying at the Aerial hotel on Lake avenue, which is said to be conducted by her sister-in-law. Mrs. Campbell and the children remained there last night and it was from there that the departure from the city was made this morning.

Mr. Maguire traced the route of the woman by taking her picture to the various ticket offices. The authorities here were then placed in communication with St. Paul, and the woman will be arrested if she attempts to leave the state this evening.

Kodol will without doubt help anyone who has stomach disorders or stomach trouble. Take Kodol today for complete relief. Kodol is sold by all druggists.

MANY RESPONDED TO FIRST APPEAL

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The commissioners appointed by Governor Johnson to assume charge of the relief work in behalf of the cyclone-stricken village of Clinton, in Big Stone county, report that the first appeal for aid has met with a generous and prompt response from all parts of the state, and they desire now to make a final appeal for a grand closing rally which shall send the relief fund shooting up to proportions commensurate with the pressing need of the afflicted community.

The commission will meet at Clinton today to look over the existing situation and apportion some of the relief among the core needy.

J. H. Beck, secretary of the St. Paul Jobbers' & Manufacturers' association, one of the three commissioners appointed by the governor, reports that a total of $1,619 has been raised in St. Paul to date, principally in subscriptions of goodly size among the wholesalers. In the belief that a very large number of small individual subscriptions could be easily secured in a few days, if opportunity were provided for such subscriptions, Mr. Beck has presented the matter before the Commercial club, and a committee was appointed to urge the matter among the citizens.

It is hoped to raise at least another $1,000 in St. Paul in small subscriptions ranging from $1 to $10.

CLOUDBURST AT BISBEE

Bisbee, Ariz., Aug. 5.—The postoffice and all the business houses and offices one one side of Main street, for a distance of 200 yards, were wrecked yesterday by a cloudburst which swept down the mountainside a mass of mud and rocks. Document Over Twenty Years Old Causes Lawsuit.

A mistake in a deed over twenty years old is the cause of a lawsuit to settle the title to four lots in Endion division, which was started today. According to a complaint filed this morning, Milton S. Stewart gave a deed to Peter McKeever in 1886, transferring to him lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, in block 94, Endion division. According to the complaint the deed should have been for only three or these lots, numbers 2, 3 and 4. These are all McKeever paid for, and all Stewart intended to convey.

Stewart subsequently sold these lots, in ignorance of the wording of the deed to Samuel Croll, Emille Hoeffecker, Elizabeth A. Dewitt, Mary E. Moffat and Lovina P. Bastian, who are the plaintiffs in the action to quiet the McKeever title to the lots. Peter McKeever, to whom the deed is made, is now dead, and Mrs. Anna McKeever, his widow, and Edward McKeever, his son, are made the plaintiffs. The family deed is recorded in the office of the register of deeds.

The sale of over six million packages of a ten-cent article, the second year of its existence, indicates that it possesses extraordinary virtues. It is said that Blackburn's Cascarayal-Pills sold to that extent and made Mr. Blackburn, the man behind the pills, wealthy.

Orelands Mining Company Shipping in Mining Supplies to Mines.

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A carload of supplies has arrived here for the Orelands Mining company of Duluth, now operating in the Rice river district. The leases have been extended three years, and several drills are to be put to work at once. The location is five miles northeast of Aitkin.

Some of the prominent business men of the town are advocating the project of running an electric trolley line from Aitkin to the Rabbit Lake iron mine.

DEATH SURPRISES CROOKSTON

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. L. E. Cossman, aged 37 years, wife of ex-City and ex-County Attorney L. E. Cossman, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at 5:30 of blood poisoning, after an illness of but one day. She leaves a husband and five children. For the past twenty years she has been prominent in social circles here and her sudden demise has caused a great shock throughout the city, few having known that she was ill.

SAID HER MINISTER OF FERGUS FALLS

"Mrs. Smith, I Heard That You Were Nearly Dead, But You Don't Look so Now."

Yes, I was nearly dead. I have doctored with doctors in five towns and was given up to die. I suffered with heart trouble and dropsy. I was nervous, my circulation was almost stopped, my appetite was gone. I was dizzy, color was bad, and I was more dead than alive. Was unable to do my work for many years. Was in bed for nearly a whole year. I am now doctoring with Dr. Rea. I am on my way to see him. He has treated me a few months only and his treatment is working wonderful on me. When I told my last doctor that I doctored with, that I had quit him, and was doctoring with Dr. Rea, he said, "Well, I did all that I could do for you, and could not do more for you."

People are surprised to see me go around and look so well after having been an invalid so long and it is the talk of the town of what wonderful change has been made in me. Dr. Rea's medicines make me feel so good. They are certainly wonderful.

These are some of the words as said by Mrs. Smith. Her minister of Fergus Falls has asked her to notify him regularly as to how she is getting along, and that he wants to send patients to Dr. Rea and that if Dr. Rea is such a wonderful man, he wants to make it known to others.

We print, by permission the names of a few of Dr. Rea's many patients. These people represent the most respected people in the community in which they live.

Son of M. Mahrer of Perry, N. D., with an open sore in the left lung, passing almost through the body. A most remarkable case. Mrs. Mahrer traveled a long distance of nearly two hundred miles from Perry, N. D., to Alexandria, Minn., to see Dr. Rea. She writes on July 1st, that the boy is almost well. He has had so far, only four months' treatment. This case excites the curiosity of the most skeptical. Those that believe that such a disease could not be cured.

Charley Larson's son of five years old, suffering from diabetes, and it was said by local doctors to be absolutely incurable. Now well, after being three months in Dr. Rea's care.

Mrs. J. McMaster, 505 E. Superior St., Duluth, Minn., was cured of tubercular glands of the neck with Dr. Rea's famous hypodermic injection fluid. This hypodermic treatment is a wonderful one. Injecting medicine directly into the growth with a hypodermic needle, destroys the tubercular germs.

Mrs. W. M. Stafford's son of twelve years old at Harvey, N. D., a little puny diseased child with running sores in the legs, could hardly walk, had been that way for years, is also a notable cure.

Mrs. H. Bowers, Bemidji, Minn., R. No. 1. Cured of protruding piles. Says she would not take $1,000.00 for what Dr. Rea has done for her in a few treatments. She had given up hope of ever being cured.

Mrs. Christ Yost, Little Falls, Minn. Was cured of a very serious ailment of the stomach and heart. This case had developed so far that it was at one time thought to be cancer.

John Haller, Pierz, Minn. Operated on and cured of double cross eyes. Quickly done without pain, and without inconvenience to business.

Henry Wilkes, Little Falls, Minn. Cured of kidney trouble and bladder disease, that was injuring his health and was considered to be a hopeless case.

August Zutzs, Kimball Prairie, Minn. Cured of enlargement of the liver, stomach and bowel trouble.

Miss Hanna Sherberg, Black Duck, Minn., Box 710, writes: "The medicine of Dr. Rea is helping wonderful. I shall never forget him for what he has done for me."

N. M. Stafford's boy, of Harvey, N. D. Cured of ulcerated leg and hip joint diseases. Doctors wanted to take leg off. Dr. Rea said, there is no need of it, and cured him without.

Julius Wessler, St. Cloud, Minn. Cured of cancer of the face.

Joseph Breese, 100 6th St. Milwaukee, Wis. Cured permanently by Dr. Rea, of a very serious ailment. Dr. Rea saw him once each month at the Pfister hotel, where Dr. Rea makes his usual appointment.

J. C. Kendrick, Hortense, Ga. Cured of chronic piles.

J. P. Dunisky, Willow River, Minn. Cured of stomach trouble and disease that had affected his nerves considerably. Is doing much good for Dr. Rea, and sending him patients, where he sees them at Duluth.

Minneapolis, Minn., August 5, 1908. Special to The "Herald."

Dr. Rea will make his next regular professional visit to Duluth, St. Louis Hotel, Saturday, August 8th. Those desiring to see him may take the advantage of this opportunity and consult this eminent specialist close to their homes.

MARINE NEWS

OPEN BRIDGE TO TRAFFIC

Cars Will Run Over New Draw of Interstate Structure.

Northern Pacific Bridge is Again Closed to Trains.

The Interstate bridge, which has been closed to traffic for two years, will be thrown open to street cars, teams and pedestrians tomorrow morning, according to the statements of Great Northern officials today. The new draw was first swung shut two weeks ago and since that time, a force has been at work planking the bridge, laying rails, stringing trolley wires and completing the operator's tower. It is expected that all of that work will be completed today and cars will run over the bridge tomorrow morning for the first time since the draw went down under the force of a blow from the steamer Troy.

There will be some changes in the running time of street cars on account of the bridge being reopened, since it has been down, the street railway has transferred its passengers to a ferry, which operated between Rice's point and Connors' point.

The signal for opening the Interstate draw is one long, one short and one long whistle, an dthe United States engineers' office will call the attention of mariners to the observance of it. The bridge operator will signal before opening the bridge, repeating the signal of the boat if the way is clear.

A break in the machinery, which had been improperly adjusted, put the Northern Pacific bridge out of commission again last night and trains are again passing over the Grassy Point bridge today.

It is not known just how long the repairs will take, but the bridge will be in commission again within a few days undoubtedly. It was opened to train traffic Sunday.

GOOD TOURIST BUSINESS.

Boats Are Carrying Many Passengers and Little Freight.

The steamer North West, the big passenger boat of the Northern Steamship company, arrived in port last night with 217 passengers, leaving again last night with 207 for the down trip.

Vessel agents continue to be well pleased with the passenger business and not so optimistic about the freight. Package freight, in common with bulk freight, has given little profit to the vessel owners this year. The westbound business is fairly good but eastbound cargoes have fallen down considerably, with no immediate prospects for better things. Most of the line boats have found part cargoes of grain for the return trips, relieving the slackness in the package freight business.

Repairing Wolvin.

The small Wolvin of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet, which went ashore in Portage river last week, is now being repaired at the Superior shipyards. The repairs to be made now are of little consequence and the boat will be back in commission tomorrow or Friday.

COULDN'T STAND ILL-HEALTH.

Man Kills Himself With Large Sum of Money on Person.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—With more than $1,000 in his pockets and papers showing he was a man of some means, Miller McClellan, whose home is thought to be in Hamilton, Ind., committed suicide early yesterday by shooting himself at Eleventh avenue north and Irving avenue, Minneapolis. Before ending his life he wrote two notes, giving the motive for seeking death and directions disposing of his property.

The body was found in a small grove by a telephone lineman, who notified the police and coroner. The body was sent to the morgue.

Among the papers were two notes, alike, one addressed to his brother, Clyde McClellan, and another to the public. They read:

"For God's sake, don't tell my folks how it happened, it would kill them. Poor health made me do it. I have plenty of money in the bank. Notify my brother, Clyde McClellan."

The man was about 40 years old, had brown hair and mustache and was dressed in a good dark blue suit. It is thought he was solicitor for an insurance company.

Lyceum—"Strongheart."

"Strongheart."

"Strongheart" which the Mack-Leone players are giving at the Lyceum this week is the best thing they have ever done. The play teems with College life. It opens in the rooms of some college young men where a number of young women are to be entertained. The characters of the sophomore, freshman and the "grind," etc., are all so well done that every college man lives again his college days. And then the football training quarters with the battered team between the halves getting the terrific and picturesque roasting of the coach trying to put "ginger" into them for the next half. What football player can not recall the scene duplicated in his experience? "Strongheart" will be the bill for the balance of the week, with a bargain matinee on Saturday.

RANCHER SAVES TRAIN.

Carried Water in Rubber Boots to Extinguish Bridge Fire.

Buford, N. D., Aug. 5.—The Great Northern railroad certainly should give a medal to a ranchman by the name of George Thompson living near here, as his heroic work prevented the burning of a large trestle near here just before No. 2, the Oriental Limited from the West hove in sight. Thompson used his rubber boots to carry water to put out the fire. He kept the fire under control until No. 2 arrived. Then the engine was used to put out the fire, a hose and steam being turned on the fire. The bridge is a long one.

JOY FOR THE NIMRODS.

The North Dakota Prairie Chicken "Crop" to be Fine.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is joy among the nimrods of the Northwest over the reports of prairie chicken shooting going to be fine this year.

Owing to the exceptionally early spring the prairie chicken "crop" is not only large but the birds are fat and plump this year and hunters who are making preparations for the opening of the season on Sept. 1, are anticipating some rare sport.

While there has been some illegal shooting which always carries off some birdds, the true sportsman is always willing to abide by the law and wait for the actual opening of the season.

Concerted action will be taken this year in an effort to apprehend all professional pot hunters who make it a practice to leave their haunts in the East about this time of the year and migrate to this section of the country, where they live on the fat of the land, and any of these offenders who are caught may be sure that no mercy will be shown for a professional pot hunter usually makes a specialty of not only breaking the game laws but also ,generally, can be depended upon to break other laws and is at all times a dangerous man to be running at large.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

HIS STATUS UP IN AIR

Crookston Alderman Resigns and Then He Changes His Mind.

City Attorney Holds That the Position is Thereby Vacant.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council last evening called a special election for Sept. 21 to vote upon $7,500 bonds for the erection of the bridge to Sampson's addition, across the Red Lake river, and $6,000 bonds to complete the repairs upon the city jail, council chambers and firehall, the bonds to be issued in the sum of $500 each, to run ten years, and draw 5 per cent interest. Polk county will have to pay half the cost of the bridge, which it is estimated will cost $15,000.

The resignation of Thomas Morris as chief of the fire department was accepted and the office declared vacant, and as a result the Crookston fire department has no chief. The acceptance came about as the result of a ruling on the part of City Attorney O'Brien that under the charter the council had no choice in the matter, but that when a resignation was handed in the council should at once declare the office vacant.

This raised the question as to the status of Alderman Leahy of the Fifth ward. He tendered his resignation at a meeting some weeks ago, and no action was taken on it at that meeting. At the next meeting Alderman Leahy withdrew the resignation before the council took any action.

City Attorney O'Brien holds that the council has but one course to pursue—declare the office vacant. The council did not know where it was at on the subject last evening, and finally adjourned without taking any action.

As Alderman Leahy acted as chairman of the city board of equalization after he had tendered his resignation, there is some question as to what the legal status of Alderman Leahy is. At present he is in Canada on a visit, and it is probable no further action will be taken till his return.

WHOLE FAMILY LOST IN LAKE

R. J. Hume, Wife and Child of Lake Nebagamon Are Drowned.

Lake Nebagamon, Wis., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—That R. J. Hume, wife and child, of this city, were drowned in Lake Nebagamon, Sunday evening, while attempting to cross the lake in a duck boat, was confirmed last evening by the finding of the bodies of Mrs. Hume and the baby in the lake.

When they failed to return home Sunday night, a search was started for them, resulting in the finding of the upturned boat and the two bodies floating on the lake. Mr. Hume's body has not yet been recovered.

Mr. Hume was 24 years old, and belonged to one of the most prominent families of Eau Claire. He was former president of this village and, perhaps, the most prominent man in this section. Mrs. Hume was 22 years old and the baby 3 years old.

Outgoing Ashland Trains Crowded With People Going Berrying.

Ashland, Wis., Aug. 5.—The berry crop, especially the red raspberry crop, is large this year. On some of the out-going trains, it's difficult to get seats, the cars are so filled up with berry pickers. People who make a business of it, are making good money. The blueberry crop does not appear to be so good, but some splendid berries are being brought into the city, and the crop is by no means a failure as was reported some weeks ago. Along some of the inland streams, hundreds of bushels of "pin" cherries go to waste annually, but they are receiving some attention this year. These cherries resemble choke cherries, but are bright red, and are not "puckery," as the choke cherries are. They make splendid sauce or jelly.

Persons of National Reputation Give Some Advice.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A meeting of the state board of control was held yesterday at which several addresses, containing valuable suggestions for the betterment of public institutions, were given by persons of national reputation, working in that line. Dr. M. N. Voldeng of Cherokee, Iowa, spoke on the "State Board of Administration of Public Institutions;" W. S. Leavett spoke on "Troubles of the Board of Control in Their Relation to Friction and Superintendents;" J. J. Dow on "Libraries and Reading Matter for the Blind," and Miss Miriam E. Corey of Vinton, Iowa, on "Institution Libraries."

Miss Corey in her addrdess dwelt at some length on the care that should be taken in selecting books for public institutions of learning and offered many practical suggestions along that line.

In his talk, Mr. Leavett spoke of the unfriendly feeling which sometimes exists between the state boards and the superintendents of the various public institutions. He suggested as a remedy for this evil that the board be sure of any measure that they might adopt for the regulation of the institution, and they were absolutely positive of the results.

A MUCH BETTER WAY.

Hibbing Tribune: Should the Standard Oil gang get a year or two in the penitentiary as a substitute for that $29,000,000 fine, the public could well afford to forget Judge Grosscup's reversal.

The public could indeed, in that event, forget the Grosscup decision; though it is well not to forget it, since its rebuke to sensational methods on the bench is an assurance that fair play is still the rule of American life, and that even the most heinous offender among the corporations can be confident of ultimate justice.

What the Hibbing paper says of the Standard Oil company's officers and this particular offense is true of all the great corporations and of all their offenses. The law presumes a corporation to be an individuality, a law-made person; else it would not punish it for its misdeeds. Yet it is not a person, and never can be made one. It has no conscience, no patriotism, no public spirit; it is nothing but a man-made machine for turning opportunity into riches, and it should be dealt with accordingly.

Obviously, if a corporation has no conscience to appeal to, no patriotism to arouse and no sense of shame to be invoked, it is perfectly absurd to try to punish it for offenses which its engineers have made to do. If a traction engine should get balky, under a bad engineer, blow up and kill a bystander, it would be just as sensible to sentence that engine to a year in prison or to endure a hundred lashes at the whipping post, as it is to impose punishment upon the Standard Oil company for offenses that certain well known individuals have made it do.

Nothing is to be gained by punishing the corporation, therefore. If a man is caught in crime, exposed to public scorn and punished for his misdeed, it may be that the shame of it will awaken his sleeping conscience; but the corporation has no sense of shame and no conscience to bestir. This, however, does not banish hope; for, if the corporation does wrong, it is because its engineers have made it do wrong. Clearly, the engineers and not the engine should be punished.

The American people, irritated beyond measure by the arrogance of institutions like the Standard Oil company, relished the severity of the Landis fine. It sounded like adequate punishment at last; long delayed, but better late than never. Yet the pronouncement of the fine merely precipitated a financial crisis, helping to bring on a panic followed by months of depression; and now, a year later, it has been revoked by a ruling which the majority of lawyers and levelheaded laymen seem to consider sound. If the fine had ever been paid, innocent stockholders who had nothing to do with the crimes of the corporation would have borne the punishment unless, as was more likely, the oil trust had passed it on to the public in the form of higher prices.

The authorities should stop trying to punish the senseless engine, and should go after the engineers. A single penitentiary sentence for a high offender would do more good than a billion dollars in fines.

A BASEBALL SERMON.

In a discussion of baseball affairs the sporting editor of The Herald, perhaps without intention, preached a strong sermon in his gossip last evening, when he said, in reference to the Brandon baseball club: "There isn't a sensational fielder in the entire Brandon outfit. They plod along, however, get nearly everything in sight, and then go in and swat the ball for further orders and many runs."

A glance at the standing of the clubs composing the Northern league shows the other end of this sermon—the moral, if you will. Brandon has a percentage of .629 and a good, safe lead over all the other contestants. In other words, though its club contains no brilliant or sensational fielders, they win: which is, after all, the object of playing the game.

It isn't always the brilliant or sensational player or worker who gets the farthest. The sensational fellow may make an occasional "grandstand," winning much applause, but he is apt to be spasmodic and fitful. The man that gets along further if not faster is the man that "plods along, gets nearly everything in sight, and then goes in and swats the ball for further orders and many runs." It is the runs that count; and the winning club is very likely to lack sensational players, but to contain plenty of the kind that keep right on going, getting nearly everything in sight, and that "swat the ball" for many runs.

This is true not only in baseball, but in the more serious affairs of life. The sensational worker is pretty to look at, but the man that plods along, reaches quietly out and pulls in nearly everything in sight, swats the ball and gets many runs, is the man that pulls victory out of defeat, whether it is baseball or business.

A NATIONAL CURRENCY CONVENTION.

The Merchants' association of New York has taken preliminary steps for a national currency reform convention, in which the business and financial interests of the country will be asked to participate; and if such a convention can be made truly representative of all the American people and all their interests, it should be a very valuable gathering, productive of much good to the country.

The need of such a gathering was made evident by the reluctance of congress at its last session to consult the real needs of the people in considering currency legislation, and is emphasized by the recently announced decision of Chairman Aldrich, of the joint commission of congress to investigate the world's currency system, that nothing is needed in this country but a few trifling amendments to the measure passed last winter, and that there is no occasion for a complete overhauling of the currency system. This is not encouraging at all, and promises little from the work of this commission, though its members are going to make an extensive European trip at government expense to get information which they could find in any well-equipped library in this country.

The Merchants' association of New York has written to 7,500 leading business firms throughout the United States suggesting the need of such a convention in some principal Western city, in order to give expression to the demands of the business community for effective and permanent reform of the nation's currency system. If the consensus of opinion favors the proposed convention, the chambers of commerce, boards of trade and other mercantile organizations of a number of the principal cities will be invited to attend a preliminary conference at which plans for the convention will be matured; after which a general call for the proposed gathering will be issued, signed by the organizations which are parties to the preliminary conference. All of the business organizations of the United States, 800 in number, will be asked to send delegates.

Such a gathering would undoubtedly develop the real extent of the demand for currency reform, and it might possibly, also, develop something tangible in the way of suggestions. However, it is to be expected that a vast discordance of views will be discovered when any such convention begins deliberating, though it is possible that full and fair discussion would in the end harmonize these conflicting views to some extent, bringing forth something of real tangible benefit from which to make a start toward a currency reform that will serve the real and best interests of all sections and all interests. The trouble with congressional investigations thus far, as made evident by last winter's results, is that the busy finger of Wall street has too great an influence. Wall street is not the country, important though it is; and often its advantage is the disadvantage of the masses of the people.

The preliminary letter sent out from New York requests answers to these three questions: Is such a convention desirable? In what city should it be held? In what month should it be held? Upon the nature of the replies depends whether a convention will be held, and where it will be convened.

SENATOR ALLISON.

The death of William Boyd Allison, United States senator from Iowa, removes from the halls of congress one of its best known, if not one of its greatest figures. Senator Allison was the "father of the senate," having served in that body for a longer period than any other member. He began his legislative service as a member of the Thirty-eighth congress, to which he was elected in 1862, and in 1873, when many of the active public men of today were mere lads, he was sent to the senate, in which he has served continuously ever since. Only a few weeks ago he and his friends brought to a triumphant conclusion a bitter contest for the senatorship with Governor Cummins.

Senator Allison has always been a conspicuous member of the national legislature. His native abilities were recognized early in his congressional career by his appointment to the important ways and means committee, and ever since he has been a powerful member of the Republican organization in congress. He was an ultra-conservative; cautious at all times in his expressions of opinion, and pretty certain to be well-grounded in his views when he was ready to utter them. Many stories illustrating his excessive caution have been told, such as this reply to the passing remark of a companion that some sheep in a nearby field had recently been sheared: "They do seem to be sheared on this side." This is probably an exaggeration, but it illustrates his reputation for conservatism. This tendency became even more pronounced in his later years, and as his senatorial activities dealt largely with matters of finance, his conservatism had its uses. Yet he was, fortunately, out of touch with the spirit of the times, and nothing but his long service, his advanced age and his powerful position at Washington saved him from defeat in the recent contest with Cummins.

DON'T JUDGE HASTILY.

The organization of corporations which is supplying free to newspapers matter intended to be damaging to municipal ownership makes much in its latest batch of "copy" of the traction situation in Cleveland. It says: "Semi-municipal ownership does not seem to be giving the satisfaction that was anticipated. The Municipal Traction company is really the city of Cleveland disguised to evade a state law, and according to the Cleveland papers it is defying state laws and city ordinances in a way that would bring Mayor Johnson into action in ten minutes if the lawbreaker were an ordinary corporation." Then this prejudiced report proceeds to criticise in detail the management of the traction company, quoting local papers which have been accused of being friendly to the private owners of public utilities in Cleveland.

Any attempt to make conspicuous use of the municipal ownership idea is certain to be the subject of attack and criticism and defamation from the source from which come the remarks quoted above. Besides the criticisms made by the friends of private ownership in this particular screed, reports have covered the country of late that the 3-cent fare experiment in Cleveland is a failure and that the company is about to raise the fare to 5 cents, or perhaps to six rides for a quarter. There is evidence that some of these reports come from sources that are prejudiced and that would like nothing better than to see the Johnson experiments in Cleveland go to smash.

It must be remembered, in considering these rumors, that the 3-cent fare experiment has been in operation little more than three months, and that during a part of that time profits have been slaughtered by a strike. It is entirely too soon to tell whether or not the experiment is a success, and the public may well withhold judgment until there has been a fair trial, meanwhile regarding with suspicion reports coming from interested sources. Says the Pittsburg Dispatch: "As a matter of fact, the reports about the failure of Cleveland's experiment appear to have come from the newspaper organs of the interest that will profit by the failure of the experiment, and which is accused for that reason of having inspired the strike. Other reports of the meetings of the directors of the Municipal Traction company tell a materially different story. They state that the deficit for May, caused by the strike, was materially decreased in June, while the officers of the company assert that the figures for July will show the operation to be without loss. The fact is set forth that the reduction in fares has resulted in an increase of 100,000 passengers per day. The discussion of the directors is stated to have been on propositions to make a flat 2½-cent fare without transfers, or a sale of nine tickets for a quarter, and 3 cents cash fare with an extra charge of a cent for transfers. There is a wide difference betwen this and the reported purpose of restoring the old 5-cent fare."

HOTEL GOSSIP.

L. C. Weaver, representing Huntley & Dowd of New York is at the Lenox hotel. Since the first of June Mr. Weaver has covered the United States from New York to the Pacific coast, the Middle West and the Southwestern states. In his trip he had an opportunity to observe both the business and political progress of the country during the past two months.

"Despite the fact that Wall street is suffering heavy odds on the election of Taft," said Mr. Weaver, "I am not so sure that his election is assured at this time you know that Wall street has not the reputation of being the shrewdest bettor in the world. I am inclined to believe that in regard to the coming election the men of Wall street are led almost as much by their desires as they are by their candid and unbiased judgment. I will admit that it looks as if Judge Taft should be the logical favorite in the betting, but it is foolish in my opinion to install him as favorite at the odds offered by wall street.

I am speaking entirely upon my own opinion. You see my opinion was formed after I left New York city and is entirely free from any prejudice. I don't think the same can be said of the opinions formed in New York. I found on the Pacific coast a strong following for Bryan. California, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming seem to be very favorable to Bryan, but whether they will give him Democratic majority in that part of the country, I cannot say. But from what opinion I gathered Bryan should poll a very heavy vote on the coast and far western states. Out West, you know, they are for a revision of the tariff, and the people are of the opinion that the Democratic party will carry out its promise in this regard, if it is placed in power.

"Of course the South is normally Democratic. There is much talk of the breaking up of the solid South, by the Republican leaders. If Theodore Roosevelt had received the nomination for a third term, there might have been some soundness to this claim on the part of the Republicans. But with Taft as the nominee of the Republican party I don't believe there will be any material change in the alignment of votes in the Southland. If you should have my honest opinion upon the subject, I would say that I believe that Bryan will run better than he did in either of his two former campaigns.

"The South and the far western states took in the extent of my territory. It might have been that I happened to travel in strong Democratic communities, but in covering a territory as wide as the one which I have just covered, it is hardly probable that one would be apt to get only local opinion.

"Now as to business. I found that the business of the country, in the West especially, has made great progress within the past two months. For instance, in Washington and the other coast states the lumber trade is beginning to revive. Mills that have been shut down since the tightness of money last October have opened and the shipping of lumber to the East has been resumed upon a slight scale. It is only a question of time in my mind when the movement of lumber east will have reached the figures that applied before money tightness and a prohibitive freight tariff caused the mills to close and the lumber operations to cease.

"The South is feeling a revival of business. Many of the mills that have not turned a wheel since the first days of the money stringency last fall are preparing to resume operations. Crop conditions are looking very good. The outlook for increased business is very bright and the confidence of the business men of the South is the one thing that impresses you with the fact that the effects of the panic are slowly but gradually leaving. Industries of the country free to return to their normal state.

The mystery of the sea going hack.

This is the mystery of the midnight hack, or how the driver failed to collect the fare. Someone was telling the story at the St. Louis hotel. The person who was telling the story didn't state whether he was the person who failed to pay the fare.

Anyway, the hack driver picked up the belated fare at the corner of Fourth avenue west and Superior street. The fare informed the hack driver that he wanted to go out to the East end. Suffice it to say that the belated traveler wanted to go a considerable distance beyond Twenty-fourth avenue east. The hour was late and the driver was tired, but he thought that here was a generous tip above the regular, so he rubbed his eyes and started for the address given.

Wearily his nags climbed the long ascent that leads to the top of Twenty-fourth avenue. Swiftly the hack descended the incline on the other side of the avenue. Then the hack drew up to the avenue mentioned by the rather sleepy passenger and wearily the hack driver alighted and opened the door of his sea going hack.

Then he rubbed his weary eyes, rubbed them again and uttered an exclamation that Beatrice Fairfax would shudder at. Hack drivers sometimes use these expressions. Anyway, this hack driver swore some, for there was nobody in the hack—not any material likeness of the sleepy man who had climbed into the hack at Fourth avenue west.

Of course, there was nothing to do but drive back to the city. The hack driver kept his weather eye out for the man who had quietly slipped out of the hack, but scan the shadows of the street as he did, he failed to see any sign of the man who sent him on the six-mile drive.

The question is, how far did the man send the hack driver beyond the place he alighted at? Maybe the sleepy man slipped out shortly after the hack started. But it doesn't seem as if any man who had read Black Beauty would send two hack horses on a hill climbing contest like that.

THE WEATHER.

Though a poet emptied his vocabulary of extravagant adjectives, he would find it a hard task to give an adequate description to the summer weather that Duluth has had yesterday and today; and more like it is promised for tomorrow. Yesterday the highest temperature was 76 degs., and a brisk breeze kept it fine and cool. This morning it was again fine and cool and pleasant, and the weather man looks for fine weather tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today it was cool and fine.

The sun rose this morning at 4:52 and sets tonight at 7:35, making 14 hours and 43 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Light to copious rains fell throughout the eastern lake region, Ohio valley, Southern states and Utah during Tuesday or last night, as a result of slight barometric depressions central over the lake region and Arizona. Buffalo experienced a severe thunder squall last night, the wind attaining a velocity of sixty miles per hour from the southwest. High temperatures continued in the Central valley states. The barometer is highest off the Oregon coast, but pressures are falling again and that of the temperature is rising from Montana northward. Indications favor a continuance of fine weather in this locality tonight and Thursday."

SUNNY GEMS.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Why do poets wear long hair?"

"Well, how many poets do you know who can afford a hair cut?"

Baltimore American: "I heard your wife read the other day. She knows how to touch a man, doesn't she?"

"Oh, yes; she can 'touch' a fellow all right."

Philadelphia Press: "But," said the judge, "you provoked the fight."

"No, I didn't," replied Cassidy, the prisoner.

"But you struck the first blow. Why did you do that?"

"Bekase he said to me: 'If I'm wan, ye're another,' and so I soaked him."

Chicago Tribune: The youthful George Washington had just confessed that he could not tell a lie.

"But wait till I get a motor boat," he said to himself, "and let somebody ask me how much it costs me a year to run it!"

Nashville American: "A woman always says, 'is my hat on straight.' "

"Not always."

"No; sometimes she says 'Is my waist all buttoned in the back?"

Indianapolis News: "Why don't you select some flower as your party emblem?" asked the girl with the artistic ideas.

"We don't need any flowers," answeredd the New York politician. "If we have to adopt an emblem, my suggestion would be the pie-plant."

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Mr. Millyuns, I cannot live without your daughter."

"Oh, yes, you can, Duke. I'll be pleased to get you a job as motorman on one of my lines."

Detroit Free Press: "For heaven's sake," asked the mother, "what is the matter with Willie? He's crying so."

"Willie is suffering from sonstroke," replied the father, who had just finished spanking him.

Baltimore American: "The king of Denmark must lead a dog's life of it."

"Why so?"

"Why not? Isn't he a Great Dane?"

Philadelphia Press: "You know," said the lady novelist, "I like the exclamation point, and it gets me out of lots of trouble."

"How?" asked a sympathizing listener.

"Punctuating is not my strong point," replied the lady novelist, "so I fall back on the exclamation point. It is my Old Point Comfort."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1888.

•••Nearly all the 3,500 laborers who went on strike for an advance of wages to $1.75 a day returned to work this morning, the contractors agreeing to pay that amount. Some of the men did not want to return unless the wages were placed at $2, but after listening to speeches by Mayor Sutphin and E. C. Swansthrom, the mayor stating that if any men wanted to work at $1.75 he would see they were protected, it was decided by a large majority to accept $1.75. This morning about 400 of the strikers gathered at Fourth avenue west, determined to inaugurate a new strike and compel the men to demand $2 a day. Chief of Police Doran quickly arrived on the scene and addressed the men, telling them that the contractors and their leaders had agreed on $1.75, and no more would be paid. "The city authorities," said Chief Doran, "have treated you like white men, and have stood by you. Now, I want you to distinctly understand that parading around the streets and stopping men from work has got to stop. If you want to strike, go home and strike, but don't attempt to interfere with anyone, or I'll arrest every man I can get hold of." Mr. Wolf said he would give them work as fast as he was able at $1.75 a day. The crowd, after cheering Doran and Wolf, dispersed.

•••Gen. Phil Sheridan died today at his residence at Monquitt, Mass. The funeral will take place at Washington. The general had a dislike to display in funerals, and the ceremonies will be as simple a possible, but governed by the military code.

•••J. J. Heinner, the Hayes block decorater, has been called to Chicago by the death of his father.

•••Mr. and Mrs. H. Sattler and the Miss Bergman, all of St. Paul, are spending a few days in Duluth visiting Mr. and Mrs. I. Freimuth.

•••Ben White, the well-known lumberman and former Duluthian, is in the city. He now makes his home in Grand Rapids, Mich.

•••The laborers at the Lackawanna docks struck yesterday for 30 cents per hour. They had been getting 25 cents. The advance was granted after a few hours' delay.

•••Capt. Snider of Minneapolis is making a determined canvass for the Republican nomination for congress, with a fair show of success.

•••The fight between Tommy Warren and John McGill, the featherweights, at the People's theater, last night, resulted in McGill being knocked out in the second round. James Murnane was referee, and the timekeepers were A. M. Miller, Jr., and Fred Hayes.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Fairmont Sentinel: Bryan isn't running against a McKinley or a Roosevelt. If Taft goes out of Minnesota with 40,000 to the good he will do well.

Little Falls Herald: The farmer has as much right to have a reasonable profit guaranteed him as the manufacturer, but the Republican platform makes a favored son of the manufacturer.

Park Rapids Clipper (Rep.): Bryan got a very large majority of the votes at the Denver convention and Governor Johnson only got 46 out of 1,006. But Governor Johnson came home with the good will of all the delegates and W. J. Bryan as well, for the plucky way in which he conducted his campaign against steam roller opposition and the manly courtesy with which he accepted his overwhelming defeat. Mr. Bryan is out of politics in November, 1908, and Mr. Johnson is in line for the empty honor of a Democratic nomination in 1912.

Eveleth Star: Not in the history of St. Louis county has there ever been a more united or more harmonious feeling of all the range citizens to pull together for the county's best interests. Let there be nothing to mar or in any way destroy this healthful sentiment.

Middle River Pioneer: The people of Minnesota are not caring so much about whether the prospective governor eats pie with a knife as whether they will be able to eat pie at all.

Hutchinson Leader: The Republican county press is giving Jacobson only a half-hearted support and is roasting Mills, nominee for railway commissioner, to a turn—as hopeful signs of independence as Missouri going Republican.

Redwood Reveille: The time is past when the political boss can drive voters to the polls to vote for his tools. People are beginning to think for themselves and the more they think the less they will have to do with the ward healer and boss.

Grand Rapids Independent: The Democrats are working the "combination with questionable interests" racket against J. F. Jacobson, candidate for governor. And unless the sphinx like attitude of the party leaders is broken soon they may make it stick.

Waseca Herald: Bryan is a man of whom every American citizen may well be proud. Morally, intellectually, patriotically, courageously, he has no superior. His election must depend upon the honest men of America regardless of party prejudice—party slavery. Every man can afford to vote for Bryan and thus put his seal of condemnation upon the boodlers, known as the Wall street gang.

Sauk Center Herald: The United States courts have ruled that the exchange of advertising for railroad mileage is unlawful. This ruling is in line with the anti-pass law and will be welcomed by every self respecting newspaper man in the country. If an editor wants to travel let him pay cash; if the roads want to advertise let them do the same. The old plan of exchange gave the roads the long end of the deal, and also placed the newspaper publisher under obligations to the roads.

ADVERTISING MINNESOTA.

Washington Herald: "It is true that the Republican candidate for the governorship of Minnesota eats with his knife, or at least I have seen an account of it in the papers," said Henry H. Heinrichsen, a lumberman, of Fergus Falls, Minn., who is at the Raleigh. Mr. Heinrichsen has visited Maine on business and thought "he would run down to Washington before going home."

Referring to the incident, Mr. Heinrichsen said that all our early presidents ate with their knives. He said:

"Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe—each shoveled in his food with his knife. John Quincy Adams was the first president who ate with his fork. And his wife felt it necessary to explain to the guests at the White House that Mr. Adams had learned to eat with his fork while in France, and that he couldn't overcome the habit. Andrew Jackson restored the republican simplicity of eating with his knife. They all poured their tea or coffee into their saucers to cool it. Some historians say that Gen. Taylor, when he was president, could be seen in the streets of Washington early in the morning with a market basket on his arm, going from one butcher to another and bargaining for a steak or a rib roast. If he had bargained less persistently he might have served out his term, for I understand that it was owing to the inferior quality of the cherries he ate on the Fourth of July, 1850, that sickness attacked him and he died on the 9th of July.

"How do I know these incidents? Well, we must be ready to answer our political opponents if they should bring in the charge that eating with a knife was not the proper thing.

"Johnson is a good man, but he will not be able to bring Minnesota to Bryan; no, never. If Johnson himself had been nominated, that would be a different story; I believe he would have been elected if nominated. I don't see any reason why Taft should not win out. At least, that's the way we look at it in Minnesota."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman could stand being fat if all other women were fatter.

If nobody will lead a man into temptation he has to do it himself.

The trouble with being in love with a girl is how many times a minute you have to tell her so.

The only people who worry for fear you think they haven't brains are those who haven't any.

Some women wouldn't wear sheath skirts unless they could fit them with magnifying glasses.

Change.

Why do I choose to take a ship
And sail to some far foreign shore,
When I by rail might make a trip
And see as much at home, or more?
Why do I my own land ignore
And fly to Europe's continent?
Well, home in time becomes a bore,
I just want something different.

PROSPERITY FOR FUTURE

Interstate Commerce Official Proclaims Recent Panic a Blessing.

Very Many People Have Learned How to be Economical.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 5.—Prosperity, better and safer than the United States has ever known, is foreseen for the next decade by Prof. Henry C. Adams, for twenty years in charge of statistics and accounts for the interstate commerce commission. Prof. Adams is recognized as one of the closest students of industrial and financial conditions in the employ of the government. He is thoroughly acquainted with business affairs throughout the land.

The commission's expert has reached the conclusion that business in all lines will soon return to normal conditions, to be succeeded quickly by extraordinary prosperity in every line. Both capital and labor are, in his opinion, on the dawn of a new day.

Depression a Blessing in Disguise.

Prof. Adams declares that the holder of stocks is about "to come into his own." He regards the depression that followed the panic of last October as a blessing in disguise, in that it will insure economy by preventing the return of reckless confidence that was engendered by too much and long continued good times.

"We are now almost through the business depression," he said today. "It was preceded by a perior of intense business activity. Inevitably during such periods men lose more or less of their caution. In such times everything seems prosperous and the future promising, and there is less care taken to watch details of management and expenditure. So when the depression comes and revenues fall away the managers cast about for means to reduce expenses.

Economy Practice is Beneficial.

"They have been finding out for the larger part of a year where to make economies; where they were permitting part of their money to go into avoidable expense. They have been taking in the slack, getting things on the safe and secure basis. It has been a severe experience, but, from the standpoint of the shareholder, it has been really a good thing.

"The depression will end and business will be good again. Its volume in the next cycle will be greater than ever. But the lesson of this period of enforced economies will not be soon unlearned. The increasing revenues paralleled off against columns showing reduced expenditures in many ways. There will be greater care and economy with the result that the stockholder will have a larger share of prosperity coming to him."

Less Disaster in Future.

Prof. Adams is a firm believer in the periodical recurrence of panics, which he believes come with almost clockwork regularity every twenty years, with smaller financial depressions intervening. He points to the panic of 1873 and 1893 as proof of his theory, and he has marked a danger signal over against the year 1913. The flurry of last fall he puts down as merely one of the disturbances that fill in between the real upheavals.

It is acknowledged by Prof. Adams that the closer connections established between business and transportation concerns will render future panics less disastrous than in the past. The strong will uphold the weak when crises arrive, he says. This will not be an indication of the arrival of the millenium, but merely an exhibition of economic wisdom, for it will tend to restore confidence. And when confidence walks abroad, says Prof. Adams, panics take to cover.

WRIGHT FOR THE ANANIAS CLUB

Roosevelt Issues Flat Denial of the Secretary's Statement.

New York, Aug. 5.—Secretary of War Luke E. Wright appears to have been placed in nomination for membership in the Ananias club by a statement issued from Sagamore Hill, in which his declaration that President Roosevelt had ordered the eight West Pointers found guilty of hazing to be reinstated is flatly denied.

Secretary Wright stated unequovically after a visit to Sagamore Hill that Mr. Roosevelt's wishes were that the cadets be saved from the established penalty for hazing. But now it is denied that the president took any action in the matter whatever.

The following is the statement issued for Mr. Roosevelt by Assistant Secretary Forster:

"No action whatever has been taken by the president in the cases of the cadets, the statements that they were originally ordered dismissed and that they had been ordered kept, being equally erroneous.

"An appeal was originally made to the president to interfere. He declined to take any action or to interfere in any way until the secretary of war had expressed his opinion, the view of the department then being, seemingly, that the cadets should be turned out, but the secretary not having come to any final decision.

"The secretary then notified the president that instead of making any report he would like to discuss the matter with the president in person. He accordingly came and the discussion was held, but no final decision was reached, the secretary stating that he was not able to make a final and definite recommendation as to all the cases.

"The president has not yet heard finally from the secretary and therefore has come to no final decision.

"This is the first announcement that the president has made in the matter at all, and he never at any time has come to any decision one way or the other excepting to state that he would probably follow the views of the department."

Secretary Wright, after his visit to the president last Saturday, stated that the cadets would be reinstated to their classes at West Point.

The president's secretary, William Loeb, shortly after the cadets had been suspended, announced that the president had approved the recommendation that the cadets be dismissed and that the only possible way for them to get back to the academy would be through congressional action.

FROM RANCHER TO MINER.

Finds Homestead to be Rich Placer Deposit.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 5.—J. M. Eakin, a rancher on Salmon river in the Elk City district in Central Idaho, who recently discovered rich placer ground on his farm, has turned miner and is now working with day and night crews. The first test run a few days ago netted $21 in gold as the result of three hours' work. The hydraulic equipment he used in irrigating his apple and peach trees, pumpkins and berry patches is now employed to tear away the earth and gravel, so the gold can be gathered into the sluice boxes. There is an ample supply of water, and the climate is such that operations can be carried on every day in the year. Mr. Eakin has been in the district since the early days, but did not know that the far mhe homesteaded years ago contained what he declares to be the richest placer ground in Idaho.

CUMMINS A CANDIDATE

To Succeed the Late W. B. Allison in United States Senate.

Iowa's Governor Pays Glowing Tribute to Late Senator.

Lake Forest, Ill., Aug. 5.—Governor Albert B. Cummins of Iowa has announced himself as a candidate to succeed the late Senator Allison in the federal congress. The governor paid a glowing tribute to his late political adversary and then frankly declared his ambition to be elected to the upper house by the legislature of his state. He also announced that "some one will be appointed at once to occupy Senator Allison's seat for the remaining months of his unexpired term."

"I shall certainly make an effort to succeed Senator Allison," said Governor Cummins, when he was asked concerning his political intentions. He refused, however, to say whether he will make an effort to obtain the senatorship during the unexpired portion of Senator Allison's term, which ends March 4, 1909. He declared that there is plenty of senatorial timber in Iowa, but declined to discuss possible candidates for the appointment.

Governor Cummins will cut short his vacation and return to Des Moines at once. It is expected that conference of his political friends will be called and that within a few days, definite news regarding the short term of senatorship will be announced. The governor stated that the decision to fill the vacancy at once was due to the fact that the legislature of the state would be unable to elect a man for the place in time after the reassembling of congress in December and that unless an appointment is made the state would not have its full representation at Washington.

Tribute to Allison.

In response to a request for a statement on the death of Senator Allison, the governor said: "Senator Allison will be long remembered, not only in Iowa, but throughout the whole country. He rendered most useful service to the nation during a public career which for length has scarcely a parallel in the history of the United States.

"He was a calm, contemplative man and for many years his counsel has been more generally sought than that of any other man in public life. Had he lived to end the term which he was holding at the time of his death, he would have served his state thirty-six consecutive years in the senate.

"He entered congress in the middle of the Civil war and his influence has been felt in all important legislation of the past forty-five years. His death will be lamented everywhere, but nowhere so profoundly as among the people of Iowa."

Governor Cummins refused to make any formal statement regarding his candidacy to succeed Senator Allison, beyond the simple declaration that he would make an effort to be elected.

It was suggested to the governor that if he should resign, the appointive power would vest in Lieutenant Governor Warren Garst. This intimation that he might become the junior senator of his state brought no response from Governor Cummins.

The governor made it plain, however, that he believes that his friends regard him as the logical successor to the senatorship.

He declared that Senator Allison had defeated him in the recent primary election in the state by a comparatively slender majority, and for this reason he thought that his candidacy will be received with favor in his state. He intimated that a majority of the members of the legislature which is to elect a senator for the term beginning March, 1909, are friendly to him, and he was outspoken in his home that these men will vote for him when the time comes to ballot for a successor to Allison.

Sketch of Allison.

Senator Allison was born at Perry, Ohio, March 2, 1829, the son of John and Mary Allison. His boyhood days were spent on the farm which was his birthplace. Reaching young manhood, he secured his education in Allegheny college in Pennsylvania and the Western Reserve college of Ohio, in both of which schools he distinguished himself by winning high honors in all the branches which he studied.

Senator Allison was a delegate to the Republican state convention in 1859 and to the national Republican convention in Chicago in 1860. He was a member of the governor's staff during the Civil war and raised troops to fight for the integrity of the nation in 1861. In 1863 he was elected to congress and served continuously until 1871. In 1873 he was elected United States senator from Iowa and represented his state in this capacity until the time of his death. In 1881 he was offered the position of secretary of the treasury of the United States by President Garfield, but declined to accept the office. In 1889 he again refused this office when offered him by President Harrison. For the third time he refused the office when it was offered him by President McKinley in 1897. In 1892 he was chairman of the international monetary conference at Brussels. He was candidate for the Republican presidential nomination before the national Republican convention in 1888 and again in 1896.

Shortly after his first election to the national house of representatives, Senator Allison's ability was recognized by his appointment to the ways and means committee. He immediately secured the confidence of the leaders of his party, and it was Senator Allison as much as any man then in the service of the people, who planned and carried through all the great measures of the conduction of the civil war, the re-establishment of the national credit and the development of the national resources. He was a contemporary of and a co-laborer with every one of the great men whose services are now recognized as of inestimable value to the nation, Lincoln, Stanton, Chase, Sumner, Blaine Edmunds, Sherman, Garfield, Logan, Trumbull, Morton and others.

His aid in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln as Republican candidate for president in 1860 was perhaps Senator Allison's first great service for his country. As an Iowa delegate to the Republican convention in Chicago in that year he joined the other party leaders who had determined upon the nomination of Lincoln and by their united efforts, their object was obtained.

When the war broke out he was selected by Governor Kirkwood as a member of the latter's staff for the purpose of raising troops. In those times he demonstrated his unswerving loyalty to his nation and his willingness to make any personal sacrifice if only the nation he loved might gain.

On the ways and means committee of the national house he began the career which made him the best authority in the country upon the revenues and expenditures of the government. For more than forty years he has been assigned by the judgment of his colleagues in the house and senate, to the responsibility and task of planning the revenues and supervising the expenditures, and no man who ever had part in this work had the confidence of both houses more completely.

GOOD SWIMMER DROWNS.

Oscar Thoreson Loses His Life in Lake Koronis.

Paynesville, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Oscar Thoreson, aged 18, son of Oscar Thoreson, a Roseville farmer, was drowned in Lake Koronis, near here, Sunday afternoon. The body was recovered by picnickers in that locality soon after the alarm was given, but life was extinct.

The funeral was lhed from the home Monday afternoon.

Thoreson had gone to the third island on the lake with a crowd of people on a picnic Sunday morning. The young man was an expert swimmer, and shortly after their arrival there went into the water. He swam from the island to the main shore, a distance of about a mile, and then back again. Shortly after he made the same trip, and then swam completely around the island, a distance of a mile and a half. Shortly after noon, when he had all but completed the trip, he was seized with cramps and sank to the bottom in six feet of water. A man who was watching the young fellow from a distance saw him sink. He had a boat, but when he arrived at the place the boy was beneath the surface.

He was pushed aside by a companion just in time to save his life, and the accident only resulted in his face being badly bruised, his teeth knocked out and a severe gash being cut in his head. The man was taken to the Deaconess hospital for treatment, where it is reported that he is doing nicely and not suffering much pain.

EXPERT FINDS MANY DEFECTS

Expert Engineer Reports Shortcomings in Eveleth Water Plant.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the present water plant in this city is defective and inadequate to meet the needs of the town, and that changes should be made at once, were the chief points of the report made to the city council last night in the report of Edward P. Burch, the Minneapolis hydraulic engineer who was engaged to examine the plant. The report says that the maximum capacity for each pump at the pumping station is 600 gallons per minute, but that as there is some defect in the connection between the pumps, the capacity for both pumps is 600 gallons per minute, 300 gallons of which is used up continually for domestic use. A number of tests were made as to the pressure and throwing capacity secured from the present system, but the tests do not show very favorably. For a building the size of the burned school building the pressure is very inadequate. If more hydrants are put on the system with the present capacity, the pressure will be lowered from its present 240 pounds to something lower than 200 pounds. An examination was also made at the pumping station which, according to Mr. Burch, is not suitable for the fine machinery that is there now. The chimney at the station is a very good one and adequate. Referring to the change in part of the machinery at the pumping station that was made by the present superintendent of waterworks, and which was criticised at the time of the school fire, the report says that while the change was not as well designed as the original plans, yet an improvement was made by the change when everything was considered. At the pumping station the intake pipe is 250 feet long, from St. Mary's lake to the pumps. The intake is thirty-two feet below the level of the lake. In the present system there are too many bends and right angles in the pipe running from the lake to the pumps, which reduce the capacity of the pipes and the pressure. With the present suction pipe the two engines cannot be run at the same time.

Burch's Recommendations.

Mr. Burch advises that either the pumps be reset, which is impracticable with this expensive plant, or to lower the pumps, or to put in a duplicate suction pipe from the lake to the pumps, which will have fewer right angles than the present pipe. The present fire protection is inadequate for a town of this size which is built on a hill, the higher up on which the less protection there is. He recommends that a tank containing 200,000 gallons of water be built on the hill near the baseball park and that a 10-inch water main be laid on Roosevelt avenue leading from this to the standpipe. A reinforced concrete tank would be the best for the purpose. He did not blame any one for the inadequacy of the fire protection, but thinks that the fault lies in the acceptance of the pumping station by the city council. If a test had been made two or three years ago at two hydrants with four hose lines, its very probable that the disastrous school fire would not have happened.

The report was accepted and placed on file. A general discussion by the citizens then followed. The consensus of opinion is that an intake and large tank be built as soon as possible. The city engineer will be asked to make an outline and estimate for the new intake pipe and will report at the meeting Friday night. The city clerk was instructed to write to firms building water tanks for estimates on the cost of a tank capable of holding 300,000 gallons.

The expected resignation of City Attorney Ferry did not turn up. Instead a letter was received from him, stating that there was nothing in the communication he received asking for his resignation which would give any reason for the request. He believes that he is fulfilling the duties of his office and will not resign until he knows the reason for the request for his resignation. The letter was referred to the committee on officers and elections.

The labor claims and salary bills for the past month were passed. The report of Supt. Vandell shows that the water receipts were $2,364.43, while the total expenditures amounted to $1,026.42. The report of Street Commissioner John Warn was read showing what had been done for the improvement of the city.

IS WANTED FOR THEFT OF BEER

Two Harbors Police Would Like to Find Duluth Man.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police are looking for Harry Carruthers of Duluth on the charge of stealing several cases of beer from the local warehouse of the Duluth Brewing company, which was broken into a few nights ago. Alex Bickett of this place, who has worked as a brake man on the iron range, was arrested Sunday on the charge of being implicated in the robbery and released on $450 bonds. He claims that Carruthers asked him to carry four cases of beer from an alley, which he did, not suspecting that they had been stolen, and that he is entirely innocent of connection with the crime.

Carruthers evidently got a tip from some one about the time Bickett was arrested and escaped, although the officers of other towns have been notified to look out for him.

of the Grand Army of the Republic. He served through the American Civil war as cavalry officer in the army of the Mississippi in the brigade commanded by Gen. Carl Schurz. At the battle of Fredericksburg, the young German cavalry owed his escape from capture to a brilliant feat of horsemanship, which carried him through the line of bayonets with which he had been encircled. It is said that it was in the Union service that the count made his first balloon ascension, which created his interest in aeronautics. It was a captive balloon sent up to observe the Confederate lines. The count was successful and became enthusiastic over the possibilities of balloons for military purposes. WOODBRIDGE MAKES REPORT

Tells Directors of Calumet & Montana of Progress Made.

Directors of the Calumet & Montana Mining company met yesterday afternoon to hear the report of Dwight E. Woodbridge, who recently visited the property in the interests of Duluth stockholders, to see what work was being done there.

The directors decided to call a meeting of the stockholders of the company for the near future, when Mr. Woodbridge's report will be set before them and different matters regarding the future development of the company will be taken up.

A statement given out by the directors last night says:

"Mr. Woodbridge speaks very highly on the economical way in which work is being carried on at present and also in regard to the possibilities of railroad facilities, which he looks upon as an assured fact. He advises the patenting of the company's claims at once and recommends the shaft should be sunk to a depth of at least 400 or 500 feet. He further states that shipments are now en route to the smelters."

ASHLAND MAN INJURED.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first load of barley of this year's crop was marketed here yesterday. It tested forty-eight pounds to the bushel, yielded thirty-two bushels per acre and sold for 45 cents per bushel. The color was fine and it is first-class malting barley.

R. R. TELEGRAPHER

Increases Ability on Right Food.

Anything that will help the R. R. Telegraph operator to keep a clear head and steady nerves is of interest to operators particularly and to the public generally.

As the waste of brain and nerve cells in active work of this kind is great, it is important that the right kind of food be regularly used to repair the waste.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes a B. R. & P. operator, "for the past six or eight years, daily, buying it by the dozen pkgs.

"A friend of mine, a doctor, who had been treating me for stomach trouble and nervous exhaustion, recommended me to leave off so much meat and use fruit and vegetables, with Grape-Nuts as the cereal part of each meal.

"I did so with fine results and have continued Grape-Nuts from that time to the present. I find in my work as R. R. Telegrapher that I can do more work and far easier than I ever could on the old diet.

"To any man who is working his brain and who needs a cool, level head and quick action, I recommend Grape-Nuts, from long experience." "There's a Reason."

ORGAN RECITAL.

Claude Landi Begins a Series of Educational Concerts.

Claude P. Landi gave the first of the proposed series of six educational concerts at the First Baptist church last evening before an audience of about 150 people. Mr. Landi is planning to give these free lectures in the hope of increasing an appreciation for the better class of music among Duluthians. Features of the lectures will be short talks on music by Mr. Landi, by which he hopes to explain the mysteries of the classics of music for those who do not know how to appreciate them. At these recitals Mr. Landi will play in turn the six great organ sonatas of Mendelssohn. The first was given last night.

APPEALS CASE.

Dr. H. C. Leonard Carries Suit to State Supreme Court.

After two defeats in the municipal and district court, Dr. H. C. Leonard will carry his case against Mrs. Charlotte Clarke for $317 for professional services to the supreme court. His services were given in behalf of a little girl, Tozzy Delasky, who was employed by Mrs. Clark. Dr. Leonard claims that Mrs. Clark agreed to pay for the services, but when he presented the bill to her refused to honor it. Judge Wirdom and Judge Dibell decided that Mrs. Clark did not have to pay. Notice of appeal to the state supreme court was filed yesterday.

A TOURING CAR FOR A DOLLAR

Barber Takes Elks' Auto in Drawing at Lester Park.

A $2,000 automobile for a dollar! That was the bargain that Ernest L. Bush, a barber in the employ of Brown Bros. on West Superior street, drove last evening. This morning he is in possession of the big touring car donated by Louis Rouchleau for the Elks' raffle. The tickets were $1 each. Out at the grounds last evening Bush bought a ticket and it proved to be the lucky one.

Three newspaper men took charge of the drawing, and it was announced that the twenty-fifth ticket drawn from the box was to be the lucky one. No. 3971. Bush's ticket, was the twenty-fifth. Five more tickets were drawn, in order that the car might be awarded if the winner failed to show up. Charles Hendrickson, the First National bank, H. E. Mitchell, E. S. Farrell and H. J. Tetzner were the five who were drawn after the winner. Bush showed up with great promptness, however, and the big machine will go to him.

Nearly 5,000 tickets were sold at $1 each on the big machine, several hundred being raffled off at the last moment at Lester Park last night.

blanket, made the journey safely. Mrs. Crossman said that on the train she saw men, women and children of all nationalities, mixed together and sitting three and even four on a seat. The men were shouting and frantic while hysterical women separated from their children were shrieking in vain for their lost ones. Some were dressed in all their finery and others had scarcely anything to wear at all. There were scores of children, some with their parents and some who had lost them in the confusion.

"The scene was indescribable," said Mrs. Crossman.

Train Starts for Hosmer.

"The train then pulled out for Hosmer," said Mrs. Crossman, "but we found the heart of that town in flames when we reached it. The original intention had been to get through to Michel, but shortly after leaving Hosmer we heard that the Michel bridge was burned. The train then backed again to stop for the night between Hosmer and Fernie, passing on its way back through the greatest danger, for we had to pass for a mile between blazing brush on both sides. The windows of the cars became so hot that it was impossible to touch them, and the heat and smoke were absolutely stifling. All this time the foreign women were shrieking prayers at the top of their voices, adding to the terrible confusion of the scene. After passing through this fire hell, the train reached a safe place and stopped there for the night. While we lay there, condensed milk was brought out from Fernie for the women and children by volunteers."

Spent Night of Anxiety.

After spending a heartrending night of anxiety and misery, the train returned to Fernie on Sunday morning, and the passengers found that the fire had burned itself out there during the night. The dead bodies of several little girls had been found in different parts of the city, and there are doubtless many more that have not yet been found.

James Barclay passed through the night of terror at Michel. When he left there he believed that there was little danger to the town except from the direction of Sparwood. The night before was spent by the citizens of the old town where he was fighting back the fire, particularly in keeping down the sparks. There was no water in the new town, and that was in great danger. Early in the evening it was decided that the women and children should leave the town. Many of the children, he said, had dug deep trenches and buried furniture; others simply left all belongings behind and took their chances. They were unable to see anything of Fernie, and the wire communication was lost early in the evening. They had learned that Fernie was safe, but that Hosmer was burning up. Five men were brought into Hosmer, two dead and three badly burned. One was an Italian who had gone back to the camp to try to rescue some provisions. The other was an old Scotchman whose name he did not know, but who was well known in Michel.

Worst Not Yet Told.

R. A. Howson of Calgary, who had been in Fernie for several weeks past, said that the worst has not yet been told of the catastrophe. Driven by a fierce gale, the flames ate up the buildings with remorseless rapidity, and the people had no time to save anything. It was useless to try it. All that could be done was to get their families together and flee. The railroad companies acted with remarkable promptness and effectiveness in getting the people away. The Great Northern and the Canadian Pacific did not lose a moment in rushing trains to beyond the danger zone. The people huddled together on two clearings outside the town and were safe from the fiendish flames, which threatened life as well as home, until the trains arrived. Mr. Howson says that an abundance of food was soon brought in for the sufferers and there was no hardship on that point. The foreign people acted well and fortunately there was no liquor, every drop of that commodity going to feed the flames. Speaking of the loss of life, Mr. Howson said it will be difficult to form an estimate until the fire is out and the excitement dies down.

He says there is not much doubt about the sixty men and two women being burned in No. 6 lumber camp and in Fernie it was stated that two women were burned. Children are missing but are believed to have escaped the flames. Mr. Howson estimated the fire zone outside of the mountain forests as twenty-six miles. Fernie is gone and Sparwood, a lumber camp, is destroyed. When he passed through, Michel was being kept drenched and men were fighting the flames around Cranbrook.

THE WIND DIES DOWN

road yards. All of the dats back of the Great Northern station started to burn when the wind stopped blowing. The fires are still smoldering.

City Starts to Burn.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 5.—For three days the people of Michel have fought for their homes with death at the door. Yesterday afternoon they were beaten at the game. The city, the second inside of the devastated district of East Kootenai, started to burn in real earnest at dusk. Nothing can save it from being a heap of ruins even more complete than Fernie.

From a light eastern breeze the wind turned to a gale from the west at 9 o'clock in the afternoon, and the city in a moment was doomed. The blaze came sweeping down the hill. At the edge of the town 100,000 feet of mine timbers, owned by the coal company, caught fire and four loaded railroad cars standing on a sidetrack were consumed. Two Canadian Pacific locomotives were hitched onto a train to carry the fire fighters away to the west to safety. By the time the train left for the west the fire was spreading all over the yards.

Encounter Wall of Flame.

The train got only half a mile on its journey when it encountered a wall of flames. There was danger of its being hemmed in and being burned with everybody aboard, so the locomotives were reversed and run back with all speed. By the time the train returned all houses on the flat district back of the Great Northern depot were burning and the main town was likely to catch at any moment. At 5 o'clock a lone newspaper man and the telegrapher still stuck by the telegraph instrument. The last message the newspaper man sent was:

"Many houses are burning. Trains cannot get west of here. Railway service west of this town will be blocked indefinitely. To the east the line is clear. Will try to reach Crow's Nest before morning and forward news from there."

run again, was Congressman Hammond. The Minnesota representatives who traveled to the Denver convention together naturally talked a good deal about the governorship, and one of the first names mentioned on the outbound train was Hammond's. Later talk included John Lind, T. D. O'Brien, Mayor Armson of Stillwater and others, and at one time it fluttered hopefully back to Governor Johnson, who put a final quietus to it the other day by repeating his determination, in still more emphatic terms.

Situation Gradually Clearing.

Talks with Minnesota Democrats who have visited the Twin Cities within a recent period, and with local party leaders, shows very clearly that during the past two weeks the situation has been gradually clearing itself, and that the Hammond sentiment has been steadily growing, until now it is heard to the exclusion of all other probable or possible candidates.

The opinion that, under all the circumstances, he is as strong a candidate as the Democrats could name, has been a thing of steady growth ever since he first came under consideration. He is an orator of marked ability, as was shown by his two speeches nominating Governor Johnson for the governorship, by his talks in congress, upon the stump, and most clearly of all by his speech at the Denver convention placing in nomination the name of Governor Johnson of Minnesota. This speech was declared by many to have been the best nominating speech heard during the convention, and, among others, the Chicago Tribune expressed itself very positively to that effect. It was heard with interested absorption, frequently interrupted by spontaneous applause and cheers, and at its close the convention cheered for twenty-five minutes.

Has Excellent Record.

Besides his abilities as a speaker, which are valuable in this connection and as showing the stuff in the man, Mr. Hammond has an excellent record in congress; he was elected in a strongly Republican district and could probably be elected again if he should not consent to accept the governorship nomination; he is a man of fine ability and impressive presence, whom his admirers believe to be fully qualified to serve the state in the important capacity to which his party is thinking of calling him.

When the suggestion that he be made the governorship candidate of the Democracy of Minnesota was made, it was opposed by the leaders of his district because they wanted him to go to congress again. Later, however, as the possibilities of the governorship contest grew upon them, this feeling gave way to one of enthusiasm for the governorship idea. It is doubtful whether Mr. Hammond himself shares this enthusiasm, as the work of a congressman is very much to his taste, and he has reason to be hopeful that a second term would be even more pleasant and effectual. However, if his party calls him to the higher responsibilities of the governorship of Minnesota, it is hardly believable that he will find it possible to refuse.

This is the sum and substance of talk among Minnesota Democrats as it is reflected in the Twin Cities these days, and it points very strongly to the nomination of Congressman Hammond as the Democratic candidate for governor.

MONTANIANS ARE INJURED.

Butte Postmaster and Others Hurt in Automobile Accident.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 5.—The failure of the brakes to work on a large automobile operated by Charles F. King of Helena while descending a steep mountain grade near Wickes, in Jefferson county, a few miles south of here, yesterday afternoon, caused the machine to run away and upset, and the occupants, among whom were some well known Montanians, were injured.

Postmaster Ross of Missoula sustained a broken leg. Judge E. K. Cheadle of Lewistown, a prospective Republican candidate for governor, was internally injured; E. T. Bushnell of Washington, D. C., chief clerk to the first assistant postmaster general, had an ankle fracture; Postmaster Malcolm Gillis of Butte and Driver C. F. King of Helena were more or less injured.

The first three named were taken to the hospital at Boulder for treatment. The party was en route to Butte from Helena, where they had attended the meeting of Montana postmasters.

Judge E. K. Cheadle of Lewistown, who was injured in the automobile accident near Helena, Mont., yesterday, is a brother of City Clerk Cheadle of Duluth. Judge Cheadle formerly lived in Brainerd, where he was once principal in the public schools, and removed to Montana about twenty years ago, locating in Lewistown, the county seat of Fergus county, where he studied law and was admitted to practice. At the time of the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he enlisted as a private in the First Montana regiment and served through the Philippine campaign, returning with the regiment as first lieutenant and with a brilliant record for personal bravery. Subsequently he was elected district judge, and, as the dispatches from Helena state, is at present among the candidates mentioned for the Republican nomination for governor.

TRAIN STRIKES BOY.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 5.—Edwin Heaton, 11 years old, was struck by the Northern Pacific limited near McKenzie, 16 miles east of here, Sunday night, and got off with a broken leg and a few other bruises. He had been to church in the town and was riding his horse home. When crossing the tracks he and the animal were hit by the flying train and the horse instantly killed. The boy was thrown a rod or more, and how he escaped with his life is a miracle.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

ANGELS WIN THE SECOND

O'Dea's Men Take Eleven Inning Contest by Big Margin.

Brandt Has Two Bad Innings and Loses Out.

Old Bill Brandt, the flighty youth, who has lost more than one game this year by his wildness, sandwiched nine innings of beautiful pitching between two horrible sessions yesterday, and the Brandon leaders annexed the second game of the series by a score of 5 to 2.

The battle went eleven innings and was full of interest all the way. Brandt's pitching in nine of the eleven innings kept the bugs on edge. His support at some stages was very, very sad, but he pitched himself out of the holes in grand shape. Finally, in the eleventh inning, when Westcott contributed the wopsiest kind of a bobble to the Brandon cause, Bill could stand up under the strain no longer, fell down and the Angels walked over him three times to make a grand total of five.

Nelson had the Sox by the ears most of the time. They managed to get to him in a couple of innings, but when it seemed that he was going upward, he suddenly changed his course, threw out the anchor and dashed the rising hopes of the fans on the rock. With good fielding behind him, Nelson is never in very much trouble. He had the fielding yesterday, the Sox couldn't do any effective batting, and he pulled the game on the rosy side of his percentage column by the right of might.

Brandt opened the first inning in a way that struck terror to the hearts of the long-suffering fans. He passed Mills, and Leighty sacrificed him to second. O'Dea, also, did the pedestrian act along the first base line, and Sam Menefee followed with a smash that nearly broke down the fence. Two runs and Sam on Second, where he quietly died.

The Sox came back with one in the second, when Nelson slipped up for a minute and Pratt got in some deadly work. O'Brien walked, and went down to second on Williams' out. Pratt started one for the fence. It struck near the top and went for two sacks, O'Brien scoring. Pratt didn't get any farther.

The Angels had a fine chance to win the game in the fifth, with the sacks all populated and only one down. Wagner came to the front, popped an easy one to Ness and died. Livingston stung one, but Koepping scooped it, threw to O'Brien and retired the side.

The Sox knotted it up in the sixth, when Nelson gave another imitation of a pitcher in a bad way. Koepping opened with a single, went to third on Monroe's single after Westcott had died, and scored on Ness' safe one. With men on first and second, O'Brien hit down the third base line, and Wagner doubled on him at first, cutting off the rally. After that the Sox never had a chance. They only scored one safe one on Nelson, and that man was caught trying to steal second. The big fellow seemed to be getting better than ever, and was evidently content to hold the Sox in check until his team mates rescued him from the hole.

The Angels sent a man to second in the eighth, with only one down, and had another on third in the tenth, but there was nothing doing. In the eleventh came the finish, with a few runs thrown in to make the margin safe. Mills hit to Wescott, who let the ball get away, and everybody was safe. Leighty walked, filling the bases. The duke of Manitoba finished the job by pushing one to left for two sacks, and two men scored. Leighty went down at the plate on Menefee's grounder, but Wagner hit safely, scoring O'Dea. Wagner went down trying to take second, on the throw to the plate. It was one-two-three and defeat for the Sox in their half.

ALDERMEN PLAY BALL.

Philadelphia Solons Travel to Milwaukee for Charity Game.

Milwaukee, Aug. 5.—Forty members of Philadelphia's board of aldermen arrived in Milwaukee in a special train over the Chicago & Northwestern railroad last night, the occasion being the playing of a return baseball game with the picked members of Milwaukee's common council, who were defeated at the hands of the Philadelphians a year ago. The opposing ball teams will meet at Athletic park today and, judging from the large number of tickets sold, a tidy sum of money will be divided among the charitable institutions of Milwaukee.

Stellwagon captured four games in each of the two sets.

LAST RACE OF SERIES

Eighteen-Footers Closely Bunched in Rear Commodore's Series.

Minotaur Wins Pennant Series From Young America.

With the Frolic, Thistle and Freckles bunched within a point of each other in the standings, the fifth and last race in the Rear Commodore's cup series for 18-foot yachts at the Duluth Yacht club will go on at 6 o'clock this evening. It will probably be the most exciting race of the year. The rear commodore's cup is at stake and, besides that, there is a possibility that the winning yacht will represent the club in its class in the Inland Lake Yachting association's regatta on Lake Minnetonka the latter part of this month.

As a result of the first four races, Frolic leads the field with thirteen points. Freckles has twelve, Thistle eleven and Spray two. There is a big possibility of a tie tonight. If Frolic should finish first, it will take down the honors. If Frolic crosses the line first, Thistle must be second and Frolic third or a tie will be created. If Thistle finishes first, Freckles must finish second and Frolic third to hold Thistle in the race and create a tie all around. If Spray is entered and gets one of the first three places, there will be a big tangle. The points are divided four to the winner, three to second, two to third and one to fourth.

The situation is an interesting one and the yachtsmen are on edge today. The series has been interesting all the way through and there is a wholesome rivalry among the owners of the boats. The final race tonight will probably bring out a big crowd.

The final race in the special series for 32-footers for the pennant hung up by the Murray brothers of the White Bear Yacht club of St. Paul was sailed last evening, Minotaur, owned by Pierce Bros., winning the race and the pennant from J. A. Roth's Young America. The course was from home to the dyke, to the interstate bridge, to the imperial mill and home again, a distance of six miles. The Minotaur crossed the line one minute ahead of the Young America. The series was two out of three and Minotaur won both races, last night's being the second of the series. The first was sailed about a month ago.

Admittedly the biggest hole the management of the Duluth baseball team put itself into this year was dug when Al Williams was released to Fargo. Third base is a hard position, one of the hardest on any team, and Wescott doesn't fill it for Duluth.

What mistake could be foreseen by anybody. Baker was playing beautiful ball, had been all year, and if he had continued it, Al Williams couldn't have beaten him out of the position. Williams was a dead weight to the team. He couldn't play the outfield as it should be played; he couldn't hit well enough to be played in the outfield and had chances on his fielding, and he couldn't break into the infield. The only thing possible was to release him to some team which could use him.

Just as soon as Williams was let out, Baker went to the bad. From a brilliant fielder he fell to an indifferent, listless player, a detriment rather than a help to the team. The management could do nothing but let him go, also, and try to fill the position.

Wescott is a good enough boy. He means all right and tries to play ball. He isn't fast enough for this league, though. He has a bad habit of falling down in the pinches and can not hit. This late stage it is doubtful if he can be improved upon, but there is much room for improvement.

As the situation looks now, the Sox must brace up for the remainder of this Brandon series and beat Artie O'Dea's men a few games, or let pennant hopes go glimmering. After this series, Brandon gets Fargo for about fifteen games, and the Browns will receive a series of trimmings that will send their percentage into a close embrace with nothing. In the meantime, the Sox will play the Maroons and, with Winnipeg fighting to down Brandon, Herr's men will be more dangerous than they have ever been this season.

O'Dea is pretty lucky if he gets away with the big end of this series. He is leading a crowd of candidates for the hospital. McGraw is out of the game for the remainder of the season with a bad knee. Summers is under suspension. Custer can hardly walk and Menefee is little better. Dahlgren, Nelson and O'Dea are limping. If the Angels are to be beaten, now is the time to give it to them in the place between their heads and shoulders and the Sox haven't even given them a feeble whack.

The Sox have been playing good, hard ball for all that. Even though there are errors, there isn't any horse play. Any crowd of fans will stick with a team that does its best, and nobody accused the Sox of not doing everything they could to win games. Their spirit merits admiration. A slip here and a slip there loses games, but they come right back the next day to fight it out again. Even if they do not win the pennant, nobody can say they didn't do their best.

Can any human being run 100 yards in nine seconds?

R. F. Walker's performance in England yesterday when he broke the world's 100-yard dash record and covered the distance in 9 2-5 seconds revives the question which has agitated athletic circles for years. When Arthur Duffey ran in 9 3-5 seconds at Oval, N. Y., May 31, 1902, the athletic world was amazed that it was possible. When Dan A. Kelly repeated the performance at Spokane, Wash., June 23, 1906, the record was doubted. It was said the watch was faulty. Now comes the South African with a new record, one-fifth of a second closer to the charmed nine seconds mark, which some believe will come and more believe a physical impossibility.

Ten seconds is fast time. Many cracks have made 9 4-5 seconds, including Parsons, Hahn, Cartwell, Duffey and Blair in recent years. Rector, the University of Virginia boy, is said to have covered the distance in 9 3-5 seconds this year, but excepting him, Duffey and Kelly have been the only men to receive the record. It was believed no man could go faster, but Walker proves the fallacy of the belief.

Now that to run 100 yards in nine seconds is an impossibility may be questioned. To do it, a man must cover 33 1-3 feet every second. Seven feet is a long stride for a sprinter. Eight feet is about the limit. Can any man average over four strides of eight feet each a second for nine seconds? New wonders are constantly startling the world and time will tell.

The official football guide for 1908 has made its appearance and clearly defines the changes in the playing rules for this season, which are expected to help the game greatly and do away with the chance element which played such an important part since the new rules were adopted.

The rule which makes the player who first touched the ball on a forward pass recover it, providing it has not touched an opponent, will make it necessary for the play to be worked out more scientifically. If another player on the side in possession of the ball recovers the ball before it has touched an opponent, it shall go to the opposing team on the spot. Otherwise the penalties for the forward pass are the same as last year.

While the ball is in the air for the forward pass, players of the defensive side may not use their hands or arms to opponents except to push them out of the way in order to get the ball themselves.

Players of the side making the pass, who are eligible to receive the ball, may use their hands or arms as in case of players going down the field under kicks. Neither side, however, may hold or tackle an opponent who has not the ball.

The score of forfeited games is made 1 to 0, in order to distinguish it from any other possible scores.

The ten-minute intermission between halves has been increased to fifteen. The referee is to notify the teams three minutes before its expiration. Five minutes after this notification, if either team has failed to appear, the ball shall be put in play as first down by the offended side on the offending side's thirty-yard line.

Contests for Places Feature of Kalamazoo Grand Circuit Meet.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 5.—The second day of Kalamazoo's first Grand Circuit meeting was favored with a fast track, but a stiff breeze was blowing from the southeast and a smattering of rain in the afternoon marred the day somewhat.

The 2:07 trot had the horses finishing in the same order in each heat, but in the 2:10 pace and the 2:13 trot there was more of a contest for second and third places. Major Brino was second in the first two heats of the pace, but dropped back to the fourth in the last heat, while Leslie Aterman and William C finished second and third respectively. Fred D. got third in the first heat of the pace and Dr. Fox got third place in the second heat. In the 2:13 trot Carlokin and Teasel took second and third respectively in the first and third heats, but in the second heat Carlokin dropped back to sixth, allowing Teasel and Alice Edgar to take second and third.

NEW POLICE ORDER.

Band Concerts and Fakers Are Barred Along Superior Street.

Chief Troyer has issued orders instructing patrolmen and all officers to prevent demonstrations on certain downtown street corners after 7 o'clock in the evening. Band concerts, street fakers, etc., are barred, as tending to attract a crowd of people, the complaint being that such crowds are conducive to rowdyism among youths attracted to the scene, and annoying to pedestrians. All the corners along the business section of Superior street are included in the order.

ERRING WIFE IS FORGIVEN

Daughter's Tears Save Mrs. Alice Gilespie in Police Court.

The case against Mrs. Alice E. Gilespie of Garfield avenue, arrested early Monday morning in company with James Morrison on a statutory charge, was dismissed by Judge Cutting in municipal court yesterday. The woman probably owes her release to the fact that her daughter, about 18 years old, could not restrain her tears in court. Her step-father also was affected and shed tears. He promised to take the woman back into his home if the court would release her, and this was agreed to.

"I do this for the sake of her daughter, judge," said Gilespie.

The woman has four children by a former marriage.

Morrison was given a preliminary hearing and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. Bail in his case was fixed at $1,000. Officers Root and Perry arrested the couple Monday morning at about 1 o'clock, in a room on Garfield avenue. Mrs. Gilespie left her husband last June.

S.S.S. CONTAINS NO MERCURY

Medicines containing Mercury are often given to persons suffering with Contagious Blood Poison, and so powerful is the action of this drug that it frequently removes the symptoms in a short while, and shuts the disease up in the system to do greater damage to the delicate internal members. When, however, the treatment is left off, the the disease always returns, and the patient finds that his health has been injured by this powerful mineral, and he is often left with weak stomach, disturbed digestion, mercurial rheumatism, etc. The action of S. S. S. is entirely different. It contains no Mercury, nor any other harmful drug, but is made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs. It cures Contagious Blood Poison by removing the virus from the blood. It searches out every particle of the poison and does not leave the least trace for future outbreaks. S. S. S., in addition to curing the disease, builds up and strengthens every part of the body. Its fine tonic effects tone up the stomach and digestion, improve the appetite and regulate the entire system. Home treatment book containing valuable information about the different stages of the disease and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write.

KRUPPS BUY RIGHTS IN NEW AIR TORPEDO.

Essen, Aug. 5.—Notwithstanding frequent denials the Krupp works have apparently acquired the rights to the air torpedo invented by Col. Unge of the Swedish army, under conditions that the Swedish government is free to use the device. The particulars of the weapon are secret, but it is understood that the Krupps paid a great sum for the invention after prolonged tests, so it is assumed that the projectile is really effective. Report says it can be used by warships in sea fighting and also against fortifications, three calibres being used, one for sea fighting work.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

These are beautiful glad summer days when in the cool of the exquisite morning one finds one's self walking joyously down the streets to one's daily toil giving thanks from a humble heart that one only has to work on the hot summer days and that one does not have to put in the entire day enjoying oneself on a day's outing. This spirit of grateful happiness is induced by the sight of groups of people standing laden with picnic baskets and shawls and babies and things, waiting patiently for the car that does not come, in order that they may hie themselves far from the maddening throng in order to enjoy a day's outing. They have toiled and toiled the preceding day in order to prepare for this day of rest. They have arisen at an hour when the rest of the hard working world is sleeping, in order to pack those aforementioned baskets and hie them on the first car to the grounds of pleasure. They have awakened little ones from the dreamless, exquisite sleep of the morning to stuff them protesting into newly starched dresses, and they have fed the sleepy lambkins while they were too weary to open their hungry mouths. They have lost their tempers temporarily and one or two children enroute and they have made several false starts on the day of pleasure only to remember half way to their destination that the forks for the salad were left at home.

"Who cares?" some one asks blithely and nobody answers, for nobody does care—then; whoever wanted salad just after eating breakfast?

At the journey's end awaits the woods. Not the betutiful, silent desolate, lonely, thrillingly lovely woods, that invite to dreams of what never will be, in the joyous solitude of just one's self and the woods. Not at all. These woods are overrun with such "convenient" tables and chairs and are swarming with other picnickers who also arose at an unholy hour for a day's rest and pleasure. A rush is made for a convenient table and "This seems like a good place for me" says one of the picnickers.

"Yes" admits another reluctantly, "but will it be nice when the sun gets around.

"Well that's so," says the first "I never thought about that."

Presently a lunch table is chosen for a while. The baskets are deposited and the happy people deposit themselves. My, isn't this nice" inquires a corpulent lady and she fans her heated visage with the sun hat which has heretofore disfigured her head and marked her as a picnicker to all the world.

"It does one such a lot of good to get out in the fresh air says another and she settles herself uneasily on the hard straight bench.

Then the little girl with the red curls says:

"I want a sandwich."

'So do I," says the little boy with bare feet, who is the neighbor's child and forever eating.

"And so do I," says the neighbor's neighbor's little girl, who was invited to go along. She says it slyly because it isn't her mother who has charge of the lunch basket, but she wants the sandwich just the same.

"No, you don't," says the woman who is sitting on the hard bench. "You just run off and play. It isn't half an hour since you had your breakfasts."

"I'm hungry," says the little girl with red curls and a sparkle in her eye.

"So'm I," says the little boy with bare feet who is the neighbor's child.

"So'm I," says the shy little girl who was invited to go along.

"You can't be hungry," says the woman who is sitting on the hard bench.

"Oh, poor kiddies," says the fat lady. "Let them have a cookie. Anyway we might just as well have lunch now as any time."

And forthwith lunch is spread out. But what an everlasting time it does take. What pangs of starvation torment the forms of those who have nothing to do with the preparation of the event of the day. The lemon juice which was to have been an important part of the making of lemonade has spilled itself into the salad, and the cream for the coffee has soured, and the dill pickles and the deviled eggs are jumbled together, and the chocolate from the cake has oozed into the baked beans. The sandwiches give out before the neighbor's child who was invited to come along, and who eats very slowly, has had enough, and the fat lady hasn't even begun because she was so busy feeding the clamorous visitors.

Here it is only 11 o'clock, with the whole day ahead of them, and already lunch has been eaten, and the little boy with bare feet has run a nail in his foot, and the little girl with red curls has scratched the visage of the neighbor's child who was invited to go along. Numerous other children who happen to be along show a distinct aversion to the bubbling brooks and the beautiful woods, and insist upon sitting on the hard benches and gazing with unblinking eyes at the frolicsome fiddles.

Yes, indeed! A day's washing or sawing wood for a living or making hay in the hot sun or trying to collect outstanding accounts o nthe day before pay day, any of these light and happy pastimes are to be chosen in preference to a whole day's picnic.

And so, on these happy August days the workers may be seen with contented and tranquil faces going blithely to work, and the picnickers stand on the corners waiting for cars with unbecoming sun hats and babies and lunch baskets, with already a look of impending woe glowering forth.

The weather tomorrow is a sure bet compared with testing a watermelon to discover whether it is a good one or not. The grocer who is anxious to be rid of the watermelons says in a seductive tone, "And wouldn't you like a nice, juicy, ripe watermelon." And who wouldn't? "If you can choose a good one," you say dubiously. And, of course, he can. He handles the watermelons with a critical eye looking for the very best. He ignores several that he sells a little later in the day to some one else, and at last chooses one. "Ah, that's the one," says the grocer man. And he sends it home. How different is the table when one begins to carve the melon. "Watermelons are so tasteless," one complains bitterly, and when a protest is registered with the base wretch who sold it, he says, "Well you know, watermelons are a thing we can't tell about."

"Evidently," you say bitterly, and then order several cantaloupes which may turn out just as badly.

DRESS PARADE AT HUNTER'S PARK

The stern god of war will be rampant at Hunter's Park a week from tonight.

The scenes which a week or two ago formed the background for the sprites and fairies of the Woodland drama will be a setting for a very different performance on this occasion. Before Lieut. Col. F. E. Resche, as reviewing officer, the local militia companies, A, C and E, will hold a dress parade, the first outdoor parade ever witnessed in Duluth.

The three companies with the band, will hold battalion drill, with guard mount, and all the formalities of the stringent government inspection. The Duluth companies are the cracks of the state, and the drill should be well worth witnessing.

INSPECTOR APPOINTED

Will Prepare a Report on the Outside Dairies.

Health Commissioner Patton today announced the appointment of Charles A. Peterson to the position of milk inspector. His duties will be the inspection of all the outside dairies which ship milk to Duluth. His term of office will run two months, and at the end of that time the result of his findings will be published, in connection with those of the inspectors having in charge the city dairies.

A list of all the dairies having dealings in Duluth, whether inside or outside the city limits, will be prepared, and opposite each one will be placed the official standings. These will be published, so the general public will have an opportunity to compare one dairy with another, and decide for itself just which ones are the most deserving of patronage. It will thus be good business policy for the milkmen to put their places in first-class shape, for the ones having the highest standing will doubtless get the most business.

The appointment of another local inspector will be announced within the next few days.

WHEAT SOARS MORE THAN FOUR POINTS

Duluth and Minneapolis Lead in Very Bullish Market.

Flax is Well Bought and Closes at Higher Prices.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 5.—Wheat opened with a rush this morning and with active trading prices went up more than four points in Duluth and Minneapolis and closed at the top level.

Buying was very firm from the outset. There was plenty of bullish news from all parts of the Northwest and the foreign markets were very strong. The experts flooded the markets with reports of further deterioration of the crop and the general feeling about the crop during the session was that it had been severely damaged. Shorts were rushing to cover at all stages.

Liverpool closed 1d higher, Berlin ⅞c higher and Budapest 1c lower.

The September option closed 4¼c higher in Duluth, 2⅞c higher in Chicago and New York, 4⅛c higher for new September in Minneapolis, 2⅞-3c higher in St. Louis, 2⅝-¾c higher in Kansas City and 5⅛c higher for October in Winnipeg. The December option closed 4¾c higher in Duluth, 3-⅛c higher in Chicago, 4¼c higher for new December in Minneapolis, 3c higher in New York, 2⅞-3c up in St. Louis, 2⅞c higher in Kansas City and 3⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

September corn closed ½-⅝c higher in Chicago and ¼d higher in Liverpool. September oats closed 1⅞c higher in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—There was a firm undertone to the speculative wheat market at the opening and values were ⅛d to ¼d higher with a further gain of ½d to ¾d during the morning. Offerings were light and support good, owing to the late steadiness in American cables yesterday. Later in the session there was good speculative buying on the low estimate of the French crop. At midday the market was firm and from ¾d to ⅞d higher than Tuesday.

"Corn was steady at the start and unchanged, but during the morning had an advance of ¼d. Strength was the result of covering of shorts, and in sympathy with the strength in wheat."

Car receipts at Duluth were 32 against 72 last year, and at Minneapolis 79 against 174 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 111 against 246 last year. Chicago received 198 against 253 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,166,000 bus, last year 1,310,000 bus. Shipments 944,000 bus, last year 386,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 387,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 453,000 bus, last year 436,000 bus. Shipments 413,000 bus, last year 525,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 2,936 bus.

Buying was heavy in the Duluth market today and both options were active up to the close. September wheat opened ½c higher at $1.02½ bid, advanced to $1.06¼ and closed there, a gain of 4¼c over yesterday. December wheat opened ¼c higher at 99¼c, vaulted to $1.03¾ and closed at that price, a gain of 4¾c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ½c higher, and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 10¾c over September for No. 1 northern.

Flax was active at all stages of the session. After the opening, prices went up, and though there was a reaction during the latter part of the session, the market rallied again and closed stronger. September flax opened 1⅜c lower at $1.31, advanced to $1.34¼, declined to $1.33¼ and rallied to $1.34, closing there, a gain of 1⅝c over yesterday. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.31, declined to $1.29½ and finally reacted to $1.32¾, closing there, a gain of 1½c over yesterday. November flax opened 1¼c higher at $1.32¼, went as high as $1.32⅝ bid, declined to $1.31¼ and rallied by the close to $1.32¼, a gain of 1¼c over yesterday. December flax sold at $1.30 and closed at that price, a gain of 1½c over yesterday.

Coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Prospects of More Warm Weather Starts Wheat at an Advance.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—An advance of 1d at Liverpool and hot weather in the Northwest, with a prospect of still warmer weather to come, caused an advance of 1c or more all along the line in the wheat market at the opening today. September opened ½@⅝c to ⅞@1c higher at 94¼c to 94⅝c and sold at 94¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 310 cars against 449 cars last week and 499 cars a year ago.

Later the market turned sensationally bullish at the top. All deliveries averaged from 3⅛@¼c to 3⅜@½c over yesterday. At the close the strength was well held, September being 2⅞c up to 96½@⅝c; December 3c higher at 98⅞@99c and May 3c advanced at $1.03⅛.

The corn market was active and strong on the continued dry weather. September opened ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c over yesterday at 75⅝@75¾c and sold at 75½c. Local receipts were 174 cars with 17 of contract grade.

The corn market eased off for a time, September touching 73¼@⅜c, but a rally followed on the wheat strength and the close was steady, September ½c to ⅝c up at 76c.

The oats market was strong on reports of crop damage, the demand for May delivery being particularly marked. September opened ⅝@⅞c higher at 45¾c to 46¼c and held within the opening range. Local receipts were 148 cars.

Provisions were moderately active, opening from 5c to 15@17½c over yesterday. September pork at $15.65; September lard, $9.55 and September ribs, $9.02½@9.05.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Bullish Influences Send Wheat Up Over Yesterday's Prices.

Minneapolis, Aug. 5.—The cables disappointed the bulls yesterday, but they made up for it today, for against our decline Liverpool was ⅛@¼d higher to open and ¾@⅞d higher in second advices. The labor trouble on the Canadian Pacific was a bullish influence and lighter receipts, Minneapolis receipts of only 79 against 174, Duluth 33 against 72, and a decrease of 275,000 bushels in Minneapolis elevator stocks for four days all had strengthening effect, but mainly it was the continued bad crop news from North Dakota that caused the advance. Big buying orders came into the pit right after the opening, and, although heavy selling appeared at intervals, enough new buying strength kept coming in to keep the market on the rise. Near the close the pit became excited, shorts covered, heavy buying orders came in from the country, and new September rushed up to $1.06, old September $1.07, both closing at the top. September opened $1.02¼; high, $1.06; low, $1.02¼; close, $1.06. Old September high, $1.07; close, $1.07. December opened $1.00⅝; high, $1.04⅝; low, $1.00⅝; close, $1.04⅝. Old December closed $1.04⅞.

Cash demand was good at $1.18@1.20 for No. 1 Northern, and $1.14@1.16 for No. 2. Close: No. 1 Northern, $1.22 spot; $1.18 to arrive; No. 2 Northern, $1.18 spot; $1.14 to arrive; No. 3 wheat, $1.12@1.14. No. 3 yellow corn, 74¾c.

No. 3 white oats, 49⅞@50⅞c.

No. 2 rye, old, 72¾c; new, 71¼@72¼c.

Barley receipts, 8 cars. The market was firm and about 1c higher than yesterday, quality considered for both new and old. Close, 48@57c.

Flax receipts, 3 cars. Cash buyers refused to follow the option, and while actual prices paid were higher, they were weaker relative to the options and 2 cents under Duluth September. Close, $1.31¾.

Millstuffs quoted firmer by millers who say they can sell on the basis of $19.50 for bran in bulk.

Millers advanced prices of patents 15 cents a barrel but they made no change in clears which have now remained unchanged against an advancing trend of a month or longer in patents. Demand is lighter than ever and millers report it almost impossible to sell on the present high range. Shipments 27,492 barrels. First patnts $6.15@6.25; second patents $6.00@6.15; first clears, $4.35@4.45; second clears $3.50@3.60.

Grain Gossip.

Minneapolis wired: Temperatures are all that could be desired in the Northwest. It is figured out that the damage has been done in the three states; now it is a question of developing how much the damage is. It looks now like it is more serious than any one dreamed of. There is no let-up in bad reports from blight and rust. It is claimed there is an immense amount of wheat that will never be cut. They are beginning to find plenty of fields that have been blighted so bad that there is nothing in the head.

John Inglis wired from Grand Forks: Up the valley from Fargo to Grand Forks rust spores are showing in spots. Around here wheat is rusting badly. The wheat is ripening prematurely and the filling is imperfect. They have commenced cutting. The quality is poor.

The following has been received from the South Dakota Millers' association: "Rust and heat the past week have injured the wheat crop nearly one-third. Two-thirds acreage of the state was practically safe before the rust. The estimates total yield of state of 33,000,000 bushels. Last week Mr. Neill's estimate was 42,000,000 bus."

Gossip Current Among the Dealers on the Local Board.

A. S. White, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, spent the morning on the local 'change. He says that when he left, the Windy City traders were about evenly divided on the question of whether the Northwestern crop had been damaged as much by hot weather and rust as the very bullish experts, touring the belt, intimated.

Personally, he declared that he thought the crop had been damaged by the hot weather, but was not worried by the black rust rumors.

"From every source of information I have, has come the statement that in nearly every locality in the Northwest the wheat was far enough advanced to place it out of danger from the rust blight," said Mr. White. "The damage has been done by the hot, dry weather. I would like to see a big crop."

COPPER STOCKS ARE UNCHANGED

THE COUNTY TAX RATE

The county tax rate for next year will be either 2.42 or 2.62 mills.

The county board at its meeting this afternoon is figuring upon a rate of 1.92 mills for all county expenses except roads. The auditor's estimate called for a levy of .5 mills for road purposes, which would make a total levy of 2.42 mills, but the range commissioners are holding out for an additional two-tenths of a mill for road purposes, which would make a total of 2.62 mills. This would be an increase of .8 mills over last year.

THE STOCKS ARE STRONG

Prices Advance on Strong Buying Orders Throughout List.

The Market Closed Easy After Hour of Irregular Fluctuations.

New York, Aug. 5.—The stock market today had a strong opening and large buying orders were distributed through the list. The advance in American Smelting reached 1½, Canadian Pacific and American Locomotive, 1¼; American Woolen, 1, and St. Paul, Great Northern preferred and Amalgamated Copper large fractions.

Realizing in American Smelting, Union Pacific and Reading caused a fractional reaction, but the rise was soon resumed under the lead of St. Paul and National Lead, and the high prices for the movement were reached by several stocks. National Lead jumped 4⅜, Havana Electric 3, American Smelting 2, St. Paul and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 3¼, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, United States Rubber 1¼, and Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Wisconsin Central, Amalgamated Copper and Corn Products preferred 1. Toledo, St. Louis & Western after losing 2 rebounded 3 points.

The demand flagged in the second hour and prices were allowed to slip back. Southern Railway preferred declined 1¼, Southern Pacific rose 1 at noon and steadied the list. Bonds were strong.

Rock Island preferred was bought extensively for a while, but the rest of the list was inclined to run off on a decreased demand. Rock Island preferred gained 1⅝, American Linseed, 1¼, and Iowa Central preferred, Pressed Steel Car preferred, Republic Steel preferred and International Pump preferred 1. The tone afterwards became firmer again when American Smelting rose to 94¾, a gain of 3¼. American Tobacco preferred lost 1. The spurt in the market induced by the buoyancy of American Smelting soon culminated, and the speculation became dull again and somewhat easier.

The market closed easy. Strength in special stocks contended as an influence with news of bad weather conditions in the Northwest. Price fluctuations were irregular. St. Paul got up 2 and American Sugar 1½. United States Steel preferred touched 111⅞. On the reaction Reading, Union Pacific and a few others got below last night, and Missouri Pacific lost 1¼.

Copper Gossip.

Boston, Aug. 5.—Paine, Webber & Co.: We are still very bullish on the coppers. Every day we get better information on the metal market and believe that copper will sell at 14c in a few days. The speculation in Amalgamated has not yet commenced and we advise its purchase at once. The other coppers are meeting some liquidation but the buying has only commenced and will carry them to much higher prices. We see no reason to expect any material reaction for some time and think stocks can be safely purchased. Most brokers here report more sales than purchases which indicates accumulation by strong interests and a continuation of upward swing.

With our own private wire connections with New York, Boston and the copper countries of Michigan, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Arizona and Mexico, we are the best equipped to give you quick executions on all the leading local stocks of any brokerage house in the city.

CUPID WINS OUT AT LAST

With his face looking as if it had come in contact with a bunch of exploding cannon firecrackers, Joseph Bresola, father of the 14-year-old girl who eloped with Fernando Casimir, the young Italian from Coleraine, last Thursday night, appeared in police court this morning and said he was through interfering with the love affairs of the young people.

"They can go where they want to, and do what they please; I bother them no more," he said, with a discouraged shrug of the shoulders.

According to the story told Judge Cutting by Casimir, Bresola threatened him with a gun at dinner yesterday, while his mother-in-law flashed a butcher knife on his wife, Mary. Relatives interfered, and no damage was done, but Bresola appeared at the Union depot yesterday afternoon, as the bride and groom were about to board a train for Coleraine, and attacked Casimir with a broom handle. He struck the young man two or three times, according to witnesses, and Fernando retaliated by striking him.

The young man claims he struck only one blow, and that with the flat of his hand saying tthe rest of the damage to the older man's countenance resulted from coming in contact with the station platform. It didn't look as though a fall on his face could have resulted in so much damage, however, Bresola's face was swelled all out of shape this morning. Both of his eyes were black, and his face had several cuts on it. There was also an ugly cut on the nose. Altogether, the man appeared to be about the worst whipped person that ever appeared in police court. The son-in-law did not have a mark on him.

There was no doubt that Bresola started the fight, but his punishment seemed so severe that Judge Cutting was content to let him go under suspended sentence. Casimir was accorded the same treatment. He said he would leave for his home on the range today. He was arrested last Friday on the charge of abduction, but was released under bond. Probably the case will not be pushed any further and from the old man's words this morning the young people have good reason to believe that they will be bothered no further by the irate parents. Cupid evidently is the victor.

Directors' Meeting.

The election of a vice president of the First National bank was considered at a meeting of the directors of that institution this afternoon. Before the meeting opened it was believed that David Williams, president of the Farmers' and Merchants' bank of Webster, S. D., would be the man chosen to fill the new office that will be created by the directors of the bank. The meeting was called at 4 o'clock with a number of out-of-town directors present.

The strength of the market today can be characterized according to one's love of adjectives, either as surprising or astounding. In the face of considerable bad news the market took heavy offerings from commission houses and prices rose magnificently to the highest level reported since the unpleasantness of last autumn. The strength in Reading was ascribed to the favorable decision in the test of commodity clause to the Hepburn law.

Steel stocks showed up splendidly on the securing of the major portion of the B. & O. order, while B. R. T. found many friends on talk of a record-breaker for summer earnings.

The market has given today a magnificent evidence of absorbing power. There is no bear so bearish as a sold out bull. A continuance of more favorable crop accounts will undoubtedly quickly cause a re-entry into the bull ranks of those who were the largest sellers of stocks today.

At the meeting of the directors of C. & M. it was decided to withhold the report on C. & M.; this is distinctly a bull card. All looks alike. Some insider wanted stock as cheap as it. Can he get it? Copper Queen strong at $1.50; have an order from one party for 1,000 shares at this price. All you have to do is call up or come in any time today to sell at this price. Dean acted well, selling up to $5. Superior & Boston hard to find at $6.25. In fact, the entire list is strong and offerings scattering and light.

Copper market very strong. Shares are going higher every day, and have only begun to advance. North Butte will again advance fast one of these days. Ballaklava is strong around $8. Copper Queen is getting harder to find every day and should sell higher soon. Calumet & Sonora is $8.50 to $9 a share and looks good. Superior & Pittsburg and Greene are both very active. Carman sold at $3.50 at the close today. Butte & Superior is again very strong. The East, the South and West all buy this one, and will say this stock looks like money all the time in the broker offices. You can sell it in a minute when you need the money. Buy Butte & Superior to the limit at this low level. Copper Queen also looks good at the close tonight. This one is tipped for $5 or better.

NEW YORK BANKER IS OPTIMISTIC

S. G. Bayne, president of the Seaboard National bank of New York city, who is at the Spalding today, states that the financial condition of the country is steadily improving, and that in his opinion, the improvement of industrial conditions will be steady from this time. Mr. Bayne stated that he believed that business would continue to improve until normal conditions would be reached.

Mr. Bayne said that there was more money in the country than at any time since the money stringency of last October. He further said that the splendid crop outlook had given the business of the country a new impetus, and should the crops prove to be as good as expected, there was every reason to believe that the effects of the hard times of last October would be entirely overcome.

Mr. Bayne came up on the North West and left for St. Paul today. He is president of one of the so-called Rockefeller banks, which is one of the most influential in New York city.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

New York, Aug.—Bronson Howard, dramatist and author, died yesterday of heart failure at Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J., after an illness of about a year. The funeral will take place at Avon Thursday and shortly afterward the body will be removed for interment to Detroit where Mr. Howard was born sixty-eight years ago.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Michael McGurn, prominent for twenty years in hand ball circles, died last night after an illness of five weeks.

BROKERS SUSPEND.

New York, Aug. 5.—The suspension of the firm of Eastman & Co., stockbrokers, was announced on the floor of the consolidated exchange today.

TEN CASES OF GOITRE CURED

By Wittman Medical Experts—A New Treatment Proves Great Success.

Of all the cases cured by the Wittman Experts at Twenty-first avenue north and Superior street, perhaps the most wonderful is Wittman's new discovery for Goitre and glandular troubles, and troubles of Liver and Spleen Mrs. Wm. McGilvery of Bayfield, Wis., is perhaps the best example of what can be accomplished for these troubles. Just three weeks ago she began the treatment and today her neck has reduced in size to such an extent that it cannot be noticed that she ever had a goitre. Her nerves, which was also greatly affected, have subsided and she feels like a new woman. The fact that this woman tried many things without success before taking Wittman's treatment goes to prove again that goitre can be cured, no matter what has been tried.

The office continues to have many callers at Twenty-first avenue north and Superior street, from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4 At Kugler's drug store the medical compound continues to go with a rush; three bottles $2.50. Tonight another big free show at Fourth street.

CITY COMPTROLLER SAYS TAXES CAN BE LOWERED

Prepares Estimate of City Expenses for the Year 1909.

Total is $28,000 Less Than Levy for Present Year.

City Comptroller McCormick has prepared his estimate of the city's expenses for the year 1909. It will be submitted to the conference committee for use in fixing the levy for the coming year.

The comptroller has slashed the estimates of the heads of the departments in almost every instance, his estimate being $85,648.09 less than their total. During the past week The Herald has been running a series of estimates by the heads of the departments, showing the amount of money they claimed was necessary for the coming year. In almost every instance an increase was asked over last year's figures. The comptroller's estimate, however, cuts down the allowance of most of the departments.

The following statement was prepared by Mr. McCormick for The Herald:

Interest fund	$115,000.00
Sinking fund	38,000.00
Fire department fund	116,000.00
Police department fund	73,000.00
Light fund	38,000.00
Water fund	49,000.00
Public Works Fund—
Engineer's department	19,000.00
Building inspector's dept.	2,640.00
Board of public works department	91,360.00
Health department fund	14,500.00
Municipal court fund	15,000.00
Salary fund	40,000.00
Printing and supply fund	8,000.00
Library fund	14,500.00
Park fund	16,000.00
Water and light plant fund	19,000.00
Permanent improvement fund	45,000.00
Police department, pension fund	2,000.00
Total	$716,000.00

The estimate calls for a transfer of $184,000 from the general fund to the credit of other funds as follows:

Fire department fund	$56,000.00
Police department fund	73,000.00
Municipal court fund	15,000.00
Salary fund	40,000.00
Total	$184,000.00

The balance of the funds necessary are to be supplied by taxation, making the tax estimate for the year as follows:

Interest fund	$115,000.00
Sinking fund	38,000.00
Fire department fund	60,000.00
Light fund	38,000.00
Water fund	49,000.00
Public Works Fund—
Engineer's department	19,000.00
Building inspector's dept.	2,640.00
Board of public works	91,360.00
Health department fund	14,500.00
Printing and supply fund	8,000.00
Library fund	14,500.00
Park fund	16,000.00
Water and light plant fund	19,000.00
Permanent improvement fund	45,000.00
Police department, pension fund	2,000.00
Total	$532,000.00

The comptroller's estimate for the year 1909 is $28,000 less than the tax levy for the present year. The rate for the present year for city purposes is $16.47 per thousand, or 16.47 mills. On the personal and real valuation of last year the rate for city purposes would be reduced to 15.64 mills.

The recent assessment of personal and real property made by the assessor, now under consideration by the board of review, will, it is estimated, be reduced to approximately $38,000,000. Assuming that the assessment will be cut to this figure, $38,000 will be the earning capacity of one mill. On the basis of the comptroller's tax estimate the rate of taxation would be 14.00 mills, or 3.47 mills less than the present rate.

NO SALOONS FOR COTTON

County Commissioners Will Not Grant Licenses in New Town.

Prohibition for Cotton! The county commissioners will not stand for any saloons in the new range town. The mining interests do not want them, the people of Cotton do not want them, the range commissioners do not want them, so the board decided to turn them down. In short, it will be about as difficult for a would-be dispenser of the cup that cheers to break into the new and growing city of Cotton as for the traditional camel to pass through the eye of the traditional needle.

The commissioners met this morning as the county board of equalization, and a representative of the Pickands-Mather company was present to discuss the matter informally with the board. If there was any danger of the licenses being granted at the monthly meeting which comes tomorrow, he said that they wanted to have a chance for a hearing, as they were very much opposed to the granting of any saloon licenses in the new town. A canvass of the members present was taken and it was found that a majority were willing to vote to turn the license down. The range commissioners were in favor of the move.

The board of equalization does not expect to get busy much before the first of next week. It is hoped that the city board of review will have completed its work by tomorrow, but this is not certain. It will probably be the first of the week before the books are checked over and in the hands of the county board for the consideration of kicks.

It is rumored that the board will have a number of complaints from realty owners, especially in the western part of the city, where values have been raised about 50 per cent, it is claimed. It is reported that there will be a considerable reduction in this part of the city, with a corresponding necessary raise in other portions. The complaint of the Great Northern people on the $65,000 assessment of the interstate bridge will also come up.

For the past two weeks the board has been meeting every morning at 10 o'clock and adjourning, merely living up with the requirements of the law. Tomorrow they will meet at 9 o'clock in order to dispense with the equalization business before going on with their regular monthly meeting at 9:30.

TO CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

Bryan Proposes to Give It Much Personal Attention.

Will Meet Leaders and Give Them Benefit of His Council.

Lincoln, Aug. 6.—That William J. Bryan proposed to a considerable extent to conduct his own campaign for the presidency was disclosed here today, when he announced that he would spend three days in Chicago, beginning Aug. 22. The Democratic headquarters will be in full swing by that time, and it is Mr. Bryan's intention to meet and confer with Chairman Mack and other leaders of his party and give them the benefit of his council.

Another speaking date has been arranged by Mr. Bryan. He will leave on the morning of Aug. 21 for Des Moines, where he will discuss the tariff question. That night he will proceed to Chicago. After his three days' stay in the latter city he will go on to Indianapolis to attend the notification ceremonies of John W. Kern, which will occur on the 25th. On the return trip he will speak on the 27th at Topeka, arriving in Lincoln the next day.

The reception accorded Judge Alton B. Parker in Los Angeles last night, when he delivered an address strongly supporting Bryan and Kern, was a source of much pleasure to Mr. Bryan. It was the expectation that Judge Parker, in response to an invitation from the Democratic nominee, would stop off in Lincoln on his way back, but Judge Parker wrote that before the invitation was received he had planned to go home by another route. He, however, pledged his services during the campaign, and will make numerous speeches.

KOREANS ARE TREACHEROUS

Lured Japanese Troops Into the Hills and Annihilated Them.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 6.—Further details have been received here from Possiet Bay regarding the annihilation last month of a detachment of Japanese soldiers on the Russo-Chinese frontier by a band of Korean insurgents. The Japanese troops were encamped on the frontier near Hunchun. They were attacked unexpectedly the night of July 11 by a strong band of Korean insurgents and perished to a man. Russian Cossacks who were scouting the frontier, noticed the disappearance of the Japanese flag from over the encampment. They thereupon visited the place and found traces of a fierce struggle and the dead bodies of the Japanese. The local population was questioned, but professed entire ignorance of the occurrence. The Korean insurgents are daily becoming more daring. They attack and kill individual Japanese or even small detachments. Recently three Koreans captured by the Japanese offered to act as guides to the insurgent headquarters in the mountains. The detachment was thus lured into the hills where it was set upon and overwhelmed by Koreans in ambush. The Koreans made use of stones and muskets.

SPIRITS ADVANCE.

Price of Distillers' Finished Goods Goes Up 2 Cents a Gallon.

Cincinnati, Aug. 6.—An advance of 2 cents a gallon in the basis prices of distillers' finished goods, or spirits, became effective today, making the basis price $1.37 a gallon. Word to this effect was received last night by W. H. Hobart of the Diamond Distilleries company and the advances were posted on change today.

This is the highest price that spirits ever touched in this market. The $1.35 prices which was made last fall, at that time was regarded as a record, the increase being made because of the high price of corn. When the $1.35 basis was established No. 3 corn, or distillers' corn, as it is termed in the trade, sold around 60 cents a bushel. This same corn is now quoted at 70 to 80 cents in the local market.

TAFT TALKS TO LAWYERS

Republican Candidate Addresses the Virginia Bar Association.

Administration of Justice Should Promote Tranquility and Peace.

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 6.—Judge W. H. Taft delivered a speech before the Virginia Bar association today.

Judge Taft presented his subject by stating that the end sought in the administration of justice was to promote tranquility and contentment among the people. It had, he said, long been established that the supreme court of the United States was the ultimate arbiter of the great political and legal issues, deciding on the limitations of both the legislative and executive branches of government which had carried the usefulness of the courts beyond anything attempted in other countries. Notwithstanding this desirable situation, Mr. Taft expressed a doubt that our present administration of justice insured general popular satisfaction with its results.

Prosecution Not Thorough.

"There are," he said, "abundant evidences that the prosecution of criminals have not been certain and thorough to the point of preventing popular protest. The existence of lynching in all parts of the country is directly traceable to this lack of uniformity and thorough enforcement of our criminal laws.

"I believe that the institution of private property, next to that of personal liberty, has had most to do with the uplifting and physical and moral improvement of the whole human race.

URGE SMITH FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Would Like to See Former Senator Assistant to Mack.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The selection of Former Senator James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey, as vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and head of the sub-committee which will control the Democratic campaign in the eastern states is being strongly urged by several national committeemen, and while Chairman Mack has made no definite decision, it is believed here that Mr. Smith will be named for the place. Chairman Mack will name the vice chairman and the sub-committee shortly after his arrival in Chicago, where he will formally open headquarters for the national committee tomorrow or Saturday.

Mr. Smith's appointment as campaign leader in the east is urged on the ground that he has not been strongly identified with any faction in the party and commands a wide influence in Democratic councils. Chairman Mack said today that Mr. Smith was strongly considered for head of the sub-committee.

Chairman Mack will leave tonight for Chicago.

MRS. SAGE MAY BUY AN ISLAND

Would Present It to Government as Site for Military School.

New York, Aug. 6.—It is learned from a New York friend of Mrs. Russell Sage that she is thinking seriously of purchasing Constitutional island, in the Upper Hudson, opposite West Point, and presenting it to the United States government as a site on which to erect the world's greatest military preparatory school, a school that will be to West Polt what Eton is to Oxford and Lawrenceville is to Princeton.

According to Mrs. Sage's friend, she will send a representative to West Point within a few days to look into the matter and put her in possession of all the facts concerning Constitutional Island, the attitude of the West Point authorities toward the idea, and whether or not congress is likely to give its sanction, in the event of Mrs. Sage obtaining title to the property.

President Roosevelt is said to be in favor of the plan to establish such a school.

EXPLORER DEAD IN FAR NORTH

Ericksen and Companions Perish in a Snow Storm.

Copenhagen, Aug. 6.—Mylius Ericksen, the Danish explorer, has met his death in the Far North. According to information just received in a telegram to the committee of the Denmark-Greenland expedition, Erichsen and two of his companions that sailed with him from Copenhagen, June 24, 1906, to the unexplored regions of the northeastern coast of Greenland, perished in a snow storm. The three men were on an expedition over the ice when disaster overtook them.

Otherwise the exploring party has been successful. Large tracts of unknown land have been mapped out and the entire northeastern coast of Greenland has been chartered.

THE MARKET IDOL OF THE HOUR

OVER 47,500 BARRELS OF WHISKY ARE DESTROYED BY A FIRE IN KENTUCKY

Six Large Bonded Warehouses and Other Property Consumed.

One of Most Destructive Fires Ever Known in the State.

The Government Will Lose Nearly $2,500,000 in Taxes.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 6.—A fire believed to have been of incendiary origin, which raged from 10 o'clock last night until nearly daylight this morning, destroyed six large bonded warehouses of the Greenbaum Distillery at Midway, Woodfound county, containing 47,500 barrels of whisky, burned several negro cottages, the Southern railway trestle and two county bridges and threatened the northern part of the town of Midway. The property loss was at least $300,000, partly covered by insurance, while the constructive loss to the government in the destruction of whisky in bond, amounting to 2,300,000 gallons, will be nearly $2,500,000. The fire was one of the most disastrous known in Central Kentucky. The main distillery, the books and the superintendent's residence were saved. The fire is believed to be of incendiary origin, having started in two places at once. Sounds as of explosions were heard just before the alarm was given. The concern was one of the largest in the state and manufactured whisky for firms in many parts of the country.

The distillery was owned by Morris Greenbaum of Louisville and had been closed several months. The fire will be investigated.

CONSTANT FIGHTING

Going on in the Streets of the City of Tabriz.

Casualties Due to Bombs and Shrapnel Estimated at 800.

Tabriz, Aug. 6.—There has now been thirty-five days' fighting in the streets of Tabriz and the casualties, due chiefly to bombs, thrown from mortars, and shrapnel are estimated at 800. Many of the finer residences of the city and hundreds of shops in the bazaars have been looted, the loss in this direction being placed at more than $1,000,000.

The American missionaries in the cities have been exposed to stray bullets, but although they have had some narrow escapes, none of them has been injured. During one of the heavier bombardments a piece of shrapnel fell in the mission garden within a few feet of one of the mission servants.

There is a very bitter feud going on between the Constitutional Progressives, who hold eleven wards of the city, and the Reactionaries, who hold one large ward. The mass of the people, however, have informed the central government that they are not opposed to the shah. Those who are zealous for the continuation of the old regime regard the Constitutional Progressives as revolutionaries. The local assembly or anjuman did on one occasion express seditionary views, but later acknowledged the supremacy of the shah and adjourned definitely in token of submission.

EMPEROR SENDS HIS REGRETS

To Count Zeppelin on Account of Destruction of Balloon.

Friedrichafen, Aug. 6.—The king of Wurtemburg called on Count Zeppelin at his hotel here today and conveyed the aeronaut the personal regret of Empepror William over the destruction yesterday of the count's airship at Echterdingen. The emperor telegraphed "I have heard with the deepest regret of the destruction of your balloon by a storm and I wish you to know of my cordial sympathy in your misfortune. All the more since I and all Germany thought we had every reason to believe we could congratulate you in the glorious realization of your splendid, epoch-making achievement. Nevertheless, what you have accomplished must be recognized as of the highest order and this must be a comfort to you in this catastrophe."

CARDINAL GIBBONS.

BOY'S HEAD IS FOUND

Balance of Youth's Remains Discovered in Drainage Canal.

Believed to Have Been Murdered for Giving Testimony.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The mysterious murder of the boy whose lower limbs and torso were found Tuesday and yesterday was somewhat clarified by the finding of the head of the victim. The hacked and severed limbs were found in Mud lake, the torso a mile and a half from that place under a bridge, and the head was fished out of the drainage canal a considerable distance below the bridge today. The police declare that with various portions of the body reunited and other evidence which has been discovered, identification of the victim is probable. Acting on the theory that the murder was the work of padrones attacked in the recent prosecution of Greek "boy slave" cases, the arrest was made today of a Greek known as an importer of boys from Greece. The police refused to divulge the name of their prisoner until further investigation had been made.

The discovery of the head enabled the police to describe the boy as about fourteen years of age, four feet eleven inches in height, slight of build, hair dark brown, eyes blue and complexion fair. Wore a gaudy colored shirt and blue serge suit at the time of disappearance.

The discovery that the shirts and collars found near the torso were purchased by a man and a boy at a store the location of which is being kept a secret for the time being, has given the detectives another theory—that the lad was killed by an unnatural father or guardian. The theory given the most credence, however, is that the murder was an outgrowth of adverse testimony given against Greek padrones. Every Greek detective in the city has been put to work on the case. They have, it is said, discovered evidence indicating with some certainty the existance of a Greek society somewhat similar in its workings to the Italian "Black Hand."

FORMER PRIZE FIGHTER DEAD

Robert Turnbull, Crazed by the Heat, Ends His Life.

New York, Aug. 6.—Probably crazed by the heat of the last few days Robert Turnbull, a prominent operator in suburban real estate, formerly a professional pugilist of some note, shot and killed himself in his home in Borough Park, Brooklyn, today. He had complained of illness which he attributed to the heat. Mr. Turnbull is said to have been formerly amateur lightweight champion of America. He fought against Jack Dempsey for the professional championship three times and was defeated after fighting two draws.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R. UTILIZING JAPANESE IN PLACE OF THE STRIKERS

Are Employed as Wipers and to Do Small Repairs.

Operative Force May Soon Join With the Shopmen.

Applications for Men From the States Are Not Met.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 6.—The Canadian Pacific is now replacing some of the strikers in Western shops by Japanese. Several coachloads were brought in last night from the mountain section to Swift Current and Medicine Hat, while Galicians do duty at Moosejaw. Japanese are being gathered on the Pacific coast and more are expected today. They will be placed in roundhouses as wipers and to do small repairs under instructions from foremen.

The crux of the strike situation lies in the attitude of the engineers, firemen and conductors, and indications are that the inter-union jealousies which have spoiled previous strikes for the men have now disappeared, and that four days hence the whole Canadian Pacific railway service will be tied up by those operatives refusing to take out mails on the ground that the trains have not been properly inspected.

CANNOT IMPORT MEN.

Canadian Alien Laws Prevent Importing Strike-Breakers.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—With thousands of skilled mechanics on strike due to the walkout of the machinists and other employes in the company's shops, agents of the Canadian Pacific railroad are holding out inducements to men, not only in Canada, but in the United States as well, to fill the places of the strikers. But St. Paul labor agencies give out the statement that it will be practically impossible for any men to go from here, and the local labor agencies propose to take no chances with the Canadian alien labor act. According to this law no strike breakers can be imported into Canada, the act prescribing a penalty of $1,000 fine for each violation, with deportation of the strike breaker as an added penalty. The machinists have gone out along

The Gopher has a long way to go and will not reach the scene of the maneuvers until 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, the first day of the drills. On the way down the Gopher will probably be joined at Eagle Harbor by the reserve ship Yantic of Hancock and Houghton.

The warship Wolverine, used as a recruiting vessel, will be the flagship of the fleet and the other boats which will participate, beside those already mentioned, are the Don Juan De Austria of Detroit, the Dorothea of Chicago, the Hawk of Cleveland, the Essex of Toledo and possibly the Sandoval of Rochester.

Capt. Culver, aide to the assistant secretary of the navy, and nine naval officers will be present and act as referees in the drills which will be given every day of the maneuvers.

During the signal drill, Tuesday, Aug. 11, the flagship will hoist the international and boat signals and each ship will repeat the hoist as soon as possible. At the end, each ship will wig-wag the interpretations at once to the flagship.

In the boat races, Tuesday morning, Aug. 18, the boats will be in service condition with nothing but loose articles on board. The regulation straight ash oars will be used.

This week of the maneuvers will see a number of exciting sham naval battles and contests at the oars and with guns between the members of the different divisions.

The landing party, Saturday, the 15th, will be an important drill. The men will be supplied with plenty of blank cartridges and the landing party will attack the land fortifications, while the ships shell the beach. The night torpedo attack, Monday, the 17th, is also calculated to prove exciting.

During the last two weeks the members of the Duluth militia have been very busy drilling and making other preparations for the maneuvers. The Gopher has been thoroughly overhauled and painted and will be in fine trim for the mobilizing of the fleet at South Manitou Island.

RAIN STORMS HOLD UP PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 6.—Through traffic on the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake railroad has been blocked since Tuesday as the result of heavy rain storms that swept Southern Utah and vicinity on that day. Two bridges, twenty miles north of Calientes, Nev., were carried away and a landslide that partly filled a deep cut completed the work of blockading the tracks. No. 2, which left Los Angeles Monday night for the East is still held on the west side of the washout. Officials say the tracks will be cleared some time today.

TEST CASE IS AVERTED

Socialists Were Going to Test Police Ruling in Court.

Chief Troyer Says Dispersing Order Applies Only to Fakers.

A test which was to have been made by the Socialists of the right of the chief of police to order all meetings held on downtown street corners, after 7 o'clock in the evening, broken up, has been averted by Chief Troyer explaining that the order did not apply to religious, socialistic or similar gatherings, but was aimed only at street fakers, medicine men, etc., attracting a crowd for business purposes.

He says no religious, political or similar gatherings will be interrupted, as long as the crowd does not become so large or so noisy as to annoy residents of the neighborhood and passers-by. Chief Troyer said his order was wrongly reported, and that it might have been misunderstood by some of the patrolmen.

Socialistic leaders announced this morning that they were going to test in the courts the right of the police to take such summary action, but in view of the chief's explanation, no test will be necessary. A crowd, gathered to hear Morris Kaplan talk on Socialism, at the corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, last evening, was broken up by the police, and Mr. Kaplan was ordered to stop speaking. Before learning of the chief's explanation, the Socialists said this morning that they would hold an open air meeting at the corner of Second avenue west and Superior street tonight, similar in character to the one broken up by the police last night.

If the crowd should be dispersed, and the speakers told to quit talking, they said they would go to the corner of Fourth avenue west and Superior street and there start another meeting. If interrupted there the performance was to have been repeated at First avenue west and Superior street, and if interfered with at First avenue, the speakers said they would submit to an arrest, and take the matter into the courts.

"I knew nothing of last night's occurrence until this morning," said Chief Troyer today. "I do not know why the crowd was dispersed, unless it was because so many people had gathered as to make it a public nuisance. I have received no report from the officers and know nothing about the matter further than that the meeting was stopped. If they broke up the gathering, it was doubtless because they had good and sufficient reason for doing so. That matter is an important one, with a good deal of business passing that way, and it will never do to have it blocked with a crowd of people listening to a speech, even in the evening."

A Faithful Friend.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1872, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. I have been a commercial traveler for eighteen years, and never start out on a trip without this, my faithful friend," says H. S. Nichols of Oakland, Ind. T. When a man has used a remedy for thirty-five years he knows its value and is competent to speak of it. For sale by all druggists.

In Berlin When Auto Arrived.

A Duluth man was among the thousands who hailed the arrival in Berlin, Germany, last month of the American automobile in the New York to Paris race. Augustine Murphy of The Herald composing force, who is "doing" the continent, writing to local friends under date of July 26, tells of the interesting event in the German capital. He says the Stars and Stripes were quite conspicuous in the event and cheers for the nervy American automobilists were on every lip.

Incidentally, Mr. Murphy says that the German city is one of the finest in the matter of splendid buildings, built along architectural lines, great drives and bridges and grand monuments of any he has ever visited.

IOWA MOURNING FOR HER DEAD STATESMAN.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 6.—Iowa is today declared to be in state of mourning for the late William B. Allison by Governor A. B. Cummins. The governor and other state officials will go to Dubuque Saturday to attend the funeral.

It is believed that the governor will soon call a special session of the legislature and his chances of being chosen successor to the late Senator Allison will be bright, as the assembly is dominated by "Progressive" Republicans. The session, if called, will probably meet in October.

More Band Concerts.

What promises to be another big treat to music lovers is being arranged by T. P. Getz for Joyland-White City. Next Sunday, Aug. 9, at 3 and 8:30 p. m., the Third Regiment band of fifty pieces will begin an eight-night series of concerts. The engagement will last until Sunday, Aug. 16, inclusive, and each night will be devoted to some particular branch of concert work. There will be grand opera and comic opera nights, a rag-time night and a request night, for which occasion anybody is invited to send in a request for the band to play their favorite melody. One night will be devoted to national music of all countries, and the beautiful Irish and Scotch melodies will be prominent. Director Jans Flaaten will bring out a number of instrumental solo artists, and high class vocal music will be heard at each concert, which will be given on the big stage. The admission at night will be but 10 cents and free seats will be provided. All the concessions will be open in the evening, and during the day until 5:30 p. m. the park will be open free to picnickers and visitors. The usual dance will be given Saturday night in the pavilion and the bathhouse is open at all times.

STATESMEN WILL SPEAK

Prominent Republicans on Program of West Duluth Club Banquet.

Jacobson, Clapp, Kellogg, Bede and Miller Will Talk.

An opportunity to hear some of the most prominent Republicans of Minnesota will be afforded Duluth people this evening at the banquest of the West Duluth Republican club, which will be held at 7:30 o'clock, at Wade's hall, corner of Central avenue and Ramsey street.

For over a month the club's committees have been preparing for their dinner, which promised to eclipse any they have previously given. The rapid disposal of the tickets since they have been placed on sale also points to the success of the affair. The club has been exceedingly fortunate in securing speakers for the evening, and is highly gratified over its success. J. F. Jacobson, Republican candidate for the nomination for governor, accepted the club's invitation to be present within the last week. This will be the first time Mr. Jacobson has visited the Zenith City since the Republican convention here, two years ago. The others who will respond to toasts are, Frank B. Kellogg of Minneapolis, Senator Moses E. Clapp, Congressman J. Adam Bede and Clarence B. Miller.

The evening will be opened by the pronouncing of the invocation by Dr. Samuel G. Briggs, pastor of the Merritt Memorial M. E. church, following which George J. Mallory will be introduced as toastmaster by A. J. Meldahl, president of the club.

BURIED UNDER STONE.

Carl Peterson Escapes From Under Tons of Rock With Slight Injuries.

Carl Peterson of Fifty-seventh avenue west was literally buried alive beneath a load of crushed rock he was hauling from the stone crusher down Fifty-seventh avenue west yesterday afternoon. He was severely cut about the face and neck. One deep gash in his forehead required several stitches.

The grade down Fifty-seventh avenue is steep. One of the hold-back straps was weak and gave way under the strain of the heavy load behind, alarming the team to such an extent that they overturned the wagon, pinning Peterson under its load of crushed rock. He was taken to his home, where Dr. Seashore dressed his wounds, which are not of a serious nature.

Fire Does Little Damage.

A number of wood sheds in the rear of 616 Fifty-ninth avenue west were badly scorched yesterday afternoon. The fire is supposed to have started from sparks from a chimney. The fire was a small one and easily extinguished by the fire department.

Valuables Are Stolen.

A valuable watch and $10 in change were taken from the home of I. J. Gibson, Fifty-first avenue west and Gosnold street, at an early hour yesterday morning. The police have been working on the case, but have found no clue to lead to the discovery and capture of the thief.

Too Busy to Play.

The Tiger baseball team of West Duluth, which has come into prominence in local juvenile baseball circles on account of its many victories over other teams composed of boys under 12 years old, has ceased to accept any challenges while the league team is playing in the city. The brand new blue uniforms they purchased a short time ago have been laid aside in the excitement of having the White Sox home again. very day the members of the team go to Athletic park, where, with eyes glued to knot-holes, they experience all the thrills of watching the national game played by the leaguers.

UNDESIRABLE WOMEN LEAVING

Police Are Forcing Them to Get Out of City.

Women of doubtful reputation are not wanted on the streets of Duluth. The police are after them. Several have been driven out of the city during the last month. The police court judges are backing up the police department, and are imposing heavy fines and jail sentences, letting the women go in most instances under promise that they will get out of town and stay out.

Two negresses of suspicious actions and appearance were arrested on the street last night. Before Judge Cutting this morning they were sentenced to sixty days each in jail, with an alternative of a $50 fine. Sentence was suspended on condition that they get out of town today. They said they would go, and were given their freedom.

SUPERIOR NEWS

Duluth and Superior Members Are Celebrating at Billings Park.

The Odd Fellows of Duluth and Superior are enjoying a day's outing at Billing's park in Superior today. It is their annual picnic.

Crowds of Duluth Odd Fellows left this side of the bay this morning by street car, boat, and ferry for Superior, where they joined the Superior Odd Fellows at Billing's park. The afternoon is being spent at races and sports of different sorts. Mayor R. D. Haven of Duluth is acting as master of sports. The other members of the committee from Duluth are: S. St. Germaine, R. E. McFarland, William Oettel and A. H. Powell. The Superior committee in charge of the picnic program is A. Williams, M. T. Taylor, M. McMackin and John Crag.

Fight White Plague.

Preliminary steps were taken last evening at a meeting of the Douglas County Medical society, to combat tuberculosis in Superior. A committee with Dr. H. J. Orchard as chairman, was appointed to arrange a meeting at which prominent members of the profession will address the public on the question, so that all may become familiar with the disease. It is proposed to have Dr. Harper of the state health board come to Superior and deliver an address at a public meeting.

Boy Held for Burglary.

On the charge of burglarizing a confectionery store at Nemadji river bridge of $17, Joe Pazyck, 17 years old, is being held in the county jail for trial during the September term. He was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday, where he waived examination, and in default of $300 bail was remanded to the county jail.

Konkel Will Appeal.

Secretary of State Frear, has refused to place the name of Joseph S. Konkel on the primary election ballot, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress from the Eleventh district. His refusal is based on the original law, and took no heed of the amendment to the primary election law. Mr. Konkel circulated his petition in accordance with the amendment. He expects with the aid of his attorneys to have the secretary of state reverse the decision.

Railroad War Continues.

Another fight between the Great Northern and the Soo roads, over the latter's entrance into the city, seems to be due. The Hill road has filed a certificate of necessity with the state railroad commission, asking for permission to build an overhead trestle from H avenue to the Interstate bridge. This trestle proposed by the Great Northern will be over a mile long, from 22 feet to 25 feet in height, and 60 feet wide. It will run past the Kimball school on the west side, and across the Soo line dock property, between the school and the Interstate bridge. For this reason, the Soo people claim that the proposed Great Northern trestle will interfere with their plans of reaching the Interstate bridge.

D'AUTREMONT IS MENTIONED

Democrats Talk of Ex-Mayor as a Congressional Candidate.

Charles d'Autremont is the latest Democrat to be mentioned as a candidate for congress from the Eighth district.

Mr. d'Autremont is on a fishing trip on the Nipigon river at the present time. It is not known what his sentiments are upon the matter. He has always been prominent in the affairs of the party in this county and district, having served as mayor of the city, and in the event of his being a candidate, it is believed that he would poll a strong vote.

ALLEY BLOCKED.

Contractors May be Sued by Indignant Property Owners.

Tuesday the board of public works ordered McLeod & Smith, contractors, who are building the addition to the Board of Trade building, to remove obstructions from the alley within thirty-six hours.

They failed to comply with the order, and today property owners in that vicinity are preparing to start legal action against them.

It is said damages will be demanded, because of the fact that business of certain firms in the neighborhood has been interfered with on account of the alley being blocked up by apparatus and material belonging to the contractors.

ASHLAND MAN FINED.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Morgan, claiming to be from Ashland, Wis., and saying that he was on a land-purchasing tour, was fined $75 by Judge Hanft in police court yesterday for improper conduct in the presene of small boys. Morgan had the alternative of spending thirty days in the workhouse, but he flashed out a roll of bills and soon paid his fine. He was placed under arrest by Detective Kenealy and Jailer Hammes on the complaint of John Laransky, who lives on the Upper Lovee.

MISS ANNIE CATRON.

CATARRH MADE LIFE A BURDEN TO ME

MISS ANNIE CATRON, 927 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"As I have found Peruna a blessing for a severe case of catarrh of the head and throat which I suffered from for a number of years, I am only too pleased to give it my personal endorsement.

"Catarrh such as I suffered from, made life a burden to me, my breath was offensive, stomach bad, and my head stopped up so that I was usually troubled with a headache, and although I tried many so-called remedies, nothing gave me permanent relief. I was rather discouraged with all medicines when Peruna was suggested to me.

"However, I did buy a bottle, and before that was finished there was a marked change in my condition. Much encouraged I kept on until I was completely cured in a month's time, and I find that my general health is also excellent."

People who prefer solid medicines should try Peruna tablets. Each tablet represents one average dose of Peruna.

GRAND FORKS MAD OVER INJUNCTION

Threatened Proceedings to Stop Paving Are Generally Deplored.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—To say that the progressive citizens of this city are indignant over the threatened injunction proceedings to hold up closing the contract with P. R. McDonnell of Duluth, the lowest bidder for the street paving contract, would hardly express their sentiments. They are mad clear through to think that legal obstructions will be raised just when the paving matter was moving along smoothly after many delays. Attorney Scott Rex has served notice upon Mayor Taylor and City Auditor Alexander that papers in an injunction suit to prevent the city awarding the contract to the Duluth man are being prepared.

The notice was sent out as a warning to keep the mayor and city auditor from entering into a contract. The contention on which Attorney Rex based his cause of action and for which he has been given the power of attorney, is that the contract was illegally awarded to P. McDonnell to construct 48,000 square yards of pavement. It is stated in the contract that any omission shall invalidate the bid, and it is claimed that Contractor McDonnell failed to state his price on 15,000 square yards and 30,000 square yards of pavement.

City Auditor Alexander, when seen, stated that he was ready to sign the contract, as was Mayor Taylor, and that the injunction would have no effect on the awarding of the contract, although it might delay the paving.

While the illegality of the contract is brought up as the reason for the litigation, still, according to sidewalk conversation, there is more back of the effort to stop the pavement, and this is the main reason for the indignation of the citizens, property owners in Grand Forks. It is stated by one on good authority that a man noted as the Grand Forks tax dodger, was responsible for the first steps taken, while another who has no interest in the city at all as a taxpayer, but bears a grudge because he was defeated in the recent city election, is also pushing the movement and making an effort to hinder the progress of Grand Forks under the present administration.

the EVENING STORY

THE MYSTERY OF THE PLAYWRIGHT

By Howard Devine.

(Copyrighted. All rights reserved.)

"You said, I believe, that expense was no object if I could secure the right sort of play for you," remarked the dramatic agent tentatively.

"Yes, yes," replied the woman beating her foot impatiently on the rug. "Of course, I did. Now don't you waste a single minute with your dickering, Mr. Levy. I simply must have a new play for next season and it is getting very late, and I am able to pay well for it if it is right. But, mind you, it must suit my style of work and be absolutely new and the author's royalties must not be too great. I don't care about your commission."

"I have the play, madam," said the other, leaning forward. "It couldn't be better if it had been written for you—and the royalty can be arranged very low—at our own price. It is a new author."

"When can I read it," she asked eagerly.

"Now, today," replied the other, "if the terms are satisfactory." He leaned forward and whispered a sum in her ear.

She started, then laughed, "truly modesty is not one of your virtues," she said. "Why, that is a fortune."

"But you would save it in two seasons on the difference in royalties. We must all live, you know. And you don't have to take it unless it is worth it to you."

"Very well, hand it over," announced the woman.

The next day Levy was summoned post haste.

"Who wrote it? Who wrote it?" she demanded. "It is no work of an amateur. It is the work of a genius, and it truly was written for me. This is some joke. Who is the playwright?"

"That I am not to tell you, madame, but I may tell you that it was written for you," replied the agent. "Then you will take it on my terms?"

"On any terms, yes."

Everybody remembers what an astounding success "Youth and Fate" was that season. Georgiana Mabelle never had scored anything but success, but this overtopped them all. It was a play of youth and passion and fire and love and jealousy and pride and pique. The boy and girl were so natural that they exceeded art. The author had breathed into them real people, real blood, read personalities. Georgiana was the very personification of the girl. She had trouble from the first in getting the boy properly played, but she was so tenacious and so critical that the leading men were fairly good and did not spoil the play at all. The art of the author was best shown in the ending, when, after a quarrel and a hopeless separation and fiercest hate, leaving the audience in mortal dread of being sent home in the most depressed frame of mind, the two were brought together to fill the audiors with tearful joy and dismiss them mellow with the fragrance of delightful sentiment.

At the height of the triumph of the first night, after Georgiana had been called and recalled a dozen times, a cry went up for the author. The manager was compelled to announce that the author's identity was absolutely unknown, so carefully had he concealed it. In view of the great success of the production, however, he could not remain long unknown and the theatrical world doubtless had another delightful surprise ahead of it, etc.

The play grew in public favor and waxed strong and yet stronger. As the novelty wore off the actress, whose triumph it was, became more and more curious regarding the unknown author. She set in motion every agency of which she could think, but in vain—everything stopped at Levy. The copywright was in Levy's name. The royalties were paid to Levy. And Levy was a sphinx. She attacked his reserve in every way. She begged, she cajoled—and Georgiana's cajoleries were difficult to resist—she scolded she threatened, she wept, she raved—but to no avail. Levy smiled knowingly, but silently.

Finally one day Levy came to madame—as he invariably called her, esteeming it more grandiloquent than Miss, and announced that the time had arrived wheu the author would see her at his office. It was with a flutter of excitement seldom felt in her experienced breast, that she entered the private office of the theatrical agent, shown by Levy himself, who immediately retired into his outer office and closed the door.

For a moment the room swam and she saw nothing distinctly—only a dark form. Then she saw clearly, uttered a slight gasp and went white as chalk.

"Paul!" she cried.

He stepped quickly forward.

"Yes, Paul," he answered, "I owe you an apology for this meeting for I knew and you did not. But apologies are not honest, for I wrote the play for the express purpose of meeting you thus. Let me tell you. The separation became intolerable, and I finally knew what a hot-headed fool I had been and that I never could help loving you and wanting you. I knew you would not receive me—the situation had become too bad. Besides I had some pride and you had told me that I never would be anything but a worthless idler anyway and had not the stamina to do anything. So I thought it all out how reconciliation might come about easily and naturally. Then I was puzzled how to get to you with the idea. In the meantime you had become an actress and I was forever hearing of your triumphs. I never could bear to go and see you there. But it flashed upon me that I could write my idea into a play and get you, somehow or other to play it. Then you must realize, I worked many weary months in the play. Then I employed Levy to get it to you. I did not dare go to see it at first, but when it went so well I took courage. I was terribly disappointed. You were great in the first part and greater in the quarrels and separation, but cold and formal—but artistic in the last. So I waited. I went night before last and I knew my hour was come, for you understood the reconciliation. Is it not so?"

She was standing rigid with clenched hands drinking in his words. Their eyes met, the divine sparks flew. He held out his arms and she swayed and fell into them.

So the world lost a great actress, but gained two happy hearts.

"You said you employed Levy to get the play to me," said Georgiana one day in a reminiscent mood. "Did you pay him?"

"Pay him," replied Paul, laughing. "If you saw my check book you would think I did. I told him he could name his price if he could get you to accept the play without royalties and without price."

Georgiana smiled a roguish smile and whispered something in her lover's ear.

He started and exclaimed, "The infernal scoundrel. He bled both of us. I'll cane him."

"No, Paul," smiled Georgiana. "Don't you think it was worth the price?"

BITTEN BY A HOG.

Farmer Near Eau Claire Attacked by Animal He Was Feeding.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alex. Patrie of the town of Seymour was badly bitten on the hand by a hog yesterday as he was pouring some fed into the trough, and as a result, will be laid up from work for some time.

The wound inflicted was an ugly one. Mr. Patrie was feeding the hogs and struck one of the animals on the head with his hand to get it to take its nose out of the pail. The hog savagely turned on him and grabbing his right hand in its teeth it tore the flesh off the back of the hand and thumb, barring the bone.

The wound was wrapped up in the best manner possible under the circumstances and Mr. Patrie and his wife drove to this city, where medical attendance was secured. The wound, although a severe one, is not considered serious, as it had almost immediate attention.

DRUNKEN INDIAN KILLED.

Beheaded Near Deer River by Train From Duluth.

Deer River, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—An Indian known as Little Ben, while sleeping with his squaw on the Great Northern track about a mile from here Tuesday night, was struck by train No. 36, from Duluth, and instantly killed, the head being severed from the body. The squaw was not hurt.

The Indian had been here with his squaw and both got gloriously drunk and lay down on the tracks, or as she says, beside them.

Yesterday morning when she awoke she pulled at her husband's clothing to awaken him. He did not respond, and she called, then got up and was horrified to se a headless trunk, the head lying about a rod away between the rails.

The train crew did not know they had struck any one.

WANT MONEY FOR EXHIBIT

Commercial Club Asks County for $500 for State Fair.

Vermilion Farmers Want the Agricultural School at Ashawa.

Bernard Silberstein and Maj. H. V. Eva of the Commercial club appeared before the board of county commissioners, this morning, and asked for an appropriation of $500 from the county, to aid in procuring a suitable exhibit for St. Louis county at the state fair.

Mr. Silberstein pointed out that the club had, by active work among Duluth business men, secured about $1,000 for this purpose; that they had spent about $500 fixing up the St. Louis county building at the state fair, and that an expenditure of about $2,500 would be made through their efforts for the fair exhibit. They wanted the county to take some interest in it now.

They had offered a prize of a course in the Agricultural college to the St. Louis county farmer's son who made the best exhibit in the collection, and a prize of $15 for the best essay about the county and its products.

The request came at a somewhat unfortunate time, however, as the commissioners had just been discussing how far economy in the matter of road building might be carried to advantage. Commissioner Ryan pointed out that all the government land in the county was taken, and that what the county needed was roads, not advertising. It was pretty well known already, he said.

Mr. Silberstein took issue with him on this point, and pointed out that while the Silberstein & Bondy company was well known, they would be forgotten in three weeks if they did not keep on advertising. The matter was referred to a committee, and some action may be taken late this afternoon.

A petition was received from the recently organized Vermilion - Little Forks Farmers' club, asking that the commissioners' efforts be exerted for the establishment of an agricultural school at Ashawa, on the Little Fork, and pointing out the advantages of this location.

Charles Buyck, or Hippoleit Buck, the treasurer of the town of Buyck, who is being sued by his town for alleged confiscation of funds, also broke into the limelight at the monthly meeting of the commissioners this morning.

Mr. Buyck has another grievance. Not only did his town turn against him and sue him for funds, which it said he kept, but on March 10 of this year, after Buyck had just secured a license to sell liquor in the town, they held an election and decided to join the prohibition movement and run a no-license town. So Buyck had to close up his thirst dispensary. Now he wants the balance of $330 which, he claims, should be refunded to him on the unexpired license for which he paid $500.

WANT BETTER SERVICE.

The Citizens of Warroad Complain About the Mails.

Citizens of Warroad, Baudette, Spooner, Roosevelt and other places in Northern Beltrami and Eastern Roseau counties are very much dissatisfied with the mail service they are enjoying. Charles A. Moody, a Warroad land man, and John P. Hedneng, a banker of that place, are in the city and both of them speak of the inadequateness of the present service.

"Freight shipped from Duluth to Warroad will arrive ahead of the letter containing the bill for it, both starting the same day," said Mr. Moody today. "I can leave for home at 3:50 this afternoon and reach Warroad early tomorrow morning, but if I were to write my wife a letter she would not get it until Friday morning. I can beat the letter there by twenty-four hours or more.

"I have received letters from Congressman Steenerson, who is working to have the mail service in our territory improved and he has received word from the second assistant postmaster general that the matter of securing a connection at Ranier with the Canadian Northern was being investigated."

MANY VISIT MARQUETTE

Annual Meet of Upper Peninsula Firemen is Largely Attended.

Parade, Ball, Races and Many Other Interesting Events Given.

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire fighters of the Upper Peninsula are here in large numbers in attendance on the annual convention and tournament of the Upper Peninsula Firemen's association, which began yesterday. The city is handsomely decorated for the event, and the visitors are being royally entertained.

The first formal affairs of the meeting were the parade yesterday and the ball last night. The parade was a pageant well worth seeing, the firemen in their bright uniforms making a fine appearance as they proceeded through the heart of the city. The annual association ball last evening in Fraternity hall was well attended and an enjoyable event.

The racing began today and will continue tomorrow at the track on West Spring street, which has been placed in admirable form.

One of the special features for the entertainment of the crowds will be a realistic life-saving exhibition given by Capt. Cleary and his crew. This exhibition will be held this afternoon. It will occur off the foot of Baraga avenue, where the surrounding piers will furnish accommodations for thousands of spectators. Capt. Cleary will put the crew through an interesting drill, and for people from the interior towns the exhibition will be one of the best things of the tournament.

Another special feature will be a display of fireworks Friday evening. The firemen have ordered a fine collection and it will be displayed at an advantageous point, probably on Ripley's rock.

Miss Ida Martin, clerk in Stafford's drug store, is the queen of the firemen's tournament, she having won the beautiful diamond ring that signifies that honor handily in a burst of enthusiastic voting Tuesday afternoon, in the closing hours of the contest. Miss Martin's vote was 29,760. Miss Blanche Desjardins was second in the contest, with 21,295 votes; Miss Leffler of Ishpeming, third, with 4,838, and Miss Choquette of Negaunee, fourth, with 4,130.

ASSYRIANS HAVE SOME ODD WAYS

Settle Their Differences in Unique Manner, Says Police Chief.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chief of Police Eck would like to know whether a man, after swearing out a warrant charging a person with horse stealing and the accused caught making for the North Dakota line with the horse, the complaining witness can patch up things with the man who run off with the horse, pay all costs and cheat the officer out of the state reward of $200 for catching a horse thief.

This condition of affairs presented itself to the officer yesterday. Albert Abraham sold a horse to his cousin, Abraham Reeno, who paid the cash, $150, for it. Abraham pocketed the money stating that he would leave the horse in the livery barn. Instead he loaded his wagon with goods and left the city with the horse and the money he had received for it. Reeno swore out a warrant charging Abraham with stealing his horse which he had bought and paid for. Chief Eck took the warrant, hired a livery rig and apprehended Abraham several miles west of the city making for North Dakota as fast as he could drive, and brought him back to the city. Both are Assyrian peddlers, and local Assyrians acted as mediators, and after Abraham had been brought back to the city he turned over the money to Reeno again, paid all costs and was let off. Chief Eck wants to know whether this arrangement debars him from collecting the $200 reward for landing a horse thief and will take the matter up with County Attorney Maybury and the office of the attorney general.

BATTLE WITH BANDITS.

North Dakota Sheriff and Assistants Take One Ruffian.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 6.—Two armed desperadoes were met near here Tuesday evening by Deputy Sheriff John Anderson, Chief of Police Roby and George Chapin after an all-day search, and one of the bandits was captured, together with three horses, but his partner escaped. A bloody battle occurred before the capture was made. It is thought that the bandit who escaped was hit by one of the bullets from an officer's gun.

The men had held up Funk's hotel at Hebron, N. D., on Sunday evening and secured but a few cents. They then traveled by horseback to New Salem and Monday evening entered John Egge's hotel room and rifled the cash drawer and held up about twenty men at the point of revolvers. They secured something over $100.

Sheriff Beichtold was notified and left at once for New Salem, where their horses were found, and they gave chase. The desperadoes eluded the posse and came on to Mandan. They were met a few miles out of the city by the deputy sheriff and his two assistants, and a fierce fight followed. One of the assistants was shot in the hand. The captured man was lodged in the county jail and the sheriff and his men started out to track the other man, but he had made good his escape.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC.

Sensational Disclosures Are Made in Milwaukee Arrest.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 6.—D. Davies, United States immigration inspector and secretary of the Chicago immigration office, Assistant District Attorney E. J. Benning and United States Marshal A. Weil held a secret conference in the private chamber of the county jail here last night, during which Anna Callore, the girl companion of Joseph Ruffino, alleged Black Hand leader, was put through a severe examination. The conference was successful in that the woman broke down, confessed everything and as a result was immediately placed under arrest on a federal warrant, charged with being an illegal alien in this country and a "white slave." She will be delivered into the custody of the United States marshal tomorrow and will be held as a witness against Ruffino, who will be charged with being a "white slave" dealer.

After her testimony against him is taken she will be deported immediately with twenty-six other "white slaves," secured in a raid in Chicago several nights ago.

Evidence tending to show that Ruffino has been importing young girls into the country for immoral purposes, was secured by Inspector Davies last night.

OBSTRUCTED NAVIGATION.

That is Charge Made Against Man Living on Mouse River.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another battle in "The War of the Mouse River" was terminated a few nights ago, when Sheriff Lee accompanied by John Strommen and several other boatmen went to the home of Olaf A. Olson and being arrested with a warrant for Olson's arrest, took him in custody and brought him to the city.

The warrant was secured by Eugene Teutsch who owns one of the boats on the river and alleges that Olson has by various means endeavored to curtail and obstruct traffic on the Mouse river by the use of such engines of destruction as floating timbers and wires stretched taut across the main channel of the river. It is, moreover, asserted by Mr. Teutsch verbally that this has not only been highly dangerous to the life and limb of the operators of certain crafts upon the river but inasmuch as the boats are generally filled with pleasure seekers going to and coming from that haven of rest and recreation, Whitwood, that several of the pleasure seekers together with several of the boatmen have been placed at a considerable disadvantage by coming in personal contact with the wires and thusly becoming entangled have been prevented from proceeding in peace to their respective destinations.

He was tried for the murder of Seidel and was acquitted, but was informed that he had confessed that he murdered the little girl. Robbery was the motive of the slayers of the Seidels.

Joe and Charles Peltier are aged 21 and 16 years respectively, they stated. They did not appear to be at all worried over their predicament. The Indian, as is usual with his race, appeared indifferent and sullen. He is 15 years old.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—One thousand dollars will be expended for attractions for the annual Houghton county fair, to be held at the Amphidrome Sept. 22 to 26, inclusive, this year. The plan is to have four vaudeville acts in the auditorium on an elevated stage and one big sensational stunt outside of the fair grounds every afternoon and evening. The acts desired are about decided upon, but as it is not yet certain that the committee will be able to secure the performers wanted, it was deemed better to delay the announcement until the contracts are signed.

The outdoor attractions will probably be an airship or a balloon ascension, but no definite arrangements have been made for either as yet, so there is no positive assurance of the feature, although those in charge of the arrangements feel quite confident that either of these or something equally as good will be offered.

Chippewa Falls—Fred Lederer of Grafton, Wis., was drowned in the Chippewa river, three miles below Jim Falls Monday afternoon. A number of people searched the river after the accident and the body was recovered by Wallace Harp at 6 o'clock. Martin Hoageth was sent for to take charge of the remains and the body was sent to Grafton for interment.

Delton—The summer home of Harry Page of Chicago was destroyed by fire at the Fern Dell resort on Mirror lake. Page had set fire to a hornet's nest under the roof of the building but so quickly did the fire spread that it was with difficulty that his children, who were asleep in the house, were rescued. The building and contents are a total loss.

JOHN LUND'S ACT GREAT SURPRISE

Many at Loss to Account for His Taking His Life.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tragic suicide of John G. Lund, one of the leading real estate dealers of the Northwest, when he shot himself in his office here at 1 p. m. yesterday, caused a sensation in all walks of life as his closest acquaintances were at a loss to account for his actions unless he became temporarily insane through long brooding over the death of his wife and worry over his physical ailments following an operation for appendicitis several months ago.

There was no intimation to the people in his office that he contemplated suicide. He had spoken of the troubles in which his brother, Oscar, was involved, and he had complained of soreness in the wound from his surgical operation, but none of his associates dreamed that he ever thought of self-destruction.

Shortly before 1 p. m. yesterday Mr. Lund was talking with two of his assistants, W. H. Mann and O. M. Peabody. The former was about to start out on a trip, and the three talked of this and other business matters. Mr. Lund left them and entered his private office in the rear. About five minutes afterward a shot was heard from the rear office and the two men ran back.

Before they reached the room Miss Cloyes, who was in an inner room, had rushed out. She all but stumbled over the body of her employer as she entered the room. He was lying on his back, dead. Near his right hand lay a smoking revolver, and there was a wound in his head, just back of the right ear. When a physician arrived life was extinct. It was plainly a case of suicide. No note or other indication of a plan to commit suicide was found.

Mr. Lund was about 40 years old. He was born at Rushford, Minn. After attending school he removed to Canby, Minn., where he eventually engaged in the land business. He came to Minneapolis in 1901 and opened a big land business at Third street and First avenue south. He was elected to the legislature in 1904, and after a term in the legislature was mentioned for governor. He had serious thoughts of running for a time, but withdrew before the convention.

Chronic Diarrhoea Relieved.

Mr. Edward E. Henry, with the United States Express company, Chicago, writes: "Our general superintendent, Mr. Quick, handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some time ago to check an attack of the old chronic diarrhoea. I have used it since that time and cured many on our trains who have been sick. I am an old soldier, who served with Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley four years in the Twenty-third Ohio regiment, and have no ailment except chronic diarrhoea, which this remedy stops at once." For sale by all druggists.

FIND MEAT PRICES LOWER.

Wisconsin State Board of Control Makes Welcome Discovery.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 6.—The state board of control, in letting the quarterly meat contract yesterday, found that the price of fresh meats had fallen considerably. The contract went to Schwarzschild & Sulzberger of Chicago, the total being $5,697.35. The price of beef was $8.75 in the contract let three months ago. In the contract let yesterday it was only $6.50.

A contract was awarded to the Northern Electrical Manufacturing Company of Madison for motors for the twine factory at the state prison, for about $7,000.

TO SPEAK IN MINNESOTA

Bryan Will be at State Fair on Aug. 31.

Fred Lynch Assures Nebraskan of Governor Johnson's Support.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 6.—Of more than significance was the visit to Fairview yesterday of Frederick B. Lynch of St. Paul, Democratic national committeeman from Minnesota and manager of Governor Johnson's recent campaign for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Lynch arrived about noon in company with B. F. Nelson of Minneapolis, president of the State Fair association.

The presence of Mr. Lynch at Fairview was at the special request of Mr. Bryan. He lost no time in conveying to the Democratic nominee, Governor Johnson's assurance of loyal support and of the governor's intention to take the stump in Mr. Bryan's behalf.

"There is no animosity towards Bryan in Minnesota," said Mr. Lynch, "and while I do not promise that the Democrats will carry Minnesota this year, I think they have a very good chance."

Mr. Lynch declared that nothing rankled in Governor Johnson's heart because he was defeated for the nomination. "He feels all right about it," said he, "and all Minnesota Democrats are for Bryan."

The business that brought Mr. Nelson to Fairview was to invite Mr. Bryan to attend the state fair in St. Paul and deliver an address. The invitation was accepted, the date being fixed at Aug. 31, but with the understanding that there should be no charge for admission to the grounds on that day.

It was announced that the St. Paul speech would be the only one that Mr. Bryan will make in Minnesota during the campaign. The subject to be discussed will probably be the tariff.

Appeal For Bryan.

Mr. Bryan last night caused to be given out the following appeal for campaign contributions:

"Wanted: Campaign contributions from citizens of the Republic who favor these Democratic propositions.

"Tariff revision by representatives of the consumer of the products and not by the agents of those who make exhorbitant profits by manufacture and sale of highly protected products.

"Election of United States senators by popular vote, thus breaking up the senatorial oligarchy headed by Standard Oil, which is strong enough to successfully resist all measures offered in behalf of the public welfare.

"Guarantee of all national bank deposits, thereby preventing all money panics by giving the people absolute confidence in all banks.

"Destruction of private monopoly and the enforcement of law against trusts by the people who are oppressed by the trusts and not by the agents of the trusts.

"Publicity of campaign contributions before election day, so that the people may know who is paying the expenses of candidates and why paying.

"Adoption of an income tax, because it is just, and under it wealth may bear its proportionate share of the burdens of the Federal government.

"The punishment of men who manipulate railroad stocks and ownership; the encouragement of railroad construction upon businesslike basis, and railroad operation with fair returns in wages and profit to workers and owners on honest valuation and honest labor (but not on watered stock and false bond issues created purely by exploitation)."

The appeal closes with a copy of the resolution adopted by the Democratic national committee upon the occasion of their visit to Fairview, July 14, declaring for publicity of contributions before election, limiting individual contributions to $10,000, and providing for the publication of all contributions above one hundred dollars.

Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance was today given to the press associations for distribution. Simultaneously with this action Mr. Bryan outlined the subjects which he will discuss.

EXCITEMENT IN AUCKLAND

Residents Making Great Preparations for Reception of Fleet.

Auckland, Aug. 6.—The excitement in Auckland grows feverish as the date for the arrival of the American battleship fleet draws near. An immense army of workmen are engaged in completing the decorations and the illuminations and the water front, and the town presents a magnificent spectacle. The main streets are being transferred into fairy bowers of palms and bunting, among which are transparencies bearing portraits of President Roosevelt, King Edward, Admiral Sperry, the late Premier Richard Seddon and the present premier, Sir Joseph G. Ward. Everywhere are the entertwined flags of the United States and England, and everywhere Americans and Britishers are fraternizing. The government buildings will present a perfect blaze of lights, arranged to depict the fighting top of a battleship. The fleet is expected to arrive Sunday morning.

LESS CHILD LABOR IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—Child labor is on the decrease in Northern Minnesota. According to the biennial report of Labor Commissioner W. W. Williams, the decrease has been 28 per cent. The report also shows a large increase in the number of men employed nine hours a day over those employed ten hours.

In most of the industries, however, and in the total there has been a falling off in the number of men employed. In the spring of 1907, 10,516 men were at work, while this spring the total has shrunk to 8,516. In the sawmills alone the decrease has been 300 men.

PYTHIANS HAVE GREAT PARADE IN BOSTON.

Boston, Aug. 5.—The principal event on the program of Knights of Pythias convention today was the great parade of subordinate lodges and Pythian sisters, and while not such a military spectacle as was presented by the uniform rank in their parade yesterday, the numerous floats and other features lent color to today's pageant and made it more interesting to the general public. Lieut. George E. Wragg, chief marshal of the parade, announced that about 18,000 were in line.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Capt. Baldwin made another successful flight Wednesday evening at Fort Meyer in his dirigible balloon. The balloonet, a balloon within a balloon was tried for the first time.

Ten thousand members of the subordinate lodges of the Knights of Pythias paraded through Boston's streets Wednesday. Never before in Boston has there been a parade marked by such diversity of features, so much color and orginality in the various floats.

NEW ZEALAND REFUSES TO AID IN SUBSIDY.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 6.—The New Zealand government has refused to enter into any arrangement to aid in the grant of a subsidy to the Canadian Australian line, according to advices received from New Zealand. New Zealand's reason for refusing to contribute to the arrangement is that owing to the Brisbane call, the service is of no value to secure the revival of the steamship line to San Francisco.

The Closed Shop Policy.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I wish to call your attention to the fact that in your paper dated Tuesday, Aug. 4, I noticed something about a "Black List for Union Shops." Secretary Cobb of the Building Exchange caused the black-listing of the union men. Now then, they say first, that they are out after the closed shop policy. What do you consider the closed shop policy? The party who takes into their ranks or unions all men who are qualified to do such work and allows men to work with them, or the Building or Real Estate exchange, who will recognize none but unorganized labor? We have today in the United States of America, two millions of practical laborers, who are union men, and we know that they are not wanted unless they dispose of their union cards. We realize that the contractors have got enough of this as well as the business men are going ruined every day, and for no other reason than because of the attempt to abolish union labor. This has lowered the standard of labor so much, that it has crippled the business interests of the country. The people have just begun to realize this, and you, Mr. Employer, made so many turns around the stump with your long rope, that it is getting short and begins to choke you. You get up on the stump at election time and tell us what a great country this is. Yes, but it is not your fault, thank God. Thank the labor movement, handled by organized labor, for it; and I know that they will live to make it still greater. They will make it good enough for all of the people that live in it, whether the Building exchange or Real Estate exchange wants to or not. Remember that we are here to stay, united in such a way that we can command a high standard of living, the same as the states being united can command peace as well as justice. We advocate good citizenship where you are encouraging anarchism, socialism and poverty.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

THE WHY OF IT.

Royalton Banner: Two years ago the interests defeated Jacobson at the convention. This year the opposition claims they nominated him. And Jake is the same old fighter of yore. Question: where is the reason therein?

This is a real question, a live and a timely question, and it has become needful that it be answered. Wherefore The Herald will attempt to answer it as best it may.

Nobody doubts that the "interests" defeated Jacobson at the convention two years ago. They celebrated the event, and the smell of that celebration affronts the nostrils of respectable and well-behaved Duluth to this day. This year these same interests nominated Jacobson; and while this may not be so generally admitted as the fact that they defeated him in 1906, it is absolutely true and before the campaign is over there will be none to deny it.

The flaw in the Royalton editor's premises, and the answer to his question, are to be found in this phrase: "And Jake is the same old fighter as of yore." Is he? If he had been would he have been nominated? That is the "reason therein;" the negative answers to both of these questions provide the reply to the Royalton Banner's pertinent query.

One thing is certain: the "interests" haven't changed in the two years elapsing between the time when they defeated Jacobson and the time when they nominated him. They are just the same as ever, and they are in politics for the same ends. But evidently there is a change somewhere. Where is it? Hasn't everybody in the state observed that the change is in Jacobson? Jacobson, the vociferous champion of the people of a few years ago, is now the meek and suppliant, the silent and compliant companion of the interests that have nominated him. That is the change that has taken place; that is the "reason therein." Jacobson may have been fooling them all the time; he may presently break out as loudly as ever, and attack the interests from whose hands he has just partaken of political feed: but that wouldn't be nice, either, would it? To accept support upon false pretenses and then repudiate those without whose help he could not have won; that wouldn't be pretty at all.

The fact of the matter is that Minnesota has an attorney general who has tried to do his duty. He may have gone at it too bumptiously. He may not have always used good honest judgment in his course of action. But he was out for a record for law-enforcement and for championing the people against the corporations, and he got it. He was classed abroad as one of the public officials who were doing their full duty, and he was put down upon the books of the "interests" as a man to be punished and obliterated.

Well, they have punished and obliterated him. They got their chance when he ran for the governorship, and they did it by the use of Jacobson. That attorney general has been punished for doing his duty, and the punishment has been inflicted by a Republican convention, using a former "champion of the people" as a stalking horse. This will give Minnesota a fine reputation among her sister states, won't it?

Furthermore, and incidentally, this unpleasant piece of business gave Bob Dunn a chance to even up some old political scores, and he has done it and is happy and truculent.

MINNESOTA'S GREAT FAIR.

In making your plans for the next month you can hardly afford to overlook the fact that the Minnesota state fair, the greatest show of its kind on the continent, will take place at Hamline Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, and that it will be bigger and better than ever before.

There is no need of exaggeration in describing the Minnesota state fair. It is a credit to the North Star state that it should have the best state fair in the country, and this fact is generally conceded. But one other agricultural fair in America even approaches it, and that is the Toronto show, which it is necessary to assign to second place.

The fair is truly representative of the whole state, of all its people, of all its industries and of all its resources. It has always been that, but this year, under the able initiative of Secretary C. N. Cosgrove and his assistants, it will be a bigger and more entertaining exhibit than it has ever been before. Because this is the semi-centennial of statehood special effort has ben made, and the result is certain to be a truly marvelous exposition of Minnesota's vast wealth and progress.

The state fair has always had the liberal support of the people of Minnesota, and this year will furnish no exception to the rule. It deserves popular support, but state pride alone would not provide it; its support comes because it is worth patronizing, and because it is not only instructive but vastly entertaining.

THE RESULT OF HASTY ACTION.

There is a man down in Kittanning, Pa.,—you would naturally expect something out of the ordinary from a town with a name like that—who recently subjected himself to an experience most humiliating because, as many another thoughtless man has done before him, he acted too hastily and reckoned without his host—his host, in this case, being his fair and determined wife.

Bowser—the name of this man is Harrison Bowser—a few days ago went to a celebration where he looked upon the wine when it was red, the beer when it was dark amber, the whisky when it was flame-color or the gin when it was white. Anyway, to cut it short and not to put too fine a point upon it, he accumulated what is classified in the dictionary of slang as a "souse," a "sosh," a "bun" or a "jag." Then he went home, fear of the consequences struggling above his muddled wits and floating over his submerged and pickled intelligence. Greatly to his relief, his wife wasn't home. He lay down for a much-needed nap, and awoke later to find the house dark and still—nobody was about.

Before his drenched brain had quite recovered from its dose of inebriation, he marched to the newspaper office and inserted an "ad" to the effect that his wife had left him; one of those "bed and board" advertisements that set tongues to going and open greedy ears wide for the reception of details.

The very next morning Mrs. Bowser reached home. She had heard of her husband's goings-on, had gone away to visit relatives until he got over it, and had been brought back posthaste by seeing the advertisement in the newspaper. What happened in that happy home is not contained in the dispatches that relate this veracious story, but that afternoon a very badly battered Mr. Bowser appeared at the newspaper office with another advertisement. His battle-scarred visage contained evidences of strife that had not been there when he returned from his fight with the demon Rum; and he had a subdued and docile air about him that spoke volumes for the indomitable aggressiveness and muscular prowess of Mrs. Bowser. The new advertisement read as follows: "Last week I advertised that my wife had left my bed and board. This was only imaginary. My wife was on a visit to neighbors, and when I returned home under the influence of drink, I imagined that she had left me, and without any cause hastened to advertise that she had gone. I do this now to assure the public that there was no blame on my wife, and that it was all mine."

Which teaches us that we should look before we leap, that if we are virtuous we will be happy, that a soft answer turneth away wrath, that pride goeth before a fall, and that it is a very careless husband who acts thus hastily and without consulting his wife, especially if she is the better man of the two.

REDUCE THE TAX RATE.

We can assure the city authorities that City Comptroller McCormick's estimate of the expenditures of the city for the coming year, published in The Herald last night, made very much pleasanter reading for the taxpayers than the estimates of the several departments, nearly every one of which asked for more money than it got this year. The comptroller's estimate is $85,648.09 lower than the sum of the department estimates, and $28,000 less than this year's tax levy for city purposes. On the increased valuation of the city's property, it would permit a reduction of nearly 2½ mills in the tax rate for city purposes, which is most assuredly a consummation devoutly to be wished.

The department chiefs, in preparing their estimates, were thoroughly conscientious. There is no doubt that they could find good use for every penny they ask, and for a great deal more. Naturally each department chief is anxious to make a good showing, and that costs money; so it is necessary that somebody stand at the purse strings to curb the enthusiasm of those who spend the money, and this none too pleasant task Mr. McCormick seems to have assigned to himself. It is an important function at a time when the chief need of the city is not new ways to spend money, but new ways to save it: in short, a lower tax rate to attract investors instead of a higher one to scare them away.

The city conference committee will fix the city levy, and it is earnestly urged to keep constantly in mind Duluth's need of a lower tax rate. Every proposed increase of expenditures should be paralleled with that great need, and tested by its relative importance. If the need of more money is greater than the need of lower taxes, then the levy should be increased; but that will not be true in many instances.

LEE IN THE CAPITAL.

In the national capitol at Washington the chamber in which the house of representatives held its sessions before the building of the wings in which congress now conducts its business is known as Statuary hall. In this hall each state is privileged to place statues of its native great men, and while many states have not yet filled the niches assigned to them, the round chamber is bordered with statutes of the country's great men contributed by the states that gave them birth.

Virginia, which has a vacant place in Statuary hall, has just completed a statue which it will ask permission to place in that vacancy. The man to be honored thus is Robert E. Lee, the commander of the Confederate land forces in the Civil war, and if the request is granted, the nation's capitol will hold among the statues of its great men that of the military genius who once attempted to capture that capitol in the interests of a federation of rebellious states.

The time has been when such a proposal would have been met by a storm of protests; when, indeed, the request of Virginia would most certainly have met with a prompt refusal.

That time, fortunately, has passed. There should not be a single voice raised in protest against this belated honor to a man who, though his flag was the flag of revolt and rebellion, was yet one of the nation's greatest military geniuses and one of its finest and truest gentlemen.

Says the Brooklyn Eagle: "In no other country on earth than this is it likely that the government would consent to admit into the halls of its capitol a memorial of a man who had fought against its entity as a nation. The fact that it is possible here is a tribute to the American spirit. Lee will have a place beside Washington, another son of Virginia, in the country's hall of fame, and Americans are glad of it."

Robert E. Lee, after distinguished services to his country in the Mexican war and after serving as the head of the West Point military academy, was forced at the outbreak of hostilities between North and South to choose between his country and his native state. He had no sympathy with the project of revolution, which he believed to be a mistake; but he chose to stand by his state, and no man ever dared to deny that he made his choice prayerfully, as his conscience dictated. Certainly he made it with extreme reluctance, yet when he had enlisted upon the side of the South he gave that cause his best and most ardent support. History will always rank him as one of the greatest generals that America has produced; and the fact that he fought on the wrong side should not lessen the admiration that his fellow-countrymen feel for his splendid genius as a soldier and his charming character as a man.

Lee's picture now rests upon the wall of Grant Hall, a building at West Point used by the cadets as a meeting place, beside that of Ulysses S. Grant, the general with whom Lee will contest in history for the glory of supremacy as the greatest chieftain of the Civil war. It is proper, too, and emblematic of the healed wounds of a perfectly united country, that his statue should be placed in the nation's capitol with those of other national heroes.

Forty-seven thousand barrels of whisky burned in Kentucky. That will be a great help to the men that are trying to drink up all there is.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Why," began H. W. Sanborne yesterday at the Lenox hotel, "don't they mix more in the Middle West? Now, for instance, in Colorado everyone gets together, just because the people are so hospitable that they like to do things in a bunch. Again for instance, just suppose that you and some girl gathered around the festive board of some cafe. Do you know what would happen in Colorado? No? Well, then I will tell you.

"If you dined with any one in Colorado, before the evening was over you would find yourself the center of a jovial, whole-hearted throng, who were drawn together simply through the spirit of hospitality and good fellowship. I have been out in the Middle West for two months and I have noticed nothing like that. Is it because we are more hospitable than you are?

"It doesn't make so much difference in the West what a man has or how much his ancestors had before him. It is what kind of a fellow he is. You can blow into a cafe in Denver and see the richest man in the West dining with a chap who couldn't pay the first installment on a clay pipe. Why? Just because the chap with the sad looking wallet has shown in some way that he is a good fellow. That's what goes a long way in the West. I was in Denver during the Democratic convention. Then was the time you could have seen our Western hospitality. We didn't ask any questions about the people you sent us from the East and the Middle West. We just took them in and gave them the best we had, and if any one went away from Denver with a grouch it was entirely the fault of that person.

"Now if you should happen to drop into the cafe of the Albany or the Brown Palace you would find that the people were grouped. You might gain the impression that some photographer was about to take a picture of the assembled guests. But there is nothing like that. They are gathered together for the simple reason that they are animated by a spirit of good fellowship.

"Maybe you will think that I am telling you something that is not true. Well I wish that you might come out to Colorado and see for yourself. Truly you would be delighted with what you saw. Then you would not wonder how the national committee came to choose Denver as the place of holding the national Democratic convention. You see Democracy could not help gaining an impetus after meeting in Denver. We are all democratic out there and we showed the delegates to the convention some true Western hospitality that they won't forget for some time."

A woman and her daughter were at the St. Louis last night. They were from Minneapolis, the chestiest city in the state. They were imbued with the "make good" spirit. However, they had just been ove rthe boulevard with a tally-ho party and they were praising the city of Duluth. "If it wasn't for the winters," began the mother.

"Nix with that antediluvian stuff," broke in the son, who happens to be a resident of Duluth. "That stuff was started in 1868 by some early arrival, who was afflicted with dyspepsia. He went down East and spread that report about the city. That was a very hard winter, but since that time we have had no winters that would cause a Georgia coon to become homesick."

"I never knew what a nice city you had," is the remark that is heard on all sides among the tourists who are flocking to Duluth at the present time.

Dangerous.

Washington Star: "Dar's two kinds of men dat's dangerous in politics," said Uncle Rhen; "dem dat's tryin' to make it pay dividends an' dem dat's jes' squanderin' money foh de sport of it."

According to History.

Harper's Weekly: A woman in a Western city, who belongs to a community called the "Sisters of St. John the Baptist," not long ago spent a month in the backwood district.

Shortly after her arrival she went to the local postoffice and inquired if any letters had come for Sister Bernardine. The rural postmaster looked bewildered.

"Sister who?" he asked incredulously.

"Sister Bernardine," replied the lady, "a sister of St. John the Baptist."

"I think not," he answered, dubiously. Then, after some reflection, he added:

"Say, ain't he been dead pretty near a hundred years now?"

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday, with a maximum temperature of 72 and a minimum last night of 52 degs., was a flawless summer day of the ideal sort, peculiar to Duluth. This morning it was cloudy, and showers threatened, but it was generally pleasant and delightfully comfortable. The weather man says there may be scattered light showers tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today it was warm, the temperature reaching 83 degs.

The sun rose this morning at 4:53 and sets tonight at 7:34, making 14 hours and 41 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The barometer remains low over the lake region and Arizona, while another disturbance has developed over Montana, with high pressures extending northwest from the Dakotas. During the past twenty-four hours these conditions caused light showers or thunder storms in Alberta, Manitoba, Northern Michigan, Eastern Wisconsin, Nebraska, Wyoming, Northern Utah, New England states, the Ohio valley and the gulf region. Temperatures continue high in the southern lake region, lower Missouri, Ohio and Mississippi valleys, Atlantic and Gulf states. Indications favor scattered light showers in this locality this afternoon, tonight and Friday."

The Marching Clubs.

The marchers of the present day
Tread with a mien that's proud,
Likewise present a brave array
Before the curbstone crowd;
And when they're moved to yell "hooray!"
It's good and plenty loud.

But memory still fondly turns
To other days than these,
And for those old-time marchers yearns;
To other victories
All felt were intimate concerns
Of each one, if you please.

Those oil cloth capes, those gaudy caps,
And lights that trailed afar
Of greasy torches—ah, those chaps
Were something over par;
Though, when they passed, the street perhaps
Smelled like a motor car.

Two Telephone Abuses.

Chicago Evening Post: "Hello, is this Mr. Blank?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mr. So-and-So's office. He wants to speak to you on business. Please hold the wire a minute."

Then Mr. Blank waits. He may be in the midst of business of the most important and exacting kind. He may he just leaving his office to keep a pressing engagement. Every second may have an actual value to him of dollars and cents. Yet he has to wait.

He has to sit with his ear tied to the telephone till Mr. So-and-So gets ready to talk to him. It does not matter that it is Mr. So-and-So's business which is wasting Mr. Blank's valuable time. It does not matter that Mr. So-and-So may be the one who is to derive the benefit from it.

This is the first and foremost of the abuses which modern business custom has fastened upon the useful and legitimate service of the telephone. And the second is like unto it.

Mr. Blank has returned to his home after an exhausting day at the office. In his family circle he endeavors to throw off his business cares and rest his mind, as it should be rested for the work of the next day. This is not only common justice to himself, but to his wife and children as well.

Suddenly the telephone rings. There is a call for Mr. Blank. Mr. This-and-That is on the wire and wishes to find out what Mr. Blank thinks about a business matter that is to come up on the morrow. At once Mr. Blank has to plunge back into the cares of the office. His rest is disturbed, the process of rebuilding exhausted tissues is checked, he is snatched away from those who have the real right to his time and attention.

Both these habits are unjust invasion of personal privilege. Both are acts which no man who decently regards the rights of others would think of committing through a personal call. That they are committed over the telephone does not legitimatize them in the least.

He of the Hotel Hop.

Time was when we two gayly danced
And hardly noticed others there;
Down in her face I often glanced
With joy because it was so fair;
The dullest, least enchanting measure
I listened to with boundless pleasure.

How tenderly her hand was placed
Upon my sleeves, and I recall
How with my arm around her waist
We seemed to float across the hall;
We hunted nooks that were secluded
And frowned on others who intruded.

I fanned her while we sat alone,
And whispered nothings in her ear;
I claimed each number as my own,
Because, I thought my right was clear;
I scorned her sisters, she my brothers,
We had no smiles to waste on others.

We seldom dance together now,
Because 't hardly seems worth while;
The sweetest thrill I get somehow,
Comes when some other deigns to smile;
Although she has not lost her beauty,
I dance with her but as a duty.

Her step is light, her waist is slim,
But when another leads her out
I do not look with hate on him,
For I am short of breath and stout;
Let foolish ones go gayly flitting—
I'd rather do my flirting sitting.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1888.

•••Dr. Hirsch, rabbi of a large Jewish congregation in Chicago, is in Duluth on a short visit.

•••John P. Mather, whose life has been despaired of for several weeks, is now thought to be much better.

•••Mr. and Mrs. B. Brockenbrough and daughter of Lafayette, Ind., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sherwood.

•••Mrs. A. F. Leopold, who was prostrated with grief at the death of her son a few days ago, is greatly improved.

•••Albert Bowen of Bowen & Bartlett, the stage and forwarding men, is in the city. Mr. Bowen is also engaged in the lumber business in Wisconsin and does not visit Duluth very frequently.

•••H. P. Robinson, a well-known Boston musician, has decided to locate in Duluth. He is the possessor of a fine bass voice. He will act as director of the Duluth Musical society and will also be connected with the Episcopal church choir.

•••The tug John McKay, belonging to Jeffrey Bros., sank while tied to the St. Paul & Duluth dock near Lake avenue yesterday, and in a few minutes all that was visible of her was a few inches of the top of her flagstaff. She was raised today and will be in as good shape as ever tomorrow.

•••The Minnesota company has filed its articles of incorporation, with a capital stock of $1,000,000. Its office will be on West Superior street near Fifth avenue, where Neil McLachlan has been located.

•••The street cars now run as far west as Twenty-fourth avenue.

•••Nellie Langdon, who resides with Nellie Richardson on St. Craix avenue, nearly died yesterday from an overdose of opium. She was completely unconscious for ten hours. The opium was administered by a nurse to allay neuralgic pains.

•••The brakemen on the Duluth & Iron Range road have gone out on a strike, and no ore trains are now running. The brakemen were being paid, they say, an average of $55 per month, with frequent dockages, to which they objected. The engineers have refused to haul trains with green hands as brakemen and the strikers feel confident of success.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Times-Enterprise: The great majority of the country Republican papers are alleged to be opposing the election of that man Mills to the railroad and warehouse commission. According to some of our local pinhead politicians, such conduct is absoluteyl un-Republican. Unless, in their opinion, you are disposed to swallow all the gang dictates, you are not a good Republican. It might be pertinent to ask these fellows, if it were worth while, who compose the Republican party—the bunch of Twin City politicians or the voters of Minnesota?

"F. M." in Stillwater Prison Mirror: Abe Ruef has been released from jail under a $1,500,000 bail bond. There is not much danger of the penitentiary doors closing on a thief who can go down in his jeans and dig up a roll like that.

Hibbing Tribune: The Republican and Democratic parties are frantically outdoing each other in their protestations that they want no corporation cash. Up to date nobody has been found foolish enough, however, to bet that they will not take all they can get.

Anoka Union: Extend the primary election law to include state offices, is what the people demand.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: A few years ago the country newspaper accepted the party ticket without question and began hustling for its success the minute the convention result was announced. Things are different this year. The country newspaper man who does not like his party ticket says so, with fitting embellishment that leaves no doubt as to what part of the ticket is distasteful to him.

Luverne Herald: A review of the abstract of assessment of personal property shows that the laws are not the only thing in need of reformation in the matter of taxation. The returns made by some of the assessors on certain schedules are simply ridiculous, and make apparent that the biggest and most important job the tax commission has on its hands is not how to prevent property owners from concealing their property, but how to compel assessors to list property in plain sight.

St. Cloud Times: No wonder that Roosevelt is a trifle warm about that Grosvenor decision. Walter Wellman, who knows a thing or two about politics, says that it will cost the Republican party a million votes.

Little Falls Herald: The Minnesota Democrats who indorsed Hearst in 1904 did so because they thought him nearer to Democratic ideals than Parker. They are almost to a man for Bryan, and while they still recognize the good that Hearst has done, they refuse to follow him along unwise and impracticable lines.

Anoka Union: It would be more fitting for Jacobson to campaign with a traction engine rather than an automobile, as he proposes to do.

Fishy.

When Willie Jones was only twelve
He fished most every day in summer,
Quite often he brought home a string—
Also a yarn about a hummer—
He said it was as long as this:

But got away; how he did rue it!
That fish was just about this big.

And right well little Willie knew it.

He reached the age of twenty-two
And fished with flies and other tackle;
The strings he caught were shorter now.

But to the boys he'd loudly cackle
About the missing fish—so long:

He told of it in glowing diction,
He would have held his hands like this:

Had he avoided piscine fiction.

At forty-five he whips the streams
And sounds the ocean's mighty caverns
For scaly things to brag about
Of evenings in the clubs and taverns;
The fish that get away from him
Grow more and longer every season.
From tip to tip the last looked so:

Though this space would be more in reason:

—CHARLES R. BARNES in New York Sun.

What Is Bryan's Charm?

The Congregationalist: In the meantime it may be well to inquire into the reasons for this remarkable, in fact, almost unexampled ascendency, of Mr. Bryan's influence among the voters of his own party. It began with an effective bit of oratory, and it has been maintained, in part, ever since by public addresses which have never lost their power of moving and delighting the great crowds that come to hear him. Mr. Bryan is a professional lecturer and has in his own person revived the glories of the lyceum platform, which played so large a part in the education of America. There are few towns in America where he cannot draw a multitude, whether in the open, or where entrance requires a fee. He is an editor, and though his paper has no extraordinary circulation, it is watched everywhere because it speaks with his voice. These are the outward forms of Mr. Bryan's approach to the people. They would have little influence did not his admirers feel assured not only that he is a good man, but also that he is their sincere friend and desires to be their helper. He has appealed more and more to the plain people as a good Christian and churchman, a student and admirer of Christian work in all lands, a man of upright life and simple manners. He pays the people the compliment they like next best to that of recognized superiority—that of being one of themselves. He attacks that which they suspect and dislike. He believes that he would be able to do much to make life easier for every one. His convictions are positive and radical. With this charm of address, this personal character above suspicion this assurance of conviction along popular lines of thought, this promise of results to be achieved, we have the outward marks of a power which must at last be traced back into the hidden places of personality. The moment seems to be in his hands.

HUMOR OF THE DAY.

London Opinion: "I don't believe in that doctor."

"Why?"

"He didn't tell me everything I wanted to eat was bad for me."

Kansas City Times: "You get a good many kicks from dissatisfied patrons, don't you?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "Anyway, she's mighty reluctant about reaching it."

Boston Trascript: "Looks a bit like rain, ma'am," observed the friendly milkman as he handed in his morning pint.

"It does, indeed," replied the ready-witted housekeeper with her gaze on the bottle.

Harper's Weekly: Little Girl—I've got a father and a muvver and a grandfather, too.

Kindly Stranger—And how old is your grandfather?

Little Girl—I don't know, but we've had him a long time.

Louisville Courrier-Journal: "Some of our hardest battles are fought out of court."

"How can that be?"

"For instance," explained the lawyer, "in case the heirs to an estate want to come to an agreement."

Chicago News: "Ostend," remonstrated his mother, "how often have I told you not to stare at people with your mouth open? They don't like it, my son."

"But that gentleman won't mind, ma," hastened Tommy; "he is a dentist."

Chicago Record-Herald: "Have you ever kissed a girl before?" she asked.

"Why do you put that question to me?" he replied.

"I only wished to know whether it was lack of experience or natural awkwardness that made you go about it in such a ridiculous way."

Washington Post: "Do you remember the motto in the copy book, 'Honesty is the best policy?'"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "And by those queer coincidents I came to have dealings with the man who published that copy book and people who were on the school board that adopted it. None of them seemed to believe a word of that motto!"

It's the easiest thing in the world for a woman to make a man think he is in love with her unless they are married.

The Revival of Prosperity.

New York Herald: The harvests are still the basis of prosperity in this country, and with the fulfillment of their present brilliant promise, the foundation will be laid for a restoration of the industrial and commercial activity interrupted by the panic of last autumn. Much depends upon sentiment, and the special dispatches from every part of the country in the Herald yesterday show that the American people are cheerful and encouraged by the considerable recovery that has already been made and are confident of a restoration of the full tide of prosperity in the not distant future.

Now for Airship Laws.

New York World: If the various aero clubs are successful next year sky sailing will be regulated by statute. Navigators of balloons and aeroplanes will be forced to qualify in meteorology, chart-making, air currents, expansion of gases, the rules of the road and cloud dodging. The endowment of chairs in our leading industries may soon be confidently expected, and the B. A. degree will stand for proficiency in aeronautics as well as in arts. The proposed law will also declare a perpetual close season for balloon shooting, and every ascension is to be recorded so that relatives and friends may be assisted in their search for remains.

Biwabik, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Forty-eight lotts are to be given away in the town of Cotton, being built on the shores of Embarrass lake providing those receiving them put up residences inside of sixty days. This is said to be done in order to hasten the growth of the town which will bring about incorporation and allow the town to have saloons with the resulting income from the licenses.

It is said that the reason for the activity on the part of the promoters is due to the county commissioners, who refused to grant saloon licenses for the settlement.

As the Hill mine is part of the Great Northern lease to the United States Steel corporation, it is supposed that the surveyors are laying out an extension from Nashwauk to Marble for ore carrying purposes, and that a further branching westward would give direct connections between Grand Rapids and Coleraine and Hibbing.

J. J. Gleason, a local undertaker, has received notice that the price of lots in the Virginia cemetery has been doubled, beginning Monday. This action will lead, no doubt, to the securing of a separate cemetery by the Eveleth people, who do not like to drive over to Virginia when they must go to the cemetery.

MARBLE'S RAPID GROWTH.

New Range Town Springs Up as If by Magic.

Marble, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The growth of Marble, where the new Hill mine is being opened up, reads like a fairy tale. This location was almost a wilderness June 1, last, and now it is one of the busiest places on the range. The town board of Iron Range today are considering bids for constructing a road from Taconite here, the large amount of development work being done here by the Oliver Mining company, necessitating such improvement.

B. W. Kriegley of Duluth has been given the contract for the immediate construction of a machine shop, 50 by 100 feet for the Oliver Iron company at the Hill mine. Mr. Kriegley also has the construction of a large roundhouse at the Hill.

The forest around here is rapidly giving away to graded streets and platted townsites. The old mining and drilling camps are being replaced by shops and mine offices and well constructed dwellings for the employes and their families. Arcis & McKnight of Hibbing have the contract for the erection of thirty new houses to be finished by fall. These with many private enterprises will make of Marble a fine appearing little town before snow flies.

but that it is not inconsistent with the rights of private property to impose limitations on its uses for unlawful purposes, and that this is the remedy for reform rather than the abolition of the institution itself.

"The inequality that exists in our present administration of justice and that sooner or later is certain to rise and trouble us, and to call for popular condemnation and reform, is in the unequal burden which the delays and expense of litigation under our system imposes on the poor litigant."

Must Reform Procedure.

One remedy, Mr. Taft said, must be reform in our judicial procedure which is now too cumbersome. Another would be more expeditious on the part of judges in rendering their opinions. As to appeals, Mr. Taft believes that "the court of first instance," and the intermediate appellate courts should be for the purpose of finally disposing in a just and prompt way of contentions between litigants. As to the jury system, Mr. Taft said:

"We cannot, of course, dispense with the jury system. It is that which makes the people a part of the administration of justice but every means by which in civil cases, litigants may be induced voluntarily to avoid the expense, delay and burden of jury trials, ought to be encouraged because in this way the general administration of justice can be greatly facilitated and the expense incident to delay in litigation can be greatly reduced."

Mr. Taft closed with a tribute to the legal profession and cautioned that conservatism ought not to be allowed to prevent reforms which are in the interest of equalizing the administration of justice as far as possible between the poor and the rich.

HANCOCK POLITICAL MEETING.

Hancock, Mich., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Arrangements are being made by a committee of local Republicans for a mass meeting to be held on Friday evening in Germania hall, at which Dr. J. R. ROBBERY IN THE YARDS

Thugs Gag Fred Butzer and Go Through His Pockets.

Two Daring Thieves Rob Pedestrian in Broad Daylight.

Two men held up Fred Butzer, a stone mason of Butler, Minn., at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon on lower First avenue east, at the railroad crossing. They secured $38 in cash. It was one of the boldest robberies ever attempted in Duluth.

In the middle of the afternoon, with people on every side, the thieves suddenly seized Butzer as he was crossing the tracks, clapped a gag in his mouth, dragged him between the cars and went through his pockets. Then they ran through the railroad yards and disappeared.

Butzer was slow in notifying the police. In fact, they probably would not have heard of the incident at all if Detective Walsh had not stumbled on to the story accidentally. This was at 7 o'clock last evening, and by that time the robbers had such a good start that there was not much hope of catching them. The police are working hard on the case, however, and hope to land the pair. The holdup ocurred only two blocks from the police station.

In their haste the robbers overlooked a valuable gold watch, Butzer was carrying. It had no chain attached, so the men did not see it. They were in such a hurry that they did not go through all his pockets, after they found the money.

The man was able to give the police a good description of the thugs, and says he would recognize them on sight. The police believe they went to Superior soon after the robbery, and because of the several hours start they had, owing to the failure of the victim to report the outrage, it will be difficult to trace them.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

FOUNDER OF LUVERNE.

Philo Hawes, Pioneer of Southern Minnesota, is Called.

Luverne, Minn., Aug. 6.—Death has claimed Philo Hawes, one of the pioneers of Southern Minnesota, who died early Monday morning at the age of 77. Mr. Hawes was the first settler in Rock county and father of Luverne, naming the city after his eldest daughter. He located here in 1857, taking up a homestead which is the present site of this city. For several years after first locating here he was government mail agent, carrying the mails by pony express from Blue Earth city to Yankton, S. D. At that time the nearest town to Luverne was Jackson, in Jackson county, and lumber had to be hauled from Madelia, 125 miles. In 1853 Mr. Hawes resided at Red Wind and for several years operated a line of stages from the place to Faribault, Zumbro and other points in Southern and Southeastern Minnesota. He also operated a mail route from Red Wing to Blue Earth city and from 1874 to 1884 he was engaged as mail clerk on the St. Paul & Sioux City railroad and at the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted as second lieutenant in company D, Eleventh Minnesota, and served until the close of the war.

He was married in 1850 to Miss Malvina Hines in Rock county, Wis., who with two children, Charles O. Hawes, of the mercantile firm of Hawes & Son, and Miss Carrie Hawes, survive. Mr. Hawes was born in Tompkins county, N. Y., Dec. 18, 1830. At the age of 12 he removed with his parents to Janesville, Wis. He later resided for some time in St. Paul. The funeral services under the auspices of the John A. Dix post, G. A. R., will be held tomorrow afternoon.

CANADIAN PACIFIC UTILIZING JAPANESE the entire system, but the full effect of the power of the strike will not be felt until the motive power of the road begins to go "dead" for the want of repair work at the shops.

Heretofore the Canadian government has been very industrious in enforcing the alien labor act, and no intimation has been given out that a different policy will be followed for the benefit of the Canadian Pacific.

SOO NOT AFFECTED.

No Strike Yet on American Connection of Canadian Pacific.

St. Paul, Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Inquiry at the office of W. L. Martin, traffic manager of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railroad, the United States connection of the Canadian Pacific railroad at Minneapolis, elicited the information that the Canadian Pacific strike had not yet affected that line. In fact, special refrigerator trains are being sent to Vancouver, one leaving today with every prospect of arriving on time. The official who made the statement to the Associated Press said that if the effect of the strike was felt by the roads in the United States at all it would not be for three weeks more, as the strike was confined to the repair department and it would be at least that long before the strike would become apparent on this side of the line. It is not anticipated that there will be a sympathetic strike on Canadian Pacific railway connecting lines in the United States.

VIEWING GUN LAKE DITCH.

Cost of Big Canal in Aitkin County to be Assessed.

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. Victor Willard, state surveyor, arrived Monday, and with E. L. Dingham of Redwood Falls, W. B. Armstead and D. M. Falconer of Aitkin as viewers, departed for the Gun lake ditch, which is to be enlarged with its seven laterals aggregating twenty-three and one-half miles and costing $37,000. They will be employed several days in apportioning and assessing the costs. The upper end of the work is in Jenkin's lake, and the ditch will drain through Gun and French lakes, lower them six or seven feet and empty into Rice river. The ditch will be eight feet deep and twenty-five feet wide. The work comes within the townships of Fleming and Jevne.

PARKER DELIVERS FIRST SPEECH IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Los Angeles, Aug. 6.—Judge Alton B. Parker, Democratic candidate for president in 1904, delivered his first speech of the present campaign in behalf of W. J. Bryan and Kern before an audience at Temple auditorium last night. In his address Judge Parker said:

"We have at the head of the Democratic ticket two men of character well known, one of whom is especially well known, and who in season and out has fought against the relations between government and corrupt corporations. And with him is associated a man whom I have known personally since 1895 and who, in my judgment, is in every way worthy of his associate, and who in case an emergency of any kind should arise, which God forbid, would be in a position to take up the standard and carry it on."

Speaking of the issues of the campaign, Judge Parker devoted practically his entire speech to the tariff and to the subject of "Campaign contributions of corporations."

FARM HAND KILLED.

Iroquois, S. D., Aug. 6.—A farm hand, working for a man named Meeker, north of Manchester, was struck by lightning late yesterday afternoon while driving a harvester in the grain field and was instantly killed. He was literally torn all to pieces. The unfortunate man was a stranger who came to this section for the harvest season.

OVERTAXED

Hundreds of Duluth Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do,
They tell about it in many aches and pains—
Backache, sideache, headache,
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Duluth citizen tells here a certain cure.

H. G. Hibke, clerk in the Northern Pacific R. R. freight house, and living at Hunter's Park, Duluth, Minn., says: "In a testimonial given by me in 1898, which has been published often in the Duluth papers, I told how Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of a severe attack of kidney complaint, from which I had suffered for a long time. I believe that it was brought on in the first place by exposure to all kinds of weather and the jarring of driving. Backache set in and the pains and aches made stooping and lifting very painful. Whenever I took cold it settled in my back and aggravated the trouble. The kidney secretions became discolored, irregular and contained a sediment. I also had frequent attacks of headaches. However, as I have emphatically declared and will always affirm, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of all these conditions, and today not a symptom of my former trouble remains."

MARINE NEWS

SHIPMENTS FAR BEHIND

Ore Movement Ten Millions Tons Less Than Last Year.

Little Improvement is Expected During the Current Month.

Ore shipments for the season up to Aug. 1 were 10,299,353 tons behind last year for the same time. There was a strike on the docks and at the mines at the head of Lake Superior in July, 1907, or the loss would have been much greater.

Shipments for last month were heavier than expected. In July the fleet moved 4,364,283 tons of ore, which is a decrease of only 484,834 tons compared with the same month last year. July is usually the biggest month of the season, and if the mines and docks were not tied up by labor trouble last year the movement for the month would have been over 6,000,000 tons.

The fleet moved 7,235,280 tons of ore up to Aug. 1 this season, and in 1907 for the same time the mines sent forward 17,534,633 tons of ore. It is not expected that shipments will show much of an increase this month, but a better movement of ore is looked for after Sept. 1.

The outside figure that has been named for the total movement for 1908 is 25,000,000 tons, and in order to take down that amount of ore the fleet will only have to move about 18,000,000 tons after Aug. 1. There would only have to be a slight increase over the July shipments during August, September, October and November to bring the total up to that figure.

A movement of 4,500,000 tons for each of the four months named would make 18,000,000 tons, and unless there is a decided improvement in the trade shipments during the balance of the season will not exceed that figure much.

The freight market is in about the same condition it has been for several weeks, and the indications are that there will not be much improvement in the demand for tonnage during the first half of August. Practically all the are that has been sold has been covered by freight contracts and will cargoes are very scarce. A number of vessels that have been on the market for several days have not been placed.

Receipts of coal at Ohio ports are light and contract vessels are taking most of the cargoes that are coming forward. The docks at the upper lake ports are in bad shape and unless there is a better movement from the docks to the interior a further cut in shipments will be made.

Bridge Still Closed.

Uncertainty still exists as to when the interstate bridge will be ready for the passage of regular traffic. The draw is in good working order, but the officials are undecided as to when the first car will pass over it. The street railway people will be ready to send their cars across as soon as given the summons.

Bridge in Commission.

The Northern Pacific railroad bridge went into commission again yesterday, and trains are running over it as usual. The lock on the draw in the Wisconsin channel was not entirely satisfactory, and trains were sent around by the Gregory Point bridge for a short time, while it was being adjusted.

MEACHAM IS IN HARBOR

Boat Which Went on Rocks, is Taking Ore Cargo.

Permanent Repairs Will be Made at Lower Lake Port.

The Frontier Steamship company's steamer, D. B. Meacham, which went ashore at Passage island, near Fort William, last week, and for which fears were entertained for a time, arrived in the Duluth-Superior harbor this morning at 2 o'clock and went to the Allouez ore docks for a cargo.

The Meacham is not very badly damaged. She went on the rocks in a fog and her position was dangerous if a hard blow came up. She was lightered of about 1,000 tons of coal, however, and was then released by the James Whalen and other tugs, which pulled on her for two days. She was taken to Port Arthur, where the coal cargo was discharged and temporary repairs made. The damage was not at all serious and she was able to come to Duluth for ore. Permanent repairs will be made after the boat arrives at her lower lake destination.

The Meacham was launched last spring and is on her first trip to the Head of the Lakes. She is of the type of big freighters and has a capacity of 10,000 tons.

LAUNCHES ARE FINED.

Customs Officers Heavily Assess Negligent Motor Boat Owners.

Five more gas launches were fined this morning by the United States customs office here for failure to reply to passing signals. The Gladys R. was reported to the local office by the collector of customs at Superior for failure to answer passing signals on the bay July 31. The Zenith and Robert B. were reported by the collector of customs at Superior for a similar offense Sunday, Aug. 2. The Nipigon and Coquette were reported by the customs launch, Lurline, for failure to answer passing signals on St. Louis river Sunday, Aug. 2. Collectors of Customs Willcutts fined each of the boats $200.

The government officials at all ports on the lakes are relentlessly pursuing the motor boat owners, who violate the laws. A good many launches have felt the force of the regulations in the local harbor this year. The Superior collector of customs has fined nine boats within the last two weeks and the local collector about the same number.

Several launches have been reported to the collector of customs here for failure to carry lights at night and for carrying passengers for hire without having a licensed man aboard or without having a sufficient number of life preservers. The cases are being investigated and the violators of the law in that respect will be severely dealt with. Launches carrying passengers for hire are required to have a licensed man aboard and to have one life preserver for each passenger, and violations of the regulations in that respect are said to be numerous.

Buoy Knocked Over.

The Tomlinson boat Sylvania, while leaving the Missabe ore docks with a cargo at 8 o'clock last night, knocked over the northwest beacon on the cross channel to the ore docks. The piling is intact, but the light and platform were knocked into the river. The light was found this morning by the government engineer's tug Tangent, and it will be replaced as soon as possible.

OPENING IS DELAYED.

Boats May Not Pass Through West Neebish Channel Until After Aug. 15

Cleveland, Aug. 6.—The new West Neebish channel will not be opened to navigation before Aug. 15, and it may be later. The Lake Carriers yesterday appointed a number of masters to assist Capts. W. W. Smith, John Lowe and George Mallory in the work of piloting steamers through the new cut when it is opened. They will go to the Soo and learn the channel.

NO DEMURRAGE ON CARS.

Pittsburg Shippers Receive Concessions From the Railroads.

Shippers and representatives of the railroads operating between Pittsburg and the lakes have reached an agreement on the question of demurrage on lake shipments, and there will ge no demurrage charges this year, according to statements made today.

This is regarded as a big concession to the shippers of the Pittsburg district, and it will be the first time in years that the railroads have not demanded demurrage charges on all cars detained at the lakes. The railroads are said to have planned to make the demurrage changes effective at once.

Delay in opening the lake season is said to be responsible for the attitude now taken by the railroads on this question. Heretofore they have demanded demurrage from all shippers as soon as the lake season opened.

FLEET IS GROWING.

Additions Made to Boats Lying in Anchorage Basin.

The fleet of coal boats in the anchorage basin of the Duluth harbor is growing again. Six were anchored there this morning waiting for berths at the different docks and a few more will probably be added this afternoon. With the fleet of boats, which have not been in commission this year and which are anchored there, a small forest of masts is formed.

A curious feature of the view this morning was the tug steamer Dalton, with a cargo of limestone, lying alongside of the Tomlison steamer Socapa, one of the giant freighters of the lakes. The contrast was the subject of comment on the docks.

Penobscot is Aground.

The steamer Penobscot, owned by the Lake Transit company of Bay City, went ashore this morning while approaching the Berwind & White coal dock, for which she had a cargo. Two tugs have been pulling on her all morning, without success, and it may be necessary to lighter a portion of her coal cargo in order to release her.

HAVE YOU TRIED THE NEW TONIC?

Take the Herald's Excursion on Lake Superior Next Saturday.

If you did not take advantage of The Herald's excursions up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac and on Lake Superior to Two Harbors Tuesday you missed a grand treat.

Several hundred of your friends and neighbors went and had a most delightful time. Ask them what they think of The Herald's low-priced excursions.

The next excursion will occur Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the steamer Easton will leave Booth's dock for a 30-mile run down the lake.

A stop of one hour will be made at Two Harbors for sight-seeing and for supper, providing you do not take your lunch with you.

One of the grandest rides imaginable is the return by moonlight. Think of the combination! The steamer Easton with its commodious quarters, excellent service, a 30-mile ride down the lake in the afternoon, a visit at Two Harbors and the return trip in the glorious moonlight—all for 30 cents. It's a trip worth dollars.

Don't let your visiting friends leave the city without enjoying a Herald excursion. Give them the opportunity of carrying away a pleasant remembrance of Duluth and the lake and river trips. These excursions are proving a splendid advertisement for the city.

Remember that the tickets for the Saturday excursion on the steamer Easton are now on sale at The Herald office. Buy early for the sale will be limited to insure comfort. There will be no crowding. This is one of the features The Herald insists on.

U. of this state are sending largely signed petitions to the navy officials at Washington. They have also planned to furnish every member of the crew of the big fighting machine with a "comfort bag," which will contain things handy for mending their clothes as well as a copy of the Bible.

RAILROADS

WHEAT WILL COME HERE

Officials Say Canadian Grain Will be Shipped by Duluth.

Dominion Roads Will be Unable to Handle Increased Volume.

According to the belief of the railroad officials here, much of the grain of Western Canada will be sent through this port, via the lakes to Europe.

According to figures at hand the output of the Canadian grain fields will be 120,000,000 bushels this year. This is against 60,000,000 last year and 90,000,000 bushels in 1906. Two years ago the Canadian roads found it almost impossible to handle the volume of wheat. An increase of 30,000,000 bushels, it is believed here, will result in a great deal of wheat being sent by the way of the lakes, through the port of Duluth.

Of course, the Canadian Northern railway will handle a great part of the grain through its terminals at Port Arthur, but those in a position to state, say that this road can not begin to handle the immense volume of wheat that promises to swamp the Canadian roads this fall.

This arrangement would be in line with the prediction made by Vice President H. C. Starr of the Wisconsin Central, during his recent trip to Duluth. Mr. Starr predicted that within a few years the Canadian grain would be losing its identity and would be shipped to Europe through American ports. If the yield of Western Canada is as great this year as the predictions indicate, it is probable that this fall will witness the carrying out of the prediction of the vice president of the Wisconsin Central.

Just what effect the strike on the Canadian Pacific will have upon the handling of wheat cannot be said at this time. There is a law in Canada, however, that makes arbitration in such matters imperative if an amicable settlement has not been reached within a certain time. But even should the Canadian Pacific be able to engage to its fullest capacity in the wheat movement, it is stated here that this port is bound secure a large amount of bonded wheat.

SHIPMENTS HEAVY.

Coal Movement Shows Big Increase During the Past Few Days.

The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern railroads are averaging about a hundred cars of coal each from Duluth and Superior for western shipments at the present time. This is a great increase over the coal tonnage that has been shipped from the Head of the Lakes up until the past few days.

The efforts of the railroad companies to get the shippers along their lines to ship at an early date has at last met with some response. Coal that is bought for railroad use totals only a slight per cent of the amount that is being shipped out daily, most of it being commercial coal.

Most of the coal is for points in North Dakota. Some of it is going as far West as Montana.

BONDS ARE ISSUED.

Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Will Form Subsidiary Company.

New York, Aug. 6.—It was announced today that arrangements have been completed by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway with J. P. Morgan & Co. for an issue of $17,000,000 bonds of a subsidiary company of the Atchison system, the bonds being part of an authorized issue of $30,000,000. It is understood that the issue will be secured by a first mortgage on the Belen cutoff, which is a part of the main line of the Atchison, and on properties and by a first mortgage on the Pecos Valley & Northeastern railroad.

The bonds, which will be guaranteed, both as to principal and interest by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, will be put out in the neighborhood of 94 or 94½ and will have preference over the Atchison convertible issues.

Time Changed.

A new time card will go into effect on the Great Northern Sunday, Aug. 25. The night Duluth train is scheduled to arrive and depart later, so as to connect with the Winnipeg Flyer No. 8. It is not known that other changes in the time card are contemplated.

Increase Allowed

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 6.—United States Circuit Judge Pardee of Florida, who is spending his summer vacation in this city, today dissolved the order of Judge Emory Speer prohibiting the Louisville & Nashville and other roads from enforcing the proposed increase in freight rates in the state of Georgia. By the appeal and supersedeas granted by Judge Pardee, the railroads interested will be allowed to put their new rates into effect in Georgia as in other states pending final hearing of the matter.

Investigate Merger.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 6.—A committee appointed at the meeting of the directors of the Commercial club of Des Moines yesterday will investigate the mergers made by the Burlington Railroad company in Southern Iowa several years ago, with a view to determining if it is advisable to try to dissolve the consolidations.

Harry B. Sullivan is chairman of the committee.

The train service to Southwestern Iowa towns by the Burlington company and the accommodations given the city of Des Moines, together with the dissimilar service and accommodations given to cities outside of the state were the subject of an extended discussion by the club officials yesterday.

NEW BRIGHTON SCORCHED.

Village Near Minneapolis Has Disastrous Fire.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 6.—The little village of New Brighton, situated six miles north of Minneapolis, was visited by a fire Tuesday night which did damage estimated at $25,000. The flames consumed nineteen sheep barns owned by the Minnesota Transfer company. No sheep had been kept in the yards for a month. The remainder of the stock yards, which adjoin the barns, were saved.

The whole town turned out and fought the flames with all the hose and axes they could bring into play. The flames, whipped into life by a strong wind, leaped from one barn to another. The sparks from the blazing sheds were carried high in the air by the wind and then cast down on the shingle roofs of the frame houses. Women and children stood on the roof tops and stamped out the sparks, while the men folk dashed water on the flames and cut away the burning timbers.

At one time the pickle factory of the New Brighton Industry company, whose building belongs to H. E. Fletcher of Minneapolis, and was on the boundary of the burning district, was in extreme danger of catching fire, but the heroic work of the inhabitants below forced the fire started saved the building. The fire started at 6 and continued for about two hours. It was discovered by a night watchman and spread before it could be extinguished.

WHITAKER MURDER TRIAL.

Slayer of Congressman's Nephew Faces Jury of Peers.

Towner, N. D., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trial has commenced here of Whitaker charged with killing Conrad Steenerson, nephew of Congressman Steenerson of Crookston and son of Knute Steenerson. The case was outlined by E. R. Sinkler of Grafton, who is assisting State's Attorney Bergeer in the prosecution of the case. Attorneys for the defense are Tillman Smith of Upham, D. J. O'Connell of Towner and W. J. Courtenay of Page. Whitaker has been unable to raise more than $300 for his defense, but friends here promise to raise sufficient funds.

The state's claim is that it is a case of premeditated murder. The defense will set up pleas of justified homicide and will make an effort to show that Steenerson followed Whitaker about the day of the shooting and provoked him and at various times during the day assaulted him and was in the act of assaulting him the second time when shot. Defense will also contend that before the shot was fired Whitaker had retreated more than thirty feet and was making further attempt to escape from Steenerson through the back door.

Diarrhoea Cured.

"My father has for years been troubled with diarrhoea, and tried every means possible to effect a cure, without avail," writes John H. Zirkle of Philippi, W. Va. "He saw Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy advertised in the Philippi Republican and decided to try it. The result is one bottle cured him, and he has not suffered for eighteen months. Before taking this remedy he was a constant sufferer. He is now sound and well, and, although 60 years old, can do as much work as a young man." Sold by all druggists.

Only One Way

Don't expect the stomach to do work it can't do. That is unreasonable. While you need help —let Kodol do it for you. Kodol digests all the food and it is the only preparation that does. If the stomach is unable to digest food—

There is only one way. It must have help.

Don't expect it to do work it can't do. That is unreasonable. Help restore its abilty to act for itself. It soon puts it in condition to do its work unaided. When that condition is reached—

You don't need help.

You don't need digesters.

You don't need Kodol.

But while you do need help let Kodol do it for you. Then note the physical improvement that only comes with perfect digestion. And perfect digestion supplies sufficient nourishment.

Kodol is not a cure—Nature alone cures. But Kodol assists the stomach by doing part of its work. Then nature completes its cure. A little help from Kodol makes the burden lighter and easier to bear.

There are tonic properties in Kodol that cause the stomach and whole system to respond. That is what you want. That's what you get in Kodol.

Lack of nourishment is not generally caused by lack of food. It is because you don't assimilate what you eat and because it don't digest.

Eat good food and all you want

Don't avoid this nor that because it dosen't agree with you. That only shows the stomach needs help. If your appetite craves certain things your system requires them.

Here is where Kodol benefits you.

It not only digests the food you have eaten, but tones up and puts the stomach back to a healthy and normal condition.

As long as part of the food remains undigested, the stomach is not at rest. All food must be digested. Only part means that the stomach must go on working at an impossible task.

Some things are a partial help and do part of the work. But that is not enough. The part they do is not the most essential part. Just what they fail to accomplish is what is most required by the body. Part way will not do. "Part way" will never take you to a journey's end. All or none should be the demand.

That is why Kodol is so successful.

It digests all food as quickly as a healthy stomach will do it.

If it fails it costs you nothing.

Fairness cannot go further.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money. We will then repay the druggist. This offer applies to the large bottle and to but one in a family.

The dollar bottle contains 2¼ times as much as the fifty cent bottle. Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Men Past Sixty in Danger.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Sold by all druggists."

DO NOT WANT TO PAY ANY TAXES

Bell Company Claims Vacant Lot is for Telephone Purposes.

Judge Dibell has under advisement another case arising under the provisions of the gross earnings tax.

When the Duluth branch of the Bell Telephone company purchased a twenty-five foot lot on West First street, near Third avenue west, and erected a building thereon for telephone purposes, the lot was exempted for taxation under the provisions of the gross earnings tax law.

In the spring of 1905, however, the company bought an adjoining twenty-five feet. They cut a number of windows through on that side of their building and piled some telephone poles and cross arms on it. Then wanted to be exempt from taxation, because that was used for "tlephone" purposes.

Shortly after the purchase of the lot First street was paved with creosoted blocks. The city paid for the paving of the portion in front of the telephone building, but assessed the cost of the improvement in front of the adjoining lot to the company, claiming that it was bought for speculative purposes.

The company protested, and the city filed an answer, but the case was held up while the state supreme court passed on the constitutionality of the gross earnings tax. It was argued before Judge Dibell in chambers Monday. W. J. Stevenson, attorney for the county board argued the case for the state.

The telephone company claimed that they needed the ground to store telephone poles and cross arms, and for the light and air, there being no light shaft in their building. They admitted, under cross-examination, that there was about thirty feet back of their building which was unused, and that neither the Zenith Telephone company nor any of the other electric companies in the city had such a storing ground.

Judge Dibell took the case under advisement and will hand down an answer in a few days.

LARGE SUM FOR ROADS

County Commissioners Bring Tax Rate Up to 2.62 Mills.

Will Cost Nearly $100,000 More to Run County Next Year.

As forecasted in The Herald last evening the county commissioners, late yesterday afternoon decided to add $50,000 to the tax levy for 1908 for the purpose of road construction, thus bringing up the county tax rate to 2.62 instead of 2.42.

There was considerable discussion as to the advisability of this addition, especially as the county is making a levy of nearly $87,000 for a sinking and interest fund, this being an unusually large amount. Last year the sinking fund was only $44,000. It was finally decided that the good roads fund was a most important one and the county tax rate went up two-tenths of a mill. This is practically eight-tenths of a mill higher than last year when the rate was 1.82.

The total levy for county purposes according to the figures approved by the commissioners yesterday will be $558,900, an increase of $85,553 over last year's expenses.

The estimated valuation of the county for 1908 is $234,347,180, which is divided among the districts as follows: First district, Commissioner Patterson, $21,550,226; second distric, Commissioner Tischer, $5,968,584; Third district, Commissioner Sundeen, $6,738,189; Fourth district, Commissioner McMahon, $7,105,211; Fifth district, Commissioner Kauppi, $4,272,272; Sixth district, Commissioner McInnis, $55,035,891; Seventh district, Commissioner Ryan, $133,376,707.

The levy for the different funds, compared with the expenses of the year 1907 is as follows:

Fund.	Mills.	Levy '08.	Exp.'08.
County revenue	1.1	$247,000	$213,454.53
County poor	.0.14	31,500	30,192.20
County roads	.0.70	157,500	114,830.12
Court house	.0.30	67,500	70,304.15
Interest and sinking	.0.38	86,900	44,525.96
	2.62	$558,900	$473,346.96

NEW INSPECTION TAKES UP DUTIES

P. A. Karnes Will Watch Courthouse Contractors for Commission.

P. A. Karnes of Pittsburg, who has made a reputation in this city by his work as superintendent of construction on the Board of Trade building addition, assumed his duties as chief inspector for the courthouse commission on the scene of the new courthouse work yesterday. Mr. Karnes was appointed by the commission on the warm recommendation of the board of trade men. Either he or one of his deputies will be on the ground constantly and the inspection will be a most thorough one.

An allowance of $11,000 has been made to the contractors, Lanquist & Illsley, for work already done on the foundation. The work is progressing nicely.

Considerable discussion has been aroused among Duluth builders and others interested as to the advisability of making the foundation of so imposing a building of concrete, this being something of a new departure for Duluth. It has been suggested that it might chip or otherwise be insufficient. The contractors, however, point out that this material is being used for foundations throughout the United States and is giving excellent satisfaction. The fact that it is completely below ground, and is to be lined with brick on the inside, should, they claim, prevent chipping or other damage.

NEW LIFE TO IRON MARKET

Heavy Buying of Pig Accelerates Conditions Greatly.

Cleveland, Aug. 6.—The Iron Trade Review says: Heavy buying of pig iron by cast-iron pipe interests has brought new life to the pig iron market. A leading pipe interest has, within a few days, purchased 30,000 tons of Southern iron, and an order for 16,000 tons placed recently by a New York state pipe concern is announced. The sale of Southern iron places several companies, which have been making low prices, out of the market for the third quarter. Although it may still be possible to buy on a basis of $11.50 Birmingham for No. 2 foundry, several important interests have advanced their quotations to from $12.25 to $12.50. In spite of the improvement in conditions in the South, the situation is not such as to justify further advances, which, if made, would probably check buying. The Standard Sanitary & Manufacturing company has purchased 4,000 tons for its Louisville plant, and is in the market for 4,000 additional tons. The usual sale basis for Southern product has been $11.50 Birmingham. In the East there is moderate activity in foundry iron. The average price of Bessemer for July was $15.83 at valley, the lowest figure since October, 1905, and the iron is now selling at $11.50 valley, with a limited demand. Basic is also very quiet.

The movement of ore from the Lake Superior region for July amounted to 4,364,283 tons, making the total for the season 7,235,281 tons, a decrease of 10,293,460 tons compared with the same period last year. M. A. Hanna & Co. have sold 1,000,000 tons of ore on a five-year contract, but other sales are for smaller lots.

The production of pig iron for July amounted to 1,225,363 tons, compared with 1,106,300 tons in June, and eleven more blast furnaces are in operation.

In finished materials the strength of the situation lies largely in the very satisfactory specifications that are being received.

Buying by the railroads is still disappointing, and some companies which cater almsot exclusively to the railroad trade state that their business is very poor. We note, however, an order for 14,500 tons of rails placed by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. An industrial railroad is in the market for 500 cars. The light rail demand is fairly active.

OF SECONDARY IMPORTANCE

German Professor Says Kaiser Thinks of Business Before Army.

Arthur M. Abell of Berlin, Germany, professor in one of the German universities of engineering, is at the St. Louis hotel today. Prof. Abell is accompanied by his sister, Miss Ellin M. Abell of Bridgeport, Conn. They came in on the North West last evening.

Prof. Abell is studying conditions in this country, as he has not been in the United States for the past twelve years. He says that there is no unrest in Europe, as is occasionally reported in the American press, in regards to the aggressive military policy on the part of the German emperor.

Prof. Abell states that military conditions in Germany are entirely subservient to the industrial program of the country. He does not believe that the rapid increase of the German navy has anything but a pacific significance.

He further says that there is no discord between France and Germany, despite reports to the contrary. He says that the slight ill feeling stirred up over the Morocco question has been entirely healed, and that today Germany and France are entirely reconciled toward broad and progressive policies that have nothing to do with thoughts of international friction.

WOMAN HAS LEPROSY.

Wife of Gen. Wardwell Shows Well Developed Case at Tombstone.

Tombstone, Ariz., Aug. 6.—A well developed case of leprosy has been discovered here, and Gen. D. K. Wardwell and his wife are under strict quarantine. Both the Arizona health department and the board of supervisors are considering plans to return the couple to California, compelling the Southern Pacific railroad to transport them to Sawtelle, from which point they came here.

Mrs. Wardwell is afflicted with leprosy, the fingers of both hands being drawn out of shape from the severe nerve contraction.

The couple were former Tombstone residents, Gen. Wardwell being a hero of the Mexican and Civil wars. For the past year he has been an inmate of the Soldiers' home at Sawtelle, where his wife also resided. Wardwell, himself a sufferer from a cancerous growth on his eye, but with no leprous symptoms, according to the doctor's examination, avows his intention of accompanying his wife, should she be deported to the leper colony.

VILLA INCIDENT

Has No International Aspect, Says Governor General Smith.

Manila, Aug. 6.—Governor General Smith, in reply to the protest made by the Spanish residents of this city against the utterances of Simon Villa, a candidate for alderman, who on July 22 declared, in the course of a speech, that he hated everything Spanish and in case of another revolution would advocate the killing of every Spaniard in Manila, yesterday said that the incident lacked the slightest hint of any international aspect. Villa's inflammatory declarations being those of a private citizen only, and not uttered by any one in an official capacity. It is presumed that this closes the incident.

A lively municipal campaign is now in progress here and the American residents are endeavoring to defeat Villa for alderman of the city.

Do you know that the kind of water used in brewing makes a great difference in the quality of the beer? Waters obtained from two or three different localities may each be pure but each has a different effect upon the brew.

SOX TAKE THIRD GAME

Dick Thorsen Humbles Artie O'Dea's Proud League Leaders.

Sox Bunch Hits With Passes and Errors for Winning Scores.

Artie O'Dea's smile, which has been perceptibly waning all week took fairy wings and flew yesterday. The groundkeeper swore softly as Artie dug holes in the green sward and the street car that carried the doleful Brandon leader back to his hotel and dreams of vanishing pennants was like a well regulated undertaking establishment. To say Artie was sad would be putting it mildly. He was in the deep, dark, dark depths of desolate desperation. Dick Thorsen humbled his mighty warriors while Cy Dahlgren was having an experience like unto sitting upon a redhot stove while the cook is baking bread and the Sox gathered in the third game of the series by the safe score of 4 to 2.

The native son pitched a really great game and the representatives of the Canadian breadbasket should never have had a score. The three stingy singles were separated by two yawning vacums of hitless endeavor. They didn't figure in the scoring and only one of the men, who made them, got past first base. The two runs Brandon scored were gifts pure and simple, and were marked up without any particular effort on the part of the Angels.

The two runs came in the fifth inning, after the Sox had copped the lead, 1 to 0, in the fourth. Thorsen walked Livingston and Taylor dumped one at Ness. The big fellow fumbled the ball and everybody was safe. Nelson bunted one and Thorsen threw to third when he hadn't a possible chance of getting the man. Everybody safe once again. Dahlgren hit a high fly to Hopkins, who threw to Wescott to head off Taylor at third. The third baseman let the ball get away and Taylor also scored. The next two men went down, but the lead looked big for the time.

The Sox had recovered their ginger and batting eyes to some extent and Dahlgren had troublous times. In the fourth, he walked Hopkins and booted Monroe's grounder. Ness singled, filling the bases with nobody down. O'Brien went out at first and Hopkins scored. Williams went down on a grounder to pitcher and Pratt drew a deliberate walk. That boy has pushed too many against the fence to take chances on him in a pinch. Wescott couldn't do better than a fly to left and the side went out with the bases crowded.

After Brandon had taken the lead, the Sox came back strong. Thorsen broke into the hitting department with a single and Koepping flied out. Hopkins hit a low one at Wagner and the big fellow dropped it. Monroe went out on a fly and it was up to Ness. O'Dea, Dahlgren and Mills held a council of war. Ness is dangerous and he proved it. Cy took a chance and sent one down the groove. A hot liner to left for two sacks and two scores resulted. Dahlgren's downfall was complete.

Not satisfied with having the spotlight in the box, Thorsen drew it at the plate, too. In the seventh inning, first man up, he caught one full in the right spot and started it for West Duluth. It disappeared from view, the Duluth team fell off the bench as one man, and Thorsen sauntered around the circuit.

There was a little excitement in the show. Koepping and Leighty both pulled down some hard ones and Ness' two bagger in the fifth managed to bring the fans to their feet. In the ninth, Custer went in to bat for Meneice and singled, but Koepping and O'Brien pulled off a double and cut off the embryo run. Indian Jack Taylor, who played third base for Calumet last year, appeared in left field for the Angels and Wentlandt, the Duluth boy, who broke in with two hits Tuesday, was right in for a time, but was taken out to allow Nelson to bat for him in the fifth. Cullen, a West Duluth boy, was on the Duluth bench in uniform, and will be given a tryout in the infield.

BIWABIK LOSES IN THE TWELFTH

Brownlee Weakens and Coleraine Wins Out by 5 to 1 Score.

Biwabik, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coleraine took the third and last game of the series here yesterday by a score of 5 to 1, in a twelve-inning contest, which was full of excitement. Coleraine scored on the first inning and Biwabik tied it up with a batting rally in the ninth. In the twelfth, Brownlee weakened and the Western Mesaba men scored four times, cinching the game. Llen had a little the better of Brownless in the pitching department and the Coleraine team supported him well in the pinches.

Sox Lose to Boston

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Boston bunched hits off Smith yesterday and defeated Chicago 3 to 2. A base on balls, two singles and Jones' error gave Boston two in the third inning. Chicago tied the score by a pass, a double and a single. The winning run was due to a hit, Sullivan's throw and Stahl's single. Score: R. H. E.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 6.—Washington played a miserable game in the field yesterday and Cleveland won easily by a score of 12 to 1. Berger was invincible, but Manager Lajoie took him out of the box and gave Foster a trial. Gates was knocked out of the box in the second inning. Score: R. H. E.

Browns Win Two Games.

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—Sensational fielding in the first contest and Pelty's effectiveness in the second enabled St. Louis to win both games yesterday with New York. The scores were 5 to 2 and 6 to 1. Waddell, who worked against Manning in the first game, was wild at critical times, but brilliant support kept the score down. Manning was hit hard in the first and seventh innings. In the second contest Pelty was invincible, holding the visitors to two singles, while Chesbro was easily solved, especially in the third inning, when four hits netted the locals four runs. Scores:

Detroit, Aug. 6.—Detroit mixed two hits with two bases on balls and an error in the sixth inning and scored three runs, practically deciding the result. Mullin had the Athletics baffled, the two runs of the sixth inning being due to a muffed fly by Jones. Score: R. H. E.

The visitors tried to delay matters because of approaching rain, which stopped play in the latter half of the fifth inning. PLAY IS PROGRESSING.

Emerson Puts Smithers Away in Third Round of Singles.

Minneapolis, Aug. 6.—Melville Smithers of St. Louis went down in the third round of the Northwestern tennis tourney at Deep Haven yesterday before the Western champion, Nat Emerson, but not until after the hardest fight and best tennis of the tourney to date. Emerson took the first set, but Smithers made a hard fight for the second, forcing it to deuce and then losing through the superior passing of the champion. Score: 6-4, 7-5.

In the doubles Emerson (Cincinnati) and Waldner (Chicago) defeated Potter and Woodcock (Minneapolis) 6-1, 6-0, 6-2.

In the third round of singles Emerson (Cincinnati) defeated Smithers (St. Louis) 6-4, 7-5.

Play is in full swing, with the singles rapidly approaching the semi-finals and the doubles and consolation events well under way.

YACHTS TO RACE AGAIN

Frolic and Freckles Tied for Rear Commodore's Cup.

Freckles Wins Last of Series, With Frolic Second.

The fifth and last race of the series for the rear commodore's cup and the honor of representing the Duluth Yacht club in the eighteen-foot class at the Inland Lake Yachting association regatta at Lake Minnetonka the latter part of this month, was sailed over the club course last evening and a victory of Freckles put that boat and Frolic in a tie, which will necessitate another race.

All four boats got away from the club at 6:30 to make the course from home to the dyke, to the aerial bridge, back to the dyke and home again, a distance of four miles. Freckles, sailed by E. G. Mogford and Robert Fisk, crossed the finish line first at 7:22, with Frolic, sailed by Fred Levens and H. A. Pierce, second at 7:24; Thistle, sailed by Trux brothers, third, at 7:25, and Spray, sailed by Lester Phelps and Frank Sampson, fourth, at 7:27. The yachts were pretty well bunched all the way, but Freckles took a good lead in the home stretch. The race for second place at the finish between Thistle and Frolic furnished the most interest to the spectators.

The result of the race gives the yachts the following rating: Frolic, 16; Freckles, 16; Thistle, 13; Spray, 3. Another race between Frolic and Freckles will probably be pulled off next Wednesday.

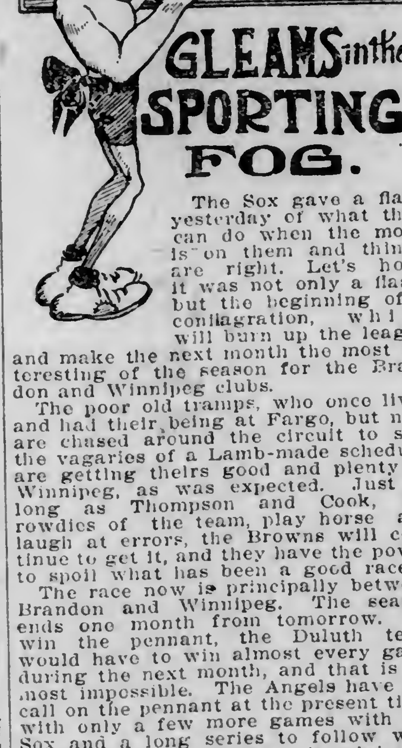
GOLF BY MOONLIGHT.

Chicago Professional Makes Course in 83 Strokes at Night.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—As a result of a wager, Fred McLeod, professional golfer of the Onwentsia County club at Lake Forest last night completed the 18-hole course in 83 strokes, aided only by the dim light of a half moon. He made the first 9 holes in 38, and was going at a fast clip until the 14th hole was reached. Then the moon went behind a cloud and the rest of the course was finished in the dark.

McLeod used iron clubs throughout, driving with a putter to make the ball go straight and using a midiron on the fair green. He laid practically all his approaches dead and did not lose a ball. The wager was that he could not make the first 9 holes in better than 45.

BASEBALL
TOMORROW, 3:30 P. M.
DULUTH vs. BRANDON
Game Every Afternoon This Week.
LADIES FREE.



The Sox gave a flash yesterday of what they can do when the mood is on them and things are right. Let's hope it was not only a flash, but the beginning of a conflagration, which will burn up the league and make the next month the most interesting of the season for the Brandon and Winnipeg clubs.

The poor old tramps, who once lived and had their being at Fargo, but now are chased around the circuit to suit the vagaries of a Lamb-made schedule, are getting theirs good and plenty at Winnipeg, as was expected. Just as long as Thompson and Cook, the rowdies of the team, play horse and laugh at errors, the Browns will continue to get it, and they have the power to spoil what has been a good race.

The race now is principally between Brandon and Winnipeg. The season ends one month from tomorrow. To win the pennant, the Duluth team would have to win almost every game during the next month, and that is almost impossible. The Angels have the call on the pennant at the present time, with only a few more games with the Sox and a long series to follow with Fargo, while Winnipeg is mixing it with the always-dangerous Duulthians.

If O'Dea doesn't cinch the pennant within the next month, it will not be because schedule conditions are not right. If Winnipeg wins, it will be only by a supreme effort. And if Duluth wins—if, if, if—somebody is likely to die of the shock.

Joe Clements of Superior thought he was some fighter not very long ago. His friends thought in the same channel and were willing to bet all kinds of money on the boy. One promoter had serious intentions of bringing Young Jack O'Leary or Joe Cherry to Northern Minnesota to tame the Superiorite, and he would have found plenty of money backing Clements, even with such an opponent.

The light of Joe's star was suddenly doused the other night. He went down to St. Paul, went against one Jimmie Clabbe of Milwaukee, and took a sound beating. Merciful friends of the Superior boy stopped the uneven contest in the third round, and it is up to Joe to return to Superior and subside. Dreams of glory in the lightweight pugilistic world are over.

George Lennon has about come around to where he can see the light. The fact that St. Paul baseball fans are disgusted doesn't cause any surprise. It's a wonder there is a fan in the city. Padden was only a fair manager, Ed Aschenback was a joke and Tim Flood and his trailers are a scream. Now the St. Paul magnate proposed to flirt with Mike Kelley once again and the fans are jubilant.

Whatever Kelley may be in disposition, he knows baseball. When he was with St. Paul before he showed it. He showed it again in Minneapolis in 1906 and he would have made good in Toronto this year if the owners had not interfered. Kelley was railroaded out of the American association, but he can return with flying colors, and he would be a poor manager who couldn't get together a better team, and make a better showing than the outfit that is misrepresenting St. Paul in the Association this year.

The range managers have finally agreed on the umpire question and the rest of the world may now lie back and watch the struggle. Hibbing, Virginia and Eveleth are tearing at each other's throats like a lion, a tiger and a leopard placed in the same cage. Every team's hand is "agin" the others and the fans are "agin" everything. The baseball season on the range doesn't end for fully two months yet. They will be months of fearful and wonderful developments. Sore heads may come afterwards, but the joy will reign supreme while the merry mix is on.

John Wesley.

THE famous founder of Methodism was pre-eminently a man of heroic and humanitarian ideals, whose personal piety, beneficence and high moral teachings deserve the approbation of all good men.

In one of his sermons he declares: "Without bread and wine the strongest bodies decay . . . bread and wine keep up our natural life"; and again when criticising a book, published by Dr. Cadogan, he praises the use of fermented liquor as "one of the noblest cordials of nature."

In a pamphlet entitled "Primitive Physic" he advises his followers as follows: "Drink water only when it agrees with your stomach, if not good small beer."

During his lifetime he traveled into every corner of the British Islands, crossed the ocean to America, preached 40,000 sermons and drank good malt beer and wine, from youth to old age, dying at over 80, a marvel of noble fortitude, physical endurance and mental power.

THE STATE FAIR RACES

Every horseman who is coming to the Minnesota state fair, which means about every horseman in the Northwest, has been delighted in the achievement of Highball, E. F. Geer's star trotter which did a mile in 2:03¾ on the Peoria track. This is a new world's record for trotting geldings in a race displacing the former record of 2:04½ made by Tiverton in 1904 and equaled by Wentworth in 1905. This record was made in a second heat and equalled Sweet Marie's world's record for such a heat made in 1906. As it was preceded by a first heat in 2:06¼ Highball also beat the world's record for a two heat race by a gelding, 2:05¾, 2:06¼, formerly held (since 1902) by The Monk.

By this performance Highball, who is one of the entries in the $6,000, free-for-all trot, scheduled for Monday Aug. 31, at the Minnesota state fair, becomes the most sensational trotter since the advent of Lou Dillon.

Highball 2:03¾ is king of trotting geldings. Of all trotting heats in races the mile of Cresceus 2:02¼ made in 2:03¼ made at Brighton Beach in his match against The Abbot alone stands ahead of Highball's new record.

Everything taken into consideration, it was one of the most brilliant and meritorious performances to the credit of any trotter. First of all, records are rarely broken in early July; then, too, it was a second heat and the terrific pace of the first heat must have tended to dull the gelding's edge somewhat. Margaret O. 2:08¼ and Oro 2:05¼ were Highball's opponents, but of course the race was conceded to the son of Dr. Hooker. Highball drew the pole and as this was his first race of the season he was very ambitious. Because of his tender mouth Mr. Geers, rather than double him up, let him step away very fast the first heat, reaching the quarter in 29¾ seconds—and this quarter is up grade. Easing up somewhat he passed the half in 1:01¼ and was at the three-quarters in 1:33½. Meantime, Margaret O. who is a slow beginner was trailing Oro, the pair being some lengths behind Highball. Seeing he had the heat won Mr. Geers now took the bay gelding back and let him jog home in 2:06¼. Margaret O. finished fast and beat Oro for the place.

When it was announced that Mr. Geers had decided to send Highball a fast mile in the second heat, the flag being torn down, the crowd expressed their pleasure, for already the superb trotter had won the hearts of all. When the trio took the word they were scoring slowly, but Highball quickly hit his lick, again reaching the quarter in 29¾. The second quarter he did in 30¼ making the half in 1:00 flat. He was at the third quarter pole in 1:30¾, a 2:01 gait, but from the head of the stretch to the wire gradually slackened his pace. Mr. Geers tapped him lightly at the long distance stand and while he responded momentarily he was plainly tired. He finished the mile in 2:03¾, the last quarter being in 33 seconds. Margaret O's official time, as second, was 2:05¾, she having passed Oro near home. Oro had all his speed, as evidenced by the first half in which he was only three or four lengths behind Highball. He is, however, short of the work necessary to carry such a clip. Margaret O's performance was of itself deserving of the greatest credit. Bob Davis has her in fine form and in her class she will be well nigh invincible.

After the mile Mr. Geers said: "Highball could have stepped a much faster mile had I tried in the first heat. I warmed him up several heat, one in 2:10 before the race, and of heat. I warmed him up several heats, in 1:01¼ was too much speed to ask of a horse who was to go for a second half an hour later.' It was regrettable that Mr. F. G. Jones of Memphis, Tenn., owner of Highball was not present to witness his splendid effort.

QUAKER SOLONS WIN.

Milwaukee Aldermen Are Defeated in Charity Baseball Game.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 6.—The Philadelphia aldermen who came here to play the Milwaukee aldermen for the championship of the United States yesterday defeated the local solons by a score of 13 to 4.

KEENE HORSES FIRST.

Maskette Shows Herself to be Best Filly of the Year.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 6.—James R. Keene's horses ran first and second in the $10,000 Spin-a-way stakes at Saratoga yesterday, when his two fillies, Maskette and Wedding Bells, came home easy winners. The victory of Maskette stamps her as the best 2-year-old filly in training, and when the time, 1:04 4-5, was hung out for five and a-half furlongs, horsemen said it was a marvelous performance, because the track was not at its best, the rain of Tuesday night having made it slow. The Keene entry was quoted at the prohibitive price of 2 to 7, while the Madden entry was second choice at 7 to 2.

Maskette dashed to the front soon after the start, taking a lead of one and a half lengths, with Wedding Bells second and Miss Kearney third. She showed the way to the stretch and then drew away an easy victor. A heavy storm broke just before the fourth race and turned the track into a sea of mud.

RACING ON JAMAICA.

Promoters Will Go After Bennings and New Orleans Events.

New York, Aug. 6.—L. R. Delisser, a New York racing promoter, returned from the island of Jamaica yesterday with the announcement that the Knutsford Park track at Jamaica will try to secure the racing which would ordinarily take place at New Orleans and at Benning.

MANY MEN WANTED.

North Dakota Offers Work for All Industrious Ones.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The employment agencies of the city received in the aggregate 200 orders for men to go into the neighboring fields to work yesterday. Wages range from $1.25 to $2.25 per day. The former amount is for the wind-up of haying and will last but a few days, when $2 and $2.25 will be paid. These wages also, of course, include board. But the employment men say that with the pot gangs west of town and the hobos under the bridges and along the river there are hundreds of idle men who will not go to work. Many men have entered the employment offices and claimed they were from the East and that they would received $2.50 per day in the North Dakota fields and appear so disappointed that they will not go to work until that price is granted. Men who really want work are getting it so quickly as to make their eyes bulge out.

Well-Known Physician Calls Upon Young Scientist and Experts and Asks for Information.

"Do you mean to tell me, Mr. Wittman, that you can remove a cancer in three hours without knife or without shedding blood? If you can show me this I will take off my hat to you and say that you deserve better treatment than has been your reception to our city," said a well-known physician yesterday. "Yes, sir, and if you will call this afternoon at 3 o'clock I will show you the case of Mrs. John G. Weller, who has cancer of the upper lip, and in less than three hours after giving her the first treatment it will be killed, and in two weeks healed up completely. This is only one of many cases we have treated here, but we respect our patrons' requests not to mention any names unless asked to do so. If I could be permitted to talk I could tell you of some of the most prominent people in your city now recovering health from chronic inflammatory rheumatism, stomach and blood disorders and quite a few of your prominent women treating with our specialist on female disorders. We have saved one man from an operation for appendicitis by applying our famous Syrthgil for fifteen minutes and many operations are avoided by the same treatment for ovarian troubles. Yes, it is true we control these formulas and inventions, but you must remember that we have expended a fortune perfecting them, and it isn't more than honest that we should continue to control them until we see fit to let the world have them. Our treatments never fail, because we don't want, nor will we accept, at any price, cases we cannot cure. The experts will give a thorough examination and if they can cure you they will tell you so, but if they cannot they are conscientious in their convictions and fearless in expressing their opinions." DRENNAN IS BOUND OVER

Claimed That He Stole $30 From a Drunken Prisoner.

Police Officer George Drennan, former driver of the patrol wagon, was this morning bound over to the grand jury on the charge of grand larceny in the second degree. He had a hearing before Judge Cutting in municipal court, and the court held there was evidence enough to warrant holding the man for further investigation.

The charge against Drennan is that he stole $30 in cash from a drunken prisoner, Herman Benson, last Sunday morning while taking him to jail. Testimony of Patrolman Dickman, Chief Troyer and Jailer Nels Nelson brought out the alleged suspicious circumstances surrounding the case. The defense had no evidence to offer and Drennan himself did not testify at all.

Benson told how he came to Duluth from Moose Lake with nearly $50 in his pocket. He said he got drunk, and went over the facts of his arrest. He remembered having a $20 bill and a $10 bill when taken into custody, besides some silver money. He said this was taken from him before he was searched at headquarters, and that he believed Drennan was the guilty man. He said Drennan struck him as they climbed the stairs from the patrol wagon to the floor upon which the bull is situated, but said he did not know the reason why.

Chief Troyer was not allowed in the room while the other witnesses were being examined, because of his close interest in the case. It was thought best that he should not be permitted to hear the testimony of the others.

Nelson said he distinctly remembered seeing the $30 in Benson's hand while in the patrol wagon. He declared that Benson put the money in his, Benson's, pocket, and that nothing more was said of it until the subject came up at the police station. Officer Dickman said Benson had the money in his hand when he entered the patrol wagon on the Bowery.

When the prisoner was searched at headquarters by Drennan only silver money was forthcoming. Nelson said he asked about the paper money, and Drennan said he had seen nothing of any paper money.

"Benson first accused me of having the money, and later said Drennan had it," continued Nelson. "After Benson was searched again, all his clothes being taken off, I asked that I be searched. Both Drennan and I were searched. Before they started going through George's pockets, I saw him reach into his coat pocket and take out a handful of cigars, laying them on the table. He kept one in his hand, and I saw a piece of green paper sticking out by the side of his thumb while the search was going on. I told the chief about this, and a little later George was searched again, when the money was found in his watch pocket, at the right side of his waistband, in his trousers."

Chief Troyer told of the searching of the men. He said no bills were found on Drennan the first time the officers went through his clothes. He said he personally felt in every pocket. After Nelson told him, in the office of fice, of seeing something concealed in Drennan's hand, another search of the man's pockets was ordered. The chief said he remembered that when Drennan took the cigars out of his coat pocket his hand remained in the pocket much longer than seemed necessary.

On the second search he showed considerable hesitancy about allowing others to go through his pockets, declared the chief, but began digging things out of his pockets himself. The chief took up the search himself, and found the money in Drennan's watch pocket, as described by Nelson. Drennan, he said, claimed the money was his, and that he had borrowed it to pay debts with. He declared $20 had been borrowed two weeks before, and $20 two days before, and that $30 was still left out of the $40.

Jailor Nelson and Mr. Drennan were in the patrol wagon when Benson and another drunk were taken to the station. Drennan had charge of Benson after the wagon arrived at the station, while Nelson took the other man.

Drennan is out under $250 bond.

QUARANTINE IS BEING BROKEN

Health Department Having Hard Time With Diphtheria Patients.

The health department is having a hard time with people along the hillside, who persist in breaking their diphtheria quarantine. In spite of special quarantine officers, who patrol the district where the most cases have developed, residents of the neighborhood, living in houses where diphtheria cards are hung out, managed to get in and out of the house during the summer season, exposing others to the disease.

"All this trouble would be avoided if we had a contagious hospital," said Health Commissioner Patton this morning. "We would be able to stamp out the disease in short order. As it is, it seems almost utterly impossible to impress upon the minds of people the necessity of remaining in quarantine. Because of this fact, many people are exposed and the disease is spread."

In 1879 he bought the Milwaukee News, and was its proprietor and editor till 1880, when he sold out and retired from journalism. Since that time, except for a period as sheriff's bookkeeper, he had led a retired life.

SUBJECT TO CHANGE.

TIME LIMIT IS OVERRUN

County Auditor Must Make City Assessments This Year.

Real Estate Will be Classed as "Omitted" Property.

Because the city assessor's office was later than the limit prescribed by the state law in turning assessment books over to the board of review, and because the board of review was, in consequence later than the law allows in finishing up its work of adjusting assessments and turning the books over to the county board of equalization, all the real estate of Duluth will be assessed as "omitted" property this year by the county auditor.

The board of review has finished its work and has turned the assessment books over to the county board of equalization, but according to the statute this should have been done no later than July 6. This fact prevented the board of review from lawfully making the changes desired in the assessment rolls. The difficulty is surmounted, however, by recommending to the county auditor that the desired reductions and changes be made. The property in the city will be classed as "omitted" property, assessed as such by the auditor and then the recommendation of the city board, and the assessments will stand reduced as recommended by the city board. Thus, rather a disagreeable situation is overcome, and the work of the members of the board of review will not go for naught, as would be the case if it were not for the "omitted" property clause.

That fatty foods are heat producers and should be used sparingly during warm weather if one would keep cool. That golden grain belt beer is unequaled as a food-tonic and a preventive of nervousness and indigestion, makes rich, red blood and rebuilds wasted tissues.

ABOUT 6,000 MEN ARE OUT

Strike of Canadian Pacific Shopmen Assumes Large Proportions.

Possibility That Trouble May Spread to Great Magnitude.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 6.—A conservative estimate today places the number of men out on strike in the Canadian Pacific railway shops throughout Canada at over 6,000.

A mass meeting of the strikers will likely be held here tonight, and it is expected the international officers will be here shortly.

The demands of the striking mechanics are:

Reduction of hours from ten to nine; to do away with the merit mark system used in connection with time clocks in the works; that machinists be paid on the 17th instead of the 20th, as now; that the company cease alleged endeavors to disrupt the mechanical unions; the men say they are satisfied with the present rate of wages, but hope for better in the future. As soon as the strike was declared, pickets were appointed to do duty at the works. While on strike the pay will be, single $5, married $7 per week. The officials refuse to say whether steps will be taken to fill the places of the men or whether overtures will be made.

Hope of Reconciliation.

The two opposing forces in the big Canadian Pacific railroad mechanical strike have cut all possible hope of reconciliation. The railroad shops last night were dark, none of the mechanics being on duty and are not today. The department closed through the day and at night a number if wipers only were at work, they being foreigners picked up around the yards.

"All Canadian lines and all Canadian Pacific connections in the United States will be affected if the Canadian Pacific attempts to force any of its employes to repair locomotives or cars sent across the border in connection with train service or regular business," said J. C. McVetty, chairman of the general executive committee today. "But we have the support of the International union, also of the Federation of Labor for which we arranged at meetings held in St. Paul and Chicago, attended by myself, A. R. Somerville and Bell Hardy representing the Canadian union on the Canadian Pacific railroad last week," he continued.

One chief point of interest now centers in the possibility of a strike of still greater magnitude and of more far-reaching consequences. It is said in some quarters that if settlement is not forthcoming very soon that all trainmen will walk out in sympathy with the men.

Whyte Springs Surprise.

To the surprise of the citizens and alarm of the company, word was received today from Second Vice President Whyte, now at Vancouver, to open no negotiations with the men until his arrival here Saturday.

The first statement of the company was given out today by Second Vice President Whyte, now at Vancouver. He said:

"It is not our place to take any action in the matter. When the conciliation board made its rulings I telegraphed Ottawa that their findings were not from our point of view, a satisfactory settlement to the company in the spirit of Lemieux conciliation act, but we would agree to them. We did not precipitate the present situation and are saying nothing about it."

Boards of trade and grain exchanges throughout west are advising a speedy settlement urging that in a few days wheat will be waiting to be shipped to the seaboard.

There are a few Italians working on car trucks in the motive power department besides a few aged employes, who still have six months to serve in order to draw a pension. They were told that if they deserted their work benches they might lose their positions and their pensions. These old men preferred to stick by the company so the strikers did not bother them.

SAYS BUTCHERS CONTROL PRICE

Cudahy Representative States That Retailers Fix Meat Values.

H. J. Zimmerman, general salesman in the Northwestern territory for the Cudahy Packing company, who is at the Spalding hotel today, states that in his opinion the price of meat will not be advanced this fall. Mr. Zimmerman says that the retailers are mainly responsible for the high price of meat, and the packers have little to do with the fixing or maintaining of the price.

"The public thinks that the packers fix and regulate the price of meat," said Mr. Zimmerman. "This idea is erroneous. All of the buying is done through commission houses and they and the farmers of the country are the people who fix the price. Then, again, the packers are not responsible for the price charged by the retail dealers. For instance, if the price of meat is raised an eighth of a cent a pound by the packers, the butchers sometimes raise the retail price 4 or 5 cents. This is not fair and it is not the fault of the packers.

"I believe that there will be a very heavy cattle movement this fall. The increase of general prosperity will tend to make the sale of beef cattle heavier. However, I don't think that there will be any general advance in the price of meat. There is just as much competition among the packers as there is among any other line of business. The belief that there is a combination that abides by an agreed upon price, is wrong. It is the retailers who are more to blame for the high price of meat, and not the packers of the country."

Mr. Zimmerman's ideas are not endorsed by local retailers.

MOTORING ON THE FARM.

The saving effected by the modern powerful gasolene engine on the farm is estimated to be from 20 to 30 per cent over horse, man or steam power.

When not running the engine is not consuming fuel, and its keep through winter when in storage is nothing. It does not eat its head off and it takes very little storage place.

Manufacturers have made special lines of farm engines in various sizes, ranging from five to 100 horse-power, both for stationary work and portable use.

Upward of 50,000 such engines have been sold to American farmers in the last two years, says Cassier's Magazine and the demand for the present year will exceed any past record.

There is a gasoline farm engine adapted for dragging heavy gangs of ploughs across long fields, followed by harrows, cultivators, seeders and harvesters.

In fact, the land can be tilled, planted and the crops harvested with a machine of this sort without the aid of a single horse and with very little hired help.

In the great Northwest the portable gasolene threshing outfits are conspicuous features at the harvest season. They are much lighter than the old steam threshing plants, are self-propelling and on rubber tires, so that they can be run easily and quickly from farm to farm.

The farm help problem is thus being partly solved in the Northwest. Even in the Northwest of Canada scores of these machines have been put in operation in the last year. The great wheat crop could not be harvested and thrashed without such appliances.

The gasoline motor is no less important in marketing products. The modern touring cars and runabouts sold to farmers are for utility first and pleasure afterward.

By their aid one farmer says that he realized $300 more in one season for his articles than if he had sold them in the old way, taking the market prices as they varied from day to day. Another farmer having a lot of fancy poultry made in one trip $75 more than the regular profits through rushing a load to market during a day of high prices.

The farmers' wives and daughters have learned to operate the machines, and it is not unusual to see them peddling farm produce from automobiles in many of the Western towns and cities. Some of them run in from ten to twenty miles and sell their produce before noon and get back again in the early afternoon.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

Saturday Evening Post: A young man in a hurry went through the left side of a pair of swing doors in the senate wing of the capitol at Washington last session and almost knocked over the late Senator Pettus of Alabama, who was about to push through the right side.

The young man apologized profusely. "I'm very sorry—I didn't know I was—I am in a great hurry."

"That's all right, son," said the venerable Pettus. "But let me give you a piece of advice about going through doors like these. Always go through on the right side, and turn to the right. Then, if you meet anybody coming through and bump into him you needn't apologize. He'll be a durned fool, and it won't be necessary. Good-morning."

THE MARKET SOLD OFF

Wheat Has Weak Tone During Session in America.

Flax Becomes Very Soft Here, Losing Five Points.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 6.—The bears were in control of the American markets today. Opening prices were off a point from yesterday and wheat became gradually weaker until the close, which was at the low level of the day.

There was heavy liquidation at almost every stage. The market seemed to have been overbought yesterday and everyone seemed anxious to unload today. There was no news to speak of, all the crop advices of the day being a mere repetition of what has been heard all week.

Flax was very weak, closing 5c off.

Argentine shipments this week are estimated at 2,400,000 bus.

Liverpool closed 1⅛d higher, Berlin 1c higher.

The September option closed 1½c lower in Duluth and New York, 1⅜-½c lower in Chicago, 1⅞-2c lower in Minneapolis, ⅞-1c lower in St. Louis, 1¼c lower in Kansas City, and 2⅝c lower in Winnipeg, for the October option. The December option closed 1⅛c lower in Duluth, 1¼-⅜c lower in Chicago, 1⅝c lower in Minneapolis, 1⅝c lower in New York, 1-⅛c lower in St. Louis and Kansas City and 1c lower in Winnipeg.

September corn closed ½c lower in Chicago and unchanged in Liverpool. September oats closed ⅛c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—There was a firm opening to the speculative wheat market and values were 1¼d to 1⅜d higher as a result of the strength of American cables yesterday, together with manipulation in Chicago, owing to the continued damage reports from the Northwest, which caused shorts to cover freely. Following this, the market eased off ⅜d with some disposition to take profits owing to the cheaper Russian offerings. At this time the market was steady and values were ⅞d to 1d higher than yesterday.

"Corn was firm at the opening with values ¼d higher in sympathy with the strength in American cables yesterday, but during the morning easiness developed on the large arrivals of LaPlata corn and the early advance was lost."

Car receipts at Duluth were 39 against 68 last year, and at Minneapolis 152 against 83 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 171 against 151 last year. Chicago received 224 against 308 last year. Winnipeg received 25 against 158 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 46,000 bus, last year 1,107,000 bus. Shipments 643,000 bus, last year 793,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 867,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 253,000 bus, last year 364,000 bus. Shipments 259,000 bus, last year 395,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 8,249 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Somewhat Weak, But Dealings Are Active.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The wheat market today opened active but weak, Liverpool showing an advance of only 1d compared with our rise of 2c yesterday and the Northwest reporting cooler weather. All options averaged 1c under yesterday's close. September opened ½@⅝c to 1⅛@1¼c lower at 95⅝c to 96c and steadied around 95¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 417 cars against 474 cars last week and 455 a year ago.

The market turned firmer for a time in sympathy with an advance at Winnipeg but whe nthat market broke, the local pit did likewise and the close was weak. September, 1⅜@½c off 95⅛c.

Opening prices in all deliveries in corn were at an average of 1c off from last night on general rains reported from Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Septemebr opened 1c to 1¾c lower at 74¼c to 75c and sold to 75¾c. Local receipts were 193 cars wtih 13 of contract grade.

September touched 75⅞c on covering and closed steady ½c under yesterday at 75½c.

There was only moderate activity in the oats market and the tone was relatively steadier than in the other pits, although prices were sympathetically lower at the opening. September opened ¼c lower at 47c, touched 46¾c and then rallied to 47¼c. Local receipts were 212 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and steady, prices being from 2½c lower to 2½c higher. September pork opened at $15.57½; September lard at $9.50 and September ribs at $8.97½ to $9.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Started Off, But Recovered a Cent and Became Choppy.

Minneapolis, Aug. 6.—Wheat was off 1⅝@1¾c following the opening. Then it recovered a cent and became choppy. Liverpool was again higher, 1⅜d up, but again disappointing also because the advance was not as great proportionately as the rise in the American markets yesterday. Estimates on the South Dakota crop from officers of the millers and the grain growers' association of that state were bullish. News from the Canadian strike and receipts of only 25 cars in Winnipeg against 158 a year ago were sustaining. The winter wheat receipts were not particularly heavy. Minneapolis elevator stocks decreased 325,000 bus for five days. Receipts here today 152 cars against 83. Duluth 39 against 68. Near the close there was free selling of long wheat, some for profit-taking, some on stop-loss orders. The market declined sharply and closed on a fractional rally from the low points. September opened $1.04¾@1.05; high, $1.05¾; low, $1.04; close, $1.04@1.04⅛. Old September high, $1.06⅝; close, $1.05⅜@½. December opened $1.02⅞; high, $1.04; low, $1.02½; close, $1.02⅝. Old December high, $1.04½; close, $1.03⅛.

Cash wheat advanced sharply. Millers appeared to want the old stuff. Early bids for No. 1 northern were $1.22@1.23 then $1.25 and finally $1.25 was paid. For No. 2 northern the early range was $1.18@1.19 and later in the day $1.20 was freely bid for good No. 2. Close: No. 1 northern, $1.22 spot; $1.17 to arrive. No. 2 northern, $1.18@1.20 spot; $1.14 to arrive. No. 3 wheat, $1.13@1.15.

No. 3 yellow corn, 76¾c.

No. 3 white oats, 50¾@50⅞c.

No. 2 rye, old, 73¾c; new, 71¾@72¾c.

Barley receipts, 15 cars, of which about 10 cars contained new barley. There was a good market and prices for choice barley were about steady with yesterday while the low grades sold 1c better. Close, 50@58c.

Flax receipts, 4 cars. Two cents under Duluth September is now the trading basis, at which price there is a fair demand. Close, $1.26¾.

Millstuffs firm at yesterday's advance and quoted by millers on the basis of $19.50 for bran in bulk.

Strong at yesterday's advance, the flour market was dull, sales light, shipments very small and likely to continue small unless business runs better than it did today. Shipments, 31,481 barrels. First patents, $5.15@6.25; second patents, $6@6.[illegible]; first clears, $4.35@4.45; second clears, $3.50@3.85.

Grain Gossip.

A Minneapolis house wires that the following had been received from Fargo, N. D.: Just saw a letter from a land owner here to his renter at Edmunds, N. D., instructing him to plow the wheat under and spare the land for next year's crop. The Lisbon Milling company estimates crop at 75 per cent of last year's.

John Inglis wired Pringle, Fitch & Co. from Winnipeg as follows: In the large counties, Grand Forks, Walsh and Pembina, prospects very poor. The average yield will be under 10 bus the acre. From Gretna to Winnipeg, in Manitoba, the yield will be under 12 bus to the acre, but this is in a poor part of Manitoba.

It is believed that the grand jury will finish its consideration of the case today and that its action will be made known tonight. Mrs. Teal and Mouseley are out under $500 bail each.

Miss Fleming's bail was reduced to $2,000 today and her release may soon follow.

It would be strange, indeed, if not one merchant in Duluth today had anything important to say to you.

ACTIVITY IN STOCKS

Prices Were Mixed and Small With Considerable Business.

Closing Firm With Prices at About the Top Level.

New York, Aug. 6.—Opening price changes in stocks today were mixed and small, although the dealings were quite active. Canadian Pacific broke 2 points in response to the strike on the system. Bethlehem Steel preferred advanced 1¼ and Pressed Steel Car a point and the preferred ¾.

Large purchasing orders were placed in Reading and others of the specialties, and they began to rise briskly. The important gains, however, were limited to these stocks, the rest of the list, although firm, showing little improvement. Republic Steel preferred gained 4¼ and the common 1¾.

Prices fluctuated in a desultory way on small dealings. The market was advancing at noon with Union Pacific up a point. Bonds were steady.

Stocks which had not been unusually prominent in the forenoon improvement were taken up, especially the grangers, and the metal group. The sharp rise of these stocks stimulated a good demand for the rest of the list, and there was a general advance beyond the noon quotations. Federal, Sugar jumped 7 points, Missouri Pacific and American Smelting 3, Reading and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 2, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, International Paper preferred and Amalgamated Copper 1.

The market closed firm and moderately active. The increased velocity of the upward movement invited heavy realizing sales, which caused a sharp setback. Afterwards prices hardened to about the top level. American Smelting's gain had reached 6¼, Virginia Iron 5⅝, Central Railroad of New Jersey 3, National Lead 2¾, Utah Copper 2½, Amalgamated Copper 1½ and Pennsylvania, New York Central, American Locomotive, Anaconda, Consolidated Gas and Distillers' Securities 1.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 6.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 5 points on August, but generally 1 to 2 points lower, owing to disappointing Liverpool cables and a generally favorable interpretation of the weather map. Trading was steady and quiet at first, but after some little irregularity the market firmed up to a net advance of 7@12 points on the active months.

The market continued moderately active late in the forenoon with prices at midday showing a net advance of about 10@17 points on the active months as a result of bull support, covering and a scattering commission house demand.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points higher; middling uplands, 10.85; middling gulf, 11.10; sales, 200 bales. Futures closed barley steady. Closing bids: August, 9.91; September, 9.68; October, 9.68; November, 9.34; December, 9.36; January, 9.33; February, 9.34; March, 9.36.

Heard on the Floor.

C. T. Mears of Ely-Salyards & Co. has just returned from a trip through a section of North Dakota, and declares that, with the exception of one stretch on the main line of the Great Northern, he found the crop in good condition.

"On the main line of the Great Northern, from Crary to Church's Ferry, I found the wheat looking bad," said Mr. Mears on the floor today, "but west of Church's Ferry and on the Great Northern branches to the north and on the Soo line through that country, the wheat looked as well as I have ever seen it. It had headed out well and was looking altogether first class. I did not visit any other sections of North Dakota."

Speaking of the condition west of Casselton, N. D., in the neighborhood of Kathryn, Nome and Fingal, the representative of a local house writes:

"The crops in this section of the state are in fine condition and there is no talk of black rust. Wheat is being cut, and from what I can find out, conditions are all that could be expected.

"They are cutting some flax also in this section, and the late flax looks fine and shows no damage from the heat.

"Cool weather is doing wonders for the maturing of the grain. They say the flax acreage will be less than last year, but more barley and durum wheat will be harvested. Ten days will see the harvesting of grain in full blast."

New barley is beginning to arrive from North Dakota. Several cars have been received here this week.

W. P. Tearse of Winona and Frank Madden of Dedham, Wis., both of whom are engaged in the lumbering business, were visitors on the trading floor today. Mr. Tearse has a son and brother interested in the well-known firm of Marfield, Tearse & Noyes.

THE REMAINING TOWNS ARE SAFE

Great Fire in Elk River Valley Has Burned Past Them.

Vancouver, Aug. 6.—The destructive forest fires in the Elk River Valley have now burned past the region of the towns. Fernie is destroyed, but Michel, Hosmer and Cranbrook are now out of the danger line. The flames are still devastating the timber region of the valley beyond the settlements. These bush fires may last a month, or until rain falls.

The total loss of life in the burned area is now placed at thirty-eight and the property damage is estimated at between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

The Fernie disaster has struck a hard blow to the mining and smelting industry of British Columbia. The big smelters of the Boundary district, employing 2,000 men, receive the bulk of their coke supplies from the coke ovens and mines of the Elk River valley and as all the collieries in the section are in such condition that it will require months to put them back in a position to supply coal in any quantity, the smelters will be forced to curtail their operations and in some cases shut down. This would throw several thousand men out of employment in the mines of the interior.

Lund committed suicide in his offices in Minneapolis yesterday.

SWAMP LANDS

In Indian Reservations of State Are to be Resurveyed.

St. Paul, Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—What is intended to be a resurvey of the swamp lands in the Indian reservations of the state was brought to the attention of Governor Johnson and State Auditor Iverson today, when the were notified by the interior department that survey crews will shortly be sent into the disputed sections.

The crews will be in charge of S. J. Coller field agent at Duluth, and he has notified the state that if they want to send two representatives along they will be accommodated. The Indian agents at the several reservations will be similarly notified. The inspection will begin Aug. 10.

The lands in question aggregate about 185,000 acres, and have been in dispute since 1903.

E. B. DORSEY DEAD.

St. Paul, Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward B. Dorsey, assistant purchasing agent for the Northern Pacific, died early today at St. Luke's hospital as the result of an operation for appendicitis. He was 35 years of age.

Mr. Dorsey has filled the position of assistant purchasing agent for the past six years.

RUNAWAY SWISS LAKE.

Marjelen Has Again Broken Its Way Through Glacier.

Visitors to the Alps know the magnificent panorama that is unfolded from the top of the Eggishorn, the highest summit on the rocky ridge between the great glacier of Aletsch and the valley of the Rhone.

There is a splendid view over the Bernese Alps to the north, and the jumble of snow peaks to the south are revealed in all their grandeur. But the sight that first of all attracts attention is the Aletsch glacier, the largest in Europe, and little Lake Marjelen, half a mile north of Eggishorn, with its dark green waters and the tiny icebergs on its surface, says the New York Sun.

This is not the sight tourists would see from the top of Eggishorn today. A little while ago Lake Marjelen disappeared in a night. The deep chasm it fills was dry the next morning. The great chuncks of ice were stranded on its floor.

In its peculiar way Marjelen is the most famous of the Swiss lakes. It stands 7,764 feet above the sea. On three sides steep rock slopes wall it in. On the west side it is bordered by the Aletsch glacier.

A singular phenomenon has long attracted attention. From time to time the lake suddenly disappears. Its basin was completely emptied eleven times from 1813 to 1887. In 1873 all the water left the lake in eight hours. In 1878 it was emptied in thirty and a half hours, and in 1887 io ten hours.

This is a wonderful fact in view of the prodigious quantity of water that is sent thundering down to the lower valleys in so short a time. The lake is 4,920 feet or nearly a mile long. Its width is about 984 feet; its depth is from 30 to 150 feet and ots water content has been estimated to be 10,400,000 cubic meters. This immense volume escapes in channels under the glacier and as its pours along a sound like the rumble of thunder is heard.

Naturally the flood does a great damage below, and the little lake has an evil reputation among the inhabitants of the Massa Valley, through which the waters of the Aletsch glacier reach the Rhone. The farmers there are very poor and wrest with difficulty a slender livelihood from the meagre fields. But these fields have again been destroyed, and much damage has been done to property along the Rhone far to the West.

Rarely have the people received any warning of the approach of the torrent. But since 1887 they have slept securely, believing that the treacherous lake would never harm them again.

Engineers studied the problem of safeguarding them from the constant danger. They found the cause of the trouble to be the opening of deep crevasses on the side of the glacier, against which the lake abuts. In 1887 a stone wall was built along the glacier edge while the lake was empty.

The work was well done and protected Marjelen for all the years since, until the present occurance, has kept within bounds, and its overflow has been carried off to the east in the valley of the little Fiesch river. But the day was approaching when the people were to be rudely awakened from their dream of safety.

t appears that the foundation of the wall became undermined and through the opening the lake drained away into a deep crevasse that split the side of the glacier from top to bottom. More adequate means of protection must now be sough t.

The lake derives its waters from the melting snows of the surrounding mountains. When the crevasse that opens a door of escape to the waters passes beyond the western limit of the lake the basin begins to fill again.

The lake was drained in January, 1883, and on July 13, it was full again. t is not unlikely that in the last weeks of the coming tourist season the deep bowl will be brimming again with the dark green waters.

MOST PROFITABLE ACRES.

Westminster Gazette: The possibilities of profitable gardening in England are exemplified by an acre of land cultivated on the French system of intensive culture, which in the last completed year is said to have yielded £625 in gross returns.

This probably constitutes a record for England, the nearest approach known to the writer being an acre of land, the property of a seedsman on the Great Western line between London and Oxford, which has yielded in one year flower seeds to the value of £270

In Samoa £60 to £80 is the average yield an acre of land planted in cocoa; in Georgia £80 worth of eggplants have been picked from a single acre, and pineapple farms in the West Indies often pay as much as £100 an acre

Such yields as these, however, are trivial compared with that of an acre of vineyard in the Moselle wine growing district which was sold a few years ago far nearly £24,000, and which produces a crop worth £2,500; or with that acre of land in Tibet on which grows the sacred "tree of a thousand images," the leaves of which yield an annual revenue exceeding £3,000

Coppers are very strong, and inasmuch as we are almost in the fall months, you can expect nothing but a bull market all along the line. Some of the new mines will soon be producers. The Shattuck and Ballaklava look good to us. Calumet & Sonora is also a dandy to buy.

I advise the purchase of Copper Queen for the reason that conditions at the mine warrant an advance in price of shares. This one is tipped for something big. There seems to be quite a demand for it in the East and Chicago is a heavy buyer today.

Buy Butte & Superior, for when they get it at this mine it will be no small affair. They should open up one of the biggest mines in the Butte camp.

STAGE COMPANY SUED.

W. H. Humphrey Claims He Got Worst of Western Stage Line Deal.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two suits, demanding about $25,000 from the Monida & Yellowstone Stage company have been begun in the district court by William H. Humphrey of Twin Falls, Idaho, through his attorney, Martin H. Albin.

The first suit is to recover upwards of $20,000 for salary alleged to be due Mr. Humphrey as general manager of the stage company during 1900, 1901, 1902, and 1903, at $4,000 a year, together with interest until today.

In the second action, Mr. Humphrey seeks to recover, with interest, $2,500 which, as he asserts, he loaned to the company eight years ago.

The original Yellowstone Stage company was organized in 1897 by Mr. Huumphrey and F. J. Haynes, formerly official Northern Pacific photographer. Three years later the Monida & Yellowstone Stage company took over the older concern and agreed to meet its obligations. Up to 1904 the new company did an unremunerative business and was unable to pay any salaries to its officers. At the close of the season in 1903 Mr. Humphrey resigned, it being then fully understood that, whenever the company became sufficiently prosperous, it would pay, with interest, what salaries might be in arrears. But this promise has not been kept. Mr. Humphrey says, although for several years—since the Oregon Short Line railraod reached the west end of the Yellowstone Park—the stage company has enjoyed abundant patronage.

HAVE FINE CLUBHOUSE.

Swell Quarters Erected on Madeline Island by Nebraskans.

Ashland, Wis., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new club house which is being erected on Lincoln heights, Madeline island, by the Nebraska summer residents of the island is rapidly nearing completion, and it is going to be a very neat and cozy place. They will have bowling alleys and billiard and pool tables, besides other amusements and attractions for the Nebraska residents of the island and their guests and it will be a very pleasant place indeed. The windows are so arranged that in fine weather the building can be practically thrown out of doors, but in case of stormy weather it can be closed tightly and still have an abundance of light for the various games, very much the same as if one were out of doors, with the wetness of the weather, of course, eliminated.

There are more Nebraska people on the island this year than ever before, some six new families from Nebraska now spending their summer there and will continue to do so from now on each summer.

DIPPED INTO POLITICS.

Now Federal Grain Inspector Finds Himself Out of Job.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 6.—Offensive partisanship, in other words mixing too much, to suit the department at Washington, in North Dakota politics, has cost Col. H. M. Creel government grain inspector for the district of Minnesota and North and South Dakota, his job, according to current reports. He has been removed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson. The government sent a secret service inspector to the state and immediately upon the filing of his report, a removal order was made. The removal takes effect at once.

No announcement of who will be his successor has been made, but it is certain to go to some one outside of North Dakota.

INDIANS TERRORIZE WALKER

Half Drunken Reds Said to be Running Things.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—Overridden by Indians, fighting drunk, Walker is passing through a modest reign of terror, if the somewhat lurid statements of a business man of that town can be relied upon. This man, who does not wish his name known, because, as he says, it would do great injury to his business, has written the attorney general of the state that whisky is sold indiscriminately to any and all red men without any consideration of the badness of the Indian or the whisky or the goodness of a few peaceful citizens.

Indians, maudlin Indians on wild rampages, this man states, are overrunning the town. As it is the only town for miles around where whisky is sold to the redskins, according to the reports, the Indians infest the town, often remaining for days raising disturbances and causing trouble.

The attorney general has written the officials at Walker that the whisky selling must cease, and he cites the law which makes a negligent official punishable by a heavy fine.

WHOLE FAMILY BURIED.

Father, Mother and Daughter Laid Away Together.

Lake Nebagamon, Wis., Aug. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The three victims of the drowning in the lake here Sunday, Hal J. Hume, former president of the village, his wife and their little daughter, were buried yesterday afternoon after services at the Presbyterian church. The sad affair which wiped out a whole family cast a gloom over the community and there was a large attendance at the funeral.

The Hume family had been with others at a picnic and were returning home Sunday evening in a metal hunting boat. Besides themselves there was an icecream freezer and some camping supplies in the frail craft. The boat capsized and all were precipitated in the water where it was about ten feet deep. The little girl's body was swept away across the lake, being found quite a distance from the bodies of her father and mother. Mr. Hume's body was not found until yesterday morning.
